"Of course, I'm right. Why blind yourself and pretend Lucille? You've only got to look around you. Do you see much love that is the divine thing you believe it? If you persist in painting an imaginary picture of falling in love and living happily ever after, you'll crash badly. You're too old for fairy tales."

Lucille was silent, her soft little face perplexed and unhappy, and Hazel Beauman, an American girl who had hitherto kept silence, shrugged her shoulders and laughed—not a pleasant laugh for a young girl.

"Toni's right, of course. Look at my family! People say my father and mother were crazy about each other. Undying devotion and all that. Before I was two my father was having an affair with a Spanish friend of the family's, and my mother, getting bored, took to nerves and then to a Chicago millionaire. They've both fought over me—and they're both married again—and are now fighting over their new families. That's your love, Lucille!"

"We don't divorce," Lucille said rather pitifully. "We respect the family in France."

"I know. But how many of your French husbands are faithful? Tell me that!"

"I hate your point of view." Lucille's voice showed sudden indignation, and Toni looked at her through a cloud of cigarette smoke.

"You don't suppose we like it? It's thrust on us. That's all. It's life."

"And you don't believe people can die of a broken heart?"

"Broken heart? Lucille, are you 1930 or 1830? Sometimes I wonder. It's more likely hysteria. Of course, they don't. Whatever love used to be, it's not like that any more. Don't be too absurd."

And Lucille said no more.

Out of the big limousine that slid to a standstill outside L'Hermitage, Lady Alice, Toni, and a man, Ronald Halkett, descended, one June evening, a week or so after Toni's conversation about love. Lady Alice was dark and beautifully gowned, and her daughter—like, yet unlike her, with her fair hair and wides blue-grey eyes under heavy lids, with somethingof the gamine in her personality—was looking lovely in palest pink chiffon.

As they descended, Ronald turned to his mother-in-law: "It's a pity Greta couldn't come," he said as they entered the restaurant. "She said her headache was too bad for her to stir."

"She never used to have headaches," Greta's mother said, vagely disturbed. "But it was good of you to come, Ronnie. We should have been in a difficulty without you," and, handing her cloak to her daughter, she added: "Take it in Toni, dear, we're late and I see Mrs. Delville waiting with a severe look."

Toni nodded, said casually: "Let her wait, darn her!" and strolled into the cloak-room, where the first person she encountered was the sister in question, who glanced up from her powdering in startled amazement.

"Good heavens, Toni! What are you doing here?"

"Mother—? But I thought her party was to be at the Meurice?"

"So it was. They changed their minds at the last minute. Ronnie's with us—"

Ronnie's wife stood very still for a moment, her powder-puff uplifted halfway to her face. Then she shrugged her shoulders put the puff away and spoke carelessly.

"Oh, well—I changed my mind, too I told Ronnie I wouldn't come because I had a headache. It's better, so I did."

"Well, it's hot enough for anyone to have a headache," Toni agreed. "It's a furnace of a night—I'm tired as a dog—but Ronnie may be mad all the same! I'd advise you to can your party and join us."

She yawned luxuriously, showing two rows of perfect teeth, and Greta looked at her in some disapproval.

"Don't be common, Toni—visiting America hasn't improved you."

"It didn't have much chance. Don't be afraid. I'll not be joining your show, but if you don't want to meet the family and embark on explanations you'd better wait her a minute. They're all on the mat."

"What on earth do you mean?" Greta's voice was sharp, her eyes had a glint behind their dreaminess. "Why shouldn't I want explanations? What is there to explain?"

Toni shrugged and drew a scarlet pencil along her lips.

"You know, best, my dear, but if you are still running with the pack you were with yesterday——"

A little insulting gesture completed the sentence, and Greta answered it by turning her back and walking straight out of the cloak-room, whereupon Toni laughed to herself, ran a comb through the bright loose waves of her hair and followed Greta out.

Her mother stood near the head of the steps leading into the restaurant—the centre of a little group of people, and Toni's glance flashed over the faces, and arrested by one of them, paused a moment. She had seen him before—but where or when she could not for the moment remember—and her brows drew together in a little frown of perplexity Who was he—what was he? A little above middle height, clean-shaven, a look of controlled vigorous strength about him, and eyes that reminded her of the clear coldness of ice. Puzzled, but with the outward careless indifference of her set and age, Toni strolled up to the group, was greeted by her mother's guests, and then found herself facing the stranger and heard Lady Alice's voice.

Toni held out her hand, was prepared to be flippant, found herself gazing straight into those steel-grey eyes and, as he took her hand, felt a little shock go through her, a shock that startled her out of her youthful sophistication and made her dumb as they descended the steps together, and followed in Lady Alice's wake across the dancing floor to their table.

Feodor Staire—she remembered him now; he was in the Diplomatic Service, the First Secretary here, and it was at the Opera that she had seen him weeks before, and once in London when she had been staying with an aunt. She had heard a good deal about him, he was rather a figure in French society, a very distinct personality with a brilliant future predicted. Toni, heretofore modern of the moderns, and priding herself on entire lack of either heart or sentiment, found to her amazement that he was having the strangest effect upon her—an effect she could not ignore—and utterly disconcerted, she turned to the man on her other side, whom she knew well, and chattered to him any nonsense that came into her head.

"Don't you think it's time to talk to me a little?" Staire's voice, so low that no one else could hear it, came to her ears during a moment's pause some time later, and turning sharply she met his eyes and felt anew that odd disturbing tremor.

"Why—you've mother to talk to—" she began lamely, and he smiled, aware of that delicate colour staining her face, and knowing that she, too, realized his awareness.

"And Lady Alice has the General," he said; "and—she is not you. I have been very patient."

"I'll dance with you," Toni said, making a determined bid for carelessness. "Don't worry—I dance well."

"I've seen you riding," Staire said, "In London—"

"You've seen me—!" Toni stared t him. "London—how?"

"I did not know who you were, but I was determined to find out, and I did. I found you were Ronnie's sister-in-law. Then I arranged to meet you, but you were away."

"Well, I hope you are satisfied now," Toni said flippantly. "You seem to have taken a lot of trouble."

"I have. And I'll tell you later whether I'm satisfied. For the present—come and dance."

She rose, a slender figure in a frock of palest pink chiffon and silver, dipping to her heels at the back and glittering as she moved; before they had gone half a dozen paces she knew that she had never before danced with so perfect a partner. Rhythm, ease, the strength and suppleness of finely tempered steel—Toni gave herself to his guidance like one in a dream, conscious only of the joy of movement, of their two bodies in perfect accord; and when the music ceased she looked like one who has been roused from deep slumber, eyes heavy and dazed, cheeks flushed, all her cool young hardness gone, and in its place the first trembling incredulous awakening of passion.

THE ENCYCLICAL

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Those who have read the Encyclical of Pope Leo XIII on the condition of Labour will read this Pope's Encyclical as the final pronouncement of the Church on that question with added interest.

It asks for the more equitable distribution of wealth. It bases that request however apparently and as one would expect on giving the workers a chance to work. Work has its moral as well as economic value. But the most pregnant part of it is that the present conditions are unsatisfactory.

The Encyclical is an immense support to the sad and silent but mighty protest of those who only ask for work. But justice like water can rise no higher than its source and if the people continue to be content with what they produce in the way of speech and spokesmen why object? Labour cries out for a "business" way of doing things. That is what has laid Labour on its back. Life is not a matter of "business."

What To-day Means To You.

"TAURUS"

If May 18th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a.m. to 11:25 a.m., from 3:35 p.m. to 5:25 p.m. and from 9:10 p.m. to 11:05 p.m. The danger hours are from noon to 2:15 p.m. and from 6:35 p.m. to 8:40 p.m.

Astrological indications on May 18th point to unexpectedness. Travel is not improbable as the result of a sudden decision. Investments, hitherto considered quite safe, may cause misgivings. Friendships, hallowed by time and association, may reach the breaking point. Be cautious and prudent!

Children born on this May 18th will be affectionate and unselfish. Inharmonious surroundings will grate on them. They will be intelligent and ambitiou, but will always demand an unusual amount of encouragement and attention. If this be not forthcoming, they will "lose interest."

You, if born on May 18th are rather enigmatical, as no one knows how to take you. With a smile and a cheeriness that deceives, you can act and speak in a way that rankles; with a frown and a gloominess that is forbidding, you can do and say—and also mean—kind things, the memory of which is cherished. Yuor moods, too, can never be anticipated. One day you are full of joy of living while the next, without rhyme or reasons, you are depressed and cast down. The only thing that can, with assurance, be expected of you is the unexpected.

Your insatiable curiosity has led you to study, and your knowledge is fundamental, although you do not show interest or capacity in exploiting it to your advatnage. You are not very sociable, and are happiest when alone. You evince little interest in recreations or pastimes, although physically equipped to be an active participant. Ambition does not stir you. If you are surrounded with reasonable comforts, you are satisfied. Only a great love, for which you are destined, will revolutionize your plan of life. When this blossoms into existence, you will undergo a complete metamorphosis and discard the trappings of churlishness which, even to-day, only disguises, but do not hide, a warm sympathetic and generous nature.

MEXICO WILL IMPORT U. S. GOLD IN EFFORT TO STOP PESO DROP

Bankers Decide to Import Currency to Satisfy Public Demand.

FREE EXCHANGE.

MEXICO CITY, May 18.—(AP)—United States gold currency will be imported in large quantities into Mexicoand circulated to check the fall of the toboganning silver peso.

Representatives of all banks doing business in Mexico at a meeting last week to consider the situation decided that perhaps a partial solution lay in bringing in enough United States gold to satisfy the public demand for gold currency.

It was also agreed to form a consortium to control foreign exchange and avoid operations of unscrupulous speculators which would cause a further depreciation in silver.

The treasury department announced at the same time that a free exchange of gold between Mexico and other countries would become effective immediately. Thus allowing exportations to the United States of gold, brought here to improve the exchange, in excess of the amount which proves necessary.

The bankers in a statement after their meeting said that scarcity of Mexican gold coin as compared with the great public demand for that metal was one of the principal causes of the present trouble and that they expected the importation of United States gold to stabilize the situation.

The meeting of the bankers was convoked urgently in view of the continued drop of the exchange rate of the silver peso against the gold peso and against the dollar. The silver peso's normal value is three percent under the gold peso and a few cents over two pesos but recently it has fallen to 32 per cent under gold and 2.76 pesos to the dollar.

While the bankers did not say how much gold would be imported from the United States it was estimated at many millions of dollars.

Following the decision of Netherland East Indian tea producers not to restrict production the ouput has increased greatly, and this year's crop will exceed 87,000 tons, a gain of 9 per cent over last year.

R. W. Knister Funeral To Be Held Tuesday

WINDSOR, Ont., May 18 (C.P.).—Funeral services for Robert W. Knister are to be held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. E. Willan, Moy Avenue, Windsor, with services at 2.30 p.m. in Comber United Church, and interment in Lakeview Cemetery, Leamington.

The late Mr. Knister was widely known as a breeder of Clydesdale horses and for his interest in farm work. He was one of the founders of the Ontario Corn Growers' Association, and for several years was president. He also was one of the organizers of the Western Ontario Winter Fair which is held at Chatham.

Mooseheart Legion Holds Annual Provincial Frolic

A splendid time was had in the Legion Hall Saturday night on the occasion of the annual Provincial Frolic of the Mooseheart Legion of the World Loyal Order of Moose. The main speaker of the evening was Grand Herder Norman G. Heyd, A.G.R., Toronto. J. G. Jackson, Grand Regent for Canada, also spoke. The North Moose for the evening was Post North Moose Fred Roberts, assisted by the officers of Peterborough Unit, Quinte Division No. 187.

There was a fine entertainment put on by Mr. Baker and his assistant, the English comedian. Charles Ineson, Toronto radio tenor, gave some valued selections, after which a banquet was served by the Ladies' Chapter of the Legion.

Bill Morrow, of West Toronto Lodge No. 87, was present as well as David A. Toole, Past Dictator West Toronto Lodge No. 87, and Bro. A. E. Morgan of Wales, Great Britain. The frolic was a huge success.

MRS. SARAH DOGGETT DIES.

HILLSBORO, O., May 18 (C.P.). — Mrs. Sarah Doggett, 92, one of the original "Crusaders" who founded the Women's Christian Temperance Union, died at her home here to-day.

The Women's Temperance Crusade was formed on Christmas Day, 1873, after an address here by Dr. Rio Lewis, physician and lecturer. The Crusade organization later became the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

FIRE DESTROYS HOME.

GANANOQUE, Ont., May 18 (C. P.). — The large frame residence of Bruce Johnston, at Brewers' Mills, was destroyed by fire early to-day. The blaze was first discovered by a neighbor who awakened the Johnston family in time to save nearly all the contents. The fire is believed to have started from the fireplace which was left burning all night. Damage is estimated to be about $5,000.

DREAM IS REALIZED

LONDON, May 18—(CP)—The aim of all bowlers to take ten wickets in an inning was achieved today by Verity playing in a county cricket match for Yorkshire against Warwickshire at Leeds. He accounted for all Warwickshires second wickets at a cost of only 36 runs. Yorkshire won by an innings at 25 runs. Scores were Yorkshire, 298; Warwick, 210.

NICKEL DROPS TO $12 LEVEL

Treadwell Yukon Unchanged at $2 This Morning on Standard Exchange.

OIL SECTION MIXED.

TORONTO, Ont., May 18 (C.P.).—Mixed price changes and moderate trading volume characterized the morning session on the Standard stock and mining exchange to-day.

International Nickel was again under pressure and sold down to $12, a new low price for the year. At this low figure it was off 40 cents on the day. Noranda was also lower, losing 55, to $22.80. Treadwell Yukon went unchanged at $2. Ventures showed some improvement, while Hudson Bay and Sherritt Gordon displayed small losses.

Golds were mixed, Dome up 10, Big Missouri 1½, Granada Rouyn 5, McIntyre 10, and Lake Shore 15, while Vipond was off 5, Wright-Hargreaves 4, Mining Corporation 1, Sylvanite 1, and Macassa 3. Kirkland Lake, Barry Hollinger, Moss, and Howey showed no change.

Oils were dull, but steady. Merland gained 3, and Sarnia2, Acme and Homestead stelling unchanged.

SEVERAL ISSUES DROP TO LOWEST

Stock Exchange this afternoon. The volume was not as heavy as in the morning trading, but the general trend continued to bring the list down.

Canadian Pacific Railway slumped in late trading to a new low at 25¼, a net loss of 1⅛ under Saturday's closing sale. Montreal Power eased off 1⅝ to a new low at 50¾ and uebec Power touched a new low at 35¼. International Nickel of Canada reached a new low at 11⅝, a loss of ⅛ over last week's closing price.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Ont., May 18. (CP)—Toronto Stock Exchange market was faced with the possibility of a severe break as volume increased on the decline to-day. The market closed at its low for the day, with practically all the pivotal issues making new record lows. Selling became quite heavy as prices continued downward, with securities held outright coming out of the strong box and pressed for sale. It was this phase of the selling rather than margin selling, a rather unimportant factor lately, which cast an ominous shadow over the market.

Nickel closed at 11⅞, a naw low for the present stock. Smelters under 90 was at a new low. Noranda lost 1¼ points, Bell Telephone equalled its old low, C.P.R. broke 1⅝ points to 26, Brazilian sold at 13¾, Page-Hersey Tubes at 74¾, Hamilton Bridge at 9¾, Steel of Canada at 28, Walkers at 5, Service Stations at 14¾, the preferred at 60.

These in themselves constituted a liberal representation of the leaders lower than they have been his year and longer, in addition the oil group equalled or sold at new lows on small fractional recessions and and stocks broke from 1 to 6 points to show new record prices on the downside.

Sales were over 40,000, the first time the volume has reached this figure in weeks.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 18 (C.P.).—Reflecting weakness on larger boards, higher-priced stocks on the Mining Market moved into new low territory for the current movement with the balance of the list displaying sympathetic action. Reduced turnover in cheaper issues resulted in a reduction in aggregate volume, total sales of 354,603 shares comparing with 409,051 Friday.

International Nickel declined to a new low of $12, off 40, and persistent selling in Noranda carried the price down a point and a quarter from Saturday. Treadwell Yukon lost a quarter and Hudson Bay a few cents. Ventures regained a couple and other Lindsleys were quiet.

McIntyre and Hollinger closed off a quarter each. Mining Corporation was down 4, Wright-Hargreaves 7, and smaller losses were scattered throughout the balance of the gold section. Dome managed to move against the trend for a gain of a few cents.

Oils were dull, with Merland and Sarnia up a couple on end and Acme Gas down a fraction. Acme Rights, due to proximity of May 20, date on which they must be exercised, dropped to a quarter cent.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 18. (CP)—The United Farmers Co-operative company to-day supplied to the Canadian Press the following quotations for produce delivered at Toronto:

Eggs, extras, doz., 16; Firsts, doz., 14.
Cream churning, No. 1, pounds, 20.
Creamery butter, No. 1, solids, 20.
Potatoes, No. 1, in bags, 75 to 80.

Stock Brokers Sue Peterboro' Lawyer

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, May 18.—Mathews and Company, Toronto stock brokers, today sued Basil D. Hall, of Peterborough for $14,816 with interest at 6½% allegedly owing for stock and bonds bought and sold over a considerable period. The writ of summons was filed at Osgoode Hall.

Montreal Exchange Continues Decline

Montreal, Que., May 18. (CP)—There was no relief for the Montreal stock market this morning losses appeared early, and the general list slid downwards steadily throughout the morning.

Dominion Textile led the decline with a loss of 5½ at 67 at noon. Dominion Glass dropped 3 points to 100, Bell Telephone one to 140, Canadian Car 1 to 12, National Steel Car one to 22 and Consolidated Mining and Smelting was also down one point to 90.

Brazilian was firm at 13⅞. Nickel sold down 3-8 to a new low at 11⅞. Canadian Pacific also dropped to a new low at 26, off ¾ from Saturday's close

FAMILY CAMPING ON PRISON STEPS

Destitute Wife Says She Will Stay there Until Husband Is Released

NINE CHILDREN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

DAUPHIN, Man. May 18.— Virtually destitute, Mrs. Metro Kuszk and her nine children, one a babe in arms, came to Dauphin Friday and camped on the jail steps, where the husband and father is imprisoned.

"I intend to stay here until my husband is released," she told the jail authorities. "My other three children stayed at home, on a farm near Fork River, but they have little food."

Kuszk was recently sentenced to serve a seven-month sentence for breach of the Excise Act. Since then Mrs. Kuszk and her family of twelve have been virtually destitute.

Town authorities came to their aid Friday night. The mother and her children were given food and shelter in the Town Hall, and an appeal will be made to the Attorney-General for the release of the husband.

Search Is Vain

Fear Body of Marmora Lad Will Not Rise to Surface Till Tenth Day

MARMORA, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence).— Further searching by a number of men on Sunday for the body of Donald Dougall proved fruitless. Large numbers of people also visited the scene of the tragedy during the day. The belief is now generally held that the body will not be recovered until the tenth day, which will be next Saturday.

ST. THOMAS BAKER DIES

ST. THOMAS, Ont, May 18. (CP) John T. Stephens, who for more than forty years conducted a bakery business in St. Thomas, died at his home here to-day, aged 66 years. He was a native of Rosemont, Ontario. His wife, four daughters and three sons survive.

TORONTO LIST AT NEW LOWS

Opening Weak, Market Follows New York Lead to Sink Unto Lower Levels.

SEVERAL LEADERS DOWN.

TORONTO, Ont., May 18 (C.P.).—The week opened on Toronto stock exchange with prices of stocks still retreating. There was nothing in the nature of favorable developments over the weekend to bolster the market or arouse enthusiasm and consequently the market opened weak, and following New York again, sank to a new low level this morning.

Turnover was heavier than has been the custom during morning sessions, although total volume still was moderate.

Among issues at new lows this morning were International Nickel, under 12, C.P.R., down to 26, Page-Hersey Tubes at 75¼, Consolidated Smelters at 89½, and, on the curb, Service Stations preferred at 60, McColl-Frontenac Oil under 13, and Crown-Dominion Oil at 3¼. B. A. Oil equalled its old low of 10, Imperial and International Petroleum both lost small fractions.

Cockshutt Plow sold under 7 to set a new low for the year at 6¼. Brazilian was moderately firm at 14, most of the foods were soft, Walkers lost a small fraction and Ford of Canada dipped under 19.

HYDRO ELECTRIC WEAK

Hydro-Electric Securities has reacted to a new low, following the release of its report for the first quarter. Net ordinary income after all charges amounted to $806,397, equal to, after preferred participation rights, 36 cents a share on the 1,476,393 shares. However, the company had in addition to ordinary income a net extraordinary income of $262,241 from sales of securities, participations in syndicates and underwriting commissions, equal to 15 cents a share on the common, bringing the total net to 51 cents a share compared with 39 cents in the same period last year. The company owns large blocks of domestic and foreign securities and only as few years ago held a good sized block of Brazilian Traction shares. Latest quotations on Hydro-Electric Securities on the Curb is 16¾ bid.

GOES TO ALLISTON

BRANTFORD, May 18.— Miss Margaret MacCormick, regulation nurse graduate of the Brantford General Hospital, and for the last year assistant superintendent at the Cobourg General Hospital, has been appointed superintendent at Alliston General Hospital. Her duties will commence May 18.

EXPORT COPPER REDUCED

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 18 (C.P.).—For the second time within a week, the price of export copper to-day was reduced a quarter of a cent a pound to 9.275 cents, C.I.F. European base ports.

The cut brought the export figure to a level with 9-cent copper in the domestic market, a figure at which custom smelters have been offering the metal for some time.

Winnipeg Review

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Ewalt Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Despite the bullish Free Press crop report Saturday morning the wheat market gave a poor exhibition for itself and after opening about unchanged, gradually eased off prices sinking to 1¾ to 1½ under the close Friday night and getting into the daily bids which brought in very meagre support. The chief feature of the market was the lack of buying support, as no person appeared to want any wheat. There was scattered selling on the weakness in Chicago and to the fact that a few light showers were reported early from Southeastern Alberta and Southwestern Saskatchewan. These showers were given as .03 at two or three points, with later reports stating that the weather had cleared up with no signs of further precipitation. No export sales were made overnight and direct shippers reported that they had received no bids. The demand for cash wheat was very slow with only small lots changing hands. The New York stock market closed generally lower, although some issues were about unchanged. The market is a weather affair and should good rains develop over the week-end some further recession in prices can be looked for, unless there is a distinct improvement in the foreign demand and business.

Coarse Grains.—Outside of a little export business in barley the coarse grains were dull and featureless. Prices were all lower in sympathy with wheat.

Liverpool due about 1¼ lower based on Winnipeg.

SOVIET DELEGATE UPHOLDS STATE

Claims Campaigns Against Russai Will Not Lessen Crisis in Capitalistic States.

SEEKS PACT.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 18.—(A.P.) — Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Russia's delegate to the commission on a Pan-European Federation, today proposed the conclusion of "a pact of economic aggression" as the commission resumed its sessions.

Campaigns against Soviet Russia, he told the other statesmen, never will diminish the severity of the economic crisis in capitalisitc states. His address was a virtual lecture on economic conditions in Europe.

"Yet the States represented here adopt a general convention," he said, "providing for compulsory sale of commodities in home markets at the same low prices which prevail in foreign markets."

Charges that Soviet dumping aggravates the economic depression are "inconceivably silly," he declared adding that by developing 'intimate commercial relations" with the Soviet Union the capitalistic States will mitigate the burden of the economic crisis.

Litvinoff spoke with gravity, using none of the bitter quips which often punctuate his speeches. He told the commission that his country, untouched by the economic crisis which has blighted the rest of the world, is experiencing unprecedented development.

"Relations to be established between the capitalistic states and the Soviet Union," he said, "cannot fail to re-act upon the course of the present world crisis. The world depression will be prolonged by the efforts of capitalists to maintain high prices in domestic markets."

He went into considerable detail to refute charges that Soviet exports aggravate the general depression.

"Russian products have a quite modest place in the world's trade," he said. "Indeed, this economic crisis appeared before the Soviet Union was born."

WORLD'S LEADING FINANCIERS GATHER AT BASLE, SWITZERLAND

Bank of International Settlements Inaugurated May 20, Holding First Meeting.

REPARTIONS CONDUIT.

BASLE, Switzerland, May 18. (AP)—Some of the world's most noted financiers were gathered here to-day for the first annual general meeting of the Bank of International Sttlements, inaugurated May 20, 1930, under the terms of the Young plan.

They included the governors of the central banks of most of the former beligerent states, all of whom told stock in the institution. President Gates W. McGrarrah, had ready his first year's report of the meeting.

The Bank of International Settlements was conceived as a reparations conduit, a means of transferring some of the most irritating European post-war problems from political to commercial obligations.

The administration of monthly payments made by Germany is a routine operation which would be handled by any trust company. Consequently officials place their energy in other financial fields. Reparations funds represent less than twenty per cent of total assets, which amount to $372,000,000.

Because of the increasing number of central banks which are depositing their foreign currency reserves with the "bis." The banking department has taken on rapid growth. In March deposits amounted to a billion eight hundred thousand Swiss francs. Creditors use the "bis" as they would use any other bank as a depository for funds which may be employed to discharge debts.

The bank's authorized capital is 500 million Swiss francs divided into 200,000 shares, subscribed by the central banks of Great Britain, Belgium, France, Germany, and Italy, the industrial bank of Japan, J. P. Morgan and company of New York, the First National Bank of New York and the First National Bank of Chicago.

This world institution housed in an old Victorian hotel acts as trustees for government loans. It has actually three such: the Dawes and Young loans and an Austrian loan.

Bank governors of various countries have discovered that one of the greatest uses of the bank is as a place of rendezvous for them. This has become a utility for discussion of financial problems and movements of currency.

Youth Sentenced On Three Charges

BRANTFORD, Ont., May 18—(C.P.)—Pleading guilty to three charges of forgery, Jack Persall, 17-year-old bank clerk arrested at Cleveland and brought back here for trial, was to-day sentenced to not less than a year and not more than 18 months on each charge, sentences to run concurrently. The charges showed he obtained $5,705 during the period since October last. The money was spent, the youth said, buying two cars and other articles in Cleveland.

Will Hold No Inquest On Hanging Of Lad

LONDON, Ont., May 18.—Following an autopsy performed on the body of 14 year old Fred Simmons, Dundas street, who was found hanging by a cord in the bathroom of his father's apartment on Saturday night, Coroner Dr. E. L. Hodgins announced this afternoon that no inquest will be held. The order for the autopsy was made on Sunday night after Crown Attorney A. M. Judd had been notified of the case.

Fred Simmons was a third year student at the Beck Collegiate Institute and was to have tried his matriculation examination this year. He was a former pupil at the Boyle Memorial Public school.

CHICAGO WHEAT DOWN

CHICAGO, Ill., May 18 (C. P. ).—Showers in Canada and a liberal increase of wheat on ocean passage led to early lower grain prices to-day. Stock market weakness had a further bearish effect. Opening ¾ cents off to ¼ up wheat afterward dropped. Corn started 1-8 to 3-8 lower and subsequently underwent further decline.

U. S. STEEL AND AMERICAN CAN DECLINE BELOW $100 MARK AS N. Y. LIQUIDATION CONTINUES

Slow Selling Forces Rails and Some of Utilities and Industrials Down.

TRADING IS SLIM.

Understood Substantial Portion of Liquidation Comes From Foreign Sources.

(By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 18.—The stock market quietly penetrated new low levels for the bear market to-day.

For the eighth consecutive session, there was no relief from the slow liquidation of the rails and some of the leading industrials and utilities. While bear selling was undoubtedly a factor, it was said in brokerage circles that considerable real liquidation was following into the market, as a substantial portion of it was believed to be from foreign sources.

The pressure against U.S. Steel and American Can finally pushed both issues under the 100 mark, with losses of about 2 and 3 points. A mild recovery occurred in early afternoon. Wide breaks were numerous in the rails, Atchison, New York Central, Southern Pacific, New Haven, Union Pacific, and Norfolk and Western breaking 4 to more than 8 points. American Telephone and American Tobacco "B" were weak spots, tumbling about 6. International Business Machines tumbled 17. Losses among many of the prominen industrials and utilities, however, were restricted to a point or so. Trading was in slim volume, although a few large blocks appeared 10800, shares of Texas Corp. Trading ¾ of a point lower.

Failure of the market, as measured by price averages, to meet important support around the bear market low established on April 29, was a distinctly bearish development, so far as Wall Street sentiment was concerned, but most of the particular issues under notable pressure had been penetrating new low ground for several days, while much of the rest of the list has held fairly well. The rails have dipped below the bottom of the bear market of 1907, although still hold above the levels of the post-war deflation. One of the leading advistory services, in its weekly analysis to-day, expressed the opinion that the deflation in the carrier issues was "close to its extreme limit."

In connection with rumors of important selling from abroad, Wall Street is awaiting the bi-monthly settlement in London, later this week, with considerable interest.

Bootleggers Captured Following Long Chase

THOROLD, Ont., May 18—Stephen Heopas and Walter Astolo of Niagara Falls were remanded to jail to-day until Thursday to explain the presence of 120 quarts of ale in their car which was seized Saturday by Chief Shelton of Thorold after a wild chase in which several cartons of ale were smashed. One of the permits carried by the men was made out to the address of a house adjoining that of the Thorold Chief of Police, in a name unknown to him.

N.Y. Paper Comments On Conversion Loan

Those American investors who hold Dominion of Canada bonds maturing in the next three and one-half years may find it advantageous to exchange their securities for the new 4½ per cent. conversion issue announced by the Minister of Finance.

The chief advantage of the plan to the investors, points out the New York Sun, is that obligations now approaching maturity can be extended from fifteen to twenty-five years without further attention. The Dominion offers for the old securities new bonds maturing twenty-five years after the present maturities and callable after fifteen years.

One feature that adds to the attractiveness of the offer is that the interest rates on the old issues will be continued until their maturity dates for those who elect to exchange their securities. Thus the holders of Victory Loan 5½ per cent. bonds maturing in November, 1934 will receive for the 3½ year period the 4½ per cent. on the new issue plus adjustment coupons entitling them to the additional 1 per cent.

The same plan will be followed for the three other issues that are affected, the War Loan 5s, maturing in October, 1931, the Renewal Loan 5½s, maturing in November, 1932, and the Victory Loan 5½s, maturing in November 1933.

While some investors may not care to accept lower coupon bonds it is pointed out by bankers that Dominion Government bonds are selling in the market to yield only 4.25 to 4.30 per cent. Thus the holders of the bonds with near maturities are offered an opportunity to obtain a higher income than they can get in the open market.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

A considerable amount of selling of International Nickel has been in evidence the last two days. This has been attributed to the rather disappointing quarterly report on earnings, full particulars of which have appeared in these bulletins. Selling was sufficient to force the stock into new low ground for all time. The company had a deficit of $1,010,639 after dividends for the March quarter, as contrasted with a surplus of $693,792 after such payments in the first three months of last year. Net profits for the period amounted to $1,659,637 or the equivalent of 8 cents a share, while dividend requirements amounted to $2,670,276.

10,000 TEXTILE WORKERS STRIKE

LILLE, France, May 18. (AP)—One hundred thousand textile workers went on strike to-day because their pay had been cut three to four percent to cover social insurance. About one-fourth of the workers in the Lille region stayed on the job.

Suicide Leaves Note For Mystery Friend

BOSTON, Mass., May 18.—(C. P.)—Daniel Murphy, of San Francisco, was reported today by officers of the Steamship Baltic to have jumped overboard last Monday morning, five hours after the vessel sailed from Galway, Ireland. The officers of the steamer, which docked here today, said they had found a note in his effects reading.

"Good bye, Bill, I'll see you in a million years." But there was no means of identifying "Bill."

Primate Of Spain Seeks Post In Rome

VATICAN CITY, May 8 (C.P.).—It was reported to-day that Cardinal Segual, Primate of Spain, had asked the Pope to permit him to resign the Archepiscopal See at Toledo and live in Rome as Cardinal of the Curia.

In that position he would succeed the late Cardinal Merry Del Val, who also was a Spaniard, and once served as Papal Secretary of State.

Cardinal Sequar left Spain last week to come here for a conference with the Pontiff.

Crowley's Hearing Postponed For Week

MINEOLA, N.Y., May 18. (CP)—Trial of Francis Crowley for the murder of Patrick Frederick Hirsch was postponed to-day until next Monday at the request of former District Attorney Charles Weeks, counsel for the confessed killer.

Crowley was captured ten days ago in an uptown apartment with Rudolph Duringer, held in the Bronx for the murder April 27 of Virginia Brannen, and Helen Walsh, who was Crowley's companion the night Patrolman Hirsch was slain. The Walsh girl is one of the State's principal witnesses.

Scholarship Is Won By Lakefield Girl

The outstanding scholastic honor in the Junior examinations at the Ontario College of Pharmacy was won by a Lakefield girl, Miss M. F. L. Gibson. Miss Gibson headed her year and won the Lieutenant George R. Park Phm.B. Memorial Scholarship. She is in her first year at pharmacy, having served her apprenticeship in Northey's Drug Store in Lakefield.

S. C. Tweed Now Finds Time to Dabble in Politics and Gardens.

IS REALLY SHY

(By J. H. Turnpenny)

TORONTO, May 18.—S. C. Tweed, founder of the flourishing Canadian Insurance Company, is one of Canada's few shy politicians. A big man, broad of back, with a broad, full face of bright complexion, he is, for one of his physique, surprisingly diffident when approached personally. Hazel eyes twinkle behind light-rimmed glasses and he grins bashfully as he shifts uneasily in his chair as though to evade questions. Even the telephone, behind which so many little minds blast forth in fury, is no refuge for Mr. Tweed's bashfulness. He speaks in a well-modulated voice, courteous, obliging so that at the end of the conversation you are somewhat puzzled whether you, yourself, have not conferred upon Mr. Tweed a great favor by pausing to listen. He is a good dresser, but his dress forms part of a background rather than a highlight in the picture. In summer he is sometimes to be found wearing light brown shoes and woollen sox

Entered Political Field.

Politics is Mr. Tweed's newly adopted child. Questioned, he is likely to reply somewhat shyly that his achievement lies in twitting the Ontario Conservative party, yet once launched on the subject he soon becomes engrossed, his self-consciousness dispels and he speaks with all the enthusiasm of a pride-ful mother over her first-born. He is a member for North Waterloo in the provincial house, and might have been Ontario Liberal leader had he willed. In this field he finds plenty of scope for his great organizing ability; this was never more forcibly demonstrated than in the by-election for South Waterloo, where N. O. Hipel was returned the first Liberal to sit for the riding since 1894. During one month of the campaign he was speaking every day, and he and his wife addressed 35 public meetings and evidence of the tremendous energy of this man.

He has been most fortunate in having married a woman who not only is a sympathetic helpmate but is herself a person of capability. She was formerly Miss Winnifred Hobson, daughter of Oliver and Mrs. Hobson of Dundas, Ont. Mrs. Tweed's counsel is highly valued by her husband; she speaks from the platform herself, and in the heat of battle her freshness and courage is like sparkling water to a parched warrior. She is the first woman chairman of the Waterloo Public School and is now serving her fourth term on the board.

Of Irish Stock.

Mr. Tweed's great-grandfather came to Canada a settler from Antrim county, Ireland, in 1820. Mr. Tweed's parents were William A. and Alice (Sproule) Tweed, and they owned a farm in the vicinity of Winnipeg, where Mr. Tweed spent his boyhood days. He is the eldest of a family of four. There are three sisters, all married, two living in Winnipeg and the third in Waterloo. His brother, the youngest of the family, is in the general insurance business in Waterloo. Following a public school education Mr. Tweed received a business training and in 1901 entered the employ of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at Winnipeg as a stenographer. It was merely chance that took him into the insurance field. He went looking for a "job" and found an opening with the Metropolitan. But it was not chance that resulted in his founding his own company years later. Hard work, a methodical precision in all he did, and ability for organizing and a personality that won for him friends everywhere have been the essentials upon which his personal success has depended.

He did not remain long a stenographer with the Metropolitan. Familiarizing himself with the principles of insurance and with the business of the company, he asked for an opportunity to join the sales staff, made good and later joined the Equitable Life of New York. He was promoted to managership of the London, Ontario office of that company, and remained with the Equitable until 1916 when he transferred to the Mutual Life Assurance. He was superintendent of agencies when he resigned in 1920 to organize his own company the Ontario Equitable Life and Accident Insurance Company

Small Overhead.

Mr. Tweed began in a modest way, renting a small office and hiring one stenographer, the total overhead amounting to only $15 a week. It is said that Mr. Tweed made a definite routing of the farming community he wished to canvass and missed no home on either side of the road. That was his methodical manner of approaching every possible risk, and he followed the same plan as he extended the radius of his territory. The office of the Ontario Equitable today is unpretentious, yet with a homelike atmosphere. Every employee has a good word for "The Chief," both as executive and man. Mr. Tweed's own office has a simple dignity of its own. Pictures of Sir Wilfred Laurier and other notables hang from the walls; there are books in cases along the walls, books mainly concerning Canadian history and politics.

There are no golf clubs in the corner, no pictures of golfers. Mr. Tweed doesn't play golf. He finds his pleasure in gardening in tending to the shrubbery around his home, in the companionship of his wife, their two children, Walter Edward and Gertrude, and the huge black Newfoundland dog, self-appointed guardian of the entire Tweed family and estate

Commissioner's Report Suggests Future Precautions Against Powder Escaping.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 18 (By The Canadian Press).—Proof that powder escaping from loose containers was found on the deck of the ill-fated sealing steamer Viking, is contained in evidence adduced by the Royal Commission inquiring into the disastrous explosion, according to an interim report submitted by the Commission.

The report, suggesting several means of guarding against a repetition of the tragedy, was addressed to His Excellency the Governor-in-Council and signed by the three commissioners, Sir William Horwood, Chief Justice of Newfoundland, J. R. Randell, and M. G. Dalton. It reads:

"We, the Commissioners appointed to enquire into and report to Your Excellency on the loss of the steamship Viking and all matters connected therewith, beg leave to submit the following interim report:

"We would respectfully inform Your Excellency that from the evidence already taken before us it has been proven that the powder carried on board the ship was contained in tins (or corrogated sheet iron containers with seams pressed together) so insecurely fastened, that in the course of handling the tins, powder escaped therefrom and was found on the deck of the ship.

"Our purpose in immediately reporting this fact is to enable Your Excellency to consider as early as convenient whether the importation of powder should be permitted except in wooden water-tight kegs or packages having inside a linen bag or other container capable of preventing the escape of powder, and having printed on the outside of the keg or package the word DANGER.

"We would also respectfully ask Your Excellency to consider whether regulations should not be made to prevent gun powder or other explosives being taken or carried on board ship except by a permit from an Inspector of Explosives, who should be satisfied that all necessary precautions are being observed and that no powder should be allowed on board any vessel except under a permit, and that before the permit is granted the Inspector should ascertain that there has been provided as a receptacle for such powder a safe magazine or closed room in the hold or other safe place in the vessel, the key of which is to be in the possession of an officer especially designated for that purpose."

HOME TOWNERS

TIDBITS INTERESTING AND HUMOROUS FROM CAMPBELLFORD

Mr. F. F. Long is having considerable repair work done on the front of his confectionary store on Front Street. This work is being executed by Mr. James Blue, local contractor.

Master Jack Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Smith met with a painful accident this week when he fell from a roof when trying to retrieve his cap and sprained his right ankle.

Mr. C. H. Davidson was a business visitor to Oshawa on Friday.

Word has been received here of the death in Peterborough of Mr. Richard Boyle, an old time resident of Seymour Township, in his 75th year. The late Mr. Boyle was born and lived in Seymour until twenty years ago when he moved to Peterborough to live. A brother, Jarvis, resides in town.

Mr. H. W. Lapp, formerly manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce intown and now manager of the Bank street branch of that institution at Ottawa, was a visitor to town on Saturday.

Another bad spot of the town has been cleaned up with the removal from the corner of Mill and Front street of the old band stand. This structure was unfit for use and was dangerous from the point of view of children playing on and around it.

THOUSANDS AGAIN MOVE IN MONTREAL

May 1 Moving Habit Remains Great Puzzle—Effort Needed for Solution.

MONTREAL, May 13 (By The Canadian Press).—Another May 1 moving day has come and gone and once again thousands of Montrealers installed in their new homes are asking themselves why a city of more than 1,000,000 souls should ever have contrived to adopt the custom of a fixed leasing date.

Much extra expenditure aggregating at least $1,000,000 is laid out in a variety of ways which would not have to be expended if the habit were relaxed, children are interrupted in their education through moving to new areas, tempers are strained to the breaking point, and the sum total of the inconvience which is caused cannot be computed in material figures.

Rrepresentatives of some of the big firms who have to bear the brunt of the moving day epidemic expressed themselves in no uncertain terms about the whole business when interviewed in their offices in the late afternoon of May 1 as the dreary day of removals was drawing to a close.

James Brody a member of a local moving firm declared emphatically that his firm has always been opposed to the practice.

"It means," he explained, "that we have to keep 50 per cent. of rolling stock idle during 11 months of the year. From approximately April 1 to May 10 our entire stock is generally fully occupied, but for far the greater part of the year it is doing nothing."

Discussing the employment aspect, Mr. Brody pointed out that while the normal staff of the firm is about 270, this figure is increased to 850 during the vital few days when a whole city plays at general post. Naturally, he said, this involved heavier labor costs than would be the case of moving were carried out more evenly. Another point he made in this connection was in regard to the difficulty sometimes of securing fully experienced men for the work when the strain on the staff is greatest. Incidentally, he stated that moving this year has not cost any more than it did 15 years ago.

Mr. Brody urged that it would be very much better for all concerned if instead of one there were four moving days in the course of a year.

BANKERS' ASSOCIATION HEAD WAS FORMERLY AN ENGINEER

CHARMING PERSONALITY.

By J. H. Turnpenny.

TORONTO, May 18.—Beaudry Leman is the first French-Canadian to have been honored by election to the presidency of the Canadian Bankers' Association. Montreal bankers have held this distinguished position but, prior to Mr. Leman's election, none of French-Canadian extraction. As general manager and director of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, he had already displayed an ability which justified his selection and the charm of a French-Canadian personality lends grace to an office distinguished in the realms of national and international finance.

Mr. Leman bears himself with a quiet dignity that carries with it a hint of old-world charm. He is a slender man of average height, grows a fair moustache which sweeps to either side of a firm mouth and a whisp of whisker under the lower lip. He has the high forehead of the intellectual; there is the suggestion of the ascetic in the intensity of his look from eyes which seem to smolder over hidden fires. His pursuit of intellectual pleasures is further revealed in his taste for good literature and art, his keen appreciation of the spoken drama.

He finds time to deliver lectures and write newspaper articles in both French and English, and his mastery of the best French prose and verse lends grace to a correct and clear English. He is fond of quoting La Fontain's Fables and aptly applies their practical lessons to all events and circumstances. When he addressed the Canadian Club of Montreal a few months after the stock market crash of October 1929, he remarked that the chairman no doubt expected that some very interesting information could be obtained from the President of the Canadian Bankers' Association and continued: "I must confess my inability to contribute any enlightenment that would more truly clarify the situation. Finding that all the whereats, wherebyes, wherefores, whereins, whereofs, whereons, and whereupons have been used up in prose, I had no alternative venture." Then, he read the "Dairywoman and the Pot of Milk," wit hits conclusion:

"Who buildeth not, sometimes, in air,
His cots, or seats, or castles fair?
From kings to dairywomen—all—
The wise, the foolish, great and small—
Each thinks his waking dreams the best.
Some flattering error fills the breast;
The world, with all its wealth, is ours,
Its honor, dames, and loveliest bowers.
Some accident then calls me back,
And I'm no more than a simple Jack!"

His wit and sensitiveness of the temper of his audience have been often cited. An illustration was afforded at a dinner of the Engineering Institute of Montreal last February.

"I had prepared a very elaborate and almost eloquent introduction to this talk, wherein was expressed my pleasure in meeting my fellow engineers of bygone days. But it suddenly dawned upon me that I was not here with you for that purpose, that your president and secretary had in view a much more important object lesson, so far as you were concerned, and that their motives and designs when inviting me to this dinner were darker and more sinister than you and I had thought. They were not content with modern forms of torture, which have become more humane as civilization has progressed; even the middle ages did not offer any form of punishment that would satisfy their refined cruelty; they bought their inspiration in ancient history and renewed a practice resorted to only in extreme cases by the most rigid and stern inhabitants of Greece, the Spartans. When a Helot, the underdog of those days had been derelict in his duty, the leaders of Sparta would feed him well, oversaturate him with wine, and then bring him before the populace to stand as best he could, as an example that would impress the younger generations and keep them in the path of righteousness. I have been brought before you to-night under similar conditions, for I have wandered away from the avenues of pure and disinterested science, and unpardonable crime, I have worshipped the golden idol."

Mr. Leman was an engineer first, the banker later. He was educated at Mount St. Louis College, from which he was graduated and went to France, where he attended University of Lille, France, completing his education at McGill University, Montreal. His engineering knowledge qualified him to do exceptionally good work on the Electric Service Commission and as a member of the National Advisory Committee on the St. Lawrence waterways. He was one of the founders of Shawinigan Falls in 1900, co-operating in the development of the water power of the St. Maurice river and in the layout of the town. He became mayor of Shawinigan Falls at the age of 22.

He is recognized as one of the most forceful advocates of economic education in the province of Quebec and he has an extensive knowledge of French, British and American schools of political economy.

Mr. Leman is a director of the General Trust of Canada, of Shawinigan Water and Power Company, of Montreal Tramways Company, Limited, of Provincial Transports Company, Limited, and of Fairchild Aircraft, Limited. He was rendered valuable service as a member of the Canadian Farm Loan Board and of the Council of Agriculture of the Province of Quebec.

will the united wisdom and judgment of the selected to deal with this important subject, will carry the judgment of all classes of people the world over. It will be of great satisfaction to our respective countries to feel that we have made a practical contribution to the world's betterment which will make an epoch in the spirit of wolrd prosperity and co-operation that will become historic."

The first session of the conference was confined to Mr. Ferguson's opening statement. He was then, on motion of Samuel R. McKelvie, chief United States delegate, appointed permanent chairman of the conference. An organization committee was established with one representative from each country, the Canadian representative being Dr. W. A. Riddell, and this committee proceeded this afternoon to the preparation of the agenda.

But while the conference did not reach the kernel of the discussions to-day it was apparent that a number of schemes lie in the offing. Almost every delegation is reported to have a plan mapped out, varying widely in scope. The most hopeful feature of the deliberations is that while the delegations are approaching the problem from widely different angles they all, as exporters, have a common interest in devising a workable scheme to give the farmers a remunerative price for wheat.

The status of the observers from importing nations will probably be decided to-morrow, when the conference begins to get down to real work.

CADETS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

Rev. N. Clarke Wallace, Rector of Christ Church Delivers Splendid Servcie.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—The annual attendance at divine service of the Cadet Corps of the Campbellford High and Public Schools was held on Sunday, when the two units paraded to Christ Church, the High School Corps being commanded by Captain Jack Bygott and Captain Harold Thrower, heading the Public School company. Principal E. H. Greig and Assistant Principal Earl Stephens of the High School and Principal C. Haig of the Public School accompanied the boys.

A special sermon for the occasion was preached by the rector, Rev. N. Clark Wallace, who took for his text, Revelation 19, verses 11 and 16: "And I saw the heavens opened and behold a white horse, and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. . . . And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lords." "He appreciated," he said, "the privilege of having the Cadets attend Christ Church, but he appreciated far more the responsibility of preaching to them. He hoped that they all went to church as members of a family, but to-day it was different. They were present as members of a Cadet corps in a corporate capacity; in short, as soldiers."

And they had come, Mr. Wallace said, for two reasons. First, to praise and worship God, and, secondly, for the less worthy reason, hearing a sermon and receiving a message that would be taken away with them and last them all their lives, he hoped.

"You are here as soldiers of King George V., and also as soldiers of the King of Kings," the preacher stated, pointing out that to be a good soldier one must be a follower of Jesus Christ one must be a soldier of war.

Referring to the text, "in righteousness does he make war," and although this was only a vision, nevertheless it was true. The writer saw the Lord go forth as a great warrior to conquer. And so must we go forth in the same way.

"A good soldier possesses the greatest of all Christian virtues, the spirit of self-sacrifice," the preacher declared.

"Since when has Christ's religion vouchsafed to you that there shall be no suffering," he challenged the congregation, pointing out that Jesus Christ's followers were made perfect only through suffering. "I am no advocate of war, I dislike it intensely, yet the world has never lived at the heights of self-sacrifice, which is the essence of Christ's religion, as it did during the Great War," he declared.

And in conclusion, Mr. Wallace pointed out that the assurance against war did not rest with leagues or peace pacts or conferences, but by grafting into the hearts of people the principals of Jesus Christ and waging a war against the sins that are prevalent within us.

OLD SOLDIER IN DEATH JOINS PALS ON SOMME

Wife Keeps Wedding Promise and Scatters Ashes at High Wood

After 15 years Percy Arnold of the 18th Warwickshire Regiment returned to the men beside whom he fought at High Wood during the battle of the Somme when his wife, fulfilling a promise made on her wedding day, scattered his ashes on the battlefield.

It was in some of the fiercest fighting on the Somme that Arnold stopped to aid a fallen comrade, and as he did so was shot through the lung. He was taken prisoner by the Germans. After some time in hospital in Switzerland he was returned to England.

When he married after the war he made his wife promise on their wedding day that, should he die before her, she would take his ashes to High Wood and scatter them where so many of his comrades fell.

Upon his death recently Mrs. Arnold made arrangements to carry out his wish. The ceremony was held in High Wood, and the widow, in a simple ceremony attended by several war veteran comrades of her husband, scattered the ashes of her husband over the battleground, while those who accompanied her stood bareheaded in silence.

After the ceremony the party lingered for a few minutes while details of the fighting that took place there were related to Mrs. Arnold, and then quietly dispersed.

It is unlikely that the prince will have sufficient time to read more than a very small percentage of them.

SUICIDE IS BLAMED UPON FEAR FOR KING

Captain Was Obsessed With Idea Sovereign in Danger

A hallucination that the King's life was in danger led to the suicide of Capt. Samuel Redman, 66, of Bradfield, Berks., who was found in the gas-filled kitchen of his tiny cottage. Such was the coroner's finding.

Capt. Redman had been in ill health for some time, and a few months before his death he repeatedly told friends of a "vision" in which he saw the King in danger from illness. He travelled to London, intent on finding the King's secretary and warning him, but became lost in the streets of the metropolis and returned home. Worry over his unsuccessful attempt to warn the King resulted in his suicide, the coroner stated.

NEW YORK SYNDICATE BUYS ENGLISH INNS

Has Already Acquired 63 as Nucleus of Larger Organization

A United States syndicate known as the New York Trusts, Incorporated, is buying many old English public houses in the neighborhood of London and plans to convert them into super-hostels for catering to motorists.

Already 63 small inns at Bournemouth, Arundel, Northampton, Margate, Penarth, Canterbury and Eastbourne, and many nearer London, have been bought. The syndicate is going ahead with transactions for many more.

It is planned to have one of the inns every 25 miles along each main road leading out of London.

The syndicate intends to place the inns under American management and will endeavor to beat English landlords in catering to motorists. The old landlords of the inns, however, will stay, with travelling supervisors from the United States paying them frequent visits.

Many of the inns will be modernized and fitted with complete service station equipment as well as many modern hotel facilities.

TWO THOUSAND YEARS HISTORY OF ROCHESTER CELEBRATED IN JUNE

Old English City Dating From Fifty Years After Crucifixion Plans Great Pageant of Scenes Ever Since A.D. 43.

ROCHESTER, England, May 18.—(By Thos. T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)—Five thousand citizens of Rochester in Kent, the county of hofields and orchards, will in June flutter the leaves of twenty centuries of history. Rochester, which has bestowed its name upon at least a dozen other places of English foundation in all parts of the world, had its beginning when the Crucifixion was an event of less than 50 years back. Not much later Rochester—but it had another name then—was a centre of Roman legions who set out upon a scheme of "overseas settlement" in East Anglia. In the pageant which is to be presented next month events will be depicted from the founding of a camp by the Emperor Claudius in A.D. 43, passing along the long line of Rochester's history to the time when Charles Dickens breathed his last at Gads Hill, hard by the city.

Rochester, it seems, was destroyed by the Danes. Most East Anglian settlements also suffered this fate so the local historian who would insist on its importance seems rather to put the city in the position of the boy who was proud of having been "licked" by Tom Sawyer. Something more exclusive in the way of distinction was reached when Ethelbert, King of Kent, installed Justus as the first Bishop of Rochester, in the presence of that missionary from Rome called St. Augustine. From that day to the present Rochester has had an unbroken lines of English Bishops. Most of them in the earlier centuries, no doubt, had a good deal more of the warrior than the gentle divine in their composition. There was nothing of the jerry-built, though, about their castles and cathedrals, as anyone who visits the Norman Keep of Rochester may realize to-day. The pity is that some of their successors made such a sorry business of restoring the earlier handiwork, especially where the Cathedral was concerned. One episode in next month's Pageant "opens with the churchwake, organized to raise funds to pay for the building of the Nave of the Cathedral." After all, then, the church bazaar of to-day has a long trail of history.

Another few centuries of Rochester's history pass before Chaucer with his merry pilgrims are encountered going through the city towards Canterbury. Another two centuries and Rochester is making in full measure its own gift to the great days of Elizabeth. Next month visitors may again behold the Royal Lady of the Auburn Hair being entertained by the Purveyor of the Navy, the Paymaster for the Bridge-Wardens, and by other great people of Chatham Dockyard, then under the guardianship of the neighboring city. For many years Rochester's association with the Navy caused her always to be represented in Parliament by an Admiral. Charles II, seemingly, was received with hearty acclamations by the good citizens when he returned from his wanderings, even though the rejoicing around him was interrupted by a woman who foretold that the next Stuart King would go to Rochester only to flee the country. This did happen to James II, but the pageant authorities, from motives of delicacy or through lack of time are not going to refer to it.

Memories of Dickens.

Perhaps the final scenes will prove most forcible in their appeal. Rochester and its neighborhood are saturated with memories of Dickens and his great gallery of immortal creations. Next month Mr. Pickwick and his companions will again arrive on the stage-coach, to be greeted by Old Wardle and the Fat Boy. Once again a minuet will be danced at Dingley Dell. And the author himself, having written the last words he ever wrote of Edwin Drood, will issue from his chalet to rest in his shrubbery. His mind reverts to the beautiful description of Rochester he has just penned, and he falls into a reverie, in which appear characters from his novels connected with Rochester and its neighborhood. The figures fade, to be replaced by Longfellow and other friends, who in Dickens' company once visited Rochester. At the novelist's request Longfellow repeats some lines from his Psalm of Life.

Finally there is a hymn in praise of Rochester. And to show that the citizens have no will merely to lean on their forefathers there will be a depiction of the City's industry of to-day. It was at Rochester, and in a flying-boat made at Rochester, that Sir Alan Cobham began and ended his great flight over Africa.

REFORM WAVE HITS RARE BOOK MARKET

Some of British Collections Being Sold to United States Collectors.

LONDON, May 18.—Many buyers have retired from rare books and art markets and as a consequence there is a wave of reform. A group of Haymarket-dealers has started litigation to safeguard genuine "artists proofs" in prints and etchings, for one thing. For another, the "First Edition Club" is telling British dealers in rare tones that they would do well to seek home buyers for their wares ifstead of rushing them into the hands of United Staes collectors.

G. J. Howell, a veteran of the Haymarket, is leading the group which has asked the courts to half traffic in misnamed "artist proofs."

"Ordinary facsimiles of pictures can be obtained for about $10," he explained. "But the same reprint signed by the artist, now becomes, in some quarters, an "artists proof," and fetches $50."

The "First Edition Club," through its secretary, A. J. A. Symons, thus spoke. He was bitter against Britons who bemoan the sale of rare books across the Atlantic, but nevertheless always manage to find huge sums to pay for fancy-prices race horses.

"If an Englishman wants a $15,000 yearling he can always find the money," said Mr. Symons, "but purchase of a valuable first edition for a fraction of such an amount doesn't tempt him until some American has acquired the treasure.

"But now that America is out of the market the dealers are beginning to come to our doors. They used to think that if they could sell a book to an American for $2,500 they were making fools out of the Americans; now they are beginning to see that they probably were only fooling themselves because some of the things sold abroad were worth, morally, vastly more than the selling prices.

"I know of one American who had seven first folio Shakespeares and he kept them in a safety deposit box in New York. When he died he willed them to a museum so that they would never get back on the market.

"I do not begrudge America its purchases, but we have been shockingly blind to the intrinsic importance of some of these things."

English Paper Down On Color Prejudice

LONDON, May 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—"Nobody is ever quite normal in an ocean liner," says the theatre critic of The Times, quoting Lemuel K, one of the chief characters in "Mr. Faint-Heart," by Ian Hay, dramatic author and novelist, now being played at the Shaftesbury Theatre, 'Among familiars," says Lemuel K. (Clive Currie). "Our values and our deserts are apt to correspond, but once we have left them all ashore we are in a new world of enchanting possibilities. We may pretend that we really are what we have always wanted to be. That shy self to which justice has never been done may escape for an airing."

The theme of this sentimental comedy is such a revolution of values in the lives of some half a dozen passengers cruising in the Mediterranean as Lemuel K. suggests, according to TheTimes, which continues as follows:

"Mr. Hay, it need hardly be said, has no devastating moral to preach; he handles the notion with the lightness and apparent carelessness of an experienced humorist, and extracts from it some capital fun. He takes for his hero a rather ready-made figure of fun, a shy stuttering youth of inexhaustible simplicity who is madly in love with the prettiest girl in the ship. Overawed by his rivals (all insufferably pretentious), he suddenly asserts himself by declaring that he is the author whose books arein every hand.

"Perhaps Mr. Hay might have made better fun of the sudden growth of hi hero's popularity, but it is a sentimental comedy and a good deal of time belongs by rights to the affairs of the pretty girl. She has to be wooed and won by an imposter, and it is all very charmingly, even humorously done. There is richer humor, however, when Basil Foster's stammering imposter is confronted with the novelist whom he has impersonated. Clive Currie's novelist is the best thing of the evening. He has just typed 'the last deplorable line' of his 'latest deplorable book,' and he is in the humor to tell everybody precisely what he thinks of himself and his work—the only manin the ship without pretensions and much the most interesting.

Hardy's Memorial Has Roots In Soil

LONDON, May 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—The engraved column of Cornish granite, 10 feet high, recently erected by the admirers of Thomas Hardy in the United States to the great English writer at Higher Bockhampton, Dorchester, the Wessex hamlet where Hardy was born, is decorated with laurel wreaths in bronze, and bears the following inscriptions: "Thomas Hardy, C.M., was born in the adjacent cottage 2nd June, 1840, and in it he wrote 'Under the Greenwood Tree' and 'Far from the Madding Crowd.' This monument is erected to his memory by a few American admirers."

The column stands on the bank of a narrow lane at the foot of a drive leading through an avenue of tall trees. On the side of the lane is the cottage in which Hardy was born. Two miles away is Stinsford, where in the churchyard his heart is buried. Close at hand is Max Gate, the house in which he died. Mrs. Hardy, who still lives at Max Gate, and Miss Kate Hardy, the novelist's sister, were present at the unveiling, and the crowd which gathered for the ceremony consisted mainly of villagers.

26 "AMERICAS" BESIDES U. S.

Total Population of Other Nations on Continent Approximate That of The States.

ACCORDING TO 1921 CENSUS.

TORONTO, Ont., May 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—There are 26 "American" nations on the American continent The Toronto Mail and Empire points out, with a population of 105,982,000 in 25 of them as compared with 106,000,000 in the one known as the United States of America. The paper quotes a letter from a correspondent suggesting citizens of the United States have the right to a monopoly of the name "Americans" because they constitute 90 per cent. of the population of this continent.

"A great many other correspondents take issue with him," says The Mail and Empire. "As a matter of fact, the citizens of North America, Central America, South America and the West Indies all have an equal right to this distinctive title to separate them from the people who live in the eastern hemisphere. In these divisions of the new world there are no fewer than 25 countries, the inhabitants of which are all Americans. Nothing is clearer than the fact that the people of the great friendly neighboring nation should never have set up any exclusive claim to 'American.' There is no need to bring any charge of arrogance in this connection. It is, rather, a matter of carelessness, or, rather, a want of any other euphonious word to designate the citizens of the Republic. We do not suppose that this discussion will achieve any particular result or get us anywhere; but the United States would certainly popularize itself with the other 25 nations, which also have a place in the new world, if it could invent a proper, distinctive designation for its citizens. We go so far as to suggest that the Washington Government establish a research foundation to this end."

MISS LEONORA BOND CHARMING ACTRESS

LONDON, May 18.—(By the Canadian Press)—"The Church Mouse," an Austrian play adapted by Benn W. Levy, British dramatic author, and produced at The Playhouse, here by Sir Gerald du Maurier, is "a trifling, sophisticated comedy," according to E. A. Baughan, theatre critic o The News-Chronicle, and according to The Times critic "it has a glamor in parts—enough to save it from being intolerably dull but not enough to blind the audience to its emptiness." Both newspapers, however, highly praise Miss Leonora Bonda, who takes the role of Susie Sachs in the play and whose first appearance in London is in this production.

The News-Chronicle doubts whether it was worth doing to Austria for "The Church Mouse," and adds: "But there is no doubt that as a means of introducing Leonora Bonda to London the production was fully justified." Further the paper says: "This actress, an Austrian by birth, but married to an English banker, conquered the audience. She is well-known in Germany and her own country, and is an actress of very individual charm and immense vitality. The part she plays is that of a poor unemployed girl who insists on being engaged as stenographer in Baron Thomas Ullrich's bank in Vienna. She is efficiency itself."

The Times speaks of "a satisfying glitter proceeding from parts of Miss Bonda's performance," and adds: "You do not believe in her Susie as a creature of this world, but are prepared to accept her and enjoy her company, within the play's convention."

The critics unanimous in praise of Sir Gerald du Maurier, actor producer and manager, who is playing the part assigned to Henry Ainley, the latter being ill. Du Maurier appears as Baron Thomas Ullrich, and The Times credits him with "giving the play a glamor and saving it from falling to pieces between Vienna and London."

CANCER CURBED IN BELFAST

While the number of deaths from cancer in Northern Ireland last year showed a marked increase over those of the previous year, the rate of mortality from this disease in Belfast showed no advance. This has just been disclosed in the summary of the Register-General's report for 1930. Superintendent Medical Officer of Health Thomson for Belfast added that the number of cancer deaths in the city in 1929 was the same as that in 1924, namely, 424 so that for six years, at least, this dread disease had made no headway in the Northern Capital. "It is rather an extraordinary fact," said Dr. Thomson, "that Belfast is the only city, so far as I am aware, whose cancer is not on the increase. The inhabitants of the city do not seem to be subject to it in anything like the same degree as those in other centres."

ALLOCATION SET BY SPRINGVILLE W.M.S.

...ited Church Society Meets At Home of Mrs. Moyer.

SPRINGVILLE, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence) — The W.M.S. of Springville United Church met on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Moyer for the monthly meeting, when the attendance was good.

Mrs. Moyer took charg. of the meeting in the absence of the president and was later appointed to fill that office for the remainder of the year. The scriptural lesson, Luke 14, 25-35 was read by Mrs. Harold Rowan and from Luke 15, 1-7 by Mrs. O. Murray.

Important business discussions were brought forward. Announcement was made that the allocation for 1931 will remain the same as in 1930, being $175. Communications were received from Miss Dixon, stating supplies to be given for bale. Mrs. William Whitfield and Miss A. Brown were appointed to purchase same.

Mrs. A. Hunter, treasurer, reported having sent in $45 to the Presbyterial Treasurer for the first quarter.

A disarmament circular was read by Mrs. M. Johnston, secretary.

It was decided that a mission band be organized to meet Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Moyer as leader.

Mrs. A. Hunter continued her interesting summary of the study book dealing with the industrial conditions in Japan.

Japan is faced with the problems of immigration, child labor, industrial advancement and unemployment among the bread winners of the cities. Communist teaching is proving a great hindrance. Christian teaching is leading to the betterment of the people.

Mrs. Moyer gave an inspiring address on "Stewardship." "Christ made a complete stewardship of His life. He put God first in everything. He left a legacy when going home that we too become stewards—his partners in the plan of redemption, that we share the Gospel with all people.

"To women is given the highest and most sacred of stewardships—that of building a Christian home. We are stewards of the Household of the King of Kings and we are working diligently on earth. We can share the Gospel through the Stewardship of prayer. It is our responsibility to bring others to God in prayer.

"God has no need of gifts—All in heaven and earth are His. Giving is for our benefit to develop in us unselfishness. Giving is made an acid-test of character.

"It should be a joyous privilege to have a part with God in redeeming the world to help bring a blessing into the lives of others."

A Ladies' Aid meeting followed, with the president, Mrs. A. Hunter in the chair. The garden party and serving meals for the Provincial Plowing Match were subjects under discussion but no definite decisions were reached. A committee was appointed to look into the matter of the latter. The garden party, it is expected will be held some time in June.

Trent River Society To Meet On June 9th

TRENT RIVER, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—The May meeting of the Womens' Institute was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wilfrid Cook, with an attendance of 17.

Mrs. George Brooks, president, occupied the chair and opened the meeting. As this was the first meeting of another new year since the society's inauguration, the roll call was answered by each member paying their annual dues. Mrs. Henry Mann read correspondence from Mrs. Bertram of Stoney Creek. Mrs. Bertram is identified with the Women's Institute at Stoney Creek and is the speaker for the Institute meeting to be held at Trent River, June 9. Accommodation has been secured for Mrs. Bertram during her visit here, at "Cedar Isle" resort. The members of the Institute decided to hold their regular June meeting on June 9, instead of the usual date. Miss Terry kindly offered accommodation at "Whitehall Gardens" Pavilion for the meeting.

Two topics were chosen by the Institute on which Mrs. Bertram will speak: "The Origin of Women's Institute," and "How to Conduct a Meeting and Utilise Our Talents." Report from the District Director, Mrs. T. F. Ward of the meeting a week previous at Norwood. It was decided to pay the fee of one dollar for one member to become a member of the League of Nations, and Mrs. James Mann was appointed.

Blossom Queen

Waving a greeting to New York's skyline, Miss Patricia D. Morton, was caught by the press photographer. She is the young Winchester, England, girl who will reign as "Queen Shenandoah VIII" over the annual apple blossom festival, at Winchester, Virginia.

Mrs. George Brooks, as president, is to give the address of welcome at the district convention, to be held here on June 19. The election of officers for another year was held and the present officers were all returned.

The lunch for the afternoon was served by four of the members, Mesdames Tom Doupe, P. Logan, T. F. Ward and Victor Scott.

Those responsible for refreshments for the June meeting are Mesdames Harry Mann, Fred. Scott, T. F. Ward, John Garneau, and Victor Scott.

The birthdays of two of the members of the Institute—Mrs. T. F. Ward and Mrs. Wilfrid Cook—fell on the week of the meeting and the birthday cake containing the usual favors was provided by Mrs. Wilfrid Cook, the favors being secured by Mrs. James Mann and Mrs. Harry Mann. During the tea hour, Mrs James Mann read the tea cups to the delight of all present. The receipts for the afternoon amounted to $5.

Norwood

Mrs. A. Rudolf of Yonkers, N.Y., spent a few days with her cousin, Mrs. James Calder.

Mrs. M. Nicol who has spent the winter with her daughter, Mrs. C. Conning at Port Carling has returned to her home in the village for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Brethen were in Peterborough on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McMillen have returned from their honeymoon, which they spent in U.S.

Dr. R. B. Richardson, head of the Department of Psychiatry at the Toronto Western Hospital, son of Mr. W. A. Richardson as one of the alienists called to give medical opinion in the Brockenshire murder case in Toronto recently.

The Horticultural Society are very much pleased with the appearance of the plots they have fixed up in different sections of the town. Those in the Memorial Park and at the cemetery are making a fine appearance, also the shrubs and flowers in front of the library look well. A great deal of the work in connection with this splendid work has been given free gratis which the society are most grateful for.

Mr. Arthur Hamblin of Picton visited at his home here recently.

Miss Olive McClung, of Millbrook, visited recently with Mrs. S. Hendren.

Mrs. W. C. Conning of Port Carling is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. Nicol.

Mrs. F. Raddon has gone to Olds, Alberta to visit her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Curtis for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Andrews visited in Lindsay recently.

The annual inspection of the Norwood High School Cadets will take place on Friday, May 22 at the Exhibition park.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Nevins and Miss Florence were in Westwood attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Robert Nevins.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morton of Toronto were recent visitors with Mrs. H. J. H. Fife.

Mr. Gerald Baker, of Detroit, is visiting at his home here.

Mrs. Stephens of Havelock was a recent guest at her daughter's, Mrs. William Hubbel.

Rt. Wor. Bro. John Comstock, D.D. G.M., of Peterborough, paid his official visit to Norwood Lodge A.F. and A. M. recently. Several other Peterborough brethern also accompanied Mr. Comstock. Visitors were present from Keene and Hastings. Bro. Comstock gave an address on the Tracing Board. Following this refreshments were served by the Norwood brethren.

At Stirling

Mr. Lawrence Munroe, Harper Rollins, Charlie Dracup and Royer Meiklejohn are spending a few days at Lake St. Peter.

Mrs. L. Munroe and Mrs. Ernest Munroe are in Bannockburn to-day attending a celebration of the Women's Institute of that place as it is 10 years since they organized.

A number from Stirling attended a bridge party given by Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Guire on Thursday. Prize-winners were Mrs. A. Murduff and Mr. R. Meiklejohn.

Mrs. Ernest Ward has returned home from the hospital and is recovering nicely since her operation.

JUNIOR INSTITUTE ELECTS OFFICERS

President Miss J. Anderson is Persuaded to Accept Office for Another Year.

HAVELOCK, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—A special meeting of Havelock Junior Institute was held at the home of Miss Alma Hagerman, on Tuesday evening, May 12, for the purpose of election of officers for the coming Institute year. The president, Miss Jean Anderson, did not wish to accept office for this year, as she felt that she would not have sufficient leisure to attend to her duties as she would wish to do. However, the other members persuaded her to accept the office for another year, each promising to do all in her power to help the president in every way possible. The following other officers were elected:

Pres., Miss Anderson; 1st vice-pres., Alma Hagerman; 2nd vice-pres., Evelyn Leng; secy.-treas., Hazel Johnston; directors, Annie Buchanan, Edna Haig, Ethel Longmuir; district director, Marguerite Dafoe; program committee, Lena Buchanan, Marie Bedford, Evelyn Leng. Owing to the late hour, the appointment of all other committees was left over until the next regular meeting, which will be held in the Orange Hall, on June 3rd. The auditors report was submitted and everything was found to be correct

It is fashioned of the finest straw.

Y.W. AUXILIARY MEETS AT NORWOOD

Miss Florence Nevins Hostess to Members at Regular Meeting.

NORWOOD, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence). — Miss Florence Nevins was hostess to the members of the Young Women's Auxiliary on Wednesday evening. Mrs. R. Packenham, the president, opened the meeting, Mrs. Mary Fennel led in prayer, while Miss Edith Brown read the Scripture lesson. Miss Lila Kirk, convenor of the group, then took charge of the meeting, calling on Mrs. J. McConnel to give the topic from the study book which was most interesting. Miss Ina McConnel gave a splendid solo, and Mrs. Pearl Gardner gave a missionary reading. A list of the articles for the bale to be packed in September was asked for, and these were all donated by the girls present.

After the closing of fthe meeting Mrs. Nevins and Miss Florence served dainty refreshments, and a social time was spent by all.

District Convenors Chosen At Lakefield

Women's Institute to Hold Special Meeting on Wednesday, May 20.

LAKEFIELD, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—The egular meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Town Hall, but the thunder storm and torrents of rain made it impossible for many of the members to be present, and as there was not a representative attendance it was decided to hold a special meeting in the evening of May 20 (Wednesday next) at 8 o'clock, in the hall, for the purpose of election of officers and reception of reports. Mrs. W. W. Yale, the treasurer, had her report prepared so that all had an opportunity of seeing the itemized list of receipts and exxpenditures." The total receipts for the year were $139.79 and the expenditure $104.38.

Mrs. H. Bertram, of Stoney Creek, will be the summer speaker. The meeting will be held on June 3. On the evening of the same day a demonstration on first-aid will be given at which all members are asked to attend. The latter is sponsored by the Accident Prevention Association and while not under the auspices of the Woman's Institute is closely allied to it by its aim of common service.

Mrs. A. E. Higgins gave the report of the district executive held the previous week in Norwood.

The president, Mrs Sexsmith stressed the value of the work of the standing committees and district convenors were appointed as follows:

Health—Mrs. Miller, Warsaw.
Agriculture—Mrs. Weller, Warsaw.
Legislation—Mrs. Davis, Lakefield.
Home Economics—Mrs. Armstrong Havelock.
Community Activities—Mrs. Lean, Apsley.
Relief — Mrs. Johnston, Young's Point.
Historical Research—Mrs. Rothwell, Norwood.
Publicity—Miss Graham, Lakefield.
Immigration—Mrs. H. Batten, Warsaw.
Canadian Industries—Mrs. Brooks, Trent Bridge.

A proposition was introduced to ally the Institute branches with the League of Nations Society on the payment of a branch fee of $10.00. Mrs. Grover of Norwood is the representative, and is intensely interested in the League of Nations. It was urged that the federated fees be paid before the district meeting on June 10, which will be held at Trent Bridge. Among the speakers for this meeting will be Miss Hopkins, Mrs. Eadie, Mrs. Walker (Provincial president), and Mrs. Grover. A list if those eligible for election to the Federated Board was given as follows: Mrs. Sexsmith and Mrs. Herbert, Havelock, Mrs. Davis Lakefield, Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Miller, and Mrs. Weller Warsaw, Mrs. Buck, and Mrs. Rothwell, Norwood.

It was unanimously decided to send a bouquet to Mrs. Webster Blewett, who was the oldest grandmother present at our last grandmothers' party, and had the greatest number of great-grandchildren. Mrs. Blewett is at present very ill, but if she lives till Sunday, May 17, will be 85 years of age, and will also on that day celebrate her 65th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. George Weller of Warsaw, district secretary, was present and spoke a few words. She urged fuller monthly reports of the branch activities and gave a very helpful suggestion for a social evening which had been held in Warsaw last year when Mr. and Mrs. Crowe gave an illustrated talk on their motor trip to Vancouver.

A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Weller for her talk and also for her courage in coming in all the way from Warsaw in the storm in order to keep her promise to preside at the election of officers. Tea was served and a social hour spent.

KEY TO MENTAL S TRESS IS FOUND IN CHILDHOOD DAYS

Dr. W. M. T. Mitchell Describes Latest Studies in Mental Hygiene.

IMPORTANT PHASE.

MONTREALk May 18—(By the Canadian Press)—With one-third of all apparently healthy children, children of average intelligence hailing from self-sustaining families, presenting behaviour prob'ems sufficiently marked to warrant their being given serious consideration mental hygiene comes to the fore as one of the most important phases in the care and development of the child. So declared Dr. W. M. T. Mitchell, head of Montreal's Hygiene Institute, recently before the members of the St. Lawrence Kiwanis Club.

Mental ills confine 20,000 patients in Canadian institutions and 300,000 patients in hospitals in the United States, he pointed out. In the latter country, one million dollars a day is spent for the care of mentally defective people.

"The problem is no longer individualistic; it is a community problem, Dr. Mitchell declared, and he emphasized strongly that one out of every twenty individuals suffer from some mental ailment. Mental stress comes about through failure to lend to life's problems sound forethought. Times such as these, which have created the abnormal stress of unemployment, financial difficulties, etc., are liable to create mental abnormality, he pointed out.

More and more, he declared, doctors of mental diseases are going back to the days of childhood of their patients to find the key to mental stress. Preventive work is now to the fore; the field of childhood, in which the earliest of habits and behavior patterns come about, is the clue to many causes of mental disorders in later life, he said.

One-third of all apparen ly healthy children present mental problems, Dr. Mitchell declared. Such children are healthy and not handicapped in any way with lack of original endowment, but they are not developed in what might be thought of as a perfectly healthy direction. Mental hygiene alleviates these problematical cases and ensures children of healthy development along normal lines.

Dr. Mitchell noted with regret that epileptics present a serious problem to the community, and that in Quebec there are no adequate institutional facilities for them. The Montreal Industrial Institute for Epileptics operates here, but is only carrying on in a small way, providing for a very small part of such cases, Dr. Mitchell aid. The problem presented through the epileptic individual, however, does not belong to any one organization, and should be met by joint action on the part of both the state and citizens' bodies, he believed.

By means of street car and poster advertising the Montreal Mental Hygienes Institute is trying to bring before the attention of parents the need of medical examination of backward children. They suggest that sometimes a case of adenoids or the need of glasses may be the means of retarding the progress of a pupil in school and offer the services of their clinic.

MAY RE-HOUSE HA LIFAX SLUMS UNDER NEW SOC IALISTIC SCHEME

Conditions in Seaport City Worse Than London is the Report.

ASK GOVERNMENT AID.

(By J. W. McKinley.)

HAL'FAX, N.S., May 18 (SNS)—The city of Hal fax may have the first Socialist hous ng scheme in Canada.

Aroused by revelations of revolting conditions, in the homes of the very poor, citizens in all walks of life have banded together in working out a program to bring about better housing cond itions.

Ramshackle houses, filthy sanitary cond t ons and premises unfit for human habitation exist in the heart of the c ty. People are crowded together, under conditions tending to break down all human decency and sexual privacy, breeding loose morals, crime and disease.

Such conditions have been described from public platforms by outstanding clergy and labor men. A. C. Pettipas, secretary of the Halifax City Health Board, says of such condi ion: that: "It is only too true."

Recently A. G. Dalzell, M.E.I.C., Toronto, outs anding Canadian expert on housing conditions, was called in. After going over Health Board reports, he said conditions here were worse than in the slums of London, and it was a marvel that Halifax had not had a serious epidemic of disease.

He went thoroughly over the ground The Citizens' Housing Committee, headed by Dr. S. H. Prince of Kings College is now waiting his report

The local branch of the Kiwanis International has donated its services free of charge. n offering to prepare, when a concrete scheme is adopted, plans for the proposed housing scheme. Also if required the Kiwanis will furnish, free of charge, men to supervise the construction of the project.

Following completion of the plans for the project, the Citizens' Housing Committee will seek the aid of the City of Halifax and the Provincial Government, in financing the building program. It is possible the Dominion Government will also be asked for aid.

The plan most under consideration is to build single family houses on a whole sale plan, these to be leased to the workers at moderate rentals. Rentals would be based purely on the cost of maintenance, depreciation administrations and cost of public services on the streets on which the houses were built.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the affected parts. The parts become weak, flabby, almost dead. Only an internal remedy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, HEM-ROID, succeeds because it removes congestion and restores circulation, heals and strengthens the diseased parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of quickly ending even piles of long standing, that McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store, says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.

LONG SIDES.

A sage green flat crepe frock for afternoon side-steps the longer skirt problem by having both of its sides made with flopping panels that swing from the hips to almost ankle length.

Soviet organizations are making a determined effort to get their goods into North China markets.

CAN That Be True..

"ATTRACTIVE, WELL BRED, BUT SO CARELESS ABOUT HER HANDS"

"They were mean to say it, but I knew they were right"

"I was ashamed of my hands, but I had hoped no one else noticed them. Then I chanced to overhear that comment. From the woman I admired most in our club, too. 'Careless,' she had called me.

"Then I realized how my red, roughened hands spoiled the effect I wanted to make. But how to have pretty hands—with DISHES to do three times a day?

"It was a little friend of mine who works in a beauty shop, who helped me out.

" 'We use LUX suds in our manicure bowls,' she told me—'because they leave the hands very soft and lovely. If I were washing dishes I'd use Lux in the DISHPAN—get a beauty treatment every time I did the dishes!'

"NOW my hands are as WHITE and SMOOTH as before I was married! I never saw such a magical improvement I'm proud of them now, thanks to Lux."

Wives Everywhere

So many wives are now using Lux in the dishpan! They find this simple beauty precaution keeps their hands lovely as though they had maids. In fact, 805 famous beauty shops say:

"With all our experience, we can't tell the difference between the hands of the wife who uses Lux in the dishpan and the hands of the woman with servants to do all her work."

Best of all, this care for which your hands are so grateful costs almost nothing. Lux for all your dishes costs LESS THAN 1c A DAY!

Costs less than 1c a day

So many soaps dry the natural oils of the skin. Blend, gentle Lux protects these skin oils. That's why it keeps your hands lovely. Buy the big package—it does 6 weeks' dishes!

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D

HOPEFULNESS DURING SICKNESS

I often think that the very fact that the physician tries to be honest with his patient really makes him more frank han is necessary, with the result that the patient gets discouraged, and doesn't try to help himself or else goes to some healer or irregular practitioner for help.

It was only a short time ago, less than ten years, since diabetes, and pernicious anaemia were fatal diseases.

Some doctors treated diabetes successfully for years by keeping the patient on a strict diet and giving him real encouragement in his effort to stick to it. Similarly with pernicious anaemia, then a really fatal disease, patient physicians have kept these cases alive for one to three years.

Fortunately, by the use of insulin for diabetes, and the liver diet in pernicious anaemia, both these diseases are now under control.

Heart disease at one time was considered the most serious ailment possible, and is still to-day the most frequent cause of death, nevertheless a great many serious heart cases are carried along safely for many years because the physician has pointed out a safe way for the patient to live and has given him the hope that he can continue to live if he follows instructions.

Now of course the above are serious ailments but this matter of instilling hope into a patient often means the saving of the patient's health and of life itself.

In tuberculosis, in hardening of the arteries, in chronic disease of the kidney, and other conditions not immediately fatal, many years can be added to these lives if they continue to hope and believe they will get better.

What is a big factor in this prolonging of life?

The fact that if the patient is hopeful he is likely of course to be more cheerful, more interested in everything and he will eat his meals with a natural appetite that will insure good digestion of the food he eats.

This means that he will get the full nourishment from his food, instead of having indigestion and constipation from food only partly digested because of the depression of his feelings.

Even a well person will have attacks of indigestion and constipation if he eats when he is worried, depressed or tired.

Thus a little more hopefulness instilled into the patient by the physician is just as necessary as giving the honest opinion about the patient's ailment.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

French modistes have clever ways of getting artistic effects with little labor.

• • • • • • •

I don't know whether you have noticed it, but they know when to use careful stitchery and when fine work spoils the beauty that they pride themselves, justly on getting.

• • • • • • •

They realize that close fine stitches make severe and even prim results, and must therefore be used with discretion, are on tailored suits, etc

• • • • • • •

They also know that coarse, long stitches must be put in deftly so that the sewing is not careless, but correctly done and artistic in its flexible effects.

• • • • • • •

• • • • • • •

These may be exquisite in shaded tones, or they may be in a flat color of the same fabric as the frock or article on which the roses form trimming.

• • • • • • •

The woman who would use such roses on negligees, evening frocks or other garments, or who would enlist their decorative beauty for gifts, will find the French method will give the desired results with the least possible work.

• • • • • • •

For a rose of average size, cut a 2¼ inch by 7 inch strip from silk, georgette, or other soft textile. Fold it through the lengthwise centre and run a gathering thread of not too fine stitches through the goods near the raw edges.

• • • • • • •

This strip is on the straight of the goods and when gathered and coiled in a circle makes the centre of the flower.

• • • • • • •

Cut as many squares of material measuring 2 inches on each size, as there are to be petals. Nine is a good number.

• • • • • • •

Fold each squared through the diagonal centre. Run a gathering thread close to the raw edges which will not be two thicknesses of the goods.

• • • • • • •

Gather each petal to make it about half its length. Sew petals about the centre, having petals overlap one another.

• • • • • • •

The petals closest to the centre should be gathered a trifle tighter than those which come farther out. There will be no perfect rows of petals but a continuous circle of overlapping petals.

• • • • • • •

For small roses make the strip shorter and narrower and squares smaller. For buds use a single gathered square and have a small green gathered square sewed over the tightly gathered end of the bud.

• • • • • • •

Turn in the edges of the green square when gathering it so that the bud is well finished. Position the flower on the article it is to ornament and sew it down firmly, with a few stitches about the centre and between the petals so that stitches are completely concealed.

• • • • • • •

Sew the row of petals to the article, using long under stitches and short upper ones, catching the under part of the petal only so that the top is unattached.

• • • • • • •

For a shaded rose, make the inner petals darker than the outer ones. Three shades can be used, or only two if you wish. The graduations of color should be very delicate.

Our Mail

Conducted by ANNE WILCOX

Dear Anne,—

Here I am back again to thank you and the neighbors for their nice responses to my letter and the problem.

I thank you one and all. Water-Lily, your illustration just fitted my case. I often think it is the unselfish people who make the others selfish. I do think, also, that one has to retain one's self respect. If you continue to let others push you aside, you not only feel inferior but also look inferior. Yet when you are much alone as I am, you sometimes question your own judgment.

I do wish more of the neighbors would write in their problems, and let us know what they are up against. No one but Anne Wilcox knows who Ad Infinitum is. One day a neighbor said to me, "Do you ever read 'Our Mail and Anne Wilcox's articles?'" I said, "Oh yes, always."

She replied, "Do you know I'd like Ad Infinitum for a neighbor?" I asked if she didn't like her present ones and she said, "The only one whom I think is Ad Infinitum is yourself." But I did not give my identity away. So all of you can do the same.

I will say that the letters of Anne Wilcox and the neighbors of the page, have been of wonderful help to me. My first letter about being different was truly sincere, and I was very depressed about it all. Sometimes I am yet, as there is rarely a week passes that someone doesn't use that word to me. Yet to look at, I am nothing much. Not tall, neither fat nor thin, neither young nor old.

Quid Est, I do hope you do not stay away from the page for two months, unless you are going away, when it might be hard for you to write. Anne Wilcox, I do not think you are selfish in wanting the neighbors to write. If only they would keep up a steady stream of them as they do in some papers. Before marriage, when my employer made heavy demands on my time, and strength, I used to think of the good times I'd have when I was my own mistress. But often, I find that I drive myself harder than I would allow my employer to do. If we only realize that we make too many Marthas of ourselves and not enough Marys. The daily round seems to get us in a trap of material things and don't leave time for the Spiritual things.

So let us even it up better, a little of each as the day goes.

Well, you will surely think that I am like the brook, which goes on forever, so I will close. Hoping that God will bless each and everyone of you. Much love to you Anne.

Sincerely,
Ad Infinitum.

Thank you for your letter, Ad Infinitum. It would be nice if the neighbors would write in and tell the other readers of their problems. Very often a stranger can help more than one's own people. I am afraid you are working too hard, Ad Infinitum and I think if I were you, instead of driving yourelf so hard, I would rest more. Your health is worth more to you, than anything else.

Anne Wilcox

Britain Celebrates Holiday With Canada

LONDON, May 18 (By Thomas T. Champion, C.P. Staff Correspondent). — Whitsuntide is a moveable feast, and because of this the people of Great Britain will be on holiday with the people of Canada next Monday. May 24 in Canada is Victoria Day, but has always been called Empire Day here, and while Empire Day has never been a statutory holiday in Great Britain, Whit Monday has been a statutory holiday for the past 60 years. And Whit Monday coincides with Canada's delayed celebration of Victoria Day.

ABERDEEN NIGHT HELD BY SCOTS

George Low and J. Allan Give Interesting Talks At Caledonian Meeting

PLEASING PROGRAM

John Wyllie presided over a large gathering of Caledonians and their friends at the regular weekly meeting of the Caledonian Club held in the W.O.W. Hall, last Friday evening. The meeting was the second of a series of district nights and was the "Aberdeen and District night."

A splendid program included two talks on Aberdeen and its surroundings, vocal and instrumental music; elocution numbers, and highland dances. These were submitted entirely by the Aberdonian members of the club, about twenty in number.

Geo. Low, and J. Allan were the speakers.

Occupying a place of honor and as a background to the platform, was the Coat of Arms of Aberdeen, with its motto "Bon-Accord". This was drawn and painted by Mr. Allan. The chairman explained the different emblems.

Aberdeen can be traced back to the Roman era when it was inhabited by the Picts. It has been an important city since the 12 century, and has always been in the front ranks in education. King's College and University was founded in 1494 and Marschal College in 1593. These two colleges were incorporated in 1860. In 1913 the Rowett Institute for Research in animal nutrition.

Imposing Building.

On the 400th anniversary of the University, Dr. Charles Mitchell donated the Graduation Hall and Mitchell Tower. Other notable buildings mentioned were the Art Gallery and museum, also the Macdonald Hall to which has been added the City's War Memorial This consists of a domed Hall of Remembrance. A recent addition to the Art buildings is the Cowdray Hall. In 1919, Viscount Cowdray presented £20,000 for its erection. The Market Cross dates from 1682. The Salvation Army Citadel was mentioned as being the most imposing "barracks" possessed by that organization. Many beauty spots were commented on, among them being the "Brig o' Balgownie," supposedly built by King Robert I, in 1274, and immortalized in Lord Byron's poem "Don Juan."

Both the speakers received hearty applause for their splendid talks.

W. Petrie, president of the Club, proposed a vote of thanks to the various artists of the evening.

The following program was rendered: Pipe selections by Piper A. Milne; choruses by Aberdonians "Gaudie Rins" and "Duncan Grey" accompanied by Mrs. Donaldson on the piano; Recitation: "Lochnagar" by Miss Margaret Wyllie, accompanied on the violin by Robert Wyllie.; Instrumental medley: Miss C. Chivas (piano), John Pirie (violin), Robert Wyllie (violin), Scottish Airs; Scotch reading: "Affectation" by Mrs. Donaldson; Vocal solo: "Allan Water", Stewart Massie, accompanied by Miss C. Chivas; Highland Fling and Sword Dance, by Miss Grace Donaldson, accompanied by Piper A. Milne; Scotch reading "Sellin' Shooin' Machines", James Dunn; Piano selection: "Loch Lomond" by Miss C. Chivas; Dialogue: "Rob and the Registrar", by G. Low and G. Fettes; Male chorus: "Wi' a Hundred Pipers," (S. Massie, soloist).

THEATRES

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN "CITY LIGHTS"

It's a long time since we saw the little man with the funny derby and the funnier little mustache and the Grecian bend. Most movie actors grow old with time, yet here he is back again, younger looking than ever.

Charlie at the cafe with another cheerful souse, tucking his dinner napkin into his waistband, getting oodles of fun out of the unlit cigar episode, trying to eat the spiral paper decorations under the impression that they are spaghettie, going to the rescue of the lady in the spache dance; Charlie leaping out of the Rolls Royce to retrieve a pavement cigar stub under the nose of an astonished bum; Charlie swallowing a whistle at the party and failing to get over it in time to allow an agonized singer to get through "I Hear You Calling Me"; Charlie as a White Wings, pursuing the dust of the city streets; and lastly, Charlie in the fight. And what a fight that is.

It has the same old Chaplin touch—that genius of the true comedian that brings laughter close to tears and never, never makes fun of anything sacred. The sympathy of the audience is with him from the start. The crowds of youngsters that thronged to the Saturday matinees laughed at his fun, they murmured in dismay when he got a tough break. And, by the way, it isn't likely that Chaplin could ever make a talkie anyway. It would be ruined by the echoing laughter that eddies and billows around his hilarious pictures. The silent picture is much better and it has that same familiar Chaplin touch, brief subtitles that indicate only the time, as a rule, and never go in for spectacular effects. From the moment that Charlie is discovered asleep on the lap of the new statue and becomes unveiled when it sees the light of day at a grand public ceremony, music accompanies his movements. And the music talks at times. It becomes very sympathetic at sad moments and quite staccato in indignation at dramatic portions of the picture.—Jeanette.

JAMES DUTTON SUNDAY SPEAKER

Member of Board of Administration Gives Statement on Church Finances

PROGRESS OF CHURCH

"The word Budget is the most suitable we can find which covers every branch of our work, relating both to the finances and organizations of our church."

So remarked James Dutton from the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. As a member of the Board of Administration, the Session had requested a general statement of the work of this important branch of the church—a body having the oversight of the income and expenditure, and government of the disposal of the receipts received from every congregation of the denomination throughout Canada.

Great Work of the Church

The speaker, in a clear, crisp, and attractive manner, without the 'dryness' occasioned by a mass of figures, which often mean so little to the average congregation, gave lucid example of the progress of the work of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

At the outset he related the great distance travelled, during the past Assembly years, by Rev. Dr. Baird, Moderator (14,000 miles), a Herculean task, made in the interests of the organizations which has become no mere empty or half-hearted body, but a church ever increasing and becoming stronger than ever before. The need for further effort and interest to meet the urgent demands upon the membership were stressed. Trustees were appointed who were responsible for the sum of $250,000 borrowed, if necessary, yearly for carrying on the church's work and meeting financial obligations. On such money borrowed was a heavy interest charge, also to be maintained by the membership. Under all conditions, the church had reason to be thankful for the progress vouchsafed by our people's givings. We had reduced our expenditures to a minimum; there had been no retrenchment—the church was marching on; the West had joined hands and were forging steadily ahead, with almost insurmountable obstacles to overcome—but the spirit of the Master was helping the cause. Students were giving yeoman service; the travelling missionary was covering many hundreds of miles, and Sunday schools to the number of 500 had been commenced last summer. The esprit de corps was wonderfully encouraging, and, as Mr. Dutton remarked, we had a great work to do, and everyone was invoked to do his and her utmost to send the necessary funds, as heretofore, to allow of the increased burden being taken care of.

The Communist Menace

Communism is a force o b faced squarely, and with the Christianizing of our Dominion by the Churches could this dread enemy be thwarted. Their method was to announce dances or card parties to counteract religions meetings in the churches, especially in the West.

Missionary Enterprise

Mr. Du ton touched on the Missionary branch of the Church—the Bhils in India, Gwalior, British Guiana, and South China, and the opportunity to help the missionaries in the various stations. Manchuria was a large field, also, and St. Paul's were doing fine work already

$600,000 to be Raised

Concluding his appealing and enlightening address, Mr. Dutton gave the watchword, "Go forward," pointing out that the sum of $600,000 was not a huge sum that could not be attained when all were of the contrite and prayerful heart—we should grasp this opportunity, and face squarely and honestly the need of our Church for the furtherance of the cause of Christ's Kingdom in the Dominion. The congregation of St. Paul's had an equity of which to be proud and thankful; and each member recognizing this would, he felt sure, stand by the leaders and support them to the uttermost and maintain the prestige and usefulness of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Leafs Lose Double Bill to Bears on Saturday

NEWARK AND MONTREAL IN 1ST PLACE TIE

New Jersey Club Wins Out by 3-1 and 4-3 Scores on Saturday

BRUINS DESERVE WIN

Leafs Lose Two Golden Opportunities to Score in First Game

TORONTO, May 18.—For a time on Saturday it appeared that inclement weather would keep the Newark Bears and Toronto Leafs in idleness. However, the rain ceased falling in time to have the double-header played, thus doing an injury to the locals who proceeded to lose both games, the scores being 3 to 1 and 4 to 3. The Bruins deserved to win. They played heads-up ball throughout, they were full of fight and imbued with the batting spirit that brings good results. As for the Leafs, it just wasn't their day.

Brennan hurled good baseball in the curtain-raiser but for that matter so did Barnes. The latter, however, got few of the breaks in that wretched base-running broke up two Toronto rallies. In the sixth inning Shiver opened an attack with a single and then when Burke hit a looper into left-field Shiver, without any reason whatever unless the coach was at fault, raced for second. Rosenberg made the catch without trouble and the Toronto centrefielder was still on second base when he was doubled off first.

Good Opportunity Lost

Strong started an eighth-inning splurge when he was credited with hitting a single. Shiver tried to sacrifice him to second base, but the pitch was wide. Strong was on his way and when the catcher momentarily juggled the ball he reached the midway station. Shiver sacrificed him to third. Burke then tried to bunt him in, but Pitcher Brennan had sensed the play and hurled the ball high and wide, trapping Strong, who was thrown out by Hargreaves. Then Burke struck out.

Two golden opportunities gone. Too much risky strategy that went awry. Perhaps those tactics will work some other day, general opinion to the contrary. Barnes restricted the Bears to seven hits—the Leafs got nine—but the invaders made the best use of their chances. Only one of the Bruins were left stranded on the runway. Eight Leafs waited in vain for a blow that would send them across the home plate.

9 RUNS IN 7TH GIVE BIRDS WIN

Twelve Thousand Fans See Rochester Red Wings Lose 10-5 Decision

BISONS HALT BEARS

ROCHESTER, May 18.—Nine runs, six of them unearned, were bunched in the seventh inning here yesterday by the Baltimore Orioles for a 10-to-5 triumph over the Rochester Red Wings, before 12,000 fans. The Wings had taken the lead in the sixth with three runs propelled home on the first of George Fisher's two home runs, but three errors and five runs won for the Birds in their next time at bat.

Bisons Halt Bears

BUFFALO, N.Y., May 18.—Scoring seven runs in the last three innings to overcome Newark's early margin of four tallies, the Buffalo Bisons fought their way to a sixth straight triumph by taking the first games of the series here yesterday afternoon, 7 to 6. The victory gave the Bisons a tie for second place with the Baltimore Orioles, who defeated Rochester.

The winning Bison run, breaking a 6-6 tie, was forced in by Dusty Rhodes, who passed Olson with the bases full and two out in the last half of the ninth inning.

Royals Lose and Win

MONTREAL, May 18.—Montreal Royals split a doubleheader with Jersey City Skeeters here, the first twin bill of the season. The Skeeters took the opener 5 to 3, but Royals wound up on the long end of a 4-to-2 score in the nightcap.

Johnny Allen co-operated with a former Royal pitcher, Joe Hartmann, to keep the Royals from moving into undisputed possession of first place. Allen also knocked out a homer with one on in the third.

City League Schedule to Open on May 25th

Nine Teams will Compose Loop Doubleheader on Opening Program.

PLAY AT RIVERSIDE

The City Baseball League will open its schedule on Monday, May 25th, at James Stevenson Park, with two games in the afternoon. This was decided at Saturday night's league meeting at Duffus, when considerable business was gone through.

Nine teams compose the loop this year. In the junior section, Kiwanis and Fosters' are the only representatives, since the withdrawal of the Havelock juniors. Maple Leafs, Rotary and Maudsley's teams make up the juvenile division. And the bantam teams are Kinsmen, Canucks, Maple Leafs and Kiwanis.

The teams which will be seen in action on the holiday are the juniors, Fosters at Kiwanis, at two o'clock; and the juveniles, Rotary at Maple Leafs, at four o'clock. The complete schedule will be drawn up this week and published.

The City League will use the Stevenson Park for the summer, and any other sporting organization wanting to use it must make arrangements with this league. A ten-cent charge will be made for all games up to the finals. The bantam teams will play their games at the Sacred Heart grounds.

Support Appreciated

The president announced the amount of money and the number of baseballs donated by men interested in the loop, and these are much appreciated. The league officers will take charge of all moneys or donations of any kind, and will in turn supply the balls. There was considerable discussion of finances for the league for the summer.

President Dinsdale, who was in the chair, handed out more certificates to new entries, and advised them to have their entrance fee in soon. Letters will be sent to various sporting goods stores, warning them that the league will not be responsible for debts contracted except on written orders from the president or the secretary. Arrangements were made for practice nights for this week, on the Stevenson diamond. Some of the teams use other diamonds, but the majority prefer the East City one.

The Kiwanis juniors will use the Park to-night, Fosters juniors on Tuesday and on Thursday evening, Rotary juveniles Wednesday night, Maple Leafs on Friday evening and at 1.30 Saturday afternoon. At 2.30 Saturday, the Rotary team will workout again, and at 3.30, the Foster outfit will be there.

It is not likely another meeting will be called for some time, outside of the executive session at which the schedule will be drawn up. Many other matters were discussed and decided upon, and then the meeting was adjourned.

BERG OPENS SEASON.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 18 (C. P.). — Jack (Kid) Berg, British windmill, who until recently was junior welterweight champion, opens the outdoor fight season here tonight when he appears in a ten-round bout with Ray Kiser, Oklahoma.

PLAY-OFFS BETWEEN MEXICO AND UNITED STATES

Wilmer Allison, one of the mainstays of last year's American Davis Cup team and the man who beat Henri Cochet in the Wimbledon tournament, shown in action on the courts at Mexico City during his match with Unda, the Mexican star, to open the Davis Cup play between the United States and Mexico.

FOUR TEAMS ARE ENTERED IN NORTHUMBERLAND LOOP

F. Huycke of Norham Elected President of Newly Organized Softball Loop

BOWLING CLUB FORMED

WARKWORTH, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence.) — On Wednesday evening, May 13th a meeting was held in Norham at which the Central Northumberland Softball League was organized for this district. Delegates were present representing Warkworth village, Warkworth High School, Castleton and Norham. Teams from each of these were entered in the league. F. Huycke, Norham was unanimously elected president for the year. C. McKogue, Castleton was appointed secretary.

May 18—Warkworth town and Norham at Norham.

May 25—Warkworth High School and Norham at Norham.

May 29—Warkworth town and Castleton at Castleton.

June 5—Norham and Warkworth High School at Warkworth.

June 8—Warkworth town and Castleton at Castleton.

WARKWORTH WINS 9-6

The first game of the Central Northumberland Softball League was played on the school grounds here May 15th, when the local High School boys met the Castleton team. Both teams were right up to playing form and gave every promise of a successful season.

Bill Quinn, the high light for Castleton, pulled down seemingly impossible flies. Sensational stop on first by Wesley Clare, timely hits by McKenzie and Greenly for Warkworth were determining factors of the final score.

Warkworth—Massey, pitcher; Ewing, catcher; Clare, 1st base; Mitchell 2nd base; Hawkey, 3rd base; A. Greenly short stop; R. Greenly, right field; Partridge, left field; McKenzie, centre field.

Castleton—Somerville, pitcher; McKague, catcher; McCombe, 1st base; Campbellford, 2nd base; Coleman, 3rd base; Purdy, short stop; Quinn, right field; Almstead, left field; Gaf., field, centre field.

The score:

|---|---|
| Warkworth | 015 012 0—9 |
| Castleton | 200 111 1—6 |

LAWN BOWLING

The annual meeting of the Ladies Lawn Bowling Club was held in the Community Hall Thursday evening, May 14. The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. H. S. Allen.
Vice President—Mrs. A. M. Smale.
Secretary—Mrs. M. E. Smith.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. A. Mowat.
Games Committee—Mrs. A. B. Baker, Mrs. C. C. Armstrong and Mrs. H. E. Allen.

Whether the problem embraces the securing from the City, County, Provincial or National Government, funds for the improvement of highways radiating into the community's trade territory, or watching and having maintained equitable transportation rates and facilities, or sponsoring fairs and festivals which tend to develop a trade centre, or co-operating with farm organizations to build farmer good-will, or whatever the activity may be, the Chamber of Commerce is the one agency which keeps our municipality on an even keel.

WES FERRELL FAILS TO STOP ATHLETICS AS TWENTY-FIVE RUNS SCORED AT CLEVELAND

Philadelphia Collects 18 Hits From Three Pitchers to Win 15-10 Victory

BROWNS BREAK EVEN

Burleigh Grimes Hurls His Fifth Straight Victory For Cardinals

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.)

It is something of an important achievement when a major league pitcher hurls a no hit-no run game, but there seems to be some sort of a hoodoo attached to the feat. Wesley Ferrell, ace of the Cleveland mound staff, is the latest pitcher to learn this.

A little less than three weeks ago Ferrell pitched a hitless shutout against the St. Louis Browns and since then he has been able to pitch only one full game. On his next start he got out of trouble and beat Detroit, but he has failed to last through the last three games he started.

The Indians called on Ferell again yesterday in an endeavor to halt the slump they have been in ever since they began meeting eastern teams. He weathered five stormy innings against the Athletics, and contributed a home run on his own account. But in the sixth he gave way to Pete Jablonowski, who was charged with Cleveland's ninth straight defeat. The Athletics also used three pitchers in the slugfest which wound up with a 15 to 10 score, Hank McDonald getting credit for the victory after George Earnshaw had been driven from the hill. Five homers featured the game, the ninth in succession won by Philadelphia.

Senators Split.

Another flock of four-baggers turned up as Washington and the St. Louis Browns divided a doubleheader. The Browns won the first 7 to 1, behind Sammy Gray's ins pitching, to break their five-game losing streak and end the Senators' string of victories at six homers by West and Bluege in the ninth inning of the second clash breaking up a pitching duel between Lefty Brown and George Blaeholder, giving Washington a 4 to 2 triumph.

Ground rules limited the long hits at Detroit to two bases as 38,000 fans, the biggest crowd of the season, turned out to see the New York Yankees outslug the Tigers 8 to 5. Roy Sherid went the full distance for New York although he gave 14 hits. Boston and Chicago showed that the spell of pitching had not been completely broken as the White Sox pushed over a run in the ninth inning of a close battle to win 2-1. Tommy Thomas gave Boston five hits to Chicago's six.

Cards Beat Giants.

The St. Louis Cardinals clouted four of the National League's homers in beating the New York Giants, and Fred Fitzsimmons 6 to 1. They connected four times, George Watkins hitting two. Johnny Vergez of the Giants made the other. The defeat was the first for Fitzsimmons after five straight victories while Burleigh Grimes recorded his fifth win in succession.

Eppa Rixey of Cincinnati and Heinie Meine of Pittsburgh turned in some more good National League pitching to win the other games. Rixey weakened in the eighth and gave Brooklyn four runs before Frey rescued him, but Cincinnati won out 7 to 5. Given a three-run lead in the first inning, Meine pitched the Pirates to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Braves, getting in trouble only once.

The Chicago Cubs and Phillies had an off day.

WON SAME RACE TWICE

Empire City track has supplied some peculiar incidents in its day, but the case of a jockey winning his race twice last year in the final day of the meeting seems to be the best yet. The jockey is Canada's most outstanding rider, namely "Dude" Fodden. The field left the barrier in the first break, but unknown to the hundreds in the stands at the time, the flag failed to drop and it wasn't a start. At the finish Negofol, ridden by "Dude" Fodden showed the way to Jack Biener. As the boys jogged back to the steards' stand to weigh in they were informed that it was not a start and that the race had to be run again according to the rules. The field was lined up again and this time a good break was made. Under the good handling of "Dude," Negodale again stepped into command and through the stretch he withstood the determined threat of Rasselas, thus winning the race twice.

E. P. L. PRACTISE DATES ARE SET

General Discussion of League's Prospects for Summer Takes Place at Meeting.

MEET AGAIN WEDNESDAY

Not a great deal as done at the East Peterborough Baseball League meeting held Saturday night in Duffus, as some of the officers were unable to attend. However, practise nights for this week were arranged, another meeting was agreed upon, and a general discussion of the league propects for the summer, took up most of the time.

It was decided for the C.G.E. team to workout at the Exhibition Grounds Monday evening, the Cogs on Tuesday, and the Crescents Wednesday. The fourth team in this loop is Bethany. Thursday night was left open for use by the senior team, as well as Saturday afternoon from 4.15 on. Any team whose practise is rained out, may have the diamond Friday night. Saturday afternoon will see them all at it for an hour, the Cogs at 1.15, Crescents at 2.15 and the C.G.E. at 3.15.

The next meeting agreed on will be held Wednesday night of this week at Duffus. It will begin at 7.30 and the schedule will be drawn up at this time, and any other business on the books will be cleared up. The league hopes to begin its schedule in a week's time. After some further discussion, and with nothing else to be done at this time, the meeting broke up.

LACROSSE IN PUBLIC SCHOOL

Four Teams Will Comprise Midget O.A.L.A. League at Campbellford.

ANNOUNCE SCHEDULE.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 18. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent)—Lacrosse will be featured this year in the Campbellford Public School with the formation of a Midget Loop O.A.L.A. This loop will comprise four teams, Bearcats, Canadians, Rangers and Hawks, and will play a double schedule, all games being staged on the High School grounds.

The rules governing this year's play will be modified greatly in conformity with the ruling of the O.A.L.A. laid down at their annual meeting this spring. tA this meeting the games played between the United States champions, John Hopkins University and the Oshawa O.A.L.A., was held up as an example of cleanness and fast play, it being pointed out that no slashing or hitting was practiced. It was therefore adapted that all teams below intermediates except juniors this year, must not wear pads, except gloves, and must not slash on arms, hips, sides or legs, accidentally or otherwise, a ten minute penalty being given for these offences. These rules will accordingly govern the Campbellford teams. All games will be played on Mondays and Fridays at 4.15.

The boys are to be congratulated on the work done in connection with the raising of funds to carry on the schedule. All money was raised by themselves, total receipts amounting to $26.25. Of this $19.44 has been spent for equipment and running expenses leaving a balance on hand of $6.81.

The Teams

Bearcats—V. Cubbitt, E. Runions, F. Pettifer, R. Wilks, F. Hay, J. Roberteon, W. Blake, W. Rutheford, H. Cochrane, E. Flint, S. McConnell, H. Rowe.

BEN McMASTER SCORES GOALS FOR ELECTRICS

Scots Spoil Many Opportunities to Count—Burgess Fails to Convert Two Penalties.

C.G.E. 2, CALEYS 0.

The Canadian General soccer team broke into the win column on Saturday afternoon, when they got the better of a keen argument, by the score of two goals to nil, against the Caledonians. A large crowd witnessed a fast tussle with the half back divisions being outstanding.

Twice did the losers have the opportunity to score through penalty kicks but Alex Burgess failed to place the sphere pass Bolton the C.G.E. goalie. It was a hard break on him when he was instructed to take the spot kick over again after being successful. This puts the Scots in the cellar position in the league.

There was no excuse for the goal that the Caleys lost before the game was two minutes old. Ben McMaster lifted the ball over his head to witness it land outside the uprights. Griffin being taken unawares. Then the Scots took the initiative to hammer away at the C.G.E. citadel without any success. The individual efforts of the losing forwards were frustrated easily by the C.G.E. halves who indulged in close tackling to over-come any dangerous raids. Twice in succession McCracken broke away on the right to rap a low grounder across the goal-mouth but the tantalising result was the only reward. Three of his team-mates missing the pass in their over-eagerness to tally. Craig beat his opponents neatly to let drive at close range but Bolton turned his effort out of danger with a one-handed save. Again the Scots centre-forward outwitted the full backs with a feint movement and rapped a hot drive against the upright, to the relief of the custodian. No matter what the Scots tried to do they found Bolton the domineering factor in every attack. While attempting to get into scoring column, the C.G.E. half backs overshadowed the opposing forward line in every raid to gain the ascendency.

McMaster's Goal.

Both teams provided a splendid brand of the code with none of them being superior, except the C.G.E. forwards when scoring was necessary. A raid of the C.G.E. citadel terminated in disaster for the Caleys. Bruce nullified the attempt to send his man along the wing who carried it up the field. Quinn evaded the opponents with smart tackling in the vicinity of Scots' goal. He got the better of argument. The custodian run out to clear the situation but he was surprised when Ben McMaster jumped in between them, to get a first right foot timer in quickly to bulge the net, with a spectacular shot. The Scots endeavoured to get the equaliser before the interval. They were successful when Lewington conceded a penalty kick. Alex. Burgess was trusted with the kick that finally rested on the outside of the upright. The charm abided with the winners up till the interval with the score standing in the C.G.E.favour by two two nothing.

Second Half.

The customary rest enabled the respective executives to study the method of attack amongst themselves. The electric boys made no changes while the Caleys transformed their eleven into a new line-up. In the early stages of this half Ben McMaster was in his element. On one occasion he went right through to be robbed of a shot by Robb, who touched it out of his way. But he was rewarded a little later when he tested Griffin with a rising drive. Exchanges continued on an even basis with neither side accomplishing much towards further scoring. The small stature of the losing forward line made no head-way against the three stalwarts of the C.G.E. defence—Lewington, Bruce and Stannard—being always in the lime-light when a dangerous raid was in progress.. Raid after raid interspersed the continued attack of the Scots. In this respect Darling and Pottie provided interesting moments on the left wing. The C.G.E. man being conspicuous with long swinging passes into the goalmouth where interesting tussles prevailed. Eventually a slight change on the Caleys team transformed the system of play to the benefit of the Caleys when Rankin took up the centre-forward position.

In his anxiety to clear an attack, Lewington again conceded a spot kick inside the dreaded area. Burgess feeling more confident this time to turn the ball and place it in the net as an opponent went over the line. The referee instructed the kick to be taken over and the same performer landed the sphere in the arms of the C.G.E. goalie, to hold them scoreless.

The concluding stages continued interesting as the Canadian General front rank dribbled their way inside the goal-area of the Scot's defense with the long swinging style of play. While the losers stuck with the close passing tactics that brought them nought. Canadian General 2, Caledonians 0. Goal scorer—Ben McMaster, for C.G.E.

Caledonians—C. Griffin, goal; J. Pottie and G. Blowers, full backs; D. Emery, W. Robb and W. Rankin, halves; W. McCracken, R. Carmichael, T. Craig, J. Campbell and A. Burgess, forwards.

C.G.E.—J. Bolton, goal; W. Bruce and R. C. Lewington, full backs; R. Clyde, G. Stannard and B. Bolan, halves; J. Quinn, G. Lovett, B. McMaster, Stan. Clark and H. Darling, forwards.

There was a whole flock of practises and exhibition games of all kinds all over town Saturday afternoon. Baseball, softball, lacrosse, soccer, cricket and what have you, anyway? The weather wasn't the best, but that didn't make any difference to the athletes.

One of the hardest workouts was at the Exhibition Grounds with the lacrosse boys chasing each other around. They had a real stiff session, and look to be in good shape. Their next workout is tomorrow night at six on the same grounds.

Another good turnout is hoped for, as a line will be had on the players who will play in the holiday exhibition game next Monday. The fellows are asked to come early and in uniforms.

See where the spectators at the girls' softball games are going to have seats. There's a bleacher stand being built on the east side of the Bowl, overlooking the diamond. It's a swell idea, and will likely be completed before the first home game next Friday.

The seniors were the only ball players at the "Ex" Saturday afternoon, and they practised for three hours, no less. It was by far the best workout they've had this spring, and a few more like that would put them in midsummer form.

* * * * * * *

While there was no regular first baseman out, the infield had a busy afternoon, and was working smoothly all the time. Various players held down the initial sack at different times, but otherwise the infield remained the same.

* * * * * * *

Harry Nichols was making them look easy at the "hot corner", while Bill Sweetman roamed far and wide to grab everything a shortstop could. Bob Hilliard had a busy afternoon at the keystone bag, and was sure death to anything he could touch.

* * * * * * *

Several outfielders chased fly balls around most of the afternoon, and they worked up a nice sweat but didn't let much get away from them. Doug Moore and Tommy Foley looked pretty good.

* * * * * * *

Lamb, Collins and "Cack" Rogers were the catchers, and the twirlers present were "Scotty" Maudsley and Russ Kitchen. And they were whistling them in during batting practise. The boys saw some of the best curves seen so far.

* * * * * * *

"Skin" Heard hit the ball around the infield, while Al Heckman coached the players. Fielding practise lasted about an hour and a half, and batting practise about the same length of time. Kitchen was tossing them up from the right side, while "Scotty" swung them from the port.

* * * * * * *

Belleville seniors have not had so many workouts to date, but they'll round into shape fast, that bunch of oldtimers. The Ponies are working out three times a week or so, for some time now, and are quite confident they'll be the team to beat.

Well, the Petes want to keep it up this week, as just one week from today they'll be going over the top against the Nationals.

MILLIONS OF FRY ARE BEING HELD IN HATCHERIES

Sportsmen of the Provinces Are in a Dilemma Over Trout Fry.

SITUATION ABSURD.

Won't Accept Fry For Planting Under Government's Conditions.

(By Gregory Clark)

TORONTO, May 18. (SNS)—The Sportsmen and the Ontario Government have got themselves into a comical dilemma.

Millions of speckled trout are lying in the Ontario Government hatcheries at Normandale, at Mount Pleasant and other nursery ponds in the government chain of trout-rearing stations.

And nobody will accept them for planting. At least, not under the government's conditions.

The new government application form you have to fill in before you can get some of these millions of baby trout for a steam demands that all landowners—all—whose property abuts on the stream must sign the application with a promise to leave their portion of the stream open to the public for fishing for a period of five years!

"The government," says Harold Kearns, of Toronto, vice-president of the Toronto Anglers' Association "has entirely misunderstood what the sportsmen of Ontario wanted. And they have got things into such shape now that there will not be a trout planted in the older parts of Ontario.

Try to Get Understanding

What the organized sportsmen of Ontario have been trying to get for years from the government was a clear understandipg of the terms of restocking public waters. In the past it has been simply a case of false pretences. Nobody took any interest in the matter. The millions of trout fry raised annually at tens of thousands of dollars' cost in Ontario public hatcheries have been planted in Ontario streams on the understanding that those properties where they were planted were open to the public. But to a very great extent the public found when they tried to fish that the places the youngtrout were planted were impossible to discover. In other words, the entire stream was "posted."

So the sportsmen demanded that the government make certain that wherever trout were planted out of the public funds the property be definitely open to the public. And the ideal in mind was that when a sportsman telephoned the department of game and fisheries to ask where he might get some trout fishing near Orangeville, for example, the department would be in a position to say: "Yes, on the farm of John Jones, third concession, lot two, such and such a township.

Description is Obscure.

The writer made inquiries recently to attempt to discover what shape the records are in as regards this availability of information and in most cases the description of where trout have been planted is so obscure that it is impossible to define.

Since nearly all trout streams in the older part of Ontario are "posted" against trespassers in the greater part of their length, being leased in the majority of cases by ardent anglers who take the greatest pride in their stream and the utmost care of it, about the only free trout fishing near to the cities and towns of the province is in wild bits, swamps and abandoned regions which sportsmen would not like to rent because of the difficulty of guarding them from poaching. In such places the streams are severely over-fished. And in such places the government might rightly be expected to plant trout.

In the second place, the old system of requiring to be public, the property on which the trout are planted does inspire those who have private properties along the stream to go to the trouble to find and persuade some farmers along the stream to apply for trout for public fishing, not only in the hope of some of the trout spreading to their private sections of the stream, but also to reduce the hazard of poaching by giving the public some places to fish honestly.

Benefits Private Parties.

There is no doubt that the system of restocking in the past has benefited private parties more than the public. All that the sportsmen have tried to get is a system that will result in some parts of Ontario's streams being open—and honestly open, with clear-cut definitions of the places that are open easily available—to the general public.

The new regulations, as set forth in the new application form for trout to plant, seem to forbid, absolutely any further public restocking of the trout streams of Southern Ontario.

This means one thing: the streams of Northern Ontario will get millions more trout than they ever have before.

9,000 American Association Ball Fans Stage Riot As Idol Is "Knocked Cold"

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 18—A pitched ball that felled Bill Dunlap, Kansas City Blues first baseman, in the second game of a double-header with the Milwaukee Brews, opened a riot before 9,000 American Association fans here late yesterday.

Dutch Zwilling, manager of the Blues, attacked Jack Knott, the offending pitcher, as his star batter dropped unconscious. Hundreds of spectators, keyed up by a 10 to 5 victory for Kansas City in the first game and a 5 to 5 tie in the twelfth inning of the second, surged upon the field. Bottles were hurled.

Art "the Great" Shires, Milwaukee's first baseman, acted as peacemaker. One man hurdled a gate and made for Shires. A blow from Garland Buckeye, 250-pound Milwaukee pitcher, sent him sprawling. Umpires, police and players united to prevent further violence.

Darkness forced conclusion of the game as a tie at the end of the twelfth inning. Dunlap regained consciousness. Zwilling form several days. form days.

LACROSSE PLAYERS ARE IN GOOD FORM

Local Sponsors Confident Peterborough Will Have Championship Team This Year.

A good turnout of lacrosse players on Saturday had a stiff workout that lasted most of the afternoon. The boys are in fine shape and a strong team will be picked this week for the holiday game.

"Red" Creighton went good in goal, only four getting by him during the practise game played. Ira Dundas, at centre, has the draw down pat, knowing how to place the ball in the 1st home man's stick every time.

Arnold Hatton, Fred Goodfellow, J. Ward, Ken Miller, Doug Hatton made up on defence, while W. Boon, the Reynolds brothers, W. Firth, D. Fraser and Maybtte made up the other. T. Hewitt played centre, and G. Palmer, C. McCoy, A. White, Bud Fisher and J. Kilkoran made up the home. The opposing home included F. Meagher, H. Tudhope, Doug Miller, G. Rothwell, Pete King, with Dundas at centre.

The players are confident that with the good turnouts, the many hard workouts they've had, and financial assistance from those interested in the game, that Peterborough will not only see a revival of lacrosse, but will also have an Intermediate championship team this year. The next practise will be to-morrow night at six, at the Exhibition Grounds.

Joe Ranger, who acted with the south-end team when they won City League championships and the Goodfellow Cup, has promised to assist the local club. This spirit is much appreciated by thep layers and the officers of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club.

Lakefield Boy Breaks Arm In Soccer Game

In a second game played recently, between the Caledonians and C. P. C., Jack MacCallum, of Lakefield, had only participated in the encounter five minutes when he fell on his left arm and sustained injuries that compelled him to relinquish the position for the remainder of the game. He received medical aid immediately but further examination revealed through X-ray that two bones had been broken instead of a minor injury. The three plates showed clean breaks and he will be unable to use the arm for at least six weeks. The Scots will be without his services for a long time.

Buffalo Hockey Club Wants Frank Nighbor

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19.—(C. P.)—The Ottawa Citizen says it learns on reliable authority that the Buffalo Bison club of the International Hockey league is seeking the services of Frank Nighbor, one time center-star of the National Hockey league, to manage and coach the Bisons next winter. He would succeed Mickey Roach, who has transferred from the Bison club to Syracuse.

"Nighbor was in long distance telephone communication with the Buffalo officials last Friday," The Citizen says, "but has made no decision in the matter yet."

PETERBORO WINS 26 RUN SCORE

Trinity College Tallies 47 Runs Against Locals 73 on Saturday.

ON HEAVY PITCH.

On Saturday afternoon Trinity College school of Port Hope were the guests of Peterborough Cricket Club, the game starting at 2.30 p.m. on a rather heavy pitch. The College having won the toss, decided to bat first, but they early found it difficult to withstand the bowling of Jefferson and Mawhood, the former taking 2 wickets for 10 runs and Mawhood 4 wickets for 14 runs. ePterborough also were secure in having one of Canada's leading wicket-keepers behind the sticks, in T. H. Hoyle, a former Yorkshire County player who has recently taken up residence in this city. Trinity College were dismissed for 47 runs.

Peterborough then went in to bat, and at the fall of the last wicket they emerged winners by 26 runs the batting having netted them 73.

20 GRAND WINS KENTUCKY DERBY

TWELVE CONTENDERS

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Louisville, Ky., May 18.—The roaring acclaim that belongs to a super-thoroughbred echoed down the stretch of historic Churchill Downs Saturday as the magnificent bay colt, Twenty Grand, bounded in giant strides to record-shattering victory in the fifty-seventh running of the Kentucky Derby.

Believing his name, Twenty Grand looked like the proverbial million as the big son of the St. Germans-Bonus, carrying the Greentree colors of Mrs. Payne Whitney, wealthy New York sportswoman, galloped down the stretch to decisive victory over Sweep All, the West's surprise contender, and the heavily backed Mate, Preakness winner.

Twenty Grand, the favorite in a field of twelve contenders, came with a smashing burst of speed to beat Sweep All by four good lengths, going away, and shattered the Derby as well as the course record for the route of one mile and a quarter.

Remarkable Time

The big Eastern colt, under a masterful ride by Charley Kurtsinger, riding his first Derby victory, covered the distance in the brilliant time of 2 minutes 1 4-5 seconds on a track that was lightning fast, under a blazing sun.

This performance displaced the former Derby record of 2.03 2-5, made by the famous Old Rosebud in 1914. It also knocked off the course mark of 2.03 1-5, credited to the 7-year-old and lightly weighted Woodtrap, a half-dozen years ago. It was short of the world's record of 2 minutes flat, held by the mighty Whiskbroom II.

The race carried a gross value of $56,725, and was worth $46,726 to Twenty Grand. Sweep All won $6,000 for his owner, while Mate took the third price, $3,000, and Spanish Play fourth money of $1,000.

BOLT DESTROYS BARN.

SIMCOE, Ont., May 18. — Ignited by a bolt of lightning during the sharp thunderstorm which passed over Norfolk on Saturday afternoon, the big barn with its contents, owned by Archie M. Culver at Windham Centre, was destroyed with an estimated loss of $3,500. Mr. Culver was at the time attending the funeral of Hon. J. S. Martin at Port Dover.

A MODEL PRISONER

Who confidence to others lends
Soon finds that he has many friends.
—Old Mother Nature.

While Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat had gone to his storehouse to empty his pockets of the grain with which they were stuffed, Farmer Brown's Boy moved over so close to what remained of that little heap of grain that he had placed there when he first arrived at Longfoot's home that he could reach out and touch it. He wondered if Longfoot would notice this and be afraid.

But on his return Longfoot was too intent on getting the rest of that grain to notice anything else. He came back in a hurry, for he feared that some of his neighbors would get that grain. I fear he was a bit selfish. He wanted all of it himself. That isn't as selfish as it sounds, for you must remember that Longfoot was living in a place so dry that it was really a desert, so of course food was not over plentiful. Therefore when such wonderful bounty as this was found it was natural to want to hoard it away for future use.

Farmer Brown's Boy remained perfectly still as he had learned to do when trying to make the acquaintance of the little people back home on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest. Longfoot's big eyes took no note of him at all. They saw only that delicious grain, and he almost ran over one of the feet of Farmer Brown's Boy in his haste to get to that precious food. Slowly, very slowly Farmer Brown's Boy moved a hand forward. Longfoot took no heed, he was too busy stuffing his cheek pockets. Slowly very slowly that hand moved down. Then suddenly Longfoot was a prisoner as surprised a prisoner as ever was.

Longfoot kicked. He kicked with might and main. Then in a minute or two he stopped kicking. That hand holding him was a firm hand. He was wise enough to know that it was quite useless to struggle.

"There isn't any use in trying to get away while I am held like this," thought he. "The more I struggle the tighter I will be held. Anyway, perhaps this giant means me no harm. He isn't hurting me and perhaps after awhile he will let me go. He seems friendly. I don't know what he is saying but his voice sounds gentle."

Farmer Brown's Boy was quite as thrilled as Longfoot was startled. He hadn't really expected to catch Longfoot and he had been a little doubtful of what might happen if he did succeed. About his only acquaintance with members of the Rat family was with the big Brown Rats around the barn at home, and these he knew to be ugly fighters. He wouldn't have dreamed of even trying to pick up Robber the Rat, for he knew that the latter would have bitten his bare hand savagely. He expected Longfoot to try to bite, but Longfoot did nothing of the kind. Not even when Farmer Brown's Boy touched his nose with a finger did he try to bite.

He allowed Farmer Brown's Boy to look him all over, to examine those fur-lined pockets in his cheeks, to rub his head gently and stroke him. He was a model prisoner. One thing he didn't like and that was to have his tail handled. That long tail, with its tuft of hair at the end, was his special pride. He wanted it left alone.

"You are certainly not much like your cousin, Robber the Brown Rat, at home," said Farmer Brown's Boy as he stroked Longfoot. "You are as gentle as Peter Rabbit and I know no one more gentle than he. You seem no more inclined to bite than he does. I wish I could take you home with me. Yes, sir, I do so."

Of course, he couldn't do this, for it would be some weeks before he again saw home. Very gently he put Longfoot down close by the little heap of grain. He expected Longfoot to run at once, but to his surprise he did nothing o the kind. His eyes aparkled and he at once settled down to filling those pockets in his cheeks. Yes, sir, that's just what he did. It seemed as if he couldn't fill them fast enough. When they were full he hurriedly hopped away. In a few minutes he was back.

Farmer Brown's Boy once more slowly reached out and picked him up. As before, he kicked for a moment or two and then was still. Farmer Brown's Boy chuckled. "You certainly are a model prisoner," he said. "I wonder if you don't know enough to be afraid, or if you are smart enough not to be afraid. I am going to think it is the latter."

Plan Growing Beets Profitable Pastime

EMERSON, Man., May 18 (By The Canadian Press).—The growing of sugar-beets in this district is believed to be not feasible but likely to prove profitable, and a movement toward experimenting in this line is under way. At a special Board of Trade meeting here recently the question was discussed at length and addresses were given by men versed in sugar-beet growing. Among these were J. M. Davidson, of the Industrial Development Board, and L. Scott, field instructor for a sugar company at Grand Forks, U.S.

Information as to the growing of sugar-beets and all pertaining to the industry was given to the assembled farmers and others interested, and the local Board of Trade took steps to forward the movement. It was agreed that a man should be sent out for several days to assist the field man to arrange for the remaining acreage needed that had not already been acquired for sugar-beet purposes, and it was understood that 100 acres might be secured for this year's crop.

The United Farmers of Manitoba had previously arranged for the acquiring of 65 acres in the Emerson district for sugar-beet growing, and some of the farmers present at the meeting agreed to take shares in this acreage. Considerable enthusiasm was shown by the farmers generally when the possibilities of the industry were canvassed at the meeting. The field instructor for the Grand Forks sugar company stated that $4.50 per ton would be paid by his company for sugar-beets at Emerson this year.

Take Long Walks Fat Men are Told

How can you walk off your fat if you haven't any energy to do it?

You can take off fat with Kruschen Salts if you will take one-half teaspoon in hot water every morning before breakfast, modify your diet and exercise regularly.

There are six different salts in Kruschen that your body organs must have if you are to enjoy good health.

While you are losing fat you will be gaining in vigor, energy, vitality and power of endurance.

That means that soon you will be able to walk many miles without fatigue and enjoy every step you walk.

Drug Stores all over Canada sell Kruschen Salts, and a jar costs but 75 cents—it's a real blessing to fat people.

DEAN INGE ATTACKS MILITARY SYSTEM

Financial Resources Would Not Allow England to go to War Again.

LONDON, May 18 (By The Canadian Press).—Although he was newly returned from a Mediterranean cruise Very Rev. Dean Inge of St. Paul's spoke in a vein at the Individualist monthly luncheon which once again justified the well-known description which — rather carelessly — was fastened upon him some years ago. "Our financial resources are so completely gone that we could not go to war again even if we were slapped in the face," declared the Dean. "Our naval supremacy has vanished, our Empire is falling to pieces. There is no confidence and no enterprise. All we can see is a vast and ever-increasing army of parasites who are paid by the State not to work. Other nations have scrapped the institutions that brought this state of things into existence. They have gone back, or are going back, to government by the few or by one."

Russia to-day was an enormous slave State, he said. It was not Communism, but State capitalism with an omnipotent, rather efficient, Government — much more efficient than that of the well-meaning, but rather stupid Romanoff family. It was a system of government which, but for its extreme cruelty, an ultra-Tory might contemplate with some favor, but which individualists must regard with horror because of its destruction of liberty.

"I am not afraid of Communism spreading over the world," continued the Dean. "It attacks at once the three strongest instincts of human nature — private ownership, the family, and religion. Those who fall on these stones will be broken. I have never felt sure that State Socialism must be a failure or that if tried ruthlessly enough it may not realize a certain success. Personally I think that Russia, if it gets a more civilized Government, may be a tremendous danger to the West. I do not feel able to prophesy. We do not know to-day whether the Russians are Europeans or Asiatics, but one has only to read a Russian novel to know that the people behave in a fashion incomprehensible to everyone else."

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Dizzy Headaches and Fainting Spells

Mrs. Lloyd Babcock, Hartington, Ont., writes:—"Some time ago I was all run down in health. I had dizzy headaches, and suffered a great deal with fainting spells. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters and after taking two bottles I felt like a new person.

"My husband was troubled with indigestion, after meals, and could get nothing to do him any good until he took B.B.B."

Martin Harvey Play Not Well Received

"Story Little Disappointing," Says Times Critic Regarding "King's Messenger."

LONDON, May 18 (By The Canadian Press).—"It was a little disappointing," says the 'Times'' critic with regard to the recent presentation at the Royalty Theatre of Frederick Jackson's new play, "The King's Messenger," with Sir Martin Harvey in the title-role, "when, in the end, The King's Messenger, who had asked such tremendous questions about life and death, the conduct of life, and the preparation for death, of the helpless railway passengers he had held up apparently found the answer to them all in the document hidden in a cigarette-holder. The audience has a right to fair play.

"Was it merely a question of an international document, one of those secret treaties spies steal and the publication of which means instant war between two major European Powers, then it would have been ready to appreciate the balance between suavity and menace Sir John Martin Harvey, as the King's Messenger, so admirably keeps. Was it, however, not a question of material politics, but of metaphysical reasoning, then it would have been satisfied had the author, Frederick Jackson, pressed home his arguments as to the difference between the murder of the individual and the wholesale massacre of war, and let the document perish in its own cigarette smoke. As it is, however, the document hovers uneasily between earth and heaven, and it is never quite certain whether Sir John is an astonishingly adroit diplomat or else a Plenipotentiary for whom human documents have no significance."

The 'Times,' however, admits that there is a certain comedy played out "before the strange and shifting background of the unknown," and gives credit to John Carside, as the rich man, and Wellington Briggs, as the diplomat, for bringing to their parts in the play "all the emphasis that goes with the general rather than the particular." The critic says Miss de Silva (Lady Harvey), who plays the ungracious part of the harlot, "is inclined to protest overmuch, and somewhat too shrilly, that her morals are not all they might be." The 'Times' commends Miss Margaret Swallow for her acting as the diplomat's wife.

SAILING FOR SHANGHAI.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 18 — Senator Pittman of Nevada, who sailed Saturday from Seattle for Shanghai on a mission for the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, related to efforts to bring about an international accord for the restoration of the price of silver, issued the following statement of the purpose of his voyage:

"The object of our committee is to increase our commerce and trade with China, which, unfortunately, has fallen off about 50 per cent in the last eighteen months," said the statement. "Our committee believes that the sudden and abnormal depression in the price of silver, which is the only money that China has, is the major cause of the world depression.

"The committee does not seek to establish any artificial value for silver, but, on the contrary, hopes to have treaties entered into that will remove the causes which have unnaturally depressed the price of silver to be governed by the law of supply and demand."

La Barba Is Favored To Win Feather Title

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 18 (C.P.).—If the forecast ruhs true—and it sometimes does—the featherweight throne will gain a new occupant this week.

Bat Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., who won the title from Andre Routis several years ago, defends it against the strong and aggressive Los Angeles battler, Fidel La Barba, in a 15 round bout in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

La Barba gave an impressive display of boxing skill and punching power in handing Kid Francis a bad beating here a few months ago and the experts have taken that as a basis upon which to predict Battalino's defeat. The Hartford boy, however, has made a habit of coming through when it counts. He has lost many non-title bouts since he held the crown but gave Kid Chocolate a neat lacing when the Cuban challenged for the title.

Rare Articles Found In Egyptian Graves

CAIRO, Egypt, May 18. (AP)— A tomb painted in scenes depicting the abduction of Prosperpine by Pluto with Hermes driving the chariot is among recent finds made by Egyptian universities on the site of the sacred city of Hermopolis, about 176 miles south of Cairo.

German excavators working in behalf of the Egyptian Government in Nubia are investigating a vast cemetery which has been discovered. They opened about one thousand tombs and found many valuable objects including vases with exquisitely incised decorations and various articles of jewelry.

Third Round Draw European Davis Cup

Second round play in the European zone of Davis Cup tennis competition has been completed and left eight of the original starting field of 23 nations still in the running.

Pairings for the third round follow:

Great Britain vs. South Africa.
Japan vs. Egypt.
Czechoslovakia vs. Italy.
Denmark vs. Poland.

Great Britain conquered Belgium 3—0; South Africa whipped Ireland, 4—1; Japan took three straight from Jugoslavia; Egypt defeated Finland, 4—1; Italy trounced Holland, 3—0; Czecho-Slovakia took Greece's measure, 4—1; Denmark and Poland eliminated Rumania and Norway by 3—0 margins respectively.

The luck of the draw has placed three of the stronger teams in the upper half—Great Britain, South Africa and Japan. Italy is favored to wade through the lower half without particular trouble.

construct into the vessel of ten thousand tons a fighting strength of twenty thousand tons. A further novelty is the newly devised defensive arrangement against mines which of course is strictly kept secret, enabling the warcraft to pass any mine barried without the slightest risk.

The body of the vessel consists of welded steel plates; absence of rivets saves deadweight for the benefit of a heavier armament. For the first time in the historyof warcraft building a considerable quantity of light metal has been used for the inner constructions.

THE SON OF TARZAN No. 67 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The house party guests departed with Bwana to guide them on their week's trip to the nearest railway station. Morison Baynes stayed on, however, and with My Dear and Meriem waved farewell from the veranda. The young Englishman now lost no opportunity to pouring impassioned words of love into Meriem's ear. But always he urged her to go with him to London, saying they would be married when he reached home.

During Bwana's absence his ranch foreman had employed a new assistant who went by the name of Hanson. He was a tall, well-knit man of thirty, blonde of hair and smooth shaven. On the few times that Meriem had encountered the newcomer there was a tantalizing familiarity about him that convinced her that she would be able so call the fellow by name, yet she was unable to do so. Tomorrow he was to conduct Baynes north to the caravan trails.

At sun-up Meriem, from her bedroom, watched the little party set forth. Meriem had avoided Morison Baynes the evening before, nor had she bid him farewell. She was uneasy at his attitude. Why had he not spoken to Bwana of his love for her? Why would he not permit her to tell My Dear? It was all very puzzling to the little jungle girl. But now that he had gone, Meriem missed his gay companionship. Did she love him?

Meriem could not answer her own question as she wandered that day in the garden. She was restless. For the first time since she had come to them, Meriem felt a prisoner in the home of Bwana and My Dear. It was evening when she heard a step beyond the rose-hedge and saw a hand reach towards her. It held a message from Baynes. "I cannot go without seeing you again," she read. "Come alone to the clearing tomorrow and say good-by to me."

SWNDLER HELD IN PHILADELPHIA

Harry Geen Wanted in Britain For Mulcting Several Firms of $7,000,000.

SOLD PHONEY OIL STOCK.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 18. — With the next move to come from the British Government, Harry Geen charged with participation in swindles abroad totalling $7,000,000, was to be given a hearing to-day before United States Commissioner Patterson.

Geen, who is 31 and a British subject, was arrested early yesterday in a fashionable Germantown apartment house by Department of Justice Agents just after he had met his young British wife following a separation of seven months.

Wife Surprised

Justice officials learned of the proposed rendezvous from communications received in Miami. Geen had been traced to the southern city from Los Angeles where he had narrowly escaped capture some weeks ago. Mrs. Geen, 25, said she belonged to a well-known London family. When she visited her husband at police headquarters to-day, she said she know nothing of his business, stating he had left her in England to come to this country to sell "some more stocks and bonds."

"Harry's arrest was a great shock to me," said Mrs. Geen, "but I shall remain with him and help him as much as I can."

Police said Geen was an associate of John Factor, of Chicago, known as "Jake the Barber," and Harry Kline, said to be under arrest in New York. The trio, police stated, mulcted the Broad Street Press, Ltd., of London, and other British firms on worthless oil stock, boosted by a fake financing company, of millions of dollars.

Three Committed

LONDON, May 18 (A.P.)—Three defendants in the so-called "Broad Street Press Case," which has caused something of a sensation in London, were committed for trial and allowed bail at Guildhall Court to-day.

They were Herbert John Spellen, Frederick Newbury and Barnett Leon Siman; all are alleged to have conspired with Jacob Factor and Arthur J. Klein and others to induce the public to invest in worthless shares.

New South Wales Gov't Fails To Fyle Defence

SYDNEY, N.S.W., May 18 (C.P. Cable via Reuter's). — The Government of New South Wales has failed to file a defence within the requisite period to the writ taken out by law officers of the Commonwealth and all other state Governments, claiming more than $2,500,000.

The claim is on account of the State of New South Wales' failure to meet interest payments on state loans due in London last April 1, which payments were met by the Commonwealth Government. As the Commonwealth Government annually receives amounts from the state Governments the other states are concerned in the New South Wales default.

It seems probable that Hon. J. T. Lang, Extremist Premier of this state, intends to rely on some constitutional point in his contention that the state is not bound to meet the interest payments. The Commonwealth Government will apply to have the case placed on the judicial list for hearing.

JAKE THE BARBER IS BADLY WANTED

Authorities Fear Diamond's Gang May "Get" Swindler Before They Do.

FAILED TO SPLIT PROFITS.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 18 (C.P.).—Reports were current to-day that John Factor, known as "Jake the Barber," alleged swindler of British stock investors, was sought by the lawless as well as by the law.

The Chicago Daily Tribune said a price had been set on Factor's head by Jack (Legs) Diamond, New York gangster, and quoted Federal agents as fearing he might be slain before he could be arrested for extradition to Great Britain, where he is accused of defrauding investors of several millions of dollars.

"Jake the Barber," reputed to have made big money illegally since he closed up his cut-rate shop in Halstead Street, was at odds with Diamond, The Tribune said, because of his failure to split the profits of a stock selling scheme after Diamond had "grubstaked" him on a trip to England.

GOLF FAVORITES ARE ELIMINATED

WESTWARD HO., Devon, Eng., May 18 (C.P.).—Some of the favorites fell by the wayside in the opening rounds of the British amateur golf cup championship to-day.

T. H. Bowman, Norfolk champion, went down before the strokes of the United States hope, George Voigt, four and three, in the opening round, and Francis Francis of Sunningdale was defeated by the same U.S. star in the second round.

T. A. Torrance, member of the Walker Cup squad, defeated his teammate, John Beck, two to one in the second round.

Eric Fiddian, one of the British favorites, turned back J. F. Ireland, two up. John Deforest went into the third round by beating Norman Newton, six and five, while R. H. Montmorency defeated R. B. Bayliss one up.

ENGLISH YOUTHS CANNOT BE FOUND

Authorities Have Little Success in Checking Up On Windsor Mayor's Protest.

NO BOOKINGS LISTED.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18. (CP)—No trace of seven young men reported to have been brought by the Cunard Steamship Line to Windsor, Ont., can be found by the Immigration Department. Mayor David Croll's complaint to the Department was that seven men had arrived in Canada on the Liner Ausonia on April 1 bocked for Windsor expecting to find work in the motor factories, and that some 90 others had been detailed to other points in Canada.

An immediate investigation launched by the department revealed that the liner Ausonia did not reach Canada April 1. It arrived March 21 and again on April 26. On neither of these sailings was a single male passenger booked for Windsor on board. Further investigation of the manifests of other Cunard ships, carried back to March 1, show there has been no such things as the booking of seven men for Windsor on any ship of the line.

Immigration officials here feel it would be practically impossible for 90 men to secure entry to Canada under the circumstances described by the Windsor mayor. There is nothing to prevent any British subject who pays his own passage and has a reasonable amount of resources to maintain himself, from coming to Canada. But any considerable number of men coming to seek work in automobile factories would at once arouse the suspicions of immigration officials at the docks.

Immigration officials at Windsor were instructed by telegram to-day to take the matter up with Mayor Croll personally. The mayor will be asked to give specific cases and each case will then be investigated.

REBELS ACTIVE IN SANTA CLARA

Despatches from Santiago Report 13 Suspects Have Been Jailed

TROOPS PREPARED

HAVANA, May 18. (AP)—Dispatches to Havana newspapers today from Sancti Spiritus, Santa Clara province, said that a score of Nationalist Party members had armed themselves and risen against the Government.

Army officers sent to Santa Clara province last week as a precaution against trouble drove them from the city and are pursuing them. Both Nationalist leaders in Havana and the Government denied that the uprising had taken place but credence was given reports of a disturbance of some sort by the presence of the Secretary of interior at his desk most of the night.

Santiago dispatches early to-day said that thirteen persons were arrested during the night and were being held on military charges of rebellion. They included outstanding Nationalist members.

Quota Troubles Seen By Canadian Critics

LONDON, May 18 (By George Hambleton, C.P. Staff Correspondent).—London observers this afternoon commented widely on the possibility of the conference of wheat exporting nations, which commenced today, devising a scheme of wheat export quotas—alloting to each exporting country a quota of the world market.

But to such a scheme, it is understood, objection has been raised in certain Canadian quarters. Canadian critics of export quotas take the ground such are liable to operate in favor of the nation exporting low-grade wheat as against the nation exporting high-grade wheat.

CHEQUE ARTIST REMANDED WEEK

Youth In Lindsay Court Admits Buying Ticket in Peterboro' With Phoney Order

TOO MUCH RAIN IN VICTORIA

LINDSAY, May 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—Provincial Constable Nelson and Constable Hodgson returned on Saturday from Goderich with Albert Fahey, the eighteen-year-old youth who, it is alleged, passed forged cheques on a number of local merchants last week. He was arraigned Saturday morning before Police Magistrate Jordan and was remanded for one week. Fahey, is an orphan and could not tell the police where he was born. He admitted buying a ticket at Peterborough for Goderich, presenting a bogus cheque in payment.

At Saturday's session of the county police court, Bert Simper of Fenelon Falls, was fined $100.00 and costs or three months in jail for having liquor illegally, and Dr. Johnstone, of the same village, $10.00 and costs for consuming. The Provincial Police visited Simper's home in quest of liquor a week ago, and during the search the latter admitted having supplied the physician.

Seeding operations in sections of Victoria County have been held up owing to the heavy rainfalls during the past week. Some of the farmers and especially those on low land, complain that there has been too much moisture. Although the great majority have finished seeding, a goodly number have been unable to do so because of the continued precipitation.

WEALTHY NOBLE GIVEN CHALLENGE

Unnamed Conservative Offers to Give Half Fortune to Poor if Trevelyan Will.

OFFER STANDS FOR WEEK.

LONDON, May 18 (AP) Sir Charles Trevelyan who recently resigned as Minister of Education has been challenged to practice what he preaches —better distribution of wealth.

If he accepts the challenge both he and the challenger, who are very wealthy, will have to give their fortunes to the poor of Newcastle.

Sir Charles, who inherited his father's beautiful estate at Wallington, Northumberland, and who is Labor member of Parliament for Newcastle central, issued a pamphlet recently stating the central need of the world was more effective distribution of wealth.

Arthur Crosby organizer of Newcastle Central Division Conservative sAsociation, announced to-day that a wealthy un-named Conservative offered to give the poor half his fortune if Trevelyan would do likewise to prove his sincerity. The offer stands for a week.

HEPBURN FOR NORFOLK?

ST. THOMAS, Ont., May 18 (C.P.) —Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P. for Elgin West and Leader of the Ontario Liberal party, declined to comment to-day when queried regarding reports he may be the Liberal candidate in Norfolk, where a by-election will be held to fill the vacancy caused by the death last week of Hon. John S. Martin, former Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Hepburn entrained to-day for Ottawa.

ROTARY PLANS FOR BIG FAIR

with a cocoa flavoring. It originated in Switzerland, where the product was known as Ovamaltine, but when introduced into England the name had to be changed to Ovaltine, because "Maltine" was already a commercial name in use in Great Britain.

Dealing with some of the problems of manufacture, Rotarian Glaspel pointed out that the barley grown in England was much more readily adapted for use in the making of malt than the barley produced in Eastern Canada, but in recent years much had been done by Canadian malting firms to bring about the growing of suitable barley by Canadian farmers. The A. Wander Company received the malt from which they made their malt extract for use in the manufacture of Ovaltine in bond, and before even a pound of it could be released from bond it had to be weighed in the presence of an official from the Excise Department, who had to be kept constantly on duty at the plant, even though at times he had not more than a half hour's actual work to do in a day. In addition, the A. Wander Company had to pay three cents a pound excise duty on every pound of malt used for beverage purposes, a tax that handicapped them in competition against English and American firms.

The speaker explained the processes by which malt extract was made and the manner in which Ovaltine was produced. As to its uses, he said that Ovaltine was of great assistance in cases of insomnia, and as a food for convalescents and for nursing mothers.

"We bought every bit of the equipment we could in Canada," declared Rotarian Glaspel, "85 per cent of it was made in this country, while the raw materials used in the manufacture of Ovaltine are all produced here. That is the policy we intend to pursue."

President Robert Abbott thanked the speaker for his most interesting address.

OBITUARY

RUTH IRIS SCOBELL

The funeral of the late Ruth Iris Scobell, 8-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney W. Scobell, 16 McGill Street, took place this afternoon. Rev. Wm. McDonald of Knox United Church officiated and interment was made in Little Lake Cemetery.

Baby Scobell passed away in Nicholl's Hospital on Saturday evening, and her sorrowful parents are left to mourn her loss.

REV. DONALD M. MARTIN.

CANNINGTON, May 18.—A private service was held on Saturday at Aldersyde, Cannington, for Rev. Donald M. Martin, of 102 Pricefield Road who passed away suddenly on Thursday, May 14. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. R. Uren, of Rosedale Presbyterian Church, assisted by Rev. Thomas Rogers of Toronto, Rev. Allan Cranston of Welland, and Rev. R. S. Scott, of Cannington. The pall-bearers were six nephews of the late Mr. Martin — A. J. Martin of Kitchener, Rev. Mr. Cranston, Eric Cooke of Toronto, Charles Cowan of Cannington, Arthur Carew of Lindsay, and Lieut.-Col. George Weeks of Lindsay. Immediate relatives present at the service were Mr. Martin's widow, his only daughter, Amelia, and his brother, Rev. William Martin, M.A., B.D., of Welland.

Rev. Mr. Martin, graduated in theology from Knox College in 1892 and after pioneer work in Nelson, B.C., held charges in Tweed, Cannington, and Bolton. Of recent years he was with the British Dominion Land Settlement Corporation, where his sympathetic understanding of men made him a leader. The numerous floral tributes received testified to the esteem in which the late Mr. Martin was held. Following the service interment was made in Necropolis, Cannington.

MRS. JOHN SELKIRK.

Mrs. John Selkirk died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Donald Munroe, Warsaw, at 12.30 on Sunday morning, following a stroke from which she never regained consciousness. Mrs. Selkirk, formerly Ann Tucker, was born in Otonabee. She removed to Apsley at an early age. After her marriage to John Selkirk, she and her husband resided in Essex County, where they lived for 20 years, and where their children, all of whom are living, were born. She moved to Warsaw 23 years ago, until the demise of her husband in 1921, when she took up residence with her daughter, keeping her own home. Left to mourn her passing are two daughters, Mrs. D. Munroe of Warsaw and Mrs. R. Sinclair of Tilsonburg; two sons, William and John of Peterborough, and one niece, Miss Edith Tucker.

The funeral took place from the deceased's own residence in Warsaw this afternoon at 1 o'clock, and interment was made in Apsley Cemetery.

CHARLES RISHOR.

Another former well-known figure in Peterborough's business world has passed in the death in Nicholls' hospital on Saturday evening of Charles Rishor, 168 London St. Mr. Rishor who had not been in good health for some years, had been confined to hospital for nearly three weeks—but in spite of hat fact the news of his death came as a shock to a very large circle of friends and acquaintances.

For forty years Mr. Rishor had been a resident of Peterborough and for most of that period he was actively engaged in business, retiring from a wholesale grocery enterprise six years ago. His business contacts had won him friends all over the district who will learn of his death with genuine sorrow. He was born in Midland on May 16, 1870, and by an unusual coincidence his death occured on the sixty-first anniversary of his natal day.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his son Max, 557 Aylmer St. at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Wm. Allan of St. Paul's Presbyterian church will officiate and interment will be made in Little Lake cemetery.

PREMIER OF N.B. TO CHANGE POSTS

Dr. Baxter Will Be Succeeded as Premier by Hon. C. D. Richards.

OTHER MOVES.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18 (C.P.) — Important political changes in New Brunswick will be announced within the next few days, probably to-day or to-morrow.

Premier J. B. M. Baxter, of New Brunswick, and Conservative Minister of Customs in the Dominion Government prior to the 1921 election, will be appointed to the Appeal Division of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick in succession to the late Mr. Justice White. It is understood that New Brunswick Provincial Conservatives are in caucus to-day, according to word reaching political circles here.

On his resignation as Premier of the Province, Dr. Baxter will be succeeded by Hon. C. D. Richards, at present Minister of Lands and Mines. The portfolio now held by Mr. Richards will likely be taken over by Hon L. P. D. Tilley, Saint John, who is president of the executive council. Lt. Col. W. H. Harrison, Saint John, will probably be named president of the executive council.

Appointment to the bench of Dr. Baxter, who has had an outstanding successful career in both Dominion and Provincial politics, will be made within a day or so.

GANG CHIEFTAIN SHOT TO DEATH

Shooting Believed Vengeance For Raid by Federal Men on Rival Speakeasies.

WARFARE OPENED.

MASILLON, O., May 18 (C.P.). — A gangster's gun brought death early to-day to William "Bill" Kirkillis, 38, reputed chieftain of a bootleg ring who, police said, had vowed vengeance for the death of a henchman slain four days ago.

Kirkillis, known as the "King of Columbia Heights," a suburb, was just starting his automobile after leaving an apartment house when a man, concealed in the doorway of a nearby building, fired four times. One of the bullets struck Kirkillis in the right side, passing through his heart.

The slaying of Kirkillis and that of Jim Sperce, Canton underworld character, last Friday were believed by police to be the outgrowth of warfare between two rival gangs of Massilon and Canton. Kirkillis, it was reported, had been a marked man since a string of Columbia Heights speakeasies owned by a rival faction was raided by the Federal officials.

LEAVES COURTAULD BEHIND

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, May 18.—(AP) — Captain Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish civilian pilot who aided in rescue of the ice-bound Augustine Courtauld from the Greenland ice cap, to-day awaited a steamer back to Sweden after a perilous flight from Greeland here yesterday.

In getting up off the ice yesterday his plane veered into rough ice and smashed one of its skiis. After three hours spent repairing it he took off again.

He came here in three hours, arriving most unexpectedly. He left Courtauld back at Angmagsalik where will await a boat home.

NEEDED SHOWERS VISIT PRAIRIES

Rain Follows Week-end of Devastating Dust Storms and Gales.

FIRES UNDER CONTROL.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 18.—(C.P.) —Showers pattered down to-day on a west-country ravaged by week-end dust storms held in but slight check by scattered rainfall. Almost throughout the week high gales tossed powdered surface land into the air and in many cases the winds occasioned soil-drifting ill-compensated by precipitation dotted here and there.

In Northern Saskatchewan, the air was so dust-filled that "brown rain" beat down from the skies. Rains were apparently heaviest in Alberta and Manitoba. Forest fires which had prevailed in Manitoba after similar blazes in the other two prairie provinces were extinguished, were reported under full control after heavy rains Saturday in the Riding Mountain National Park area.

ST. JACOB'S MILL IS RAZED BY FIRE

Blaze is Second to Visit Structure Inside Nine Years.

$40,000 LOSS.

KITCHENER, Ont., May 18 (C.P.) —Fire early to-day destroyed the St. Jacob's plant of the Snyder Milling Company, about nine miles northwest of this city. Only four brick walls of the plant remain standing, a reminder of one of the oldest and most prosperous concerns in the village. The disastrous blaze, originated in the roller room. The damage is estimated at $40,000.

It was the second serious blaze to visit the mill in nine years. Early Easter Monday morning, 1922, the mill and warehouse were completely destroyed by fire.

Clarkson Remanded After Pleading Guilty

TORONTO, Ont., May 18.—(C.P.) —Harry Clarkson, of Windsor, acquitted last week of joint responsibility for the slaying of a police constable, for which his companion, John Brockenshire, was found guilty, pleaded guilty to five charges in county police court to-day.

Electing summary trial by Magistrate Keith, he pleaded guilty to breaking into three homes, one school, and carrying a concealed weapon.

He was remanded until May 22 for sentence.

Suspicious Permit Says Magistrate

"Yours is a most suspicious permit," Magistrate Langley told Raphael Michels, in fining him $100 and costs and ordering the suspension of his liquor permit in police court this morning.

Last week Provincial Constable Sylvester visited Michel's home, but found no liquor. The young man explained that he had placed in his shed the three bottles of spirits and three cases of beer, which he had purchased the day before. "Somebody must have stolen it," he told the constable. In the face of the large amounts of liquor purchased recently by Michels, the constable thought otherwise.

He charged the young man with having liquor in an illegal place. Michels pleaded guilty.

Appeal From Murder Conviction Upheld

CROWD STAGES DEMONSTRATION OVER DECISION

Charged With Wife Murder.

LONDON, May 19 (C.P. Cable). — Liverpool citizens who crowded the Court of Criminal Appeal made great demonstration when the Lord Chief Justice to-day announced that the appeal of William Henry Wallace from conviction on a charge of murdering his wife, had been upheld.

Great interest had been aroused in the case, and prayers had been offered for Wallace daily in the Liverpool Cathedral. He was found guilty by the Liverpool Assizes Jury on April 25. Wallace is a 52-year-old insurance agent, a slender, refined-looking man.

The body of Mrs. Wallace was discovered in the Wallace home at Liverpool when Wallace, reporting that he was unable to enter his home after being out during the evening, called neighbors and they broke in. The woman's death was evidently caused by severe wounds, although no weapon was found. Police found in another part of the house some money which Wallace said had been stolen.

Police Views Differed

Wallace explained he had been called to another district by a telephone message passed to him by a friend, but had been unable to find the address. Police however claimed that the message was of his own sending.

Roland Oliver and E. G. Hemmerde, eminent King's Counsel, delivered speeches on behalf of the prisoner, stressing that Wallace had never exeprienced the least unhappiness in his married life and that there had never been any suggestion against his moral straightforwardness.

Body of Infant is Found Near Creek

SUDBURY, Ont., May 19 (C. P.). — The dead body of a newly born female child, wrapped in several pieces of a woman's underclothing, was found on the bank of Junction Creek near here by police yesterday.

Information obtained by the police disclosed the fact that the body of the child had been deposited there by a young woman early in the afternoon. The woman who gave the information stated that at the time she thought the parcel contained old clothing. Some time later she mentioned the fact to a neighbor who made investigation and found the body.

The police are working on the case.

MOVE TO REVIVE LIQUOR EXPORT TO U. S. REFUSED

West Essex Member is Alone in Support of His Repeal Resolution.

NO DIVISION.

Bennett Drops Hint on Budget as to Grants for Technical Education.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19. —(CP)— Canada will continue to prohibit the export of liquor to United States. The House of Commons yesterday turned down a resolution, sponsored by Col. Sidney C. Robinson, Conservative member for West Essex, which called for the repeal of the law passed early in 1930.

The Border Cities member raised the only voice in the short discussion, and when Mr. Speaker Black asked for an indication of voting strength, those supporting the resolution returned a faint response. The volume from those opposed was thunderous in comparison and the Speaker without hesitation declared the resolution lost. Col. Robinson made no effort to force a recorded vote.

Private Members Day

It was private members' day and the House worked at high speed in clearing the order paper of a variety of proposals. A resolution calling upon the government to consider grant money to the provinces for establishing full time health units, was passed unanimously. Another proposal to establish a system of immediate credit for farmers was referred to a parliamentary committee.

The old parliamentary question of establishing a universal eight-hour day throughout Canada came before the House late in the evening. Hon. Peter Heenan, former Minister of Labor sponsored a resolution calling upon the Government to implement the obligations contracted when Canada signed the Treaty of Versailles. The world nations at that time declared in favor of the principle of the eight-hour day.

Although Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, intimated the Government had no objection to the resolution passing, J. H. Stitt (Cons., Selkirk) continued to discuss it until 11 o'clock struck. This resulted in the resolution being "talked out" and it will go to the bottom of the list, probably never to be reached again this session.

Because the matter involved private and civil rights, it came within the jurisdiction of the provinces, Mr. Guthrie declared. Rt. Hon. Mac. Kenzie King Liberal Leader, suggested the Dominion speak to the provinces "with some force and effect" to get action. This, Mr.

BAXTER RESIGNS HON. C. RICHARDS IS N. B. PREMIER

List of Cabinet Ministers Submitted for Approval to Lieutenant-Governor.

TWO CHANGES.

Former Prime Minister Takes Place on Supreme Court Bench.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., May 19.—Hon. Charles D. Richards, of Fredericton, this morning accepted the office of Premier of New Brunswick at the hands of His Honor H. H. McLean, K.C., V.D., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, following the resignation of Hon. J. B. M. Baxter from that office to take a place on the Supreme Court Bench of New Brunswick. Hon. Mr. Richards also submitted a list of his Cabinet members, for the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor, which showed W. H. Harrison, Saint John, as Minister without Portfolio and President of the Executive Council, succeeding Hon. L. P. D. Tilley, Saint John, who has been appointed Minister of Lands and Mines, which office was vacated by Hon. Mr. Richards. The last named assumes the office of Attorney-General. The rest of the Cabinet remains as heretofore. The new Cabinet will be sworn in at Fredericton on Wednesday.

Hon. J. B. M. Baxter called on the Lieutenant-Governor and tendered his resignation in the following letter:—"Having been appointed to the Appeal Division of the Supreme Court I beg to tender you my resignation as Prime Minister and Attorney-General of the Province of New Brunswick."

Zoo Buffalo Bunts London Resident; Judge Awards $912 Balm for Injuries

LONDON, Ont., May 19.—Judgment for $912 was given against the City of London by Mr. Justice Wright in non-jury court shortly before noon today in favor of George Martyn, local garageman, in his suit for $10,000 as result of being bunted by a Springbank Zoo Buffalo.

Martyn's action was against the Public Utilities Commission was dismissed, His Lordship holding that the city as owner of the park was responsible for any damage done by the animals. The P.U.C. he ruled, was in the role of keeper, the city as owner.

Martyn's suit was the outcome of a mishap at Springbank Park on the morning of Sept. 18, 1930, when he claimed to have been hit by the bull buffalo as he stood close by and outside the wire inclosure. An inner railing of wood was down at the particular spot, the plaintiff declared.

HOUSE ADJOURNS FOR DISCUSSION ON POWER RIGHTS

Motion When Put to Members Carries By Majority of 126.

BEAUHARNOIS QUESTION.

Liberal Leader, Many Supporters, U.F.A. and Progressives Vote in Favor.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19 (C.P.).—By a majority of 126, a motion to adjourn the House of Commons to discuss a matter of urgent public importance — namely, the Order-in-Council passed in March, 1929, granting water power rights to the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Co — carried in the House this afternoon. The vote stood: For, 147; against, 21. The motion was moved by Robert Gardiner (U.F.A., Acadia) and seconded by E. J. Garland (U.F.A., Bow River).

When the division bells had rung and the Clerk of the House was taking the vote, a unique situation developed. Starting to call the vote in the U. F. A. corner, twelve U.F.A. and Progressives voted solidly for the motion. Seven Liberals (Messrs. Euler, Brown, Factor, Donnelly, Weir (Macdonald), Gershaw and Howard also stood up to support the motion. The other Liberals remained seated.

Calls On Premier

Turning to the right of the Speaker, the Clerk first called the name of the Prime Minister. Premier Bennett stood up for the motion and all Conservatives lined up likewise. It was apparent then that the motion to adjourn would carry with a large majority.

Before calling for those "opposed" to record their vote, the Clerk again turned back to the Liberal benches. Rt. Hon. MacKenzie King, Opposition leader, then arose, followed by a number of Liberals. There was a murmur of laughter. Other Liberals then voted for the motion. 19 other Liberals voted against. Messrs. Neill and Bourassa also voted against.

Nearly all laborers in cities of Hawaii now are busy on public-works projects.

Lottery Measure Stepped on Hard

LONDON, May 19 (C.P.).—The House of Commons came down hard to-day on advocates of legalization of lotteries in support of hospitals, defeating by 181 to 58 an application by a Conservative member for leave to introduce a bill authorizing the operation of such lotteries.

There has been considerable agitation in favor of loosening up the laws in this respect in view of the great sums which have gone out of the country into the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes on horse races while charitable institutions at home need money.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—Toronto Stock Exchange market steadied somewhat the last few minutes to-day but without bringing about a rally and the market still was weak at the close. Prices which had melted away in the morning, continued downward in the afternoon with record low prices for the year.

B.A. Oil, Imperial and International Petroleum were all at new lows on fractional declines, B.A. Oil touching 9¾, Imperial 10⅞, and Int. Petroleum 10⅝.

Page Hersey was an outstanding stock on the decline, slumping nearly three points to a record low of 72. Steel of Canada, slightly better on end, touched 27½ earlier, a new low of that stock.

Ford of Canada sold at 18¼ for an odd lot and Gypsum Bell Telephone, Canners Second, Distillers-Seagram, Montreal Power, Service Stations Common and Preferred and several of the bank stocks made up a diversified list at new lows. Service Stations Preferred broke 5 points to 55.

Nickel, Brazilian and C.P.R., recognized market leaders, were down from their opening prices, but did not sell under the lows registered yesterday.

Sales at more than 40,000 shares were practically same as yesterday.

TRAIL OF DAMAGE IS LEFT BY STORM AROUND SUDBURY

CELLARS FLOODED.

Freak Bolt Apparently Creates Vacuum, Sucking Plate Glass From Window.

SUDBURY, Ont., May 19. (CP)—A checkup of damage caused by last night's wind, rain and lightning storm, one of the worst that has struck this section of the province in years, showed that several power transformers had been blown out, two large plate glass windows shattered and several trees uprooted. Sewers blocked shortly after the storm broke with the result that a number of cellars in various sections of the city were flooded.

A number of transformers throughout the city caught fire. Two street lighting services were damaged and the east section of the city was in darkness for almost a quarter of an hour. On examining this morning it was found, however, that the damage to city transformers and cables had not been extensive.

Freak Bolt

Eye witnesses who saw the smashing of the plate glass window in a furniture store describe a strange freak played by the lightning bolt by which the window is supposed to have been shattered. The bolt ex-

TWO MARRIAGES ARE DISSOLVED AT THE NON-JURY SITTINGS OF SUPREME COURT HELD IN COBOURG

Third Case is Yet to be Heard By Mr. Justice Garrow, the Presiding Judge.

ACTION NOT CONTESTED.

Decree Becomes Absolute in Six Months Unless New Feature Arises.

COBOURG, May 19—Two marriages were dissolved here Monday afternoon by Mr. Justice Garrow in the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

David Archer, a farmer living near Blackstock in Cartwright township, was granted a divorce from his wife Sarah Louella Archer, who has been housekeeper for Albert Ernest Carveth, Cavan township farmer, since January 1928 "up to the present." During that time two children were born to Mrs. Archer.

Carveth was cited in this action as co-respondent, but the action against him was dismissed.

T. N. Phelan, K.C., of Toronto, assisting Archibald Cochrane of Cobourg, were solicitors for the plaintiff, David Archer; J. A. O'Brien of Peterborough appeared for Albert Ernest Carveth, but no defense was offered by Mrs. Archer, nor was she called as a witness.

In the other case, Mrs. Clara Edith Clark of Hamilton township, Northumberland county, was granted a decree of divorce from her husband Samuel Clark who is living on the highway near Port Hope with Carrie Greer Clark whom he married on February 4, 1930, without reference to the courts or any other authority except himself.

According to the evidence presented in this trial Monday afternoon, Clark was formally but bigamously married in this second union.

When Clark was served with notice of the divorce suit his comment was: "Why bring them papers to me? If she wants to get married, let her go and get married. I won't prevent her. We're not going to bother her."

Mrs. Clark's action was not con-

French-Canuck Faces 13-Year-Old Charge

MONTREAL, Que., May 19 (C.P.)—Henri Clement will go on trial to-day for attempted murder, an offence committed thirteen years ago. On January 18, 1918, the wife of the accused was shot while walking on St. Hubert street. She was not fatally hurt but one bullet remains in her body. She named her husband, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. He was not apprehended until March of this year.

FIRE PROTECTION FOR N. MONAGHAN AGAIN DISCUSSED

DRAW UP FIRE AREA.

Several Aldermen Oppose Renewing Agreement With Township Council.

That old and sore question, "Fire Protection for North Monaghan", which again and again through past years has caused much wrangling between the City Council and the North Monaghan Township Council, has broken open as a fresh wound.

It was prodded into new life last night when the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council invited the Township Council into discussion. The city's representatives practically told the Monaghan councillors that they were "fed up" on giving the service of costly fire-fighting apparatus, maintained at the expense of city taxpayers, to Monaghan suburban residents at an annual charge of about $150.

The Monaghan Council was advised that the city would be overjoyed if the township would assume its own burden of giving fire-protection to its thickly populated sections. In this connection it was stated that part of Monaghan bordering the city could be made into a suburban area, separate from the farming area, to equip a small fire station and maintain a volunteer brigade at its own expense.

Draw Up Fire Area

For more than an hour the two councils discussed the question separately and then together. It ended with the Township Council being requested to draw up an area to be protected by the city's apparatus and set forth the amount they were willing to pay for the protection.

It was explained at the outset of the inter-municipal debate that the recent accident, in which the Fire Department's pumper had been badly damaged, had opened up the question anew to the City Council. After half the cost of the damages to the pumper have been collected from the insurance company the city will still have to pay $750 for repairs.

The important fact is that the pumper was on the way to a fire in North Monaghan, Mount St. Joseph,

WALL COLLAPSES TWO ARE VICTIMS

Brig. Gen. R. H. Roberts, U.S. Marine Corps, Trapped Trying to Save Woman.

VISITING FAMOUS TOWER.

TOURS, France, May 19.—(AP)—Brigaier General Robert H. Dunlap, United States military corps, was buried under a collapsing wall of the historic tower of Cinq Mars today while he was attempting to rescue a woman pinned under the debris. Police said there was practically no chance that he would be rescued alive.

General Dunlap is stationed here as a student at the French War College.

Accompanied by his wife he was visiting the tower. As they walked leisurely along the street in front of it the General suddenly noticed that the wall was crumbling. Bricks were falling upon a woman pedestrian ahead of them.

The General sprang forward to drag her out of the danger zone, but as he reached her side the whole wall collapsed with a great roar burying both of them under a mass of brick and mortar.

A third person also was believed to have been buried.

TWO WIG-WAGS TO BE INSTALLED

C.P.R. and City Council to Install Signals on Aylmer and Park Streets.

MANUALLY CONTROLLED.

Electrically operated and manually controlled wig-wags will be installed at the C.P.R. crossings on Park and Aylmer streets. The cost will be shared by the railroad and the city it was decided at a meeting of the Parks Committee of the City Council held last night.

At present there is a flagman for 13 hours at the Aylmer street crossing and the city's share for this service is $536 a year. As outlined by railway officials the cost of installation of the wig-wags at both crossings will be $4,400, of which 40 percent will be obtained from the railway grade crossing fund. The city's share will be half the remainder of $1320. The cost of operation to the city will be $516 for both wig-wags.

The wig-wags will be operated only to warn traffic of the approach of trains, and will not ring, since they are manually controlled, when switching movements are being made.

Sawing Cell Bars 2 Prisoners Escape

NORANDA, Que., May 19. — Word has reached here of the escape several days ago from Abitibi jail of Ephrem Petitclair and J. Arsenault, the first held on charges of forgery and the latter of highway robbery. The men sawed a bar from their cell door during the night and climbed the jail walls. Petitclair was arrested by Rouyn police early this month and is charged with issuing stamped cheques, amounting to more than three hundred dollars.

Arsenault is charged with highway robbery near Mentel, west of Amos. Both men were to appear at the Spring Assizes in July.

LAND OF SERENADES, MANTILLAS AND SPAIN OF THE MOVIES IN CADIZ

EXTREMELY COURTEOUS

By GORDON A. SINCLAIR

CADIZ, Spain, April 15.—(Special to The Examiner, Copyright 1931).—Here is the Spain you have read about, dreamed about, talked about, seen in the movies.

Here is the genuine article unadulterated and all wool but the buttons. The people are friendly and clean and courteous. They really do serenade their sweethearts at dusk. They really do sell wine for one cent a glass with six olives thrown in. They really do wear berets and sharp cornered gaucho hats. They neither hurry, worry or overcharge.

Their food is good and cheap, and clean. They like visitors and say so. But they want to know who those visitors are and once they know they keep it secret. You cannot for instance, go to the hotel and ask if Tommy Church or Bull Komar is stopping there. It isn't done and that's the end of that. If Tommy is at the Alantica it's up to him to say so. Not up to you to enquire.

Missing Woman Found In Montreal Convent

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. May 19 (CP) Mrs. Margaret McCafferty, 60, of this city, foster-mother of Thomas McHugh, under death sentence in Montreal, has been located in a convent in the Canadian city, relatives here said yesterday.

Mrs. McCafferty disappeared after leaving here with the intention of going to Montreal to aid an appeal on behalf of her son, who also is wanted here in connection with the muder of C. Cameron Cook, bank messenger.

Reports received here said Mrs. McCafferty arrived in the Canadian city on the verge of collapse and was being cared for by Nuns.

Variety Of Storms Sweep Over Prairies

WINNIPEG, Man., May 19 (C.P.) —Stormy weather of varied nature ruled across the Prairies last night. Icy temperatures prevailed in Saskatchewan and Alberta as snow flurries were reported from numerous points and a wild dust-storm blustered across Manitoba. Mail planes were held up, east-bound at Brandon and west-bound at Winnipeg, by the violence of the dust gale.

Weather reports indicated that the skies were clearing early to-day.

SERVICING FIRE EXTINGUISHERS IS DISCUSS ED BY COMMITTEE

That Fire Chief Gimblett should not compete with local firms in refilling and servicing fire extinguishers, but that if business and manufacturing firms preferred the Fire Department to work on their fire extinguishers then he had a perfect right to do the work, seemed to be the feeling of the majority of the Fire, Water and Light Committee's members last night.

The question of the Fire Department's activities in servicing fire extinguishers came up at the committee's meeting. A letter from E. H. Johnston opened the subject.

In a letter to the committee, Mr. Johnston stated that the Fire Chief was refilling fire extinguishers, giving the extinguishers at Mount St. Joseph as an example. He charged that this was "unfair competition to local business firms engaged in the work of servicing extinguishers"

SERIOUSNESS STRESSED.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—Enlarging on the seriousness of breaches of trust by post office employees, Crown Attorney Eric Armour, K.C., told the jury in Court of General Sessions to-day that the charge of theft of post office letters laid against A. Crocker, former postman, was an important one.

Crocker, the Crown said, was given a bundle of mail to deliver, among which were two letters containing money, and addressed to fictitious addresses by post office officials. It was possible to feel the money through the paper. The former postman, the Crown alleged, was followed by inspectors, who observed that he did not deliver the letters when he found the addresses were false, but kept the money.

Six Months Man Hunt Comes To Close

KAUFMAN'S BODY FOUND BY GUIDES IN QUEBEC WOODS

Remains 9 Miles From Camp.

Search at Its Height Cost Thousands of Dollars Daily —$10,000 Reward Offered.

..SKOWHEGAN, Me., May 19 (C.P.). — A six months' search for Mitchell B. Kaufman, missing president of the Converse Rubber Company, of Malden, Mass., was reported ended to-day with finding of his body near the little community of St. Theophile, Quebec, two miles across the Canadian border.

Sheriff Elton L. Markham, who directed an inquiry into Kaufman's disappearance at Jackman, on November 5, while the manufacturer was on a hunting trip, early to-day said he received word from Jack Murtha, guide, that the manufacturer's body had been located by three guides.

Its approximate location was nine miles from Crocker Pond camps in Jackman, from which the Kaufman hunting party set out on the day of his disappearance.

Markham said he received no other details beyond the finding of the body.

Reward of $10,000.

A reward of $10,000 was fostered early in the search by Kaufman's relatives for his recovery dead or alive. At its height the search cost thousands of dollars a day. Several hundred experienced woodsmen were hired to comb the vast stretch of forest for trace of the missing man but nothing was found.

A private search was started several weeks ago. Murtha, a professional guide, was named to direct it.

CUSTOMS ISSUE LEFT TO COURT

VIEWS CHALLENGED.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 19 (A.P.)—The League of Nations Council to-day voted formally to submit the proposed Austro-German Customs Accord to the World Court, but before the vote was taken Aristide Briand's suave diplomacy was needed to dissolve a threatening tension.

The harmonious atmosphere was broken during presentation of opinions by Dr. Voyislav Marinkovitch, the Juvoslavian Foreign Minister, and Dr. Julius Curtius, who occupies the same post in Germany.

The Jugoslaviah challenged the German view that the League Council was not competent to deal with political aspects of the Austro-German arrangement, asserting that the League may consider any political question calculated to disturb international peace. He suggested furthermore that Germany was pursuing a "policy of prestige."

Sharp Retort

Dr. Curtius launched into a sharp retort, in which he rejected with unmistakable resentment the imputation that his country was engaged in a course calculated to upset European harmony.

After Germany had shown her good intentions by agreeing to submit the issue to the World Court, he said, "It is intolerable to suggest that we are disturbers of international peace."

Both Curtius and Marinkovitch were growing angry when Briand stepped in, his old conciliatory self.

No one questions the right to bring any disturbing fact before the League Council, he began, but he expressed doubt that the principle of that rght was applicable in this instance.

The assembled statesmen began to smile and finally to laugh as Briand recalled that during the debate of yesterday and this morning speakers had invoked Metternich, the Austrian, to attack the Customs Union, and Guizot, the Frenchman, to support it.

Here Curtius broke into a laugh, and even the tern lines of Marinkovitch's face relaxed in a smile.

MOTOR PARTY TO VISIT HERE

27 American Tourists' Bureau Managers and 8 Canadian Officials on Good-Will Tour.

1,784-MILE ITINERARY

A Good Will Tour consisting of 27 American tourists bureau managers and eight Canadian officials will pay a visit to Peterborough on June 22 and 23. This tour is under the auspices of the Ontario Motor League, and is sanctioned by the Ontario Minister of Highways, Hon. G. S. Henry, who has also sponsored the tour as Prime Minister of the province. Besides the 27 managers representing motor clubs which are located in States or provinces contiguous to Ontario, the following will also accompany the party: Dr. P. E. Doolittle, President Canadian Automobile Association, H. K. Carruthers, Manager of the Tour and Secretary-treasure Automobile Club of Ottawa, Secretary A. T. Guay, Ontario Motor League, a Canadian Press Reporter, a Government photographer, the driver of the bus, and a Highway Traffic Officer. Since many of the club representatives are young ladies, Mrs. Carruthers will accompany the party to act as chaperon.

The tour will start from the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on June 18 and call in at the principal towns along the Lake Ontario shore to Brockville. It will then proceed through the Thousand Islands to Cornwall, and thence to Ottawa. From there the party will travel back to Belleville, Port Hope and then Peterborough. The travellers will stay here until the following day, when they will set out for the Muskoka District. From there they will go to Owen Sound, Sarnia, Stratford and London. The tour will then turn southwest to Windsor and along the north shore of Lake Erie to Niagara Falls. From here the party will travel to Hamilton, Brantford, Paris, Galt, Kitchener and to the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Monday June 29. Thus every city and important town of the province will be visited, over an itinerary of 1,784 miles.

While in Peterborough it is expected that the touring party will make a trip over the Lift Lock in the Government boat, the "Bessie Butler." Following this they will have a luncheon in the Empress Hotel. From here they will make a trip up to the various resorts along the way to the Kawartha Lakes, and will then return to Peterborough to continue their trip to the Muskoka Lakes. Every effort is being made by the local authorities to co-operate with the Trent Canal officials in making the tour a success locally.

QUIET PREVAILS IN MADRID CITY

President Zamora Restores Civil Rule After Weeks of Martial Law.

PRIEST TO BE TRIED.

MADRID, May 19 (C.P.).— Spain's capital revelled in freedom from martial law to-day for the first time since the beginning of the incendiarist riots against Catholic property and the provinces looked forward to the same privilege by the end of the week.

After a lengthy meeting, Provisional President Alcala Zamora's Cabinet restored civil rule last night with the statement that Madrid again was tranquil and indicated that the same procedure would be followed throughout the nation in a few days if the cities continued calm.

Despatches from Malaga and other centres of recent outbreaks showed that the trials of those responsible were being pushed, looted church property was being restored, and the priests, nuns, and monks gradually are returning to the folds of their convents.

Father Juan Flores Gutierrez was arrested in the town of Manzanares on a charge of stating in a sermon that the Republican Government was responsible for the anti-clerical violence. Madrid authorities ordered the Town Council to begin preparations for his trial.

NEW SNAG LOOMS FOR LABOR GOV'T

Whole Trades Union Opposed to Any Drastic Reform of Unemployment Insurance.

19 MEMBERS IN HOUSE.

LONDON, May 19. (By Thos. T. Champion, C.P. Staff Correspondent) The Labor Government will strike another snag shortly—the question of reform of the dole.

It is already apparent that the whole trades union movement will vigorously oppose any drastic reform of the scheme of unemployment insurance. And yet it is generally believed that the Royal Commission which has been investigating the dole for many months, in its interim report shortly can only recommend reducing the scale of payments and at the same time increasing the contributions from workers, employers and state.

For the unemployment insurance has a huge deficit and is running into more debt at the rate of $5,000 - 000 a week, so the necessity of drastic revision is obvious.

And when the report is laid down and the time comes for the Government to act upon it, the Prime Minister will likely be embarrassed by many of his supporters. Will Thorne, secretary of the General Workers' Union, declares that its 19 representatives in the House of Commons are in duty bound to vote against any radical changes—even if such action involves defeat of the Labor Government. A. J. Cook asserts that not only the Miners' Federation, of which he is general secretary, but the whole trades union movement will fight any Government that in any way supports or accepts drastic changes.

New Radio Beacon Boon To Mariners

BUFFALO, N.Y., May 19—Roscue House, Superintendent of Lighthouses in this district, to-day explained changes in the characteristic of the fog signal at the Ashtabula, Ohio, lighthouse and in the method of distance finding in use there.

Under the new system, the radio beacon will transmit a distinctive dash of three seconds duration. As the radio dash ends, the sound signal will begin a blast which will last for four seconds. After one second of silence, there will be a second blast of one second duration.

To determine the observer's distance from the lighthouse, Mr. House explained, the number of seconds elapsing between the ending of the radio dash and the instant when the beginning of the long sound blast is heard is divided by five, the result being in statute miles. The result, he added, should be correct to within a limit of error of 10 per cent.

CUSTOMS UNION WORRIES CZECHS

Foreign Minister Appears Before League Council to Oppose Project.

FEAR LOSS OF TRADE.

GENEVA, May 19 (C.P.).—A little man whose undistinguished features gave no hint to his remarkable history came to the meeting of the League of Nations Council to-day to deliver his final verbal thrust at the Austro-German trade project before it is referred to the world court.

He was Dr. Edouard Benes, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, whose country looks with dread upon the possibility of political union between the Teutonic states. Czechoslovakia lies wedged between Germany and Austria in such a way as to give her considerable anxiety should they merge and adopt a hostile attitude toward her.

Under the leadership of Dr. Benes and the aged Dr. Masaryk, the Czechs and Slovaks wrested themselves loose from the Hapsburg Empire during the war and this event is still remembered in Central Europe. Having built up an economic structure, half industrial and half agricultural, Czechoslovakia is much concerned lest the proposed union destroy a large part of her foreign markets.

Dr. Benes has been fighting the project energetically since its announcement two months ago, and to-day he came armed with a fat manuscript and stout arguments.

11 ARRESTED.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico, May 19 (C.P.). — Four hundred children and employees of the Guadalajara Orphans' Asylum to-day were suffering from poisoning believed to have originated in adulterated milk.

Fifty of the poison victims are in a serious condition, and two of them may die.

It was found that the milk regularly supplied to the asylum had been mixed with formol. Although they protested their innocence, the concessionaire and ten employees of the asylum, through whose hands the milk passed before being given to the inmates, were arrested pending an investigation.

LESS ACREAGE IS U. S. SOLUTION OF WHEAT CRISIS

McKelvie Tells Conference Surplus Stocks Will Not Be "Dumped."

SEVERAL SUBMIT PLANS.

Ferguson Hints Canada May Have Concrete Proposal to Lay Down.

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
C. P. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, May 19.—The first concrete proposals were submitted today to the conference of the great wheat exporting nations of the world at Canada House.

From the United States farm board, from Australia, Poland, the Danubian countries and other delegations came schemes for stabilization of the wheat market.

Soviet Russia will submit its plans tomorrow. Canada has not yet submitted any concerted scheme.

"Canada may possibly have a concrete scheme," announced Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Chairman of the Conference and Canadian High Commissioner to London, after the sitting today. "We are prepared to examine all the proposals made and to go a long way to meet any general proposition."

All the schemes submitted are to be considered by a committee this afternoon and some endeavor will be made to coordinate them. With the necessary accompanying statistics they may be taken up by the full conference tomorrow morning.

Reduce Acreage

Reduction of acreage sown to wheat as the only remedy for the present wheat market crisis, the United States solution, was advised today by Samuel R. McKelvie, United States delegate, when he laid before the conference a study of the situation and an outline of the position of the United States.

"We see no possibility of a satisfactory solution of the world wheat problem which does not include as the most important single element curtailment of production in exporting countries," he said, "individually and as a whole, until a better adjustment between supply and disposition can be effected and restraint upon fresh expansion of production thereafter."

"Whatever specific results may or may not come from this conference," Mr. McKenvie went on, "it will be of great value if the representatives from the wheat exporting countries can come to an agreement on the causes of the severe depression in wheat prices and the broad lines of Policy which the situation renders appropriate in each of these countries. If we can arrive at a common understanding of the problem and its cause and certain ways by which it must be met, this conference will have achieved a signal step forward."

Mr. McKelvie said that when abnormal surpluses had accumulated and current production was ample

MOTOR CARAVAN REACHES HEARST

Trio Require Two Days to Make Crossing of Opastika River.

HEAD INTO WILDS.

HEARST, Ont., May 19 (C.P.). — The trans-Canada motor expedition, headed by E. Wharton Shaw, arrived in Hearst last night. The party, including Shaw, his daughter, Phyllis, and a mechanic, Harold Poxor, left Cochrane, Ont., early Friday.

The roads west of Kapuskasing, which was reached late Friday, were found unfit for travel by the expedition. Most of Saturday and Sunday were occupied in making the crossing of the Opasatika River, which had flooded the road for a distance of half a mile. The truck in which the attempt to cross the Dominion is being made was taken across on planks. The tractor, which is part of the equipment, made the crossing under its own power.

Shaw expects to remain in Hearst five days preparatory to entering the bush. West of here roads do not exist for motor travel.

FALSE TEETH ARE A GREAT INVENTION BUT KEEP YOUR OWN AS LONG AS YOU CAN

Pyorrhea has no respect for you

False teeth often follow pyorrhea, which comes to four people out of five past the age of 40

PYORRHEA, a dread disease of the gums, comes to four people out of five past the age of forty. It is an insidious foe that may infect the mouth of youth and lurk in the gums for years before beginning its real work of havoc.

It starts with tender gums that bleed easily when brushed. As it progresses it spreads dangerous poisons throughout the system, often loosening teeth in their sockets until they fall out or extraction is necessary.

False teeth at best are only a substitute for your own and so often they are only the penalty of thoughtlessness and neglect.

A dentist perfected Forhan's to fight pyorrhea

At the first sign of pyorrhea go right to your dentist for a careful oral diagnosis. Modern dentistry can work wonders and save you untold trouble if you rely on it in time.

Between visits to your dentist your teeth are your own responsibility. Therefore choose your dentifrice with utmost care.

Forhan's is the discovery of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., who for 26 years specialized successfully in the treatment of pyorrhea. It is unique in that it contains the benefits of an ethical preparation developed by Dr. Forhan, which thousands of dentists use in the treatment of pyorrhea.

It is really folly to take a chance. Decide now not to gamble any longer. Visit your dentist regularly and brush your teeth with Forhan's twice a day. You can make no finer investment in the health of your mouth and the safety of your teeth. Forhan's Ltd., Montreal.

W. F. NEDDO IS PRIZE WINNER

'Do You Know" Prize is Won By Aylmer Street Man.

SIX IN TO-DAY'S ISSUE.

A few minutes of pleasant work, a bit of care in the construction of the answers, and a touch of originality, won the three dollar prize, for to-day's announcement for William F. Neddo, 346 Aylmer street.

Every day someone is being awarded a three dollar cash prize by The Examiner for the best arranged set of answers to the "Do You Know" articles. There is nothing hard about the contest, and five minutes of the easiest of work will make you eligible for a prize.

The rules are simple. The contest consists of news stories that appear in The Examiner, each ending with a question. The articles tell you about what services are offered by worthy firms, and the questions ask something pertaining to the concerns that the stories describe. This does not mean that it is a guessing contest. There is no guessing at all. It is necessary for you to call the firms and ask them for the answer, then arrange your answers in the most artistic, original or clever manner, and bring or mail them to The Examiner's "Do You Know" editor. Prizes are awarded to the contestants who submit the best arranged answers, not the best answers, for all answers, if correct, are the same. By "best arranged" is meant cleverness of construction. This may be accomplished by printing the answers—or writing them in colors—or putting them in the form of poetry—or clipping the stories and pasting them upon sheets with pictures in keeping with service they describe—or in any way that you may wish to construct them. These are merely suggestions, however. Originality is the deciding factor.

Look through this issue right this moment, find the six articles that appear to-day, call the firms and get the answers, arrange your answers as you wish and send them in. You may be to-day's winner.

MOVE TO REVISE LIQUOR EXPORT

Guthrie said, would never be done by him.

Bennett Drops Hint

Premier R. B. Bennett dropped one hint during the day on the contents of the budget. He requested Michael Luchkovich (U.F.A., Vergreville) to withdraw a resolution calling for the continuance of grants for technical education. After noting the speech from the throne contained a reference to this question, the Prime Minister said: "The budget will disclose the action to be taken." The Alberta member lost no time in withdrawing the resolution.

During the discussion on the resolution of H. E. Spencer (U.F.A., Battle River) dealing with health units, Dr. Murray MacLaren, Minister of National Health, announced a conference with the provinces would be held "at a convenient and suitable time." Health officers will be invited to the conference, he said.

Premier Bennett supplemented this announcement later in the day by drawing attention to the overlapping between such Federal and Provincial departments as Agriculture and Health. Only through concerted action by the Dominion and the Provinces could health units be esablished and a need existed for settling the respective fields of action.

In sponsoring his resolution to rescind the anti-export legislation, Col. Robinson quite openly intimated Canada had made a bad bargain. "United Sates is still getting her liquor and Canada is losing the revenue," he declared. The report of the Wickersham Law Enforcemen Commission admitted it was a mistake to assume "the cutting off of clearances for liquor from Canada to United States had achieved its helpful intention." Col. Robinson estimated Canada had lost in revenue and in loss of business to distillers, brewers, farmers, bottle manufacturers, printers and railways, more than $39,450,000 since this country made its gesture of neighborly good will."

Robinson's Argument

United States, Col. Robinson declared, soon after Canada had passed the anti-export law, brought in the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Bill, "which shut off nearly all our agricultural and dairy products from that country." United States had "treated as a scrap of paper" the immigration agreement negotiated with Canada in 1927, and had adopted the "drastic action of coastguard ships firing on Canadian vessels, sometimes with loss of life." He mentioned particularly the ships "I'm Alone" and "Josephine K."

The Agricultural Committee will consider the advisability of establishing a system of immediate credits for agriculture. William T. Lucas (U.F.A.-Camrose) sponsored a resolution to this effect and the Government indicated its willingness to have it referred to the parliamentary committee.

In supporting his resolution, Mr. Lucas said the present banking system seemed to work efficiently for all industries except agriculture. Many countries, including France, Germany and United States had established special credit schemes for the farmers and he believed this should be done in Canada.

When Martial Rheume (Lib., St. Johns-Iberville) introduced a resolution calling for increased compensation to be paid by the Government on tuberculous cattle, he encountered a snag. Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, claimed the resolution involved expenditure of public money and, therefore, was out of order. Mr. Speaker Black agreed, and the resolution was dropped from the order paper.

OBITUARY

EDWARD WEIR

ROSENEATH, May 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The death of the oldest man in Alnwick Township, Northumberland County, occurred with the passing of Edward Weir, an old patriot of Roseneath, last evening in his 86th year. # MONCRIEF'S MILK MOST NOURISHING

Dairy is Clean and Sanitary in Every Particular.

MILK PASTEURIZED.

Many people throughout this section can point out their bottle of milk from Moncrief's Dairy, Limited as being a bottle of health. A glass of milk at ten in the morning and three in the afternoon wards off the tired feeling. It beautifies the skin and clears the complexion. School and health authorities everywhere agree on the advisability of serving milk to the children at school. Serve milk at meal time and between meals, too. Consistently used, milk builds health in the frailest bodies, colors pale cheeks, revitalizes wasted nerves. We suggest that you have Moncrief's Dairy, Limited to increase your order for milk to-day. It is the aim of this enterprising concern to give the public the best that clean, sanitary conditions, extreme care and modern machinery can produce. The safest insurance of health and happiness is milk, and this concern realizes that our ability to prosper and progress depends upon our health.

Moncrief's Dairy, Limited is clean and sanitary in every particular. Their products are not made simply to meet with the specified requirements, but are handled in such manner as to rate as health products that only modern machinery and elaborate equipment can produce. The milk comes from milk producers of this section. In the most sanitary manner this milk is brought to their plant, there to be pasteurized. Every step from the producer to the consumer is one of cleanliness, surrounded by equipment that is immaculate. No pains are spared to make for pure, fresh, highest quality milk.

Peterborough people may indeed be proud of this local, home-owned establishment. Under the able management of Mr. Sidney E. Moncrief, the owner, Moncrief's Dairy, Limited has won a high standing in the community. Do you know the prices on their various quality dairy products?

for all requirements, two courses of action were indicated—consumption must be expanded and, production must be limited. Neither course alone would suffice and both must be taken, he said.

Sold in Orderly Way.

As for the stocks accumulated in the United States by the Grain Stabilizing Corporation, Mr. McKelvie said there could be no highly explicit answer to the question of the plans for disposing of these. "Simply expressed, however," he said "they will be sold, but they will be sold in orderly fashion; they will not be thrown overboard for anything they will bring to demoralize domestic and foreign markets."

He said United States growers had been urged to cut acreage and were taking steps in this direction. He emphasized, however, that the United States is not out of the export market because of existing surpluses and inability to make rapid reductions, and probably will always continue "in some degree" to be an exporter of wheat and flour.

tested. Her former husband was not present in court, nor was he represented by counsel.

Frank J. Hart of Colborne was solicitor for Mrs. Clark.

The running of these two marriages through the divorce mill undoubtedly did not threaten the Reno speed record, but they clicked along expeditiously, thoroughly prepared in their legal aspect and without any impediment to retard their progress. In each case a "decree nisi" was granted. "Nisi" is the Latin word for "unless," and means that the decree is granted unless some affecting fact or feature in the case arises within six months. After that period the decree becomes absolute.

Three Divorce Cases.

Three divorce cases on the docket failed to attract an unusual crowd at the opening of court. The chamber was not more than half full when Mr. Justice Garrow assumed his seat on the bench.

In the Archer case the first witnesses were Gordon T. Puffer of the Peterborough police department and Arthur Vance, J.P., of Millbrook, who certified to service of the writ and other initiatory papers.

The plaintiff, David Archer, was next called.

Identified His Wife.

Directing the plaintiff's attention to one of two women in a front seat, Mr. Phelan asked: "Do you identify that lady as your wife?"

Mr. Archer turned his cold gaze away from "that lady."

"That's her all right", he replied with a shade of emphasis on the feminine pronoun that seemed compounded of personal strangeness and contempt.

The Archers were married on December 27, 1922, the plaintiff proceeded.

"We lived with my father in Cartwright township for the first two years after my marriage. One boy was born during that time. In 1924 we moved into my own house on another part of the farm and we lived there until 1926. The second boy was born in 1925."

Early in 1926 the Archers quarreled over a law suit, and that rift was never repaired.

"My father and Sangster, the contractor who built my house, had a lawsuit, and she went as a witness for Sangster," Archer explained.

Mr. Justice Garrow—You found fault with you wife for giving evidence against your father?

Mr. Archer—Yes.

Mrs. Archer went home to her father, east of Millbrook in Cavan township. She took her baby boy, John, with her. About September 1, 1927, Archer again saw his wife. They discussed reconciliation and reunion.

"We agreed that she would come home, and she did return on September 8, 1927," the plaintiff recalled. "But she stayed just about three weeks. On September 26th she went away again."

"She left me on the pretence that she was going home for some furniture. She left both children with me."

Mr. Phelan—Did she return to your home at any time after that."

Mr. Archer—No, she never returned.

Letter From Mrs. Archer

Archer said he received a letter from his wife informing him that she was leaving him for the last time, and bidding him an their two sons "goodbye."

Mr. Phelan read the letter as follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 25, 1927.

Mr. David Archer,
Burketon Jct., Ont.

Well Dave,

I have no doubt but maybe you are thinking this by now, as probably you have missed my clothes. I didn't have any intentions of living with you Dave under the circumstances, but I thought I owe me children the chance to be brought up together so I shamed ("shammed" Mr. Phelan suggested) it out for three weeks to let John make friends so he wouldn't break his heart for his mother altogether, whatever his mother did for him. So you have them now and try to give them a fair chance. If I could of had them I would have made that my supreme goal.

Nobody was aware of my intentions. I haven't went home at all for I daren't without John (the baby). I will be hundreds of miles away when you receive this. So it's a last Goodbye to my darling boys and you David.

LOUELLA.

The plaintiff declared that there was no collusion whatever with his wife in this action; nor had there been any communication with her or any friends of her about the application for divorce.

Two Peterborough Doctors

Two Peterborough doctors gave evidence of having attended Mrs. Archer on two natal occasions after her separation from her husband.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch would not swear to the identity of the woman whom he had attended at Nicholls Hospital April 28, 1928, and the woman whom Mr. Phelan indicated in the court room as Mrs. Archer. They looked very much alike, he said. Dr. McCulloch added that he had never seen David Archer until yesterday in court.

Dr. W. S. Fitzpatrick testified that Mrs. Archer was the woman he attended at St. Joseph's Hospital December 24, 1929, on the occasion of the second accouchment after leaving her husband's home for the second time in September 1927.

Employed As Housekeeper

Albert Ernest Carveth, who had been named in the statement of claim as co-respondent, a Cavan township farmer, said he had employed Mrs. Archer in February 1927 as a housekeeper. Carveth's mother was then alive and lived with him and his children. His wife was dead.

Witness said that Mrs. Archer remained with him until about the first of September in 1927. She was away for a time and returned to his house in January 1928. Carveth knew at the time that Mrs. Archer was going back to her husband in September 1927.

"In March 1928 my mother and the children and Mrs. Archer moved with me into Peterborough. Mrs. Archer stayed in Peterborough until the last of October in 1930. My mother died in December 1928. I moved into Peterborough to live with my children. Mrs. Archer continued to act as housekeeper after my mother died. Last October I moved back to the farm. Mrs. Archer has been keeping house there up to the present."

To Mr. O'Brien, witness said he had been married twice. His second wife was the mother of his four children.

Mr. O'Brien—Are you the father of either of the children born to Mrs. Archer since 1927?

Carveth—No sir.

Witness returned a repetitive "no" to several other similar questions regarding his relations with his housekeeper.

Mr. O'Brien, upon the dismissal of Carveth's examination, moved for the dismissal of the action in so far as it applied to his client. Mr. Justice Garrow agreed.

Other witnesses were relatives of the plaintiff—James Archer, his uncle, Annie Archer, his sister and finally his father, Joseph Archer. Their testimony was to the effect that the plaintiff was not absent from his home at night during 1927 and 1928. His only absences were during the day time, and were for business purposes connected with the farm, the selling of stock, the chopping of grain and so on. It was also stated that his wife did not visit him at his home except during the three weeks of her brief return in September 1927.

The Clark Divorce

Only three witnesses were called in the Cark action. They were Sam Dudley of Colborne, who served Clark with the notice of his wife's suit, Mrs. Clark, and finally Mr. Hart, who removed his gown and went into the box to corroborate the evidence of Mr. Dudley who he had accompanied on the visit to Clark.

Mr. Dudley swore that Clark told him that he was married to Carrie Greer while he was still the husband of Clara Edit Clark. The certificate of marriage was producde in court. Mr. Dudley said that Clark and his second wife did not want to be bothered about the details of divorce. The husband didn't object to his first wife marrying some other man if she took the notion. Like any good spouse he said he wouldn't bother her whatever she did.

Married In April 1907

Mrs. Clark testified that she was married on April 24, 1907, and had two children, one twenty-one years old and the other seventeen.

"My husband lived with me until 1922," Mrs. Clark said. "Then he deserted me. I entered an action for non-support. It was adjourned several times and nothing was done about it. I issued a writ for alimony, but it was never served. It must have been the fault of the lawyer I had at that time. On October 27, 1922, when I was trying to get the non-support case into court, my husband came to the house and said he wanted to be taken back. He came at 11 p.m., and he left the next morning at 7 o'clock. I have never seen him to speak to him since then. There have been no letters between us, and there has been no collusion whatever."

Mr. Hart asked permission to put in as evidence admissions made by the absent Clark in examination for discovery.

Mr. Justice Garrow said he doubted plaintiff's right to adopt that course.

The plaintiff's case at that stage needed bolstering by evidence showing that Clark was now living with and had been living with Carrie Greer.

Mr. Dudley, recalled to the stand, added the testimony that he was confident they had been married.

"Clark and Carrie Greer-Clark both told me they were married," he said.

The mariage cetificate was dated February 4, 1930.

Mr. Hart, changing to the role of witness, said he had gone to Clark's home with Mr. Dudley.

"I told Clark about this divorce case coming up, and advised him to see his solicitor. Clark said to be: "We're living here peaceably. What do we want with a lawyer. I don't see why anyone wants to bother us."

Mr. Justice Garrow at once decided the evidence was entirely satisfactory to him, and proceeded to sign the divorce document.

LAND OF SERENADES SPAIN OF MOVIES

tel through streets exactly 11 feet wide. No cabalerro in all Spain would dare carry his own luggage so the inevitable "man who looks after everything" had mine. The hotel, as I mentioned yesterday, asked me if I'd like a nice outside room and then said there was no such animal.

They sent me to an upper baleony affair overlooking the patio. It gave me all the privacy of a gold fish because if no special sort of curtain was aranged I'd have to undress in the dark. Needless to say there was no such curtain. Two waiters followed. They produced a long form for me to answer. Who was I. Married or single? Where born- Where resident? Any family- Was I travelling alone? Why? At what hour did I enter Spain and for what purpose? At what hour did I expect to leave Spain and at what border? From where did I come to Cadiz and why? To where should I leave and when? Was I expecting to earn money in Spain, and how much? Was I expecting to spend money in Spain, and how much? Did I eat meat on Friday?

Through a book of words filled with muchos and okos and buncos and mokos I got the drift of the questions and answered in English. An "agent de policia" arrived soon afterwards. He wore a gawky three cornered hat of shiny patent leather and was the very soul of courtesy. He was sorry, extremely sorry, but his chief could not read the answers. Would I mind; would it be too much trouble, if I tried to write things down in Spanish.

I crumpled up the paper and looked for another one. Eight eager hands reached out for the first. Horrors! I had crumpled up a government document. The aides de camp tried to straighten it out again. I tried to answer in Spanish. The cop helped, the waiter helped, the chambermaid helped. We got along great and everyone bowed in appreciation of my patience. Swell people these Spaniards. Imagine our hotel people treating an ignorant foreigner that way.

Ten Courses For Dinner

With the bookkeeping done I rolled down to dinner in the garden. Not a real under-the-trees sort of garden but a synthetic one set partly under a glass roof. There were ten courses to the dinner starting with salad and ending with nuts. In between were two differenent servings of fish and two of meat.

I went out under the Spanish moon and within three blocks was lost, within four blocks didn't care, and within five came across a real honest to gosh scene from a play. A young don there was serenading his sweetheart. He was a slim graceful looking chap complete with Andalusian hat and a guitar. He sang as if his heart was breaking. Sad, sad music. His sweetheart was in behind the heavy steel bars of her home guarded not by one but by two chaperones or duenas. She wore a mantilla with black flowing lace and so did the fun-spoilers. The young fellow would play a tune or two and then drop his guitar and heach in through the bars to grip his sweetheart's hands or stroke her hair. The duenas rocked creakily to and fro in their rocking chairs paying less attention to Don Juan than if he were a passing pedlar.

People on the street were exactly the same. They didn't pay the slightest attention to the gallant young singer and nobody but me stopped to listen. The crowd just milled past in those incredibly narrow streets. They were exactly the type of crowd you would expect to find in Spain. Dark skinned, alert, not big, unhurried. The women were in twos or threes or else accompanied by a man. There were all sorts of unaccompanied young men and soldiers by the hundred. The soldiers were a pretty smartly turned out crowd.

I had been all primed up on arrival here to sit down and knock out an article entitled "English—the universal language." Up to now I have been in 14 countries and never once have been truly stumped for speech. Along comes Cadiz at this interesting point and throws me for a loss. The chap who speaks no Spanish here simply doesn't eat, and that's that.

But a swell country. Happy because inefficient. Nobody bothers their head if the carbon needs cleaning or not. If the bills aren't paid today they'll be paid tomorrow. Why should we worry? Life is too short anyhow. Not many of us live to be even seventy. And so to bed.

FIRE PROTECTION

when the accident occurred. Legal entanglements grew out of this fact, since at one stage, it appears, the insurance company questioned whether it should be called upon to settle any part of the damages since the pumper was bound to a fire outside of the city.

By an agreement to exist one year, signed in 1927, the city sent its smaller apparatus to North Monaghan at a cost of $50 a fire, City Clerk Armstrong said. By a previous agreement the charge for the fire apparatus attending a fire in North Monaghan was to be $100 the first hour and $50 each hour after.

Opposed to Renewal

When the subject was discussed the aldermen previous to the entry of the Monaghan representatives, several expressed themselves as opposed to the renewal of any agreement.

"Why should the city taxpayers be put to the expense of providing expensive fire protection and giving that protection to North Monaghan at practically no cost?" asked Alderman McNabb. He stated that eventually that part of the township would come into the city.

"Giving fire protection to them is merely a convenience, and the longer we give it, just that much longer will they stay out of the city," stated Alderman Macdonald.

Alderman Tuggey took the same view. "If they want fire protection let them come into the city and pay their share of the cost," he declared. "We shouldn't entertain any agreement at all."

Alderman Stocker: "If we annexed them we would have to build a sub station."

Mayor Denne: "They'd want about ten years fixed assessment. Some day soon the Board of Health will force them to come into the city. When they are ordered to put in conveniences, their taxes will jump higher than ours and they'll come begging us to take them in. When they get their tax bills this year they'll find some $16,000 for sidewalks which have recently been laid down."

Alerman Turner: "We shouldn't give them any protection".

Cost of Fire Department.

Alderman Turner submitted a report on the cost of the local Fire Department. The cost to the citizens per day, he said, was $218, even if the apparatus didn't move a wheel. Equipment at the Fire Hall was valued at $59,300; cost of Fire Hall and land, $25,000; making a total of $84,300. The total annual cost to the citizens of the fire protection was estimated to be $68,883.56, which made a monthly cost of $5,740.

In explaining the situation to the North Monaghan Council, Mayor Denne said that under existing conditions with the apparatus going out to the township, the underwriters might cut off the insurance.

He suggested that the township purchase a pumper and make arrangements with the Utilities Commission as to hydrants. "Make a suburban area and charge those who will receive the protection," he said.

"That's right. It's not fair to charge the farmers," stated Reeve McIntosh.

Mayor Denne stated that the insurance rates in the suburban part of Monaghan was 75 cents on $100, the same as in the city. "They are getting the benefit of our apparatus even on their insurance rate," he commented.

Township Clerk Bruce Johnston stated that the farmers were already up in arms over the expense of the suburban part of the township.

"There is a bigger population than there is in Lakefield, and it could be easily incorporated as a village," stated Reeve McIntosh.

The Township representatives were then requested to take time in private to decide what proposition they were prepared to offer the city on fire protection.

Willing to Form Area.

Later the two Councils met together and re-opened the discussion. The Township Council reported that they were willing to form a suburban area to be served by the fire apparatus, and inquired what the city was prepared to ask for the service.

Alderman Turner explained the unfairness of the present scheme, since the township has the advantage of the apparatus, but only have to pay at the times when it is used.

Alderman Phelan figured that North Monaghan should have to contribute $6,000 annually for the service the city was giving. He estimated this on the supposition that the suburban area's population was one-sixth of the city. Since the annual appropriation toward running expenses of the Fire Brigade is about $32,000, he argued that North Monaghan should contribute the $6,000 as its share.

Alderman Turner stated that when the fire apparatus was giving protection to the $500,000 worth of proproperty in North Monaghan the protection over the $20,000,000 worth of property in the city was lessened.

Councillor Byers suggested that Alderman Turner was "belittling" the suburbs. "You must remember that the suburbs contribute a great deal to the city," he said.

"Yes, and you must remember that 35 per cent. of the employees of the C.G.E. live in North Monaghan and about 40 per cent. of the De Laval employees," said Alderman Cotton.

The adjournment was called with the North Monaghan deputation being sent away to set forth an area for fire protection and decide upon what proposition they were prepared to offer the city.

"If You Don't Feel Well Try Nu-Erb" Advises This Man

"No Excuse for Feeling Half Sick All the Time, Since This Medicine is Available," He Says.

"Dr. French's NU-ERB has surely done all that is claimed for it in my case, and if there is anybody who suffers from troubles such as I did they should, in my opinion, give Dr. French's NU-ERB a chance to help them," said Mr. James Austin, R. R. 6, Chatham, Ontario.

"For a number of years, my stomach had been in a disordered condition," states Mr. Austin, "and I have suffered much misery and distress because of gastritis, constipation and neuritis. My condition was so bad that it was really a burden for me to go about my work.

"But Dr. French's NU-ERB quickly relieved the situation and it only took a very short treatment of this wonderful medicine to entirely relieve the gastritis and put my whole system in such a healthy condition that all my troubles were at an end."

If you suffer from indigestion, gas in the stomach, acid risings, poor appetite, biliousness, dizzy spells, pains in the back, rheumatism, constipation or any one of the many symptoms of a disordered stomach, kidneys or bowels, then it is time that you heeded the advice of so many other local persons and started using Dr. French's NU-ERB, the great herbal medicine that is now being introduced in Peterborough at Bond's Drug Store.

Go to-day to see the NU-ERB Specialist now making his headquarters here and let him explain to you the merits of this remarkable medicine. His advice is Free. No obligation is involved.

MR. HEPBURN'S DECISION.

Rumors yesterday that Mitchel F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, was likely to be a candidate in the by-election in Norfolk were soon set at rest by the emphatic declaration of Mr. Hepburn himself that he felt bound to continue to represent West Elgin in the Federal Parliament, and by his pledge that when he entered the provincial lists it would be in his own county.

There are different opinions as to the wisdom of the Liberal leader in remaining aloof from the provincial arena after accepting the responsibility of leading his party in that field, but at all events Mr. Hepburn has a precedent for the course he is following.

Premier Tolmie of British Columbia, it will be remembered, was appointed leader of his party in that Province at a time when he was a member of the Federal House and he continued to hold office at Ottawa until the provincial elections arrived.

That election saw the Conservative party victorious and Mr. Tolmie became Premier, and in following the same policy Mr. Hepburn is undoubtedly hopeful that the British Columbia precedent will be followed out in its entirety, so that when he does enter the Provincial Legislature it will be as the head of a government rather than as leader of the opposition.

CO-OPERATION REQUIRED.

The amount of re-stocking that is being done in this section of Ontario this year by the Ontario Department of Fish and Game indicates that the efforts of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association to build up reserves of game fish are meeting with marked success.

It is unfortunately the case that unscrupulous people who pay no attention to fishery laws and who are short-sighted enough to be oblivious to the damage they are doing can offset the whole conservation campaign.

The taking of game fish during the spawning season, the catching of maskinonge and bass by people who are supposed to be engaged in catching suckers, the ignoring of the legal limit during the open season, and other similar violations of the fishery regulations all play their part in the depletion of the district's fish resources and do away with much of the benefit that should follow the re-stocking of local waters.

If the public would only play the game and second the efforts of those who are working with the single purpose of preserving a ready supply of game fish for the taking during the open season, conditions in regard to fishing in this part of the Province would show an immediate and marked improvement.

If this co-operation is not forthcoming it is only a question of time—and not a long time either—before the whole district will be completely "fished out."

SHOULD BE CAREFULLY INSPECTED.

Canadians are rapidly becoming air-minded; pilots who engage in short passenger-carrying flights are having no difficulty apparently in securing plenty of remunerative business.

In that connection it is presumed that the safety of the public is safeguarded by official inspection of the aircraft that is being used, and that only qualified pilots are allowed to handle the machines employed in these air joy-rides.

Only concerns with planes in perfect mechanical condition and in charge of experienced pilots should be allowed to embark in the air-passenger business, and if there are any which do not measure up to that standard it should be somebody's business to see that they cease operating before tragedy intervenes.

Nothing hurts the development of commercial aviation worse than crashes that take the lives of pilots and passengers, and it is in the interest, therefore, of everybody concerned with this latest form of transportation that the element of risk should as far as possible be eliminated.

Especial care should be taken to see that all those who are engaged in passenger flights are adequately equipped both as to aircraft and flying personnel.

There is too much at stake to warrant chance-taking in that regard.

WHERE THE FAULT LIES.

The special legislative committee of the Dominion Executive Council, Canadian Legion, in a report just issued declares that the present dissatisfaction with the operation of the new Pension Tribunals and Appeal Court has arisen from the wholesale appeal by Pension Commission counsel against tribunal decisions favoring the applicants.

The committee urges that the number of such appeals should be reduced to only those cases "in which there has been a flagrant misapprehension of the law."

With that suggestion, The Examiner is satisfied the majority of Canadians are in thorough accord.

The whole intent of Parliament last year in passing these regulations was that the ex-service man should get the benefit of the doubt in the hearing of pension cases, but the spirit of the law has been destroyed by the decision of the chief pension counsel to carry all cases in which the applicant has been successful to the Appeal Court.

The representatives of the Legion are making a reasonable request when they urge that only cases in which there has been an obvious error on the part of the Pension Tribunal should be appealed.

The present policy is tieing up the whole machinery and is disheartening to the disabled veterans, who see their hopes again dashed to the ground after a favorable disposition of their case by the Pension Tribunal.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN COMPLAINS.

Charlie Chaplin has exploded. Of recent days he has been staying in France, and it all happened when he was informed that his presence was required at some benefit performance in England.

Charlie says the people in England are hypocrites because they went out of their way to make a fool over him recently, while 17 years ago they would have nothing to do with him. Since then he has been in the movies in United States, he has become famous, and now it is impressed upon him that he has a duty to perform on behalf of England. So Charlie says a loud Bah!

Mr. Chaplin has nothing to kick about at all, because this old world has been doing the same thing for years, and it will continue to do it. It's the same as the young man who leaves his home town because he can't find anything to do. He strays far away and finally strikes his gait and succeeds. Some sort of homing instinct brings him back to the old town in after years; the folk hear he is coming and the brass band toots sweetly as he arrives at the village square. The reeve reads an address of welcome, and all the old folk recall that they knew him well when he was a boy, and every last one of them was cock sure that boy would get along all right.

Does the feted one say Bah! as Charlie Chaplin has done? Not by a long shot. He's tickled pink that the old town is proud of him, and the chances are before he leaves he draws up a paper leaving a fund for putting in a band stand on the village green to bear his name.

Charlie Chaplin is in the same class. He had to fight his way through from an ordinary custard-pie actor to the premier class of comedians. If the people in England refused to acclaim him seventeen years ago he should have sense enough to realize that at that time he was not worth acclaiming.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS.

The Congress in Washington, last week, of the International Chamber of Commerce, as was generally said: "The chamber has not come to any definite policy definite results. One thousand representatives from all the leading countries of the world were gathered together to discuss international problems and, if possible, to find a remedy for the present economic depression. The conflicting claims of the numerous delegations, however, made it impossible to unite on any clearly defined policy. A Japanese delegate expressed the general opinion very briefly and cogently when he said: "The chamber has not come to any definite policy for meeting the world crisis, but everybody now knows and understands the importance of the present situation, and we are all in the same boat."

There seemed to be a very strong conviction on the part of overseas delegates that the payment of war debts and the prevailing high tariffs were responsible for a large portion of the present world-wide depression. The payment of war debts and reparations has resulted in the accumulation of vast deposits of gold in the vaults at Paris and Washington, and the high tariffs proved to be insuperable barriers to the progress of international trade. As the delegates who believed in these doctrines were the guests of the United States Government, discretion made it necessary not to press the discussion of these questions. A United States Senator made a remark that indicated how inflammable the discussion of these questions might have been: "A most unique scene—two hundred foreign bankers and manufacturers deciding what Congress should do for the enrichment of foreigners." Nevertheless there was enough plain talking on the tariff, reparations and war debts to let the Governments of the world know what the prevailing opinion is on these problems.—Brantford Expositor.

HOSPITAL SWEEPSTAKES.

While we appreciate the fact that some persons look with horror upon any form of gambling, we are unable to see any objection to Senator Barnard's bill in the Upper House providing for the legalization of hospital sweepstakes in Canada. The Irish Free State has achieved great success with this plan.

A sweepstake, of course, is a form of lottery, with thousands and thousands of tickets sold on the chance of drawing various prizes on some one or other outstanding annual horse race, such as the King's Plate, which is run every year at the Woodbine, Toronto. Sweepstakes have no legal status in Canada, at present, though thousands of Canadians annually buy sweepstake tickets. Under Senator Barnard's plan, sweepstakes could be conducted in aid of hospital funds. Huge sums could undoubtedly be raised in this way, because a sweepstake with a legal backing and Government supervision would attract widespread patronage in both Canada and the United States.

There are two or three points that seem to stand out in this matter. One of them is the fact that the "take a chance" instinct is found in nearly every one. Some persons who would refuse to bet on a horse race, think nothing at all of gambling on the stock market or in the wheat pit. A second point is that there is nothing morally wrong with the wager or sweepstake principle. Ten men each put 10 cents apiece on a table. A lucky number is drawn. One of the men wins a dollar. They all knew when they invested the dime that each had one chance in 10, that only one could win. So with buying a hospital sweepstake ticket. These would be sold, say, at a dollar each. No one would be under any appreciable expense, everyone would have the same chance for a big prize, and worthy institutions would secure the large sums of money that are necessary to their development.

It will be interesting to see how the House of Commons reacts to the bill.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Week-end tragedies again loomed large in yesterday's news. Sunday has become a day of dread to many motorists.

Tommy Church may be out of politics, but he is still very much in the political limelight.

The Globe thinks that if Hon. G. H. Ferguson makes a success of his wheat conference Canada will forget all about his indiscreet speech. That is, we presume, all of Canada outside the walls of Parliament.

There is a little pardonable curiosity as to what pictures Mr. Bennett was drawing as he listened to Mr. King's speech the other day.

Gabriel D'Annunzio has his own way of dealing with cameramen. He throws bricks at them, which is perhaps more merciful than writing poems about them.

Rumors persist that Mr. Bennett will seek the additional revenue his Goverament requires through the medium of the sales tax. That is to be preferred to the turn-over tax once hinted at as a possibility.

Tommy Church predicts that Hon. W. H. Price will capture the Conservative convention. In other words, he sees a detour ahead for the Minister of Highways.

It is now conceded to be possible that there are plants on Mars. It is to be hoped that they are operating more vigorously than some other plants on this planet.—Brantford Expositor.

SECRET PLACES

BY

JOAN SUTHERLAND

INSTALMENT III.

Later, when Staire was sitting beside her, Toni saw her sister, Greta, dancing with a big, heavy-looking man, who watched her as he danced with a look not pleasant to see.

Staire, observing them as did many others in the room, said casually: "Where in the world did that lovely creature pick up D'Arblaye?"

Toni shot him a quick glance.

"That 'lovely creature' is my sister, Greta," she said. "She is supposed to be at home with a headache."

"Your sister? Ronnie's wife?" Staire's tone was amazed. "But—forgive me—but does Ronnie know D'Arblaye well?"

"I don't know. He's Greta's friend. But who is D'Arblaye anyway and what s his reputation?"

"He is a wealthy South American who pretends to be a Frenchman, and has a flat in the rue la Boetie. He manages to scrape along in a certain set, but his reputation is vile—please tell your sister—warn her—"

"She might be intrigued," Toni said slowly. "Mr. Staire, are you sure he's impossible? We're 1930 you know."

"If you were 1950 it would make no difference," he said. "There are plenty of men who go everywhere, do pretty well everything, but this man is different. And your sister is lovely."

"Yes. Isn't she?" Toni's voice was heartfelt. "But she goes her own way, you know. It's going to be difficult."

Staire nodded. "I expect it is. And I don't ask you to take my unsupported word. There are plenty of others who—"

"I am prepared to take it," Toni interrupted, and suddenly that lovely faint color dyed her face once again, and Staire, his eyes on hers, leaned a little forward.

"You darling!" he said just under his breath. "Come let's dance again—" and Toni sprang to her feet.

To Staire that dance was a whirl of conflicting emotions, lacking the sheer physical pleasure of the early part of the evening, for Toni's personality had disturbed him to the very depths, and in addition to that disturbance—half-pleasure, half-pain—was the shock of finding out about his friend's wife. For Ronald and he, friends of many year's standing, had not met since the latter's marriage until the day, now months past, in the Calais train. The tie between the two men was a close one, born of many experiences shared, both bad and good, in war, in peace, and earlier still at school and the university.

Ronald had spoken enthusiastically of his marriage to Greta Wareham, and Staire had looked forward to meeting her, hoping she was good enough for his friend, and doubting whether any woman was; now he doubted no longer; he was sure; and he saw tragedy ahead for both.

Yet here, for the moment in his arms, was the girl he had watched and intended to know, impetuous, attractive, modern of the moderns, yet with so much more warmth and cham than most, and full to the brim of vitality and youth. Putting away his foreboding about his friend he gave himself to the enjoyment of her presence.

"Where have you been all the while lately?" he asked, looking down at her. "I've tried to find you, but you'd vanished."

"I've been in America, staying with my mother's sister. She married an American from the South. I've had a wow of a time! You came just as I left Paris."

"I was in Madrid, but I've been in London and Paris at intervals. Yes, I expect you have had a good time. Are you glad to be back?"

"Yes—now."

He looked at her sharply and his arm tightened about her.

"What exactly does that mean?" he demanded, and Toni raised her eyebrows.

"Just what you choose to think!" she retorted, and he laughed under his breath and held her closer.

"You tantalizing little devil. Don't you know how I feel about you?"

"How should I?" Toni said demurely. "I've only known you two hours!"

"I've known a good deal about you for six months—wasted months. Will you come out to lunch with me to-morrow, Toni?"

She lifted her heavy lids, her eyes deliberately mocking him.

"Is this your usual line of technique?"

"No. But I don't want to waste time on preliminaries—with you!"

"How many women do you talk to like this?"

"Why—women?"

"Well, I don't think girls usually are in your line."

"They're not, but, will you, Toni?"

Unexpectedly the mockery in her eyes faded; she met his look steadily.

"I'll call you up at ten, and perhaps we might run out to the country for dejeuner," he said as they crossed the floor.

When he had made his farewells and was walking home through the hot, still night, he contemplated his behaviour with amazement; it was not like him to be so powerfully attracted to any woman—least of all to a young girl—and even while he tried to disguise his feelings to himself, he realized that such an attempt was folly. This was no casual attraction, but something far deeper—this feeling that had awakened when he had first seen Toni riding, that had driven him to seek her out, that had disturbed him until he had arranged a meeting. Stopping short in the deserted street he looked up at the stars, dim and yellow through the heat haze, aware that something tremendous had happened to him—aware that at last he had fallen in love.

"This is simply marvellous!" Toni's voice, lazily content, came from the depths of a hammock slung between two sweet-scented lime-trees, and Toni's gaze rested on the green canopy over her head throgh which, when the breeze stirred it, glimpses of sky were visible, hot and blue and clear. Close beside the hammock was a rough little table; on the table stood a tray with coffee, and by the table and facing her sat Feodor Staire. Dejeuner was over. Outside the garden of this little Versailles restaurant Feodor's powerful car waited for their return to Paris, and neither of them stirred—desiring to cling to the few minutes of this most delightful hour.

At Toni's remark, the first since she had dropped into the hammock, three or four minutes before, Feodor smiled, and when he smiled the harsh lines about his mouth faded and the coldness of his eyes warmed and softened. Leaning a little forward he spoke.

"You've enjoyed it, Toni?"

"It's been perfect. How did you find this place?"

"Prowling along one day last spring when I was alone. You've been happy with me, Toni?"

Something in his tone disturbed her; she looked at him with sudden perplexity. "Yes," she said rather slowly. "Very happy. Why?"

Fodor leaned forward suddenly, and pulling her hands down from behind her head drew her to her feet.

"Because I love you," he said, his voice suddenly low and thick. "I love you with all my body and soul. I want you for my own—mine—always. Toni—marry me!"

He was crushing her in his arms and Toni, after that first wild thrill of amazement, felt her strength leave her—she felt herself slipping—slipping away from all realities, stifling in an ecstasy that was mounting like a torrent of fire through nerves and veins—her hands struggling free clasped themselves around his neck. She tried to speak, could not and lifted her lips to meet his.

A waiter coming through the tall hedge of lilacs to bring the bill as directed, stopped short, and being a sympathetic Frenchman, stole back with infinite caution. The small dog belonging to the inn was not so tactful, but barked vigorously at the sight of so much human delight, and Toni started back, freeing herself with an effort, and stood staring at Feodor with eyes like stars and cheeks flaming.

Not until they were in his car on the way back to Paris by the roundabout way of the Saint Germain road and Malmaison, did either of them become very coherent; Toni being overwhelmed by sheer primitive emotion—she who so prided herself on being modern, and therefore regarded love as an outworn shibboleth masking the overworked cliche of "sex attraction."

As for Staire, he was perhaps even more bewildered than she, for in all his thirty-six years he had never contemplated behaving as he had done. A wealthy backelor, with rather a remarkable ability in his profession, plenty of influence, family and otherwise, a fine war record and a magnetic personality, Feodore Staire—son of an English father and a Russian mother—had received more than his share of blessings from the gods, and had been quite determined to remain as he was—free.

He had lived life to its fullest extent, knew his world very thoroughly, had had one or two fairly serious affaires de coeur, and now had fallen desperately in love with this young girl—a girl he had met only twenty-four hours ago—was about to marry her, and instead of doubts and fears, joy surged through him. She was so alert, so vital, so generous in her response—glancing swiftly sideways as he drove he met her eyes searching his face, and smiled—a smile no one in all his world had ever seen before on his face.

"What is it, dear?" he said. "What are you thinking of?"

Toni's answer came swift and eager: "Of you—it's so wonderful! I've laughed and sneered so often—and now—I realize I knew just nothing of life at all, because you weren't in it—"

Tears rushed to his eyes, dazzling him, tears of fire and tenderness, and as he blinked them away he laughed a little unsteadily.

"You mustn't say those things to me at a time like this; I can't stand it, you adorable child—I'm afraid I am dreaming, and that I shall wake up to find you just the golden will-o'-the-wisp that I have searched for all these months. All my life!"

"All your life?" Toni echoed. "All your life? But—"

"It was six months ago that I first saw you in London," he said. "I'll tell you about it another time. I never forgot you."

"It's so wonderful," Toni repeated, half under her breath, "only, Feodor—I'm not a child any longer. I'm a woman. I love you."

Cutting through the side streets from the Avenue Bois de Boulogne to the Avenue Henri Martin, where Lady Alice Wareham's apartment was, Toni said suddenly: "We're going to the Bal Masque at the Opera to-night. The big charity one. Will you be able to come?"

"Not till late. There is an affair at the Embassy to-night that I must attend, but I'll come some time, even if it's not till morning, if you're going to be there."

She laughed, a little triumphant, happy laugh, hardly able to believe that she could so order his life by her wishes.

"We're none of us going in fancy dress, only just masked," she said. "Will you really come, Feodor?"

War Tangle Ended

Alfred R. Ermekeil, who enlisted three times under three fictitious names in two armies during the war without having been discharged at any time, has had his war service tangle straightened out by Ottawa and granted a raise of pension. He won the military medal and D.C.M. in Canadian forces.

What To-day Means To You.

"TAURUS"

If May 19th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., from 4 p.m. to 5:50 p.m. and from 8:35 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. The danger hours are from 8:45 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., and from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The astrological signs of May 19th indicate strange and curious influences, which are apt to bring about sweeping changes in plans to which you are practically committed. Delay in consummation may be anticipated; nothing should be rushed, as there is danger in precipitancy.

A child born on this May 19th, will have rather a melancholy temperament and should be schooled to see the humorous aspect of life. It will never achieve much success, always being afraid of itself or of "coming a cropper." It will work only well along conservative lines.

Born on May 19th, your tastes are rather fastidious, and you are not what the world calls a "good mixer." Notwithstanding certain lack of congeniality and spontaniety, your horoscope indicates a large measure of success, as a result of your straightforwardness, your direct methods, and your sound judgment. One thing, however, is certain: you will never progress unless allowed to choose your own field of endeavor and to elect your own associates.

You are altruistic and incapable of mean thoughts or underhand actions. You never aim to "put one over" on your neighbor, and quickly detect and resent any effort on your neighbor's part to "put one over" on you. Dependability is also one of your strong assets, and you would rather "crash" than let down anyone who confides in you.

Your disposition is affectionate. The probability is that, only later in life, will you find "the one," who, in your opinion, is capable of "filling the bill." When such a one is discovered, and the attraction is reciprocal, a sure and lasting union will result, and harmony will be undisturbed by change of conditions or circumstances. Your home, then, will be your chief joy, and you will never fail in trying to make pleasant its surroundings and atmosphere.

EXPERT WORK ON ALL MOTORS

William L. Abbott Prepared to Do All Kinds of Electrical Work.

REPAIRING GENERATORS.

Mr. William L. Abbott is known throughout this section for his high class workmanship and his shop as a place where dependable merchandise may be bought. He rewinds motors and generators, handles new commutators, has new and second hand motors and does all kinds of electrical repair work. He is well equipped and thoroughly experienced in all phases of industrial electrical and motor repair work. He is prepared to change the voltage or speed or to redesign motors of any kind for new conditions, regardless of the size of the job.

The proper methods of repairing generators or electric motors require an accurate knowledge of one branch of electrical engineering. This one branch is sufficiently broad in its scope to require a lifetime of experience. A man with such knowledge and ability can, and often does, perform feats that to the layman seems impossible. He can in this way sometimes make a temporary repair that will keep a factory going until another motor can be secured or the damaged unit properly repaired. This is the type of work that has been so successfully accomplished by Mr. William L. Abbott. The men employed by him are motor engineers of ability who understand all the little intricacies of this very scientific part of the construction of motors and generators. No matter what your problem may be, you will find it to your interest to consult with Mr. Abbott. Through his services you are assured of obtaining the greatest amount of electrical power per dollar invested.

At Mr. Abbott's shop you may see and have explained many things that you do not understand about electrical equipment. Mr. Abbott is a well known and reliable business man of Peterborough who takes an active part in the upbuilding of the community. We wish to commend him upon his success in the field of electrical engineering and repairs. Do you know how long Mr. William L. Abbott has been in business in Peterborough?

$500 is Awarded Cobourg Residents

COBOURG, Ont., May 19 (C. P.). — Five hundred dollars was apportioned by the Canadian Bankers' Association among local citizens who captured the three hold-up men who robbed the Dominion Bank here of $1,685 on February 17. The four who figured most prominently in the capture were awarded as follows: Cecil Wilson $125, G. Rorabeck, L. Taylor, W. Throope, $100 each. M. Margies, S. Newton, and H. Wicks, $25.00 each.

INTER-LISTED ISSUES DISPLAY STRONGER TONE THIS MORNING

Oils, as a Group Are Weaker in To-day's Session on Toronto Exchange.

MINOR IRREGULARITIES.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19.—(CP)—A carry-over of liquidation from last night bore heavily on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning and declines were general the first hour. Later the leaders, especially the inter-listed issues, rallied from their opening lows and, with minor irregularities, held during the remainder of the morning. The greater part of the selling came from New York, though it was augmented by liquidation on the part of holders of cash securities easily stampeded.

Oils, as a group, were weakest with B.A. oil equalling its old low of 10, Imperial selling at a new low of 11 1-8, International Petroleum at a new low of 10⅞.

International Nickel sold at 11½ then picked up to 12. Noranda at midday was unchanged at 21½ while Smelters was at a new low of 88.

Montreal Power lost a point to a new 1931 low of 50, Brazilian and C.P.R. were fractionally strong, Bell Telephone unchanged at 140, Ford of Canada recovered to around 19. The foods were soft and down fractionally as were the steels with Steel of Canada at a new bottom price of 27½.

Bank stocks were soft, showing losses of from 1 to 3 points.

WIELDS HAMMER GETS 3 MONTHS

Sudbury Workman Claims He Was Attacked in His Own Home.

WIFE IN DISPUTE.

SUDBURY, Ont., May 19. (CP)—Tauno Saari, 20, Bessie Street, was sentenced to three months determinate and nine months indeterminate by Magistrate McKessock on a charge of occasioning bodily harm to Valpo Jarvinen early yesterday.

Jarvinen claimed that he came home in the forenoon and saw Saari with his wife

Saari came out of the room, he said, and attacked him with a hammer without a word being spoken. He claimed that Saari had been at his house with his wife several times before.

Accused said Jarvinen had the hammer and that he had only struck Jarvinen with his fist.

Pleasing Program At Vocal Recital

A very attractive recital of songs was given in the Conservatory of Music on Monday evening by four young singers from the studio of Dorothy Allan Park, assisted by Jack McKone, violin pupil of Dean Miner. The singers were Eleanor Brown, Isabel Wedell, Elizabeth Barrick and Florence Glenney and a high standard of performance was maintained throughout the evening, and the young vocalists greatly pleased a large and interested audience. Agnes Logan Green, Dorothy Allan Park, and Mrs. David Howat supplied the accompaniments.

Conversion Loan Is Oversubscribed

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19. (CP)—While no official statement has been made, it is estimated that the $250,000,000 "Bennett conversion loan" has been subscribed close to $500,000,000. The unprecedented success of this loan is evidenced by the number of subscriptions which are now coming in from small holders of 1931, 32, 33 and 34 bonds who are now turning them in for the new issue. Most of the subscriptions this week have been from small holders scattered throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion anxious to participate in the new loan.

Reds Get Long Terms In French Indo China

PARIS, May 19.—(A.P.)—A Havas dispatch from Hanoi, French Indo-China, says long prison terms have been given Communist revolutionists following a three-day trial at which it was revealed that Communist plots in Indo-China were directed from Canton.

The chief of the Saigon communists was sentenced to life imprisonment for participation in the assassination of a native foreman of the French administration. Five others were given twenty years, seven were sentenced to fifteen years, and forty-three from five to ten years.

An alleged plot to assassinate Governor-General Squier at Saigon was revealed during the trials.

ADVANCE WIPES OUT EARLY LOSS

While Weakness Still Prevailing Note, Declines Not as Important as Monday.

ON STANDARD LIST.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19. (CP)—Weakness was still the prevailing note on the mining market in the forenoon to-day. Relatively speaking, price declines were not as important as yesterday, a recovery towards mid-day wiping out a part of the opening losses.

Teck-Hughes was under heavy selling pressure for a time, price dropping to $7. A subsequent rally carried it back to $7.25, off a few cents from the preceding close. McIntyre was down a half to $22.15. Hollinger 10 and Wright-Hargreaves 5. Lake Shore, reflecting declaration of a dividend and bonus amounting to 60 cents a share, advanced 15 to $27.90. Losses of a cent or so were practically general among the active lower-priced golds.

International Nickel established a new low of $11,50 and at noon was selling at $11.75, off a quarter. Noranda was fairly steady and balance of the base metals quiet. Sarnia recovered a couple, but other cheaper oils were dull with a slightly easier tendency.

MORNING GAINS ARE LOST LATER

Several Rail Issues Advance 2 or 3 Points as Selling Pressure Lifted.

ACTIVITY DIES OUT.

(By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19.—The stock market was given respite from selling pressure, after eight sessions of almost steady decline, during the early hours of to-day's session, but a few isolated weakspots cropped out during the afternoon, and the market again turned soggy.

The lifting of pressure against the rails was a notable development during the morning, and several issues rallied 2 or 3 points. Several prominent industrials were also carried higher, but lost their gains as selling appeared in a few selected issues after midday. The upturn of the morning was negotiated in active trading, transfers in the first half hour aggregating 500,000 shares, but the market turned dull as the session wore on.

United States Steel rose 1¼ points to 100¼, then slipped off a couple of points from the top. American Can sold up 2 points, then lost its gain, and 2-point advances in National Biscuit and Westinghouse Electric were modified.

TRAIL OF DAMAGE

ploded in the air directly in front of the large window and it is thought that the explosion caused a vacuum and that the glass was actually sucked out of the metal frame which was twisted and torn from the concrete base. There was no damage inside the store.

One of the power transformers which was struck and set on fire was just a few feet from St. Joseph's Hospital, but the hospital itself escaped undamaged.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19.—The United Farmers Co-operative Company to-day supplied to the Canadian press the following quotations for produce delivered at Toronto.

Eggs, extras, doz., 17c; eggs, firsts, doz., 15c; cream, churning, No. 1, per lb., 20c; creamery butter, No. 1, solids, lb., 20c. Potatoes, No. 1, in bags, 70c.

SHARP DECLINE IN MONTREAL POWER

Brazilian and Nickel Display Firm Tone in Large Turnover.

MONTREAL, Que., May 19 (CP)—Liquidation continued heavy on the Montreal stock market this morning, but particularly in Montreal power which was by long odds the most active feature. There was a large turnover in Brazilian Traction and International Nickel as well but these displayed a firm tone. Nickel opened 1-8 lower at 11⅝ but later more than made up the losses. Brazilian was maintained at 14 or better throughout the morning compared with yesterday's low of 13¾.

Montreal Power, which closed at the low of 40 3-8 yesterday down from 51 1-8, opened heavy at 49¾ and it was evident from the outpouring of stock in the first few minutes that there was considerable liquidation coming from some quarter. In the second hour the price rallied to 50¼ but later on weakened again to a new low at 49⅝.

C.P.R. Shawinigan and National Breweries were moderately active. The only one of this trio to go lower was Shawinigan which eased ¼ to 40¾. C.P.R. opened even with its low at 25¼ and later rallied fractionally while Breweries held at 28 even with yesterday's close.

Dominion Glass fell two to 98 and Smelters touched 88, down 1½ although odd lots sold lower.

PRICE OF MILK DISCUSSED BY HEALTH BOARD

Too Great a Spread Between Consumers' and Producers' Price.

DECLARED A CRIME.

Producers Are Afraid That They Will Be the Ones to Suffer.

That the spread between the wholesale and retail price of milk in Peterborough is too great, was the statement made to-day by Mayor Denne at a meeting of the Board of Health.

"Either the consumers are being overcharged, or the milk producers are not getting enough," explained the Mayor. "Dairies in the city are paying producers about three cents a quart for milk and retailing it at ten cents a quart, a spread of seven cents."

"That's a crime," exclaimed Dr. J. M. O'Brien, a member of the Board.

The question of the spread in milk producers' prices arose when Inspector Charles Stapleton reported that he had three applications from milk producers for the right to peddle their product themselves.

The Examiner learned from one milk producer that the spread in the price of milk is now greater than it was during the war days. "Then it was about five cents a quart, and everyone seemed to be able to handle it and make a fair profit," he stated.

To-day, the same man said, the spread between the price the dairies pay for the milk when it is brought in by the producer and that which the housewife pays at the kitchen door is not less than 6½ cents a quart.

The Examiner could not learn the prevailing price paid per quart for milk by the dairies. When asked his price for raw milk one dairy manager evaded the question, stating, "I have no price."

Milk producers do not desire to discuss the situation, although they admit that an injustice exists, The Examiner found. One man stated that if the subject was opened up and the retail price was brought down the producers would be the ones to suffer, since the dairies would cut the price paid to the producers to correspond with the reduction to the consumer.

"Ten cents a quart is not too much for milk, when the cost of producing the milk is taken into consideration' stated one milk producer. "The lamentable feature is the fact that the producers are not getting their fair share."

The Examiner learned from one milk producer that he was paid yesterday by one of the dairies $1.46 a hundred for 3.3 milk—an average grade. This works out at about 3½ cents a quart.

Again The Examiner was told that if the subject was opened up the producers would likely be the ones to suffer by any reduction in the retail price. "The distributors have gained control and they are able to dictate to the producers," he said. "In Toronto there was an investigation and afterward it was the producers that got the short end of the stick."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19.—Prime mercantile paper 2-2¼ per cent.

Foreign exchange irregular; demand rates (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents): Great Britain 4.86 13-32; France, 3.91 1-8; Italy, 5.23 3-16; Germany, 23.80¼. Canadian dollar at 5-64 of one per cent discount.

LONDON RAIL MEN ACCEPT REDUCTION

Action Under Protest By Members of Union—Three Cents an Hour Cut.

LONDON, Ont., May 19 (C.P.) — By a small majority, nearly 200 employees of the London Street Railway Company to-day voted to accept a reduction in wages of three cents an hour as proposed by the management, although the action was under protest and an immediate appeal will be filed with the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board for an independent audit. John Parker, vice-president of the International Union, who addressed the general meeting held in the Foresters' Hall, East London, was authorized to interview the Railway Commissioners and present the local union's case.

The meeting opened at 9 o'clock to permit all employees coming off duty at midnight to attend. Officials of the union, in a statement to the press, said that a strike had been averted by the narrowest of margins.

BAD STORM HITS NEAR BELLEVILLE

Barn Struck and Burned—Stock Lost—Transformers Blown Out.

LASTS FOUR HOURS.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., May 10. (CP) Hail and torrential rains fell in quantity early to-day when a severe electric storm lasting more than four hours visited the district. A number of buildings and transformers were struck and transformers blown out. A large barn owned by Basil Ainsworth located on fourth concession of Hillier Township in Prince Edward County was struck and destroyed. Two calves and one pig and a full line of machinery were lost.

A quantity of furniture stored in the barn was also destroyed. The loss is estimated at five thousand dollars, partially covered by insurance.

MARKET CLOSING ON EXCHANGES

Noranda was under selling pressure with price off nearly a point to $20.60 on end. International Nickel, establishing a new low of $11.50, closed off a quarter at $11.75. Sherritt Gordon eased a couple but other Lindsleys were quiet.

Wright-Hargreaves was a soft spot in the gold section, falling to $2.70 for a net loss of 16. Teck Hughes, touching $7, closed off 15 at $7.15, and Hollinger was down a like amount to $7.10. Minor recessions were scattered throughout the balance of the group. Lake Shore, on the strength of the bonds declaration, firmed a few cents.

Oils were relatively steady and dull, though Acme Gas, in which rights to purchase new stock expire to-morrow, was off a cent or so.

WALL STREET CLOSE

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19 (C.P.) —The stock market tired quickly after a mid-session rally to-day and turned downward again in the late trading. Merchandang and amusement issues were prominent on the decline, which carried U. S. Steel down 2 points net to a new low. Rails, after firming in the earlier hours, lost their gains. Issues down 1⅛ to 3 points net included Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Safeway Stores, Korger, Fox, Warner Bros., and Paramount. Case dropped 6 and Eastman and Ingersoll Rand 5. Union Pacific more than lost a rise of nearly 4. Sales exceeded 2,500,000 shares.

Too Many Aged Men In Active Ministry

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (C.P.). — The implication that there is not only a surplus of ministers over pastoral charges but that there are too many ministers past the retiring age and a number of pastors whose inefficiency is hindering the work of the church, was drawn to the attention of the Toronto Central Presbytery of the United Church at the monthly meeting held in Westminster United Church to-day.

While the communication dealt particularly with conditions in the West, referred to by the General Council of the Saskatchewan and Alberta Conferences, the Toronto Central Presbytery took the meaning from it that it was a warning to the whole church.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., May 19.—(C. P.)—The possibility of foul play in the death of Mitchell B. Kaufman, wealthy Massachusetts manufacturer, whose body was reported found near St. Theophile, Quebec, last night, was being investigated to-day by Sheriff N. H. Markham.

Kaufman disappeared last November 5, while hunting deer in the woods near Jackman with four companions and two guides.

COUNCIL CALLS POLICE OFFICER

Action Taken in St. Catharines When Citizens Refuse to Leave Chamber.

MAYOR DEFIED.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., May 19 (C.P.). — A slight disturbance at the close of the meeting of the City Council last evening resulted in the calling of a police officer to enforce the ruling of Mayor F. C. McCordick that the citizens assembled leave the Council Chamber during a short session of the Finance Committee.

The Council had adjourned and several minutes had passed with the members of Council waiting to go into Finance Committee, when Thomas H. Truman, secretary of St. Catharines Ratepayers' Association, started to address the Council. He was interrupted by Mayor McCordick and advised that the Council had adjourned and the Finance Committee desired to meet.

Another citizen declared that he had a right to attend any committee meeting and declared he would refuse to leave the Council Chamber. When the police officer was called, all departed.

Winnipeg Review

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Bawlf Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Wheat: Following the general rains, from light to moderate, throughout Western Canada the past 48 hours, with more precipitation being received yesterday by way of snow or showers, the wheat market was quite heavy yesterday with liquidation some wheat however, that was to be expected and prices broke about 1¾ cents under the close on Saturday. Export sales over the week-end were quite small and disappointing but there was a little buying by continental houses on the scale down yesterday morning and a little buying against the daily bids which caused a reaction of about half a cent from the earlier low marks, but even this small upturn was difficult to hold as offerings generally increased. However, around the low marks, there was very little for sale which held the market from further declines. The Chicago market also broke from 1¾ to 1½ cents, part of which was recovered, while corn made new lows for the year. The stock market was generally weak and lower, U.S. Steel making new lows at 99¾. Liverpool closed ½ to 1¼ lower, and Buenos Aireswas ½ to ¾ lower at mid-day. The demand for cash wheat was generally quiet with spreads about unchanged and offerings not pressing. There was a little better inquiry for some tough grades. The flour trade continues generally quiet with practically nothing doing in export circles. The Canadian visible supply of wheat decreased 2,843,000 bushels while the U.S. visible decreased 2,148,000 bushels. The world shipments the past week were large, being 19,960,000 bushels, but on passage supplies increased 5,369,000 bushels. Country marketings in the west on Saturday were 292,000 bushels, last year 127,000 bushels. The barometer was a little higher this morning indicating clearing conditions, but most districts received sufficient moisture for the time being. Winnipeg futures closed 1 3-8 to 1½ lower.

Coarse Grains: These markets held fairly steady considering the weakness in wheat and corn, but all were lower. There was a little export business in barley, but otherwise the coarse grains were quiet with some scattered liquidation going on in the futures. Oats closed ½ to ⅝ lower, barley ¾ to lower and rye 3-8 lower.

Liverpool due ¼ on July and 1-8 lower on October based on Winnipeg.

INDIA GOVERNMENT LOAN

LONDON, May 19. (C. P. Cable)—Some surprise was created in the financial district today by announcement of a six percent loan of $50,000,000 for the government of India. It will be issued at 100, redeemable in 1933 and 1934 and is being underwritten to-day. The last loan was received with great success.

Savants Assembling For Meet In Toronto

TORONTO, Ont., May 19.—(CP)—Outstanding savants of Canada are assembling in Toronto today for the opening tomorrow of the meeting of the Royal Society of Canada. The Dominion's most distinguished students of the sciences and arts will deliver more than 100 addresses setting forth the results of their studies and investigations. Men who have devoted months and years of study to some scientific problem will report their progress. It is expected several advances of considerable importance will be disclosed.

Tonight the council of the society meets in preparation for the general sessions, and tomorrow morning registration will commence at Convocation Hall, at the University of Toronto. Following a banquet in Hart House in the evening, scientific awards will be presented in Hart House theatre and Dr. Charles Cansell, Deputy-Minister of Mines for Canada, will deliver his presidential address.

St. Vincent's Tag Day On Saturday Next

Date Was Confused and Public Asked to Remember Saturday, May 23rd.

Through some misapprehension, the public and the newspaper as well were of the opinion that St. Vincent's orphanage tag day was to be held on Saturday last. At the good suggestion of the City Council, owing to two previous tag days a short while ago, those in charge of St. Vincent's tag day were advised to hold it on Saturday, May 23rd and it will be on this day that tag day will be held.

All citizens know the value to the city of St. Vincent"s orphanage and are kindly asked to be as liberal as their finances will permit when the young ladies present a tag to them.

Rice Gives Evidence Before Committee

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—Gitz Rice, author of many musical hits of a popular nature during and after the war, did not make a cent out of one of his greatest successes, "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," He told the House of Commons committee which is studying the amendments to the Copyright Act to-day. Another "hit," "Dear Old Pal of Mine," he had had to sue gramophone companies in the United States courts in order to recover damages for infringement of copyright. Litigation dragged on for years, and eventually he was awarded $11,000.

"After all the lawyers' fees were paid," commented Mr. Rice, "I didn't have anything left."

The authors and composers were obliged to unite against the depredations of the wealthier and more powerful interests, he declared. Their only protection lay in union.

Mr. Rice said he was the son of a choir-master in Glasgow, Scotland. He always gave his compositions to the churches, "because they expected them for nothing."

Only Four Nations Protest U.S. Tariff

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19.—(A.P.)— Evidence that foreign governments and producers are slow to take advantage of the new United States' tariff low provision permitting them to petition the tariff commission for rate relief is seen by commission officials.

Although approximately 75 protests originating in more than 30 countries were received while the Hawley-Smoot Act was before Congress, commission records show manufacturers of only four nations have applied for duty cuts on a dozen commodities since the new law became operative ten months ago.

Countries from which reduction petitions have come are Holland, Argentina, Switzerland and France

BASLE BUSINESS QUICKLY SETTLED

Dividend of 6 Per Cent Voted By Bank of International Settlements Directors.

Recommendations Approved.

BASLE, Switzerland, May 19 (A.P.) —It took only thirty-five minutes today for the central bankers and other delegates from twenty-four nations to settle their business at a meeting of stockholders in the Bank for International Settlements.

Since his report had previously been submitted, President Gates W. McGarrah confined his remarks to a brief speech of welcome. When he asked for discussion, nobody had anything to say and in rapid succession his report was adopted. A dividend of six per cent was voted, and his other recommendations were approved. Then the general meeting was adjourned.

Mr. McGarrah's report summed up the activities of the fiscal year, tracing the bank's growth from seven shareholders to twenty-three and from deposits totalling 220,000,000 Swiss francs with assets and liabilities of 300,000,000 to deposits of 1,780,000,000 and total assets and liabilities of 1,900,000,000 last March 31. The Swiss franc is worth a little more than nineteen cents.

Net profits totalled 11,186,521 Swiss francs, division of which he recommended as follows: Legal reserve fund 559,326 francs; Dividend at six per cent for the period respective dates of payment of capital stock and March 31, 5,156,250 francs; Special dividend reserve fund for use in maintaining the cumulative six per cent dividend 1,094,189 francs; General reserve fund, 2,188,378 francs.

ROUTE BOYS ENJOY SUMMER CARNIVAL

Large Crowd at First Appearance of Carnival Shows.

Through the kindness of the management of Sims Greater Shows, the route boys carrying The Examiner were the guests of the shows last evening and thoroughly enjoyed themselves on the rides and in the shows.

The Sims Greater Shows present a spic and span appearance—one of the cleanest that has appeared at the Fair Grounds—and hundreds will be in attendance every night.

The boys desire to thank the management for their kindness to them last evening.

Thomas Keeps Mum On Economic Parley

LONDON, May 19 (C.P. Cable)—Conservatives again plied Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominion Affairs, with queries regarding the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa at question time in the House of Commons to-day.

Asked whether the representatives of Great Britain had been appointed; what preparations for the conference were under way in this country, and whether the Government intended to propose any definite measure of Empire economic reference, Mr. Thomas replied he was not yet in a position to add anything to his previous statements.

REDUCES RATE

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19. (CP)—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York to-day reduced its buying rate on acceptances by ¼ of 1 percent to 1 percent to 1 percent for bills maturing in sixteen to ninety days.

The reduction is the fifth downward revision in less than four weeks as quotations on acceptances are in percentage yields the reduction is equivalent to an increase in Price.

DAMAGED BY STORM

SUDBURY, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—A sever thunderstorm swept Sudbury and district last night. The storm, the worst of the season, caused flood damage to store basements. Lightning shattered the plate glass windows in local stores.

ENGLAND TO INDIA IN FIVE DAYS MAGIC OF NEW AIR MAIL SERVICE

Passengers Leaving London on Saturday Arrive in India on Thursday.

PART WAY BY TRAIN

(By Harry Harper)

An experience to linger in one's memory is to fly as a passenger over that great air-mail route which is operated by Imperial Airways between England and India.

By the accelerated time—schedule which will be in operation this summer, one will ascend from London on Saturday morning and be in India on the following Thursday, having flown 5,000 miles above land and sea, with panoramas which will enthrall you unfolding themselves beneath your outlook window.

It seems more like magic than reality to be able to leave London on Saturday morning and to be in Alexandria on the following Monday; to alight at Baghdaf on Tuesday evening; and to reach India by Thursday afternoon. Yet such apparent miracles as these, the fruit of organization and of operating experience, are now being accomplished regularly as a matter of daily routine.

Leave London Saturday.

Passengers bound for India by air assemble on Saturday monring at Airways House, London. Then, after your passports have been examined and your luggage taken charge of by airway porters, you are escorted to waiting cars and driven to the air-station at Croydon.

Taking your armchair seat in one of the powerful Armstrong-Siddley passenger-planes of Imperial Airways, you ascend at 8.30 a.m. and sweep over Kent to the sea-coast, passing swiftly above the Channel on your way to Paris.

After a brief halt at Le Bourget, the Paris air-port, your pilot steers for Basle, beautiful views lying below—a panorama of mighty mountains and fertile valleys. Then the city of Basle, where the Rhine makes an almost right-angle turn, is reached. On the east side of the city lies the aerodrome, where at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, your air express alights.

Now, for a brief spell, you desert airway for railway, taking your place in a sleeping-car train and travelling throughout the night to Genoa, which you reach on Sunday morning. At Genoa you find awaiting you one of the powerful multi-engined flying-boats of Imperial Airways. In this, on Dunday morning, you ascend and fly down the Italian coast via Naples to Corfu, where you alight that same evening.

Early on Monday morning you are on the wing again, steering for Athens and Crete, with wonderful views below, and on above the Mediterranean to Alexandria, where you alight at 4.30 p.m. on Monday afternoon, the seaplane base being only a short distance from the Royal Palace of Ras-el-Tin.

Glimpse of Cairo.

Changing again from flying-boat to aeroplane, you obtain a fascinating glimpse of Cairo, while after this comes a wonderful aerial view of the Suez Canal. From your lofty view-point you can see not only the end of the Canal at Port Said, but also the other end in the Gulf of Suez.

Soon your "magic carpet" has carried you over the Sinai desert to Gaza. On again, fresh wonders greet you—the round-topped hills of Judah; Bethlehem on youg left; and Jerusalem on a hill beyond. Then you have an impressive, swiftly-glimpsed panorama of the Dead Sea which, it has been said, "looks like the bottom of the world" when viewed from a height of about 5,000 feet.

From here you pass to Rutbah Wells, romantic desert station and on towards Baghdad, crossing above the river Euphrates. Soon after this you find yourself over Baghdad, "Jewel of the East," and as you glide down you catch a passing glimpse of the golden domes of the Kad-i-Main Mosque, and of the narrow streets and date gardens of the city.

Early on Wednesday morning you are in the air again, passing over that wonderful Arch of Ctesiphon and approaching the gelendary site of the garden of Eden. After this, from Basra on to Bushire, you see a transition from the tropical basin of the river system to the volcanic mountain-ranges of Persia. Fying via Lingeh, you reach and alight on Wednesday evening at Jask, where there is a cable and telegraph station of the Indo-European Telegraph Company.

Ascending again on Thursday, you pass high above mountains and vast stretches of sand. Then, presently, you find yourself nearing the harbour and port of Karachi. Your air expresss passes to the north of the town, and on to the commercial air-station which lies inland. It is at 3.30 p.m. on Thursday that your air express glides down at Karachi. You have flown from England to India in exactly 5 days ,2 hours, 35 minutes. A hundred years ago it was thought wonderful when one of the old sailing ships made a voyage between England and India in not more than 91 days. Five days as compared with nine-one days! Or, to contrast the aerial mail with the fastest existing surface transport, 5 days as compared with 15 days. Such apparent miracles are possible only with the modern aircraft, which wings its way unhindered above sea, mountains, forests, or deserts.

On Friday morning the air-mail goes on, via Hyderabad and Hodhpur to Delhi, reaching there at 2.40 p.m. So your aerial journey ends. You have seen the world from the new and fascinating view-point of the traveller who flies, and you have enjoyed a personal experience which will convince you, if you need convincing, that the long-distance travel of the future must leave the surface of land and sea and make its swift progress through the air.

Hustlers Leading Attendance Contest

Forty-seven Members Attend Regular Meeting of Zion League.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, May 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—Forty-seven Zion League members were in attendance at Thursday evening's meeting, which was in charge of the missionary department. The Hustlers were in the lead and also are leading the contest to date.

Lorne Barnum acted as leader and the program was as follows: prayer by William Petherick, scriptural lesson read by Thomas Fry; devotional talk, Rev. F. G. MacTavish on the work in Northern Manitoba; vocal solo, Aylmer Petherick; current events, George Brunton; topic, "Our Church Enroute to the New Seaport" Lindsay Anderson.

A contest "Clergymen we have known" proved interesting and amusing, being won by the Hustlers.

Plans were made for the annual co-operative picnic in which Tabernacle, Stephens and Zion Leagues join. It is expected that the event will be held this year at Crow River on June 3. Last year a most enjoyable time was spent at Oak Lake.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS BEING OPENED UP

Closing of Churches Has Left Rural Districts Without Religious Education.

SURVEY IS PLANNED.

TORONTO, May, 19.—The Oshawa, Lindsay, Peterborough, Cobourg, Belleville, Kingston and Renfrew Presbyteries of the United Church of Canada are to have surveys to ascertain how many preaching places in each are without Sunday schools. The information is to be gathered by the religious education committee of Bay of Quinte Conference, it was announced to-day at the annual executive meeting of the United Church's Board of Religious Education.

Rev. H. B. Neal, of Belleville, who is chairman of the conference committee, and Rev. Manson Doyle, secretary in charge of field work in Bay of Quinte Conference, stated that much was hoped from the survey. It was revealed that readjustments of pastoral charges following Union have left many districts without either public worship or a Sunday school.

Schools Help Church Attendance.

"Wherever a Sunday school has been re-opened at some rural point, the attendance at church in the neighboring town has gained," said Mr. Doyle. "It had been feared by some that attendance at school near home in the afternoon would discourage the farmers from driving out to town for the evening service. The tendency has actually been the other way. School has awakened an interest in worship."

It is proposed to find out definitely how many communities should have Sunday school organized anew. reparations will come to a head at the annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference in Belleville, June 3 to 8.

Enrol Voluntary Workers.

The conference committee on religious education has already divided up the conference area and made a list of voluntary workers who are meeting at conference to make complete and final plans for a series of institutes in the interest of Sunday school extension during the coming autumn.

"They mean a campaign for enlarged attendance in well-established Sunday schools as well as the proposed survey of neglected areas," said Mr. Doyle.

Institutes were held last year in Renfrew, Kingston, Lindsay and Oshawa Presbyteries.

Effort Broadens Out.

It is considered probable that success in recapturing the whole field for the Sunday school in the Bay of Quinte Conference will lead to similar advances in other conferences where consolidation and readjustment of circuits have possibly left considerable numbers of younger children without opportunity for religious education.

Another approach to the rural problem will be made through a rural life conference to open at Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, on July 27. The Laymen's Associations of the United Church conferences in Ontario will emphasize the rural church at their meetings in connection with the 1931 sessions of conference.

WAVES HERALD EARTHQUAKE

That the recent earthquake in New Zealand was preceded by severe days by huge tidal waves in the Pacific Ocean, has been reported from Rarotonga, Cook Island. The submarine disturbance came in the afternoon of a perfect summer day, when the sky was cloudless and the sea calm and blue. Waves 15 feet high suddenly rose outside the lagoon. Then they rolled forward, breaking over the reef with a terrific thundering noise, and rushed up the harbor, submerging the wharf and swamping the sheds along the wharf-side. As the breakers dashed over the reef the foam and spray reached a height of 80 feet, though there was not a breath of wind and glimpses of the ocean beyond seen through the spray showed that it was perfectly calm. This strange phenomenon continued throughout the night causing alarm and anxiety.

REV. WILLIAM SIMPSON, B.A. IS INDUCTED AT MILLBROOK

SPLENDID ADDRESSES.

MILLBROOK, May 19. (Examiner Correspondence.)—The induction of the Rev. William Simpson, B.A. as rector of the parish of Cavan, which took place at St. Thomas' church Millbrook on Friday evening was marked by a solemn impressiveness and outstanding spiritual significance and importance, a large congregation representative of the entire parish and of the community generally gathering for the special occasion. Venerable Archdeacon Davidson being in charge, representing His Lordship, Right Reve, J. F. Sweeny. Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto.

Singing the processional hymn, "O Brothers lift your voices," the combined choirs of the parish churches proceeded to the choir stalls, followed by a number of clergymen including Rev. Dr. Bagrave, Rev. Mr. James, Rev. J. D. Paterson, of Peterborough; Rev. Rural Dean Weir, of Omemee; Rev. P. W. A. Roberts, of Colborne; Rev. Mr. Fierheller, of Bethany; Rev. Mr. Simpson and Venerable Archdeacon Davidson who took their respective places in the chancel.

First in 26 Years

It is twenty-six years since the last induction was held for a rector of the parish of Cavan the beautiful ritual of the Form of Institution and Induction not being included in the older prayer books in use when the late Rev. Canon Allen was instituted in this office in 1905, but supplied in printed form for the service.

The Bishop's Mandate was read by Rev. Dr. Blagrave, on Friday evening and following the opening prayers by Archdeacon Davidson, Rev. J. D. Paterson read the Letter of Institution, and Rev. P. W. A. Roberts the license, all signed by the Bishop and bearing the requisite seals. Following the solemn words of Induction by Archdeacon Davidson the Wardens of the four churches of the parish, J. E. Allen and R. I. Fallis, St. Thomas' church; Millbrook; L. C. McNeil and L. H. Winslow St. John's, Ida; H Hall and A. Jackson, Christ Church, Bailieboro, and C. Porter and W. Kinsman, Trinity Church (the Marsh), were called to the chancel railing and presented to the new rector, Rev. Mr. Simpson, the keys of the churches. Mr. Winslow acting as spokesman for the words: "On behalf of this parish, and in obedience to the Mandate of the Bishop of the Diocese, I present to you the keys of these churches, in token that we acknowledge you as lawful Incumbent of this Parish?"

Conducted by Archdeacon Davidson and Rev. Rural Dean Weir Rev Mr. Simpson was taken to the baptismal font, the reading desk, the pulpit and to the altar and given the necessary admonitions and charges, the response in each case being: "I will so do, the Lord being my helper."

Splendid Address.

The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Weir, Rural Dean of the Victoria Deanery, his text being chosen from Exodus 17.9: "To-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand," the speaker pointing out that the change in Israel's national life politically and spiritually, did neot mean decay but growth and so to-day the church is changing to meet the special needs of a special age, that she may more acceptably and profitably continue her labors.

"This is true also in the township of Cavan. We look backward to the fine work done by the splendid men, both clergy and laity, who have served in this parish, and we look hopefully forward to the better things that are yet to be." In constructive work there must be leaders, and our clergymen are going forward in knowledge and in spirituality, forgetting a good deal of the old partyism of former days not holding the 'rod' of authority as a matter of stern discipline, but realizing that not 'what' but 'why' is the query to be answered to the young people of to-day."

Before the concluding prayers, Archdeacon Davidson addressed the congregation bringing warm greetings from the Bishop, "who has you daily in his prayers, and is with you in your happiness— to-night as you welcome your new rector to the parish of Cavan, which has had such a fine history, and is the most outstanding rural parish in the Diocese of Toronto. It is for you to keep up this rank."

"You have, in the Rev William Simpson, a rector who is a distinctly outstanding man one who has done magnificent work in the west, and who comes to you with a broad outlook bringing you an inspiration that you yourselves should become bigger as you share with him in the Lord's work. He has come, with your help, to do an outstanding work. In union there is strength so keep solid the parish and solid with the Diocese and with your rector go forward to believe more intelligently to live more worthily and to fight the good fight of faith, facing the future hopefully, cheerfully and courageously."

The recessional hymn was "Come Labor On," and after the retirement of the choir and clergy and the final blessing, adjournment was made to the Parish Hall where a reception was held, affording Rev. Mr. and Mrs Simpson, and their daughter, Miss Margaret an opportunity of meeting two hundred or more of the people of the parish, with many others of the community, among the invited guests being, Rev W. W. Jones, B.D., pastor of Saint Andrew's United Church and Mrs. Jones and Reeve P. Stinson and Mrs. Stinson. Many friends were glad to welcome again Rev Mr. Roberts, formerly rector in charge of Cavan parish, with Mrs. Roberts, and her mother, Mrs. Bedward, who motored back to Colborne the same evening.

The Parish Hall was tastefully decorated with spring blossoms, and pouring tea and coffee at the daintily-laid table were Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, Miss E. Granby, Miss K Kinsman, and Miss Jackson St. John's Church, Ida, had previously held this reception for the new rector, Trinity Church uniting with Millbrook for the one on Friday evening. Assisting the rector and his wife in receiving were Mrs. A. J. Fallis and Mrs. J. E. Allen, who performed the necessary introductions while a host of workers looked after the wants of the guests in connection with the refreshments served, and the social side of the happy gathering.

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright.
Where, nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass
No envy sour the mind
But each shall seek the common weal.
The good of all mankind

WOOLER, May 19. (Examiner Correspondence.)—The Wooler Branch of the East No thumberland Women's Institute met this month at the home of Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

Forty ladies gathered from the different communities to interchange ideas and to express practical suggestions for the program to be presented at the coming convention to be held in the city of Belleville.

The president, Mrs. William Ashby in the chair, presided over her first meeting since her election, in this office. After singing the opening Ode and repeating in unison the Lords' Prayer, the unfinished business was completed.

The convenor, Mrs. L. H. Rome, took charge of the program. The first number being a paper entertaining beautiful thoughts read by Mrs. W. A. McColl. A vocal solo "Old Virginia Moon" given by Gwendoline Elford. Mrs. J. Garbutt, of Belleville, was called on and she gave an outline of their work through the Women's Institute. A special feature, being the cleaning up of a cemetery, replacing spirea shrubs for Burdocks.

Miss Jones, of Belleville, spoke emphatically of the value of work through our Women's Institutes.

An instrumental duett by Mrs. A. G. Austin and Mrs. L. H. Rome.

The May lunch committee served refreshments. The meeting adjourned to meet in the United Church parlors on June 5, when the Government speaker will be present.

FENELLA, May 19. (Examiner Correspondence.)—The annual meeting of the Fenella Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. S. Adams on Thursday afternoon, May 14, with an attendance of twenty two and the president, Mrs. Harrison George, in the chair.

Mrs. Frank George and Mrs. John Herrington were appointed a committee to interview the Haldimand township council on their next sitting in Fenella on May 28, to solicit a grant in aid of repairs for the community hall and Miss Ruby Adams and Miss Louise Clark were appointed a committee to ask the Sunday school for a grant for the same purpose.

The following committees were appointed to arrange for the summer meeting on May 28, when the Fenella branch will entertain the Roseneath branch on the occasion of the visit of the special speaker, Mrs. James Patterson, of New Hamburg. Salad plate committee: Mrs. G. Montgomery, Mrs. S. Leach, Mrs. M. Adams and Mrs. A. Waldie; Tea committee: Mrs. S. Adams and Mrs. V. Brenton; Ice cream committee: Mrs. J. H. Mouncey and Mrs. A. Nill; Program committee: The girls of the Institute. Mrs. S. Leach was appointed to arrange for a place of meeting. Mrs. John Herrington kindly volunteered to arrange for speaker's accommodation and transportation.

Miss Ruby Adams secretary-treasurer gave the financial report showing:

Cash on hand at beginning of year, $26.73; Members fees, $7.00; Grant $3.00; Miscellaneous, $51.57; Total, $88.30; Expenses, $54.89; Balance on hand, $33.41.

The president, in a few words thanked the members and officers for their loyal support during the past year.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. N. C. Leach; Vice-president, Mrs. Harrison George Secretary treasurer, Miss Ruby Adams; Branch directors- Mrs J. H. Mouncey and Mrs. Cephas Brisbin; District director: Mrs. A. Nill; Pianist: Miss Teressa Brenton; Assistant: Miss Ruby Herrington; Auditors: Mrs. G. Montgomery and Mrs. S. Leach; Program committee: Mrs. Cephas Brisbin, Mrs. Hugh Sherwin and Mrs. J. H. Mouncey; Sunshine committee Mrs. A. Nill Mrs. V. Brenton and Mrs. G. Montgomery.

Owing to the lateness of the hour the program was omitted. At the close the hostess served afternoon tea. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Nill on June 11.

See Your Own Country First

That is excellent advice that people should see their own country first, before they go travelling in foreign ones. This applies particularly to Canada, a land of 'magnificent distances," a land which offers changes of scenery at least equal to those to be found elsewhere. Besides this change there is also this to be remembered, that a United Canada means that the scattered people of this vast country should get together so that they can understand and appreciate the difficulties and the problems, the ambitions and the aims of the various parts of it. Further than this Canadians are striving hard to build up the "tourist industry," the bringing up people from all over the world to see the wonders and the beautiful scenery of their land, and it seems rather absurd that Canadians should go abroad and have to confess to foreigners that they have not seen these. Such a statement would not be much of an advertisement, or be the means of impressing tourists. They would naturally not be inclined to think much of a country whose own people did not consider it worth seeing. And things are so different nowadays in the matter of travel. There are no hardships, no troubles, no discomforts connected with it. Take for instance the Dean Laird tour which is provided by the Canadian Pacific Railway "Across Canada and Back" which will include visits to the Prairie cities of western Canada the Rockies Banff, Lake Louise Vancouver Victoria, Kootenay Lakes, and the Great Lakes. These are all places which Canadians ought to see, and which foreign tourists will expect them, and rightly so, to have seen, and know all about. For a comparatively speaking, small sum, this delightful and informative tour can be made, and further than that, all the troubles concerning tickets, baggage, transfers, hotels, boats, motors, and reservations are eliminated; there will be no waste of time and no worry because everything has been foreseen and provided for. Everything will be arranged to make the tour as comfortable and enjoyable as the lengthy experience of this great railway can possibly make it. This year the tour commences on the 27th of July and ends on the 17th of August. There is much more which could be said, but we advise the public to obtain further details of this enchanting tour from the officials of the company and take it if they possibly can.

A race between men carrying base drums was held recently at Chelsea, England.

District Churches

STIRLING, May 19. (Examiner Correspondence.)—On Sunday morning Rev N. Reid, M.A., gave a sermon on "The Lords Prayer."

"Mankind, and humanity in general, is naturally religious. The heathen know why they worship, at least they claim to have foundation for the faith that is in them.

What is our conception of God?

The Lord's Prayer gives us a revelation of God's mind.

The very first word "our" arrests our attention. He belongs to the human family. The God of the people, implies belief in brotherhood of mankind.

"Our" signifies ownership to me, as well as to others. No standard is adequate unless individualized the personal element is stressed.

God is love. Loyalty and duty must follow. God is holy and worthy of worship. Thy Kingdom come must be our aim, direction and purpose.

We are on earth to do God's will, and see what plans he has entrusted to us for fulfilment.

Do we advance or retard these enterprises? Heaven refers to happiness and harmony.

"The reference to daily bread shows that God is interested in physical life, as well as spiritual growth. Forgiveness is an essential part of our social standard.

Such a philosphy has a beneficial effect on every walk in life. We are measured by the same rule we use with others.

Our heart, like the radio has conditions to meet before it can be tuned in.

Lead us—God is our leader. He does not drive. This leadership is our defence as well as our deliverer, guide and protector.

Our Lord's Prayer is a pattern for our life. Prayer is not as some would say a magic charm but a source of power to help us bear our burdens with fortitude.

STATEMENT AMUSES McGILL PRINCIPAL

Sir Arthur Currie Refutes Declaration University Contaminated With Communism.

MONTREAL, May 19. (By the Canadian Press)—Sir Arthur Currie in a recent interview admitted that he was candidly amused over the statement made by Eugene Fersen, formerly Baron Fersen of Russia, and now of New York, that McGill is contaminated with Communism.

Fersen declared when lecturing here a short time ago on "Communist Russia—the Impending Menace to the World," that McGill was contaminated with Bolshevists' ideas, and groups of students were hearty advocates of Communism.

"Do they know what it means, or is it just a stick to beat a dog with?" asked Sir Arthur who issued the following statement:

"Of course, chat like this has its mischievous side. You know one of the plagues and curses of our time is the ease with which human beings can make a noise. A fool with a motor-horn can make a streetful of people uncomfortable. But if, instead of a motor-horn, he has the newspapers, or the ether waves of the universe to play on, well, the results are appalling.

"Some one says McGill is reeking with Communism, and the newspapers repeat it. Then instead of one parrot there are fifty parrots and presently someone says here are boys in a public institution being corrupted and society will be destroyed.

"Now just imagine someone saying, 'The girls who work for the Bank of Montreal dye their hair'—and, by the way, a person has just as much chance to know the truth about that as about the beliefs of the McGill students. Well, suppose then that a newspaper repeats that statement. Fifty parrots again, and presently someone gets worried and says, 'Here's a public institution where the girls dye their hair. If we don't take care that bank will soon be issuing counterfeit money.' Just as much sense in that as in the other.

CUT DOWN LOGAN'S HILL.

HAVELOCK, May 19. (Examiner Correspondence.)—Work on Number Seven Highway will commence this week, according to T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A. Road building equipment is being placed in position for operation by the Raynor Construction Company, who have the contract for that part of the road extending from the eastern boundary of Norwood village on the west to the stone house about a mile east of the village on the Marmora road.

Leaving Norwood the new highway will follow pretty much the course of the old road, avoiding all sharp turns and cutting into Logan's mill, which will be lowered by several feet and the approaches made mor gradual. Work on this hill has already started and workmen are engaged in widening the present road. At the east side of the hill the road swings gradually to the north, avoiding the railways crossing by running parallel to the tracks. The highway enters Havelock just north of the Pierce block and continues to follow the tracks in a straight line with Ottawa street, popularly known as the front street, which it joins at Quebec Street. Leaving the village, it traverses the Gilbert property in Belmont, and continues in a direct line southeast, to the present highway, joining it at a point east of the railway at Daniel's property. This clever bit of road engineering thus eliminates four very dangerous level crossings. The present indications are that the road between Havelock and Marmora from this point, will be the same, with the exception of straightening out a few of the sharp corners.

Rumor Jake the Barber Under Capone's Guard

CHICAGO, Ill., May 19. — The Herald and Examiner published a report today that John Factor, known as "Jake the Barber," had placed himself under the protection of Alphonse Capone as a safeguard against the lawless, who would kidnap him for ransom, and the law, which seeks him for extradition to England where he is wanted on a chargeof defrauding the Broad Street Press, Ltd., of London, of $8,300,000. The report, However, was unconfirmed, the paper added.

Premier MacDonald of England recently visited the ruins at Duffus Castle, Elginshire, Scotland, "where" he said, "50 years ago I used to steal apples from the orchard."

"Would you tear up a cheque in your wife's favor?"

THE most pitiful situation any Life Insurance man has to face is to be forced to tell a widow, that her husband had deliberately lapsed the insurance upon which she was relying for future needs.

What a crushing set-back to one already carrying a burden of grief and responsibility.

If you are ever tempted to drop your life insurance, put yourself in her place. Think twice before you subject her to such an experience.

Any financial difficulty you may have is probably only temporary. Do not lapse Life Insurance in this or any other company.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, May 19. — Toronto brokers were reporting sales of butter yesterday at the high figures of the range in effect at the end of last week, or 20c for No. 1 creamery solids and 19c for No. 2. But quite a few deals were made on the lower basis, which was also steady with the low of last week, or 19½c for No. 1 and 18½c for No. 2. The general range of prices for the day's business was 19½c to 20c for No. 1 and 18½c to 19c for No. 2. The top prices, of course, were obtained for fancy lots or high scoring No. 1, with good No. 2 commanding the premier level. Brokers were asking 20½c to 21c for choice Western in carlots.

Cream.

Cream prices were unchanged, as far as Toronto buyers were concerned, and the levels quoted at the end of last week were still in effect. Country shippers were offered 21c to 22c for special, 20c to 21c for No. 1, and 17c to 19c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points.

Cheese.

The demand for new cheese was slightly better, and brokers were quoting 9½c for large, 9¾c for twins, and 10c for triplets, which was steady with the top of the spread quoted during the latter days of last week. The retailers were quoted steady prices at 11½c for new large, 11¾c for twins, and 2c for triplets.

Eggs.

Though prices were steady on the egg market, there was every indication that an increase would be made before long. The demand was good and receipts were light, and the higher range quoted by brokers last week-end was governing transactions. Brokers quoted graded eggs, in free, used cases, at 19c to 19½c for extras, 17c to 17½c for firsts, and 15c for seconds. Country shippers were quoted steady prices with the advance of last week-end at 17c for extras, 15c for firsts, and 13c for seconds, ungraded, delivered, cases returned. Retailers were obtaining supplies at 23c for extras in cartons, 21c for extras loose, 19c for firsts loose, and 17c for seconds loose. Brokers offered storage packed eggs at 1c better than price for ordinary lots, and Western supplies were quoted at 20c for extras, 18c for firsts and 15c for seconds, in new cases.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Ont., May 19.—(CP)—Cattle receipts 2200. Trade at the opening was slow on a small run with not enough sales up to 11 a.m. to establish prices. Small lots of good to choice butcher brought $5.50 to $5.75 with some weighty steers at $6. Butcher cows were steady from $4 to $4.50 for choice.

Steers up to 1,050 lbs. good and choice, $5.75 to $6; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $4.50 to $5.25; steers over 1,050 lbs., good and choice $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $4.75 to $5.25; heifers, good and choice, $5 50 to $5.75, medium, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $4.50 to $5.25; fed calves good and choice, $6.50 to $7; medium $5.50 to $6.25; cows, good, $4 to $4.50; medium, $3.50 to $4; common, $3.00 to $3.50; canners and cutters, $1.50 to $2.25; bulls, good, $3.75 to $4; common, $3 to $3.75; stocker and feeder steers, good, $5 to $5.25; common, $4.25 to $4.75; stock and heifers, good; milkers and springers, $40 to $75.

Calf receipts, 290. Calves were from 50c to $1. Higher at $7 to $8. For good and choice veals with common downward trend to $4.

Good and choice veal, $7 to $8; common and medium, $4 to $6.50; grassers, $3 50 to $4.

Hog receipts 143. Hogs were unsettled with a stronger feeling to the market. Bids were steady at $7.50 f.o.b. for bacons or at $8 off car.

Sheep receipts 265. Spring lambs were steady at $15 for choice. Good yearlings sold up to $10 per hundredweight; good light sheep brought $4 to $4.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 19.—Unsettlement of securities brought burdensome heavy selling into the grain pits yesterday and wheat just escaped breaking the season's low-price record. Corn fell less than wheat but outdid the year's low point. Moisture relief in the spring wheat drought region had a bearish effect together with auspicious reports concerning the domestic winter crop.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to 1⅝ cents down, corn and oats ⅜c to ⅝c off, and provisions showing 15 to 20 cents decline.

Sliding down fast to within ¼c of the seasons' bottom level, and to about 6c a bushel under the last week's high point, wheat displayed little power to rally. Meagreness of export demand for wheat from North America acted as a wet blanket on speculative buyers. Meanwhile bears made capital, especially of the fact that steel shares had dropped below 100. After this performance by steel numerous stop-loss selling orders in wheat were executed, and weakness of corn added to the downward momentum of wheat.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, May 19. — Butter, cheese and egg prices were higher, and potato quotations lower on the produce and dairy market here yesterday. No. 1 finest pasteurized creamery, fresh and regraded, butter, in carlots, gained a quarter of a cent at 20½c to 20¾c a pound. To retailers, solid and prints, were unchanged at 22c and 23c a pound, respectively. Receipts were 814 boxes.

Ontario colored cheese advanced three-quarters to a cent at 9¾c to 10c a pound, and receipts were 422 boxes.

On the egg market fresh Ontario or Prairie firsts, in carlots, gained a cent at 17c to 18c a dozen, while extras were quoted at 20c to 21c, and seconds at 15c a dozen. Carlot prices of British Columbia fresh firsts were also a cent higher at 18c to 19c, with extras at 21c to 22c a dozen. To retailers quotations of fresh eggs, in cartons, advanced a cent as announced, special being quoted at 27c, extras at 25c, firsts at 22c, and seconds at 20c a dozen. Receipts were 2,636 cases.

New No 1 Florida potatoes lost 50c at $7 per 160-pound barrel, with No. 2 stock holding unchanged at $5 a barrel. New Brunswick Green Mountains, in carlots, were quoted unchanged at 60c to 70c per 80-pound bag or 90-pound bulk, and to retailers 70c to 80c per 80-pound bag. New No. 1 Bermudas were unchanged at $2.25 per 50-pound box.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 19. — Week-end rains over Prairie wheat lands and absence of export demand gave the bears an edge in the wheat pit here yesterday. Prices at the close were 1⅜c to 1½c lower than Saturday's final figures. May closed at 59¼c, a drop of 1⅜c; July finished at 59⅝c to 59⅞c, down 1½c; while October closed at 61½c to 61⅝c, a decline of 1⅜c.

General liquidation produced offerings for which there were few buyers, and the decline was rapid and difficult to recover from. Buying by seaboard and Continental interests was not appreciable and made little impression on values. Cash wheat trading was dull with spreads in change on Saturday. Coarse grains values eased in sympathy with wheat.

SUMMER HOMES

should have this FIRE PROTECTION

FAR from every hope of aid if a blaze takes hold, the inflammable construction of the average summer home makes it a source of danger and anxiety.

Minimize the fire hazard by lining inside walls and ceilings with inexpensive Gyproc Wallboard that does not burn.

This building material is made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts as easily as lumber and with minimum waste.

Find out from your dealer how inexpensive Gyproc is; how easy to erect. Ask him for full information about its application or request a direction sheet from him.

Besides being fire-resistant, Gyproc has structural strength and insulation value. It is also draught and vermin-proof.

By panelling, you can save the expense of decoration, yet Gyproc is an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

DECISION OF COURT OF REVISION APPEALED AGAINST BY MAGISTRATE

Judgment Is Reserved in Appeal of Campbellford Magistrate.

UNEMPLOYMENT WORK

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Appealing the decision of the Court of Revision regarding assessment under the Local Improvement Act of a sewer on Frank street onto which his property abutts, Magistrate G. A. Payne was plaintiff in an action against the corporation of Campbellford claiming abolition of assessment on the grounds that the proper procedure had not been followed in the execution of this work. The case was heard yesterday in County Court held at Campbellford. His Honor Judge E. C. Huycke presiding, Chas. Payne, K.C., of Belleville acted for the plaintiff and D. J. Lynch for the defendant.

The town clerk, J. F. McGregor gave evidence to the effect that the work actually commenced on November 7, 1930 as a result of the government unemployment relief program.

The total cost of the work on Frank street amounted to $1,628.84 of which the fifty per cent paid by the government was $814.42. Questioned as to whether the proper twenty-one days notice had been published in the press he answered in the negative. The work had proceeded under the Local Improvement Act. Examination of the notice sent out by the clerk to G. A. Payne in regard to the time and place of the Court of Revision showed the work on Frank street was set at a cost of $1,628.84, the amount to be paid by property owners being $1,011.86.

D. J. Lynch cross examined Mr. McGregor eliciting the facts that the question of work under the government relief grant program had first come before the council in October last when the Mayor had suggested that a program of local relief work should be outlined. An interview with J. F. McArthur, M.L.A., had taken place in which the town had been assured that the grant would be forthcoming. Reading from the minutes of the council, on October 17, it had been reported that the government would pay 50% of the cost of the work. Later John Hall had submitted an estimated cost.

On November 6, Mr. McGregor stated, that the report of the delegation that had waited on the Acting Premier, Hon. G. S. Henry, had been given. Reeve I. M. Bygott, now Mayor of Campbellford, had stated that assurance had been given that the government would pay 50% of the total cost of work under this scheme including tools and materials. They had been further assured that they could proceed with the work without waiting the stipulated twenty-one days for advertising their notice of intention, it having been stated that if the matter came before the Railway Commission Board there was no fear of being turned down on work such as this.

Started on November 7

The clerk also said that the work was started on November 7, and completed in March. It was rushed because it was late in the season and there was only a stipulated time to finish it and also because if it had been held over for any length of time, i.e., until the cold weather set in, it would have cost considerably more to undertake and would have been in excess of their estimate. As it was, the work on this portion of the sewer had been done much under the original esimate which had been set at $2,042.00.

Mr. McGregor pointed out that the original estimate of work had been set at $25,000.00, but this had been reduced to $14,000.00 in accordance with the grant from the Government. Up to date the town had received $6,000.00, the remainder being still in abeyance.

C. H. Davidson was called by Mr. Lynch and stated that he was the Mayor of Campbellford during 1930 and that he had formed one of the delegation, in company with Reeve Bygott, Deputy Reeve Stone, and Councillor Wiggins who had interviewed the Acting Premier in connection with this matter. They had been told, he stated, that the work they outlined could be done and to go ahead with the arrangements and that no doubt a special Act would be passed backing them up in regard to non-advertisement. Estimates had then been submitted and another delegation had waited on J. A. Ellis, secretary of the Unemployment Relief Committee, who had told them to go home and go to work. Questioned as to the matter of the three weeks' notice of intention, Mr. Davidson said that they were told it was not necessary under the circumstances. Work had, therefore, been proceeded with as quick as possible and continued until its completion early this spring.

Reeve J. N. Stone also gave evidence for the defence, stating that he was Deputy Reeve in last year's council, and had formed one of he delegation that had interviewed the Acting Premier, Mr. Henry. He told the court that he had asked that if the work was proceeded with under the Local Improvement Act, whether the usual procedure would have to be followed, and had been assured that legislation would likely be passed waiving past irregularities in procedure. He had also questioned the frontage tax in connection with this work and had been told to adhere to the present arrangement, which is that the property owner assumes a 60 per cent share of the cost and the town the remaining 40 per cent.

Act Not Complied With

Summing up the case for the plaintiff, Mr. Payne asked for the abolition of the assessment on the grounds that the Act had not been complied with in the carrying out of this work.

Mr. Lynch, in pleading the case for the defendant, pointed out that under the Act, the Judge hearing an appeal from the Court of Revision, had only the same power as that court, which did not include the appeal of assessments, quoting the Act in question. He claimed that a County Judge had no power to exempt entirely anyone assessed under the Local Improvement Act, even though the work had been done illegally, or to set aside a by-law. Mr. Lynch declared that even though the formalities of the Act had not been complied with owing to the emergencies of the situation, and the relief of the unemployed, the council had done is best and had gone on in good faith upon the assurances they had received regarding the irregularities. Delay would have meant loss of time and money. All the work had been done under the regular scheme of a 60-40 basis. "This Act was not provided for the relief of abutting property owners on any street," he stated, "but to relieve the unemployment situation." On a question put by Judge Huycke, it was pointed out that no other appeals had been made.

Mr. Payne declared that at least in two other cities of his knowledge where similar work had been carried on under the relief grant, the Act had been adhered to to the letter. He also stated that nowhere in the Unemployment Relief Act, 1931, did it state that the municipalities should be relieved of adhering to the proper procedure.

After the submitting of documentary evidence, His Honor Judge Huycke reserved judgment on the case.

As the result of the many thefts from store windows in England an "anti-smash-and-grab-raid glass," in which a mesh of wire is embedded has been invented there.

MANITOBA LEADS MUSICAL EDUCATION

Three Hundred High School Students Playing on One Platform is Impressive Sight.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 19 (By The Canadian Press).—"Within recent days this city, for the first time in any province, assembled on one platform 300 high school boys and girls gathered from all of Manitoba, playing under one baton," says The Free Press. "The enthusiasm of a teacher, the co-operation of a Government department, the valiant effort of those far from instruction, and the systematic use of the radio, make this thing possible. Not so much the performance, but the promise of it, swept the listeners.

"Music clubs are legion. They are found in every provincial centre. Brandon has organized a festival of merit. So has Selkirk. Community organizations north and south have established music day festivals. There is still cheap music in this province, much of it, but it seems safe to prophesy that its days are blessedly numbered.

"Concurrently with what might be termed the 'English origin' stream is that from others which bring their own national inheritances. These streams have not met yet, or scarcely so. But organization after organization have their choirs and their orchestras and their ballets. There are among them German, Italian, Polish, Swedish, Hungarian, Norwegian and Ukrainian associations. There is a fine Icelandic choir. As the influences which focus in the Manitoba Music Festival establish standards of appreciation, so does recognition grow of the gifts of these associations.

"This West has always known rhythm. It beat its tomtoms in the lodges of the Indians and marked and still marks their ceremonial dances. It paced the oars for the explorers, and it wove patterns in the long twilights when the hunters of the plains rested from the feverish days.

"The settlers came with a song. No one has ever rightly apportioned the place which the mouth organ, the accordian and the fiddle had in the making of the West. No one brought up on the prairies but knows the intricacies of the 'square dance,' and finds there bits from the old world courts as well as village greens, and in the tunes even among the half-breeds reminiscences of the times when knighthood was in flower."

BERMUDAN WOMEN SEEK FRANCHISE

Secretary for Colonies Supports Movement to Bring Bermuda in Line.

MONTREAL, Que., May 19 (By The Canadian Press). — Lord Passfield, secretary for the colonies in the British government, is an advocate of women's suffrage in Bermuda, it is disclosed in a letter received by Mrs. John Scott, of Montreal, from Mrs. John Morrell, chairman of the Bermuda Women Suffrage Society. A bill introduced for the purpose of extending the vote to women has, however, been defeated in the House of Assembly.

Mrs. Morrell said Lord Passfield wrote of the franchise generally in Bermuda, and regarding women suffrage stated that 'the position in Bermuda would appear to call for review," so as to bring that Colony into line with most of the rest of the Empire.

The official report of the Colonial Parliament of Bermuda for April 9 contained the following letter, dated March 18, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord Passfield, to the Acting Governor of Bermuda. It was given as follows:

"I have the honor to state that, as you are aware, a number of questions have lately been put in the House of Commons on the subject of the extension of the franchise in Bermuda in general, and the grnating of the franchise to women, and to inform you that these matters have attracted considerable attention from the members of the House.

"It has been brought to my notice that the proportion of registered electors of the total population of Bermuda is less than six per cent. which must be regarded as an abnormally low figure. I wish also to take this opportunity to point out that the franchise has by now been very generally granted to women in the British Empire at ages varying from 21 to 30 years, and that in this respect also the position in Bermuda would appear to call for review.

"I should be gratified if the Bermuda Legislature could see its way clear in the near future to consider the advisability of such an extension of the local franchise as would bring it inot closer conformity with contemporary institutions elsewhere."

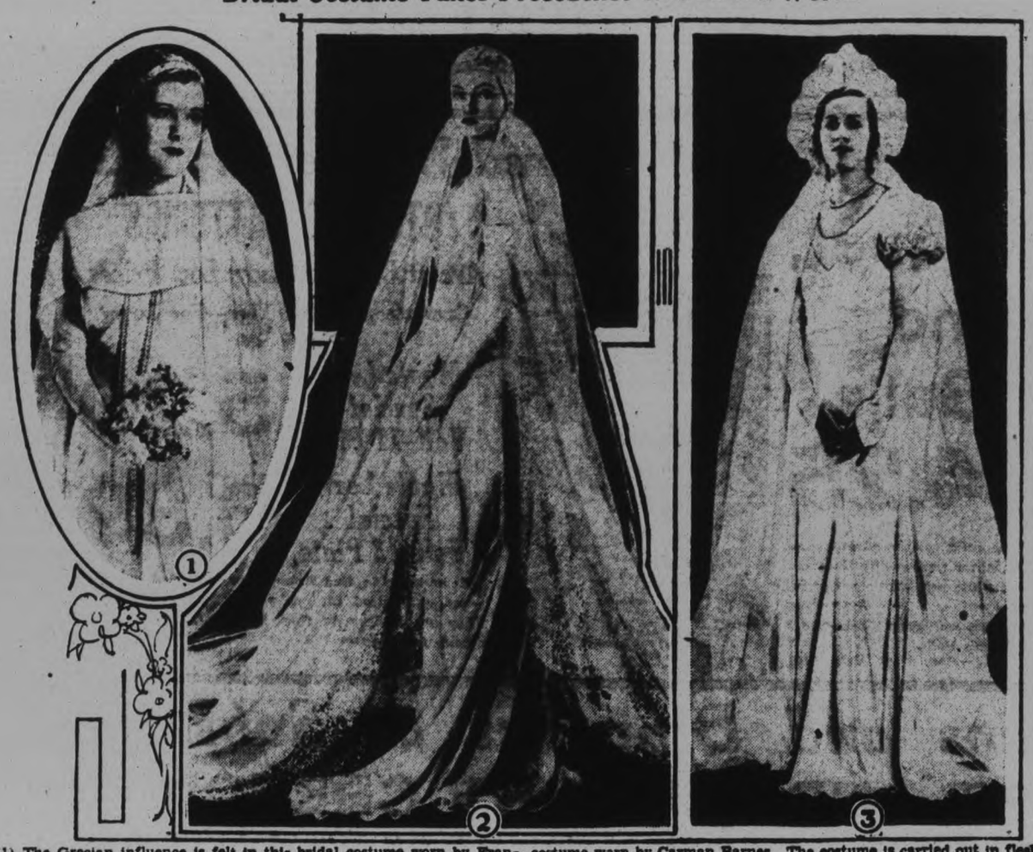
Bridal Costume Takes Precedence In Fashion World



(1) The Grecian influence is felt in this bridal costume worn by Frances Dee. Over a gown of white crepe romain that displays a monk's scarf, a veil of tulle is worn. A wide silver ribbon is caught over the forehead terminating in a bow at the back. (2) A Juliet cap and flowing veil of shimmering lace are outstanding features of this gorgeous bridal costume worn by Carman Barnes. The costume is carried out in flesh tone, instead of the traditional white, the frock being of flesh chiffon unadorned. (3) One of the lovely new wedding gowns created by Reville, fashioned of ivorine artificial silk velvet and displayed at the Drapery Exhibition, London.

SERVICE PROMPT MOST EFFICIENT

SCRUPULOUSLY CLEAN.

People throughout Peterborough's trading district will find it advantageous to acquaint themselves with the service, products and prices of the F. and G. Markets. These five home-owned and home-operated stores offer the most wholesome and nationally known lines of food products and the choicest obtainable fresh and cooked meats. Purchasing from firms whose interests, first, last and always is our own community is to our own interests, and a percentage of every dollar thus spent returns to us in one way or another.

The stores of Fitzpatrick and Geraghty are kept scrupulously clean and sanitary. Their meats are both health giving and health protecting. There one may secure their favorite cut of pork, beef, lamb or veal, with the assurance that it is the best that can be had, and if you are not familiar with the various cuts of meats they will gladly explain them to you. The meats are held at just the right temperature in their refrigeration plants, that they may be able to furnish their customers with products of unquestionable excellence. The service is prompt and efficient at all times. Every F. and G. Market is under able and efficient management and the people who serve you are Peterborough people who have spent a great deal of their lives in the grocery and meat business. Their stocks are replete with food supplies that every housewife asks for and needs, in fact, if it can be had at all you will find it at a F. and G. Market—and at a lesser cost.

At your first opportunity drop in at the F. and G. Market in your community. Look over their stocks and note the cleanliness with which their meats are handled. You will find yourself welcomed, whether purchasing or merely visiting. Do you know how many people are given employment through the existence of the F. and G. Markets?

$3 cash prize given away for neatest correct answers to questions in these articles. Call the above firm to assist you. (Six in to-day's issue).

I.O.O.F. ATTENDS CHURCH SERVICE

GRADUATES FROM QUEEN'S

LAKEFIELD, May 19.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— The members of Lakefield Lodge No. 358, I.O.O.F. paraded to Knox United church on Sunday evening for their annual service. There was a good attendance of members who presented a very striking appearance.

Rev. T. M. Wesley gave a very inspiring sermon, speaking of the high ideals on which this great order was founded and it is the obligation and privilege of the individual member to live up to them and hold high, in the critical eyes of the world, the standard of the I.O.O.F.

Special music was given by the choir under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Hull with Miss Etta Garbutt at the organ.

Guest Speaker on Empire Day.

Mr. L. W. Copp, B.A., Public School Inspector, will be the guest speaker at the Empire Day celebration at the Lakefield Public school, being held on the school grounds on Friday afternoon of this week. At 2.45 a parade, headed by the Citizens' Band, will form up at the Town Hall and march to the school grounds. The program will begin at 3 o'clock and will consist of drills, competitions and patriotic songs. Those who were present at last year's celebration were very much impressed at the splendid way in which it was carried out and it is hoped that there will be even a larger attendance this year.

Graduate From Queen's.

Among the recent graduates of Queen's University, Kingston, was a well known local boy, Frank E. Madill, who was awarded his B.A. with honors. This is highly gratifying to a wide circle of friends who have been interested in Mr. Madill's progress. In the local High school, in Peterborough Collegiate and at Queen's he has won honours in his examinations. Mr. Madill is the only son of Mr. W. J. Madill and the late Mrs. Madill and a brother of Miss Irene Madill of the teaching staff of Peterborough Public school.

GOOD ATTENDANCE LEAGUE MEETING

Good Program Provided at Efficiency League Gathering at Trent River.

TRENT RIVER, May 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Efficiency League met Friday night at the United Church with an attendance of 66. The president, R. W. Umphrey opened the meeting and after the opening exercises Mr. Umphrey had to leave the meeting owing to having received a message which necessitated him having to return to his home near Brantford on business and the meeting was taken over by Isaac Lawson.

The scriptural lesson, Corinthians 1, 1-13 was read by Milton Hawley, the boys' choir rendered a selection; Rufus Redden read the topic taken from the "Pathfinder." Mr. Lawson spoke briefly on talents—directing our talents to the right use; vocal number by Tom Haywood accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Thomas Doupe; vocal duet by Mrs. Thomas Doupe and Isaac Lawson; reading by Tom Haywood. The offering was taken up followed by the four colors taking the places for a citizens' contest in charge of Jim Inkster, the white side winning.

The meeting for Friday night, May 22, will take the form of a "hard times" social evening, when every member is supposed to come attired in hard times clothes. There will be a silver collection at the entrance. The social evening will take place in the dining hall and a splendid program suitable for the occasion will be given.

District Notes

Mr. R. W. Umphrey left Friday evening for Mount Pleasant, near Brantford to spend the week-end.

Helping Vacationists.

Holidays were coming and Doreen had made no plans. Everything was up in the air. One day she decided to make enquiries for herself and girl friend, so she telephoned a number of resort places. Thanks to Long Distance, it was easy for the girls to find a desirable place.

Glasgow, Scotland, will advertise itself as an industrial city.

JUSTICE

Though the war is over, twelve years or more,
A toast to you all, here's fun.
But I know a lad in this very town,
And to him it has just begun.

He was one of the boys who answered the call,
When Old England called he heard,
He left this town, a boy in his teens,
With the gallant Ninety Third.

He was on of those fellows discharged A1,
Who had heard those promises made
Of the preference he would always get,
Did he get it? Not quite, I'm afraid.

He was told at the factories to fill out a form,
Telling where he had fought, and when,
And then when he had the form filled out,
He was told, "Call back again."

Now when this poor lad goes to bed at night,
For some reason he cannot sleep.
His mother says he imagines things,
Strange shadows around him creep.

I have known this man to get out of bed
And go out in the night for a walk;
And I've tried to sympathize with him,
But he simply don't care to talk.

This man was sent to Toronto once;
This man who had fought the Hun
And they told him there that he must be fit
For he'd been discharged A1

And they also told him some other things
And on one small point enlarged,
If he wasn't fit, he had got that way
After he'd been discharged.

Some people call this man a fool
But that's as far as they get.
He isn't a fool, I would have you know,
No, he's only a burned out Vet.

Now the folks who ill treat a man like this
Will they go to Heaven, sir, well,
If such folks go to Heaven I say,
Hurrah, three cheers for Russia.

Now I wouldn't bother writing this
And your time I would not spend;
But I know you and your paper, Sir,
Have been the War Vets' friend.

THE MAN WITH THE "HAIR-TRIGGER" TEMPER

HE WAS irritable at the office, and grouchy at home. His enemies increased, his friends became fewer. Then one day his doctor told him the truth. He had been handicapped by constipation for years. It had brought headaches and constantly irritating ills to make him "touchy." It had stolen his energy and good nature.

His doctor suggested eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly. And in a few days he was a changed man, cheery, ambitious—and on the road to success and happiness.

Constipation is so unnecessary. It can be overcome so easily, so pleasantly by eating delicious Kellogg's ALL-BRAN: a delightful, ready-to-eat cereal.

Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In stubborn cases, serve ALL-BRAN with each meal.

Use this natural method and avoid the dangers of habit-forming pills and drugs. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron, which builds up the blood.

Serve ALL-BRAN with milk or cream, with fruits or honey added. Delicious when combined with canned peaches. Use in cooking too. Sold by all grocers in the familiar red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

FOR THE JUNE BRIDE

WEDDING INVITATIONS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS — in fact all printing for social functions— if procured at The Examiner, will be found conventionally correct in every detail.

Care in the selection of wedding printing is equally as necessary as in the choice of the bride's costume; and our work reflects that quiet dignity which the occasion calls for and modernity demands.

We shall be pleased to serve you in an advisory capacity.

CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM

VICTORIA, B.C., May 19. ((CP)—Belief that the competitive system would have to be transformed into a co-operative one and that production and distribution together with the entire fiscal system must be controlled in the interest of human need rather than for private gain, was expressed in a resolution passed by the British Columbia conference of the United Church of Canada at its closing session yesterday.

FASHION SERVICE

The princess slip is indispensable in smart women's wardrobe to wear with the new slim silhouette frocks.

The moulded line of this slender mode hugs the figure to well below the hips where it starts to widen so as to have a comfortably full flaring hemline.

Its unbroken line from shoulder to hem does away with any conflicting lines to the outer garment, that so often entirely ruin an otherwise perfectly charming appearance.

It's easily made! A few seams to join! The hem may be finished with picot-edge or binding.

Style No. 2668 may be had in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. The 36-inch size requires 2 5-8 yards of 35-inch material with 2 yards of binding.

Flat crepe silk and crepe satin also suitable.

Price of pattern 15 cents.

Our large Fashion Book shows how to dress up to the minute at very little expense. It contains most attractive Paris designs for adults and children, embroidery, etc.

12 CANADIANS BE PRESENTED AT FIRST COURT

Mrs. Howard Ferguson Will Present Canadians to Their Majesties.

FIRST COURT TO-NIGHT.

LONDON, Eng., May 19 (Canadian Press Cable).—The King and Queen, assisted by the Prince of Wales, hold their first courts of the season in historic Buckinham Palace to-night and to-morrow night. There are no additions this year to the "royal circle" as the group which assembles in the closest vicinity to Their Majesties is called though Princess Mary Countess of Harewood, and the Duchess of York will have young relatives to be presented.

Lady Poltimore, who belongs to the Lascelles family (the family of Princess Mary's husband) and is a cousin of the Earl of Harewood, will present her daughter, Miss Sheila Bampfydle. Lady Glamis is presenting her eldest daughter, Miss Cecilia Bowes-Lyon, cousin to the Duchess of York.

To-morrow evening Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson, wife of Canada's high commissioner, will present 12 Canadian women to Their Majesties.

The Sultan of Johore and the Sultana, the former Mrs. Helen Wilson, a Scottish widow, will be particular targets of inspection in the parade of carriages along The Mall this evening. In the traditional line-up of carriages habitues of the court and trembling neophytes will be exposed for hours to the inquisitive gaze of the London crowd as they wait their summons.

The Sultana of Johore is expected to wear her priceless state jewels, most dazzling of which are a diamond tiara, a collar of diamonds of incalculable value and a shoulder cape of diamonds. The Sultan will be attired in blue and gold uniform decorated with jeweled orders.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Let us talk to-day about soups and I will endeavor to give a few facts a homemaker should know about them.

• • • • • • •

Some of them no doubt you already know, but perhaps you won't mind reading of them again.

• • • • • • •

When soup is made from meat or poultry or when stock is made from meat, the juices and the flavor of the meat must be extracted and enter into the liquid if the stock is good.

• • • • • • •

This leaves the meat minus a large portion of its nutriment and rather tasteless.

• • • • • • •

The housewife who would use the meat for both purposes of soup and meat course has to realize these facts and be guided by them or she cannot set a satisfactoriy table as far as these edibles are concerned.

• • • • • • •

She cannot have the finest flavored meat and the richest soups from one and the same piece of meat.

• • • • • • •

Meat and poultry frequently serve the double purpose in those places where one does not expect to find that most desirable thing, "home cooking" in which the flavor is proverbially delicious.

• • • • • • •

In the home these foods can also do double duty, but they require special care in preparation, nor should a housewife expect too much of soup-meat dishes.

• • • • • • •

One way to make meat and poultry provide both soup and meat, is to prepare them first for the solid food dishes in which all the elements are conserved to the benefit of this primary object.

• • • • • • •

Excellent soup can be made from once-cooked meat. Put the meat in cold water and gradually bring to the boiling point. Then simmer. Add onions, celery, carrots, salt and pepper and any other vegetables, cut in small pieces.

• • • • • • •

The meat can be chopped fine and be highly seasoned with salt, pepper, Chili sauce or tomato sauce or a little horse radish and be served in flattened spoonfuls with a poached egg on top of each portion. This makes a tasty dish.

• • • • • • •

Another method of making the meat do double duty is to divide the cooking.

• • • • • • •

Put the meat, uncut into cold water. Bring to a boil and simmer until some of the juices have been extracted. Remove the meat, which should have fat on it.

• • • • • • •

Put it into a casserole with sliced onions, sweet pepper and celery. Dust lightly with herbs such as sage, also salt and pepper and add a little water. Cover tightly and cook in the oven until tender.

• • • • • • •

For the soup add tomatoes fresh or canned and such vegetables as you like, including onions. Season to taste, strain and serve. As the meat juices are but partly extracted, the soup needs the tomato and the meat needs the vegetables but neither is entirely robbed of the real meat flavor.

Our Mail

Conducted by ANNE WILCOX

Dear Anne:—

Received your letter and also Esma's. Many thanks for all your trouble and Esma, I will write in a few days. Your letter is wonderful!

Well, Anne, I too, think your advice to Ad Infinitum is the best ever for we all meet that kind of people and after all they are not happy. There is another type we often meet who think no society is complete without them and if their word does not go, they will not do anything—just want to be boss.

Have we not had the loveliest rain? The woods are pretty with their fresh, green leaves and colored flowers. My daughter came home from school last night, her arms filled with red and white lilies.

Well, Quid Est, I hope you change your mind for two months is a long time. To the Mothers who sew I wonder how many try running a tuck on the inside of the hem of a wash dress which can be let out before they are washed and so save ripping the hem.

Here is a recipe for buns which our family enjoys. Make a rich biscuit dough, using four cups of flour; four teaspoons of cream of tartar; two teaspoons soda; a little salt; half a cup of sugar; two tablespoons of lard and two tablespoons of butter.

Mix this well, using enough milk to make the dough easily handled and roll out in flat sheet. Spread with butter and sprinkle with sugar and spice and roll like jelly roll; slice about three-quarters of an inch thick. Bake until nicely browned. I divide the dough in two to roll as it is easier handled.

Well, I must run away now or this will surely reach the W.P.

Yours sincerely,
Matilda.

It wasn't any trouble, at all, Matilda to forward the letter to you; in fact I like to repay those who have done things for me. Thank you for the hint and also the recipe. I am sure all the neighbors will appreciate them. Don't forget to write again, when you can find a few minutes to spare.

Dear Anne:—

Have just read Water Lily's fine letter and your reply and I hasten to say your are not selfish in expecting the neighbors to write—it is we who are selfish and think you have done wonderfully well to keep the page going and I have often read between the lines a note of discouragement and no wonder, when the letters add so much interest.

We humans need co-operation do we not? I am not much of a letter writer but I am really sorry that I have neglected to add my bit and I trust now that we have got off to a good start that we will keep right on and that before long will be wondering where to find space for them.

How lovely the Spring is. We have the most beautiful wild flowers in our woods just now. The bleeding heart is at its best. We picked a huge bouquet on Mother's Day for a dear friend and I think I never saw anything more beautiful than it was, with its lacy green foliage and then there are trilliums galore; also hosts of adder tongue, violets and spring beauty, to say nothing of Jack in the Pulpit and I almost forgot a massive bed of Cow Slips down by the brook. Overhead the trees leafing out in their delicate Spring loveliness and its like fairy land with birds singing and squirrels and chipmunks flitting about. We have some wonderful black squirrels which are quite tame as we never molest them.

Now I must away to bed. With all good wishes, as ever,

Vionnet.

Welcome back to the page Vionnet and what a splendid letter you wrote. How I would like to roam through that woods of yours with all its lovely flowers and little animals. Spring somehow brings a new hope doesn't it, and so your letter has brought a new hope to me, and perhaps soon we will be hearing from all the neighbors.

Anne Wilcox

NEIGHBORS TALK

"I am employed in a theatre and it is a problem to make ends meet, as I help support my mother and sisters. I like to dress well but haven't very much to spend on clothes. To give the appearance of variety to my slender wardrobe I change the color of a dress or stockings as soon as the things become faded. I always use Diamond Dyes for the work—using them as dyes for dresses and as tints for stockings. I have always gotten such perfect results that our neighbors talk about the great number of new things I have.

"I learned about Diamond Dyes from our wardrobe mistress. She says she has tried all the dyes on the market but none do such splendid work and are so easy to use as Diamond Dyes. I understand they are the world's most popular dyes—and they deserve to be."

Married Between Countries

A REAL WEDDING ACROSS THE LINE

Because the bride could not enter the United States on account of the quota regulations and because Ontario would not grant the groom a marriage license and recognize his Mexican divorce, this wedding took place at the international boundary on the Ambassador bridge, without the bride or groom leaving their respective countries. Reginald A. Crudge of Detroit and Miss Emily Hunt of Windsor, Ont., are the happy couple, while the one who tied the knot is Judge John D. Watts.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D

RICH FOODS AND THE LIVER.

Some years ago it was agreed that the number of women with gall stones, outnumbered the men by 4 to 1.

It was also generally agreed that the most frequent cause of this was the tight high corset worn by the women. Already since the doing away of the high corset gall stones are not found any oftener in women than in men.

Now although the number of people with gall stones is very large—about one case in every twenty adults—the number of cases giving trouble would be only a fraction of that number.

What does this mean?

That when about one in every twenty adults have gall stones, that there must be many more who have disturbances of the liver and gall bladder which do not really get as far as the formation of gall stones. In other word: there are a great many people who have an uneasy feeling in the region of the liver, are troubled with the formation of gas in stomach and intestines, who have one sided headaches, fits of indigestion and constipation, periods of depression and other symptoms, who never think of blaming a sluggish liver for these symptoms.

Yet as you will remember it is the lack of movement of the liver and gall bladder that is one of thr big factors in inflaming se gall bladder and causing gall stones.

Gall stones are not usually found in an individual who moves his body about by exercise or work especially bending exercises. Where exercise is taken the lungs must take in larger quantities of air and so they fill deeper in the chest and go right down and press through the floor of chest against the liver and gall bladder thus squeezing them, promoting the circulation, and preventing gall stones.

Unfortunately just at a time when the liver is sluggish and likewise the gall bladder, rich foods-cream and yoke of eggs—are often eaten, and the gall bladder which normally should empty its bile into the intestine, actually refuses to do so, and further congestion occurs.

Of course the lesson for all of us is that if we take plenty of exercise, or practise deep breathing we will timulate the liver and gall bladder and prevent congestion. If we will not exercise it would be well to eat sparingly of fats, cream, cheese, butter and eggs. Now as these are among the best all round body building foods known, our wisest plan would be to take exercise, and be able to enjoy and get the benefit of these foods.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

THOUGHTS THAT SING

As long as music's voices
Keep ringing in my ears,
I can forget the trials
That, else, might bring me tears.
As long as I can hear
Glad choruses of song,
I can ignore the shadows
Of hours lone and long.

For blest is he who journeys
Always with thoughts that sing,
Life holds for him a rapture
No other gift can bring;
No weaves anew the lyrics
Of mocking-bird and lark,
He hears the muted music
Of gardens in the dark.

HONOR MEMORY OF MRS. R. HALL

Memorial Service is Held at Colborne When Presbyterial Meets.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. of Peterborough Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada was held in St. Andrew's Church, Colborne, on Saturday when about eighty-five delegates were registered and Mrs. C. C. Armstrong, president, was in the chair.

The devotional exercises for the morning session were taken by the Campbellford Auxiliary and words of welcome were extended by Rev. C. G. Graham, followed by the business discussion and roll call. Following the closing exercises for the morning session, dinner was served by the ladies of the Church.

For the afternoon session, the devotional exercises were led by the Norwood Auxiliary, following which a memorial service for Mrs. Robert Hall of St. Paul's, Peterboro, revered honorary president, was conducted by ex-president, Mrs. D. Ewart, in her usual very capable manner. Two hymns were sung very softly during this service, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Shall We Gather At the River." This was a very impressive service in loving memory of a beautiful life.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. H. W. Morgan, Peterborough and a beautiful solo was given by Miss Eleanor Henderson, followed by an address by Rev. George W. McKay, of Formosa, who gave a very interesting talk on his work and the ways and customs of the people among whom he laboured.

The Provincial Report was given by Mrs. G. F. Clark who was the delegate to Windsor in April. The Mission Band Roll Call was given by Mrs. Learmouth and an invitation was extended by the ladies of Port Hope for the next meeting in January, 1932, this being graciously accepted.

A vote of thanks was tendered to those who had in any way made the visit so pleasant, while the delegates were in Colborne. Greetings from sister societies were kindly extended by Mrs. Church of the Baptist Church and Mrs. Wilson of the United Church.

Mrs. Head spoke a few words followed by the closing exercises of the sessions.

14 MEMBERS OF LAKEFIELD LODGE ARE GIVEN VETERANS' JEWELS

Lakefield I. O. O. F. Was Instituted in 1905 in Old Village Hall.

OTHER PRESENTATIONS.

LAKEFIELD, May 19. — Of the eighteen veterans, all charter members of Lakefield Lodge, No. 368, I.O.O.F., to whom veterans' jewels were to be presented at the meeting held last evening, fourteen were present to receive their award at the hands of D.D.G.M. Price, who excelled himself in the splendid address he gave in making the presentations. These gentlemen were: F. J. Burgess, E. J. Butler, W. J. Charlton, S. J. Charlton, Theo Crawford, D. H. Charlton, Bert Davis, R. B. English, Bruce Garbutt, H. C. Garbutt, G. G. Hendren, George E. Johnson, David Miller, and G. H. Spence. Brothers J. E. Kelly, Bert Kidd, F. E. Kline, and R. D. Murduff will receive their jewels at a later date.

This Lodge was instituted in the year 1905 in the old village hall since burned down. Members of the Order were present in large numbers from Peterborough and Millbrook to honor the Lakefield veterans, among whom were District Deputy Grand Master J. H. Price, of Peterborough, and Past District Deputy Grand Master Harry Fallis, of Millbrook, who occupied chairs to the right and left of the Acting Noble Grand, William G. Morrison, Past Gand, an active member of the Lodge for 21 years, and the present treasurer in office, who carried through his duties as chairman as song leader with Sherman Rowe at the piano.

One special feature of the occasion was the presence of the three Charlton brothers, who received their veterans' jewels after a membership of 26 years in the Lodge.

Another pleasant event was the presentation by the District Committee No. 44 of a valuable Past District Deputy Grand Master's jewel to D.D.G.M. Price, who is now completing his term of office. This pleasant duty was in the hands of P.D.D.G.M. Harry Fallis, who expressed his great pleasure in making the presentation to Brother Price, who, he said, richly deserved the honorable decoration. Brother Price expressed his deep appreciation of the recognition of his services. The committee in charge of this event included W. G. Morrison, M. A. Moore, and S. H. Charlton.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

DECORATIVE FRUIT

In case you have no flowers to make a centerpiece for your dining table, don't forget the pictorial quality of fruits. A low basket of shiny red apples, yellow pears, and clusters of grapes is a delight to the eye as well as to the palate.

Humble Hen Is Boon To Western Farmer

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19.—(C.P.)—The humble hen is one of the greatest factors in aiding the Canadian West through these days of stress, says Fred C. Elford, Dominion poultry husbandman, following an official trip through to the Pacific coast.

"It is poultry which is carrying things along," he added. "For the farmers have the feed on hand and are turning it into new laid eggs. Even though eggs are down to nine cents a dozen in some sections, the cash farmers are securing for these egg permits them to purchase the necessities for themselves and families."

SARNIA GRANTS BUS FRANCHISE

System Will Take Place of Street Cars Which Suspended Operations Recently.

STUDY AGREEMENT.

SARNIA, Ont., May 19—The City Council last evening approved of the application of W. E. Harrold for a bus franchise in this city and instructed the city solicitor to meet with Mr. Harrold and work out an agreement.

Approval was given on the recommendation of the Industrial and Transportation Committee, which had investigated several proposals. One item of the application asking for exemption from taxation of all buildings, equipment and income for a period of five years was rejected, the Councillors holding such a concession outside of their jurisdiction.

The bus system will take the place of street cars which suspended operations recently. In the interim, independentb uses and taxis are supplying transportation.

The successful applicant resides in Corunna.

GUY CANTRELL ALLOWS 6 HITS TO KEYSTONES

Rabbitt Scores Winning Run in 8th Without Aid of Base Hits.

LEAFS GET THREE HITS.

Shiver and Quellich Drive Balls Out of Stadium for Homers.

TORONTO, May 19. — Playing a much improved brand of ball the Leafs leaped back into popular favor yesterday when they defeated the Reading Keystones by 2 to 1 in as tight a hurling duel as will be witnessed here this season. Guy Cantrell and Johnny Welch, stellar right-handers, were in great form, and while the locals were outhit by six to three and scored the winning marker without making a safety, they were not outplayed. Cantrell being particularly effective when danger threatened.

Manager O'Neill took over the catching duties and assigned the coaching task along the third base line to Art Stack. This bit of strategy brought results. O'Neill was the same old reliable, while Stack was full of pep and made a hit with the fans. As a result the Leafs showed a lot more fight and delighted the small gathering of fans who braved the chilly breezes to see their favorites in action.

Joe Rabbitt was the hero of the fray. This fleet outfielder made a remarkable catch to retire Conroy and the side in the eighth inning, and then, being lead-off man in the Toronto half, he promptly drew a pass, advancing to second on Richardson's sacrifice, stole third and then scored the winning run when Joe Harris lifted a long fly to Whitman. Rabbitt drew two walks and pilfered as many bases, thus earning a real trial as a regular.

Over the Fences

Art Shiver gave the locals a one-run lead in the second inning when he poled the ball aver the right-field fence but in the sixth Cantrell grooved one for that dangerous batsman, George Quellich, and the Reading slugger found the range, the ball disappearing across the fence in left field and tying the score. Quellich has a habit of performing this feat at Maple Leaf Stadium. He cannot be trifled with.

On three occasions the Keystones' lead-off man reached the runway, but Cantrell bore down with telling results and no damage occurred, barring that to the cause of "Pants" Rowland's men. In favor of the visitors it must be said that they did not look like tailenders. They have fighting spirit and they tried all the time.

There were only two errors, one by Jay Partridge of the Keys and one by the usually reliable Billy Rogell. However, the latter accepted nine other chances without a miscue and figured in a double play in the first inning. There were three such triple killings, the Pennsylvanians making two to keep Welch out of more trouble.

EPSOM DERBY ODDS

LONDON, May 19 (Canadian Press Cable)—Odds on J. A. Dewar's Cameronian, favorite for the Epsom derby again shortened a bit in the call-over at the Victoria club yesterday.

The following were the odds on the prominent contenders:

Cameronian 8½ to two against.
Jacopo Boy and Dr. Dolittle 100 to eight.
Goyescas and Pomme d 'Api 100 to seven.
Revelllion 15 to one.
Sir Andrew 20 to one.
Concerto and Orpen 28 to one.
Carmelus 33 to one.

The blue ribbon event of the turf will be run over the historic mile and a half course at Epsom Downs on Wednesday, June 3.

TOURNEYS WILL BE HELD AT LINDSAY

Sports Will Occupy Prominent Part in 109th Batallotn Old Boys' Reunion.

Sports will occupy a good share of the spotlight in Lindsay at the 109th Battalion Old Boys' Reunion, May 23-24-25. The town will be given over to the entertainment and amusement these days, and hundreds of visitors are expected to be present.

A hardball and softball tournament have been arranged with a number of district teams participating. A men's softball outfit will go from here to take part. Race and track events of all kinds, with numerous prizes, will be run off on Monday. A number of harness horses from Peterborough will compete in the two horse races, 2.30 and 2.20 classes, with a $300 purse up for prizes.

Forty gymnasts are expected to attend, as well as trick motorcyclists and bicyclists. Toronto's best motorcycle racers will do their stuff on Monday at the track.

The big boxing tournament will take place in the Armouries Saturday night with scrappers from Peterborough, Toronto, Midland, Lindsay and other towns seen in action. A whole flock of mittsters will come down from Toronto, and the fight bill will likely prove the best one seen in recent years, east of the Queen City. Lou Marsh will be third man in the ring.

Among the many visitors who will be on hand, are a Toronto regiment 400 strong, 200 Peterborough Rangers as well as Machine Gun battalion from here, a Victoria and Haliburton regiment, and six brass bands, including the Toronto prize-winning band.

Monday morning will see a huge parade of bands, troops, floats, bicyclists, clowns, etc. The whole three days will be one long round of excitement and pleasure for Lindsay, with the town turned over to the merry-makers.

Must Prove Claim To "Hurry" Kane

BATHURST, N.S., May 19 (C. P.)—The Halifax Wolverines will have to prove they have a proper claim on the services of John "Hurry" Kane, Hamilton, Ont., hockey right winger, and that he was "enticed away" by officials of the Charlottetown abegeits, if President H. O. Schryer of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association gives a ruling in their favor.

President Schryer, following a protest by Harry Butler, Wolverine manager, wrote the Halifax club that they must prove these points before he is able to take action in their favor.

BEARS BREAK BISON STREAK

Newark Settles Issues in Eighth Inning Rally By Beating Herd 4-3.

ROYALS DRUB SKEETERS.

BUFFALO, May 19.—The winning streak of the Buffalo Bisons was shattered here yesterday afternoon after a run of six straight, when the Newark Bears squeezed out a 4-to-3 victory in a listless contest, thus keeping a grip on first place in the standing.

The Bears drove Joe Bloomer from the box, and on the game with a two-run scoring splurge in the eighth inning. Three singles by Zitsmann, Rosenberg and Hargreaves were combined with a sacrifice and a walk to decide the issue.

URBANSKI'S BIG DAY

MONTREAL, May 19.—The Jersey City Skeeters played carelessly behind their pitchers yesterday and five hurlers were combed for 13 hits as the Royals won the third game of the series, 12 to 5. Urbanski led the attack with three hits, one of them being a home run inside the park that scored two of his mates ahead of him.

Thormahlen pitched seven innings, and was taken out in the eighth, but was credited with his fourth win of the season, and his second straight over the Skeeters. Urbanski played sensationally in the field for the Royals.

WINGS BEAT ORIOLES

ROCHESTER, May 19.—Rochester scored three times in the fifth inning to wipe out an early Baltimore lead, and the Red Wings defeated the Orioles yesterday by 4 to 3.

Herman Bell was effective with men on bases, and, although he allowed nine hits, he kept them well scattered after the first session, when Baltimore scored two on four hits. Wilson's triple was the big blow of the fourth, following singles by Holm and Bell. Jordan then singled Wilson home with what proved to be the winning run.

WINNIPEG BATTLER ADVANCES INTO FASTER "HEAVY" RANKS

Renault Sends Weigand to Hospital By Punch to Jaw in Fifth Round.

GOOD FISTIC DISPLAYS.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19. (CP)—A one-sided victory last night over Pete Latzo, Scranton Pa., former world's welterweight champion, has hoisted Charlie Belanger, ruler of Canada's light heavyweight division, into the big money ranks.

By cuffing and jolting Latzo all about the ring in the eight round headliner of the Shamrock Athletic Club's show here Belanger earned for himself a shot at one of the leading contenders for the world's title.

The success which crowned the Shamrock club's efforts last night has just about convinced the promoters a match with Belanger and Leo Lomski, or, possibly an even more formidable oponent, would pack the fans in at Maple Leaf stadium and negotiations are proceeding to this effect.

Belanger, who spends his spare time putting over real estate deals, here and in his native Winnipeg, has fought three sparkling bouts since his decision to domicile here.

His effort against Latzo, considered a fairly tough opponent, stamped him as one of the greatest fighters Canada has produced. The Scranton miner furnished just about enough opposition to give the dusky-hued Canuck a good workout. Belanger won six rounds, Latzo one, and the other was even. In the eighth round the winner unleashed a ruthless attack to Latzo's head and body which sent the conqueror of Mickey Walker reeling about the ring, almost out on his feet. Belanger scaled 178 and Latzo 174½.

Weigand, more agile then Renault, took the first two rounds handily, but from then on was in trouble. He was totally unprepared for the slashing attack launched by Renault starting the fifth and the frame was less than half a minute old when the Montrealer smashed home a terrific right hand chop to Weigand's jaw which sent the Buffalonian hurtling to the canvas. He tried to rise at the count of eight but was too badly hurt and collapsed back on the floor. When his seconds were unable to revive him Renault hoisted him to his gigantic shoulders and carried him to the dressing room.

Taken to Hospital

To-day Weigand rests in a hospital suffering from a concussion. His condition is serious. He was unconscious for nearly five hours during the night and only to-day showed signs of regaining consciousness.

Renault outweighed his opponent by 30 pounds, tipping the beam at 212½ compared with 182½ for Weigand.

TOMMY ARMOUR SAILS

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19 (C.P.)—Tommy Armour, P.G.A. and Canadian open champion, sailed aboard the Europa last night for Europe, where he will play in the British open golf championship at Carnoustie, starting June 1. Armour was accompanied by Mrs. Armour.

Al Morelli, the newest Italian college entry into the game of push and pull, has the promise to be the greatest mat sensation since Gus Sonnenberg crashed in to the limelight. During the summer months he keeps in trim by carting ashes from the city of Revere and can probably be called the most learned ash man in the country. For three weeks last June he swung a pick and shovel with a street gang, but his former love, the ash can, finally weaned him away from the shovel job. Getting down to hard figures, we might calculate the amount of exercise that Morelli takes in a day. For example, the ash can schedule calls for fourteen miles of walking beside the truck every day with stops approximately every fifty yards to life an average of four barrels a stop from the ground to the receiver on a height of ten feet. Frequently these barrels weigh 200 pounds, giving somewhat of an idea as to the amount of endurance he must have. Morelli really doesn't know his own strength. It is a daily stunt of his in the gymnasium to lift from the floor 250 pounds of dead weight, a feat that seems incredible for a man of his height and weight.

SINGER BUYS RELEASE

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19 (C.P.) Al Singer, former lightweight champion, is going to attempt a come-back under nlew management. Singer, who lost his title when he was knocked out by Tony Canzoneri, announced he had paid his manager, Hymie Caplin, $15,000 for release from a three-year contract Caplin held on his services. His brother will act as his manager in the future, Singer said.

GIANTS WIN CARD SERIES BY 3-2 COUNT

Bill Walker Holds Cardinals Yesterday and McGrawmen Cop Third Game 6-3.

ATHLETICS WIN TENTH.

Luckless Indians Retreat Under Heavy Fire—Yankees Squelch Tigers.

(By Gayle Talbot, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.)

John J. McGraw, the records will show, was the only big league manager to come out flat-footed this spring with a prediction that that new ball could have a marked influence on the National League race and to base his plans accordingly.

"All I need," the Giants' pilot said down at San Antonio, "is pitching, and I'll get that with this new ball. It's going to make a big difference. You'll see."

How well McGraw sized up the situation is admirably illustrated in the standing today. Largely because they have been getting a bit of hurling that would have been little short of miraculous a year ago the Giants are running a powerful second in the National League, a bare half-game behind the St. Louis Cardinals.

McGraw's moundsmen have gone the route in 14 out of 24 games, the highest average in either league. Second in that respect are the Boston Braves, whose pitchers have started and finised 14 out of 25. The Philadelphia Athletics, with 13 complete games out of 24, hold the best record in the American.

Defeats Cards 6-3.

Another Giant, Bill Walker, pitched the full nine yesterday in setting the Cardinals down 6 to 3. The crack left-hander allowed only six hits and none on the runs off him was earned. The victory gave the Giants two out of three from the 1930 champions.

Ed Brandt, the Braves' big southpaw, who could win only four victories out of 41 games in which he participated last year, scored his sixth straight triumph at the expense of the Pittsburgh Pirates 3 to 1. The lone score off him was the result of a home run by Phillips, the Pirates rookie catcher.

Led by Babe Herman, the Brooklyn Robins enjoyed a field day against the luckless Cincinnati Reds. The score was 14 to 4 and Herman cracked a home run, triple, double and single.

Rally to Beat Boston

The Chicago White Sox turned the nearest trick of the day in the American league when they rallied for six runs in the ninth round to beat Boston, 9 to 8. Simons, a pitcher drove in the winning runs with a lusty double after two were out.

There was no chance of a let-up on the part of the Athletics as they continued their whirlwind tour of the west. The defeated Cleveland for their tenth straight victory, 10 to 7, taking a firmer hold on first place and sending the Indians down to sixth. Foxx, Simmons and Cochrane each got three hits.

The New York Yankees kept pace by scoring a 20 to 8 victory over the Detroit Tigers and squaring their four-game series it was a wild one, the Yanks batting around in three innings against four various and assorted Tiger pitchers. Even Mark Koenig, bespectacled shortstop, took a turn on the mound before it was over.

WARSAW GIRLS DEFEAT LAKEFIELD

Although this was the first game of ball the Warsaw girls played this season, their battery was much superior to that of Lakefield. While the infield did exceptionally well, the outfield had very little to do, taking care of all the long flies, only making one error.

The battery of the Lakefield team did well, but the fielders had not the experience of the Warsaw team.

The line-up as follows:

Warsaw—A. Would, p; D. Tucker, c; D. Payne, sb; A. Carlow, 2b; M. McCauley, 3b; H. Sharpe, ss; R. Robertson, rf; J. Munroe, cf; M. Payne, lf.

Lakefield—M. Abrams, p; B. Carveth, c; D. Watson, 1b; P. Charlton, 2b; J. Galvin, 3b; A. Emery, ss; M. Walsh, rf; M. Webdale, cf; B. Abrams, lf.

Game by innings:

Warsaw ..... 7105187—29
Lakefield ..... 2003115—12

72ND RUNNING KING'S PLATE ON SATURDAY

Woodbine Park Opener is One of Oldest Turf Fixtures on American Continent.

SCORE OF FAVORITES

Anxious Trainers Bring Charges Through Training Grind in Splendid Condition.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (By The Canadian Press)—Day of days for lovers of the thoroughbred in this city and throughout most of the province is just five days away. Next Saturday keenly trained horse flesh will parade to the post at beautiful Woodbine Park in the 72nd running of the King's Plate, oldest turf fixture to be run continuously on the American continent.

While the opening of the spring racing season at Thorncliffe Park may have taken some of the tradition and glamor from the commencement of the Ontario jockey club's spring meeting which in other years heralded the call of the bugle and pounding of hoofs down the home stretch nothing apparently can detract from the interest in the "plate."

Everyone has a "tip" these days as the plate eligibles breese through their final workouts. Few of them will do any serious work after today. Anxious trainers have brought their charges through the irksome training grind in splendid condition and workout records are shattered daily.

The race is considered one of the most open in years. Nearly a score of equine aristocrats are considered to have a fine chance of winning the plate, 50 guineas the gift of the King and the major portion of the $10,000 added.

Eligibles who have won considerable early favor by their fine trials include Froth Blower, Sky Gazer, Bronze, Pampered Pet, Par Excellence, Mythical Lore, Vestip, Fess and Freethinker.

CLOTH MAKERS SCORE 11 RUNS IN TWO FRAMES

Free Passes and Errors on Part of Pressmen Hand North-enders an Easy Win.

EXAMINER INFIELD POOR.

Triples By Collins and Board Send in Three Counters for Losers.

Two big innings, the third and fourth, were all the Dominion Woollens needed to hang a 15 to 3 licking on the Examiner in the Men's City Softball League fixture at Central last night. In those two frames, they scored eleven runs, mostly on free passes and errors.

The winners deserved their victory, receiving good pitching, snappy fielding and hitting the apple hard and often. And they took advantage of all the breaks that came their way. They had eight hits to their credit against four for the losers. Four errors were chalked up against them, but the Examiner outfit booted the ball for ten misplays.

The losers got two runs in the first, when Collins tripled with two on. They scored their other run in the third on a three-bagger by Board and an error. From then on they were blanked, though in a scoring position several times.

The Woolens crew scored once in the first and three times in the second. They broke loose in the third and tallied six on a flock of walks, hits and errors. In the fourth, five runners crossed the plate before the side was retired. They were blanked the final three frames.

Examiner Hurlers Poor

Mix, on the mound for the D. W. team, held the others to three hits and struck out five in the four innings he pitched Wedlock went in to start the fifth and held them to one bingle, while fanning one, he walked two. Butcher, hurling for the Examiner, fanned three and alloed but one hit. However, he was wild and walked seven batters. Scates relieved him in the turbulent third. He had trouble for two frames, but went along nice the last three. He whiffed three, handed out three free tickets, and was touched up for seven clouts.

The winners' infield and outfield both played nice de fencive ball, but the only doubleplay in the game was pulled off by the losers, on a smart bit of work by Cullen and Board. Dugan, behind the bat for the same team, played a wonderful game all around. The game was called at the end of the seventh on account of darkness.

The teams:

Examiner: Outram, cf; Board, lf and 3b; Gainey, 2b; Collins, ss 2nd rf; Taylor, 1b; Dugan, c; Glover, 3b and lf; Cullen, rf and ss; Butcher, p and cf; Scates, p.

Dominion Woollens: Thirnbeck, 3b; McCarrol, 2b; P. Hilliard, lf; Magraw 1b; D. Hilliard, ss0p Wedlock, cf and p; Cordery, rf; Mix, p and cf; Lazure, c.

CASUAL COMMENT

A delegation from Oshawa went to Belleville Friday night and assured the C.O.B.L. that if Peterborough were in for sure this summer, they would also enter a team. It sort of looks like the Motor City means it when they go all the way to Belleville. Well, we'll see.

• • • • • • •

Word from the Quinte town is that the Nats are going to get in plenty of overtime practise this week, so as to be set for their game with the Petes on Monday. They haven't been doing much, so far.

• • • • • • •

And we hear they ha' 'Lefty' Morris, Hillcests' hurler for the past three years, living in Belleville now. The Toronto pitcher was moved recently to that town by his employers.

• • • • • • •

Morris is rated one of the classiest southpaws in Toronto in recent years, and if he plays with the Gerowmen this summer, the local hitters had better get plenty of batting practise. "Letty", along with "Hoot" Gibson, Alex Weir and Tommy Pointer, will round out a formidable pitching staff.

• • • • • • •

The Mens Softball game to-night will throw All Saints and the Sugar Bowlers onto the Central diamond and let them scramble for a win. And tomorrow "ye doughty Examiner boys" will return to the fray against the West Clockers.

• • • • • • •

The Dominion Woollens weren't going to be worsted last night. No sir, they wove a 15—3 win around the Paper outfit, holding them entirely off the score-sheet for five innings.

• • • • • • •

The Clothmakers played nice ball, both twirlers going along in fine style, Lazure holding them up okay, and both infield and outfield backing 'em to a man.

• • • • • • •

The reason we can mention the Examiner hits is because they are easy to remember. They only got four, while the other crew had eight. The Sports Department had several phone calls at the office last night, with wisecrackers wanting to know if we were putting out an extra edition on the game.

• • • • • • •

A joke is a joke, but it can be carried too far, and the first guy that says the word "fifteen or three" around her for a week, is going to be downright unpopular.

• • • • • • •

Mildred Mortimer, on the mound for the Westclox girls, went along in good style in their win over C. G. E. in an exhibition tilt they had last night over at the Bowl. They had a flock of fans on hand. The girls found the diamond first class, and the seats around will be when the paint dries.

• • • • • • •

The first league game for the girls is tomorrow night, when C. G. E. play Sixth Line on the latter's grounds. Thursday night, Choates play Keene, and the first local game will be between Brintons and Westclox on Friday.

• • • • • • •

Queen Mary plays at King Edward, and Prince of Wales at King George this evening. They ought to be good games. That wasn't a bad one between Queen Alex and Central yesterday, although the latter won 20 to 10.

• • • • • • •

Two double plays for the winners, along with heavy hitting and good pitching, gave them the edge. Queen Alex defence wasn't so good.

FIRST FIXTURE IS PLAYED ON EAST CITY BOWL

Winners Sew Up Game in 7th Inning on Three Bagger By Mildred Mortimer.

SOME NICE HURLING.

Losers Make Several Costly Throws in Outfield—Fast in the Infield.

East City Softball fandom were given their first taste of competition last night when the C.G.E. and Westclox entries in the Ladies' City League clashed in an exhibition tilt on the new grounds at the east end of Hunter Street bridge, and played nine innings of snappy ball which resulted in an 11-6 victory for the Clock Makers.

The 'Electrics' put up a strong argument until the seventh innings when they were leading 6-5 but two wild pitches and a three bagger by Mildred Mortimer sewed up the game for the winners. Both teams hit hard and often and the infield work for the most part was fast and accurate. The losers were somewhat below par in the outfield and made several costly throws.

Hilda Joyce twirled five innings for the Westclox exhibiting plenty of speed and control, although she was hit rather freely by the South-end team. Miss Charlton finished the game showing an impressive delivery which should have the teams guessing before long.

Mac Connors went the whole route for the C.G.E. on the mound fanning three and passing one. Her specialty was a low fast ball which was well under control but both Amyott and Creighton who shared the pi tching duties had difficulty taking the low ones which permitted much freedom on the bases. Laura Bosley on short and Margaret Flynn at the keystone sack for the C.G.E. were the pick of that team while Kay Ashmore secured the longest hit for the same crew, a three bagger in to deep centre.

The Westclox infield and catcher showed plenty of pep and finish, Kingdon at second and Mildred Mortimer at first being outstanding.

The teams:

Westclox: Florence Weese, rf; Dot Webb, 3b; Bel Thirnbeck, c; Mildred Mortimer, 1b; Mortimer, ss; Hilda Joyes, p0; Kingdon, 2b; Marie Ferguson, 2b; Audrey Crary, cf; Merrett, lf; Chartren, p.

CENTRAL WINS BY TEN RUNS

Winners Hold 17-2 Lead Over Queen Alex Outfit Until Sixth Frame.

CLEVER BASE RUNNING.

Hitting the ball hard and running wild on the bases accounted for the 20-10 victory the Central team pulled over Queen Alex yesterday on the former's diamond. The winners hit well, pitched better and had fewer errors. They led all the way, and had a 17-2 lead on them up until the sixth, when a five-run rally gave the losers heart. They got three more in the last to make the score a little closer.

Wiley pitched for Central, and had little trouble until the final two frames. He fanned eleven, and kept their nine hits scattered the first five innings. He received good support most of the way, both in the field and at bat.

Clark was on the rubber for the losers for five frames, and fanned five, but was touched for thirteen hits. Ash went in for the last two and allowed three hits. The winners got their runs, one in the first, four in the second and seven in the bad third. The fourth was a goose egg, but they got five in the fifth and three more in the last. The Q. A. team scored twice in the first, and not again until sixth when they got five runs. They crossed the pan three more times in the final inning.

Two Double Plays

Two nice double plays were pulled off by the Centralers, one by Doherty and Ascott in the third, and the other by Clark and McLelland in the fifth. They had ten errors, against the others' fourteen. Dorrington and Bradley went good in the field for the northenders.

The teams:

Queen Alex—Clark, p and 1b; Heard, c and 2b; Ash, 1b and p; Morrow, 2b and c; Sharpe, cf; Dorrington, ss; Willison, rf; Bradley, 3b; Dainton, lf.

COUNTY LEAGUE RE-ORGANIZED

Plans for Holding Field Day Discussed at Belleville Gathering.

OFFICERS ELECTED

STIRLING, May 19. — (Examiner Correspondence). — On Friday evening a number of bowlers attended the banquet given by the Hastings County Lawn Bowling League in the Queen's Hotel, Belleville.

The weekly schedule, which was followed last year, did not meet with the approval of the different villages, but an annual field day seemed to be considered more favorably.

Officers were elected as follows: President, G. Campbell, Deseronto; vice-president, W. J. Whitty, Stirling; secretary - treasurer, Fred Liberty, Belleville. Other members of the executive are: A. H. Buskard, Deloro; Dr. Carleton, Stirling; W. J. Connor, Madoc; Dr. Paul, Tweed; George Woodley, Belleville; Mr. Miller, Deseronto.

Madoc was not represented at the meeting.

Mayor George Reid gave an address of welcome.

One objection to the weekly game was that the enthusiasm of the local club as a whole was dampened when one night a week was spent in this way.

Y.P.S. Meets.

A meeting was held of St. Andrew's Literary Young People on Monday night, with Alex. Nathan as leader.

Lorne Anderson gave a piano solo, "Nola"; James Ward, a reading, "My Mother's Hand is on My Brown"; Mrs. James Montgomery gave a reading, entitled "Mother"; a duet was given by Freida Matthews and Mrs. Roy Eggleton.

A pageant was given on "The Spirit of Motherhood" by Mrs. Annie Bisonette and three attendants.

The first gave a talk on the mother of John Wesley. He was one of a family of nineteen. When their rectory was burned John had a miraculous escape. His work was always crowned with success.

The second spoke of the mother of Abraham Lincoln. He once remarked, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my mother." Abraham was born in the backwoods of Kentucky. His mother died when he was ten. He always cherished her memory. She was called the Madonna of the backwoods.

The third spoke of the wonderful mother of Lord Haldaine. She lived to a very old age.

At the close the first attendant brought to the spirit of motherhood a tribute of gratitude; the second brought a tribute of affection, and the third brought a tribute of service.

NEW SCHEDULE LOCAL SOCCER

Games on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday of This Week—Players Register.

DELORO DELEGATE ABSENT.

Many details of great importance was brought before the board of be Peterborough and District Footb Association, last evening, in the C mber of Commerce. All the member of the executive were present along with the club representative.

The main item on the agenda was the first half of the local schedule as submitted to the members for their consideration. The chairman of the committee, Fred Sutcliffe, along with Jack Cairns and Jack Clark, brought out in detail the many games that had to be considered, owing to the recent admittance of the Deloro team. There was only one charge requested and that is the game scheduled for Wednesday evening, instead of the Tuesday as drawn up. The reason being that the contestants found it impossible to notify their quota in proper time. The schedule is as follows:

Wednesday, May 20th—Brinton vs. C P.C. on Brinton Ground. Kick off at 6.15 prompt. Referee Alex McKinley.

Thursday, May 21st—Caledonians vs. C.G.E. (J. Cross Benefit). Game, King Edward Park. Referee J. Hodson. Kick off at 6.15.

Players Registered.

Only two players were registeres, viz: —Frederick James Dyer for Brinton. Robert Clyde for the C.G.E.

There was no club representative present from Deloro and the board awaited further notification as to their position in the matter. The secretary informed the members that he had fifteen forms on hand for them but awaited written application and finances therewith. They play their first game in Peterborough next Tuesday evening on King Edward Park against the Scots.

All clubs are requested to give a list of their officers to the secretary as soon as possible.

Art Giroux Crowned Bantamweight Champ

QUEBEC, Que., May 19. (CP)—A new Canadian bantamweight champion was crowned last night, when Art Giroux of Montreal, scored a clean cut knockout over Joe Villeneuve, of Quebec in the seventh round of a scheduled ten round championship encounter. The end came with startling suddenness after one minute of fighting in the seventh, when Giroux swung a hard right swing to the champion's jaw. Villeneuve dropped to the floor on his knees and elbows, with his head resting in his gloves. As referee Ned MceDrmott toiled off the count, he fell and was lifted and carried to his corner, completely out.

COTTON ABSENT IN PRO TOURNEY

British Stars Among Missing in Thousand Guineas Professional Tournament.

QUALIFYING ROUND TO-DAY.

LEEDS, Eng., May 19. (AP)—The professional golfers swung into action in the Thousand Guineas professional tournament on the Sandmoor course this morning but with some of the British stars among the missing. The absentees included Henry Cotton who won the Southport pro event last week and also Abe Mitchell. Mitchell is ill and Cotton has gone to Carnoustie to practice for the British open.

The United States contingent comprise Joe Turnesa, who won this tournament two years ago, Horton Smith, Tony Manero and Joe Kirkwood. Prominent Argentines were Marcu Churio, Jose Jurado, Hector Freccero and Tomasco Genta.

The first 18 holes of the qualifying round were to be played to-day and the final 18 tomorrow. Match play will start Thursday ending in a 36-hole final Saturday.

Smith was erratic all the way taking a 40 out and a 36 in for a total of 76.

Churio played brilliant golf in turning in a 70, 36 each way.

Hector Freccero, another Argentine entry, took 77 and Tomasco Genta, a fellow-countryman, needed 78.

COMMITTED FOR THEFT

SARNIA, Ont., May 19. —(CP)—Ceril Warnes was committed for trial on a charge of theft at the close of a preliminary hearing in county police court today. It is alleged that Warnes took shelving, a set of wagon springs, a plow and other articles from a house owned by William, his former employer.

LAWN BOWLING CLUB WILL BE OFFICIALLY OPENED MAY 25TH

Two Games of Open Tournament Will Be Played in Afternoon and Evening.

GREENS IN GOOD SHAPE.

The big day that Peterborough lawn bowlers have been awaiting for seven months will be here next Monday, May 25, when the 1931 bowling season will be opened on the club's green, by an open tournament in which all members of the club have been invited to take part. There will be two games in the afternoon of 10 ends each, starting at 1.30, and two in the evening starting at 7 o'clock. The members of the four winning teams will all receive prizes. There will be no entry fees. In a sense it will be a "get acquainted" tournament, inasmuch as the old and new members will meet each other on the greens for the first time.

The lawns are showing the results of the splendid care they have received since last fall. The west lawn is like a green carpet and the east lawn almost as good. Some bare patches that appeared on this lawn towards the close of last season, are now so well covered with grass, they can scarcely be detected. The directors of the club are meeting this evening when final arrangements for the tournament will be completed and the finishing touches placed on a number of other important matters relating to the season's activities.

FIVE KILLED IN FIGHT

SIMLA, India, May 19. —(AP)—Five persons were killed and fifteen injured today in a clash between villagers and the police at Khuyan Sarwab in the Ferozepore district of the Punjab.

Stasiak Wins From Pat McGill On Foul

MONTREAL, Que., May 19. (CP)—Stanley Stasiak, 240 pound Polish wrestler, was declared winner on a foul over Pat McGill, Omaha, Neb., a little over half an hour after what was to have been a two-out-of-three wrestling bout here last night. McGill was disqualified for socking the ponderous Pole on the jaw.

Paul Guadette, 158, defeated Ted Bell, 15, technical fall, in 15.35.

Weigand Unconscious For Nearly 10 Hours

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—After being in a coma for nearly ten hours, Art Weigand, Buffalo heavyweight pugilist, regained consciousness at St. Michael's Hospital early this morning, and it was thought he would be sufficiently recovered to-morrow to return home.

Weigand was knocked out by Jack Renault, of Montreal, at the Arena last night, and after medical efforts to revive him had failed, he was removed to the hospital, where it was found he had a severe concussion of the brain. Dr. M. M. Crawford, Ontario Athletic Commission physician, who took charge of the case after the fight, pointed out that Weigand's strength and splendid physique greatly offset the seriousness of the injury, and said that he did not think his condition occasioned worry.

Latest In Small Planes

The Bull Pup, latest in small planes, is on exhibition at the Barker airport. The first to be introduced to Canada, the Pup sells at a low figure, and its running cost is less than a cent a mile. It is easy to fly, having a landing speed of only 32 miles an hour

Soccer Notes

Stan. Gillespie, local secretary of the P. and D.F.A. received notification through the mail this morning from Deloro that they be forwarded sixteen official forms. All the finances necessary to meet the rules were enclosed.

Caledonians players will hold a practice game to-night on King Edward Park at six o'clock.

The Canadian Packing team for Wednesday evening will be as follows: A. Frick, goal; H. Hotson and T. Foster, full backs; F. Nicholls, J. Buchan and A. Bromley, halves; W. Rickard, N. Downer, R. Preston, D. Evans and T. Fletcher, forwards. Reserve—T. Edwards.

Considered one of the finest full backs that ever played in the city was the census of opinion of the C.G.E. right full back, William Bruce, after the game against the Scots. Another player that is making a splendid showing is the recruit, Stan. Clark, who occupies the inside left position. He is playng his first season in soccer and picked up the rudiments in the city.

The Caledonians have not won a game this season in the three starts already made. They have been the most unfortunate during the last two seasons in regards to injuries. J. Douglas received injuries that kept him out of the game for good in the first game last year. This season, they lost the services of J. McCallum, which means heavy expenditure along the medical line.

The Brinton team will be as follows: W. Curtis, goal; S. Laidler and D. Green, full backs; R. Creighton, T. Westwood and J. Taylor, halves; T. Boon, J. Rodgers, J. O'Halloran, J. Sweet and T. Adkinson, forwards. Reserves: F. Dyer, A. E. Baylis and J. Langhorne.

LEAGUE STANDING

| | P. | W. | L. | D. | Goals F. | A. | P |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Can. Pack. .... | 2 | 2 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 0 | 4 |
| Can. General .. | 3 | 1 | 2 | 0 | 4 | 6 | 2 |
| Deloro ..... | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 |

Two points for a win and one for a draw.

GOAL SCORERS

The popular Canadian General player, Ben McMaster, heads the goal scoring list in the league, with three goals to his credit. No other player has scored more than one goal apiece and they run as follows: D. Evans, Downer and A. Bromley of C.P.C.; T. Boon and O'Halloran of Brinton; S. Clark of C.G.E.; Pottie of Caledonians, through his own goal; Bolton of C.G.E. through his own goal. In both cases the goal was the deciding factor to a win. J. Fletcher and R. Preston of C.P.C.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess.)

FARMER BROWN'S BOY SEES MIDGET

By size you cannot measure wit;
'Tis foolish e'en to think of it.
—Old Mother Nature.

Old Mother Nature is right about that. Some of the smallest people are the smartest. Then again, some of the smartest people are the biggest. So size really has nothing to do with smartness. With the little and big people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, of the Dry Desert and the Great Mountain, of the Smiling Pool and the Big River, each is as smart as he has to be in order to live. If one has more enemies or more dangers than another he must be enough smarter to offset the difference in order to live.

Farmer Brown's Boy was just beginning to make the acquaintance of some of the little people of the Dry Desert. Sometimes he wondered how there could be any little desert people. Yes, sir, he did so. He wondered how they found enough to eat and he wondered how they found enough to drink. You see, he could not imagine anyone being able to live without drinking. Yet that was exactly what some of these little people were doing. Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat was one. He actually had no use for water. This was because Old Mother Nature had so arranged matters that he didn't need water, a very convenient arrangement considering where he lived.

Already Farmer Brown's Boy had Antelope Jack, the long-legged cousin of Peter Rabbit, several times and he had made the acquaintance of Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat. As he sat there in the moonlight watching Longfoot he discovered what he thought might be one of Longfoot's babies. Of course, he was greatly interested at once. Soon, however, he began to suspect that he was mistaken and that this was not one of Longfoot's babies after all. To begin with, it didn't act like a baby at all. It seemed quite equal to taking care of itself.

"Now, who can you be?" muttered Farmer Brown's Boy. "You've got long hindfeet and short front legs, and a long tail, all of which looks as if you must be a jumper like Nimbleheels the Jumping Mouse back home on the Green meadows. Ha, I thought so!"

Just then something had startled the little fellow and he had jumped as only one built for jumping can jump. It was Midget the Silky Pocket Mouse, one of the smallest of all the people who wear fur anywhere in all the Great World. Farmer Brown's Boy sat still and in a few minutes back came Midget. Longfoot had gone to carry his grain to his storehouse and Midget made the most of his opportunity. With his nose close to the grain he began stuffing his cheek pockets, for he also is the happy possessor of pockets. So fast did his tiny front feet move that Farmer Brown's boy couldn't see just what the movement was. He wouldn't have known what Midget was doing had he not noticed Midget's cheeks. They were swelling out. Even while he stared at them they grew more and more plump. Farmer Brown's boy laughed right out and that scared Midget, and away he scampered. Anyway, his pockets needed emptying.

He wasn't gone long, but when he returned Longfoot was there and wouldn't let him near that grain. He was selfish, was Longfoot. He wouldn't have let Midget have a grain if he could have helped it, but he couldn't help it. He was quick, was Longfoot, but Midget was quicker and would dart in, get a grain and slip away before Longfoot could stop him.

"It is mine, all mine. Keep away, you little thief!" squeaked Longfoot.

"Only that which you get is yours. What I can get is mine," squeaked Midget in reply.

"I am coming here by daylight when I can see these little scamps better," declared Farmer Brown's Boy, not knowing that these little desert people were far too wise to be out and about in the heat of day.

Case of Scotch for Japanese Minister Ends Up In Cellar of Ottawa Church

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18 (C.P.). — A case of whisky ordered from Scotland for Hon. I. M. Tokugawa, Japanese Minister to Canada and which went astray after reaching the Capital, has been discovered in the basement of an Ottawa Church. The incident revolves around the fact that the consignment was addressed "To the Japanese Minister." To the express man charged with delivering the case, the title "Minister" apparently had more connection with a church than with a diplomatic office, and the Scotch accordingly was left in the basement of the House of Worship, located close by Hon. Tokugawa's residence.

The express man's thoughts at delivering whisky to a church are not on record.

CRICKET NEWS

LONDON, May 19 (C.P.). — The touring New Zealanders won their cricket match from the Marylebone Club at Lord's to-day by an innings and 122 runs. New Zealand concluded their first innings to-day for 302 runs for nine wickets and declared. Two fine feats by the visitors' bowlers explain the M.C.C.'s collapse. Cromb took six wickets for 46 runs in the M.C.C. first innings, which netted them 132 runs, and Merritt took seven wickets for only 28 runs in their second innings, which brought a trifling 46 runs.

A wonderful bowling performance by Root, the Worcestershire professional, brought about the collapse and defeat of the champion county, Lancashire, by 126 runs. Root to-day took nine wickets for 33 runs to bring victory to Worcestershire. Scores were: Worcester, 169 and 117 (Dick Tyldesley, six wickets for 28 runs); Lancashire, 75 and 95. The match was played at Worcester.

British Stars Continue Victories At Auteuil

ROLAND GAROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, May 19.—(A.P.) — British stars in the French hard court tennis championship continued to advance to-day as the second day of play began in doubles.

I. G. Collins and J. S. Oliff, the British pair, defeated Marcel Bernard and Paul Goldschmidt in the men's doubles 6-3, 4-6, 9-7, 6-1, and H. W. (Bunny) Austin and C. H. Kingsley defeated the German team of Martin Zander and Louis Haenach 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

Betty Nuthall, the British girl who is champion of the United States, and P. D. B. Spence, of South Africa, had a walkover in the mixed doubles.

Edmonton Gunman Robs Store, Escapes

EDMONTON, Alta., May 19 (C.P.). —A lone hold-up gunman in a daylight robbery obtained $100 from the cash register at an uptown grocery store here yesterday, and escaped. Forcing Miss Jessie Melquist, cashier, to open the register, the bandit made approximately 18 customers stand still, kept the manager from moving toward the telephone, and reached into the cash machine.

More was in the letter—words that made Meriem's heart beat faster and a happy flush mount her cheeks. But when next evening she arrived at the trysting place she was astonished to find not Baynes but two other riders. She drew back startled as she saw one was Hanson. "Mr. Baynes had an accident. His horse fell on him, so he sent me to meet you and bring you to camp." In the darkness Meriem could not see the fellow's gloating triumphant expression.

Troubled by this unexpected turn of events, Meriem followed Hanson. All night they rode. The girl did not know where the camp lay. Hanson had brought well-filled saddle bags. They halted for breakfast and rode on. Meriem finally became suspicious. Gradually the attitude of this fellow was changing. Often she surprised him devouring her with his eyes. Steadily an idea urged itself on her—somewhere, sometime before she had known this man.

At last they broke out of the jungle and upon the opposite river bank Meriem saw a camp. "Here we are," said Hanson. He fired his revolver and native boys came to paddle them across. When she asked for Baynes, Hanson pointed toward the single tent standing in the center of the enclosure. "He's in there," he said and held back the flap for Meriem to enter. As she did so she saw the tent was empty.

"Where is Mr. Baynes?" she demanded. "He ain't here," replied Hanson, grinning. "But I'm here and I'm a better man than he is. You don't need him no more. You got me." He laughed as he reached for her. Meriem struggled to free herself. As she fought there came a sudden recollection of a similar scene and with it full recognition of her assailant. He was Malbihn the Swede! But today there would be no Bwana to rescue her.

HORSES KILLED DURING STORM

Severe Storm Swept the Campbellford District on Monday Night.

STRUCK SILO.

CAMPBELLFORD May 19. (Staff Despatch). Two valuable horses were killed during the severe electrical storm which swept through this district last night and early this morning. The horses were owned by Maxwell Anderson, a Rawdon Township farmer, and were fully covered by insurance.

The lightning bolt struck Anderson's silo, partly shattering that building. It then followed along a guy wire into the barn where the horses were stabled.

By a strange coincidence the bolt, while killing the horses, did not start a fire in the building.

Nine Rebels Killed In Honduras Scrap

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 19 (C.P.). — The Government to-day reported that nine rebels were killed and 12 wounded in a clash with loyal forces at Progreso yesterday. The Government troops, who were led by General Sanchez, suffered two casualties, including Colonel Roberto Pineda, Chief of Staff.

The main body of rebels had left the town, where they destroyed several houses, when General Sanchez attacked a small column which had been left behind.

OBITUARY

MRS. R. B. MARSHALL.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon in Toronto at 4.30 o'clock, of Mrs. Bruce Marshall, formerly Margaret Lapointe, after a very brief illness.

There are left to mourn her loss, her sorrowing husband and four children, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lapointe of this city and eight sisters and one brother.

Funeral was held from St. Patrick's church, Toronto.

MISS LIZZIE FITZPATRICK

WARSAW, May 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Lizzie Fitzpatrick, whose death occured on Monday, May 11, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, was held to St. Joseph's Church Douro and burial was made in Norwood Cemetery, Rev Father McCarthy conducting theservice.

Following an accident when she fell and injured herself, Miss Fitzpatrick was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital on Sunday evening and passed peacefully away on Monday morning.

Following the death of her mother, Miss Fitzpatrick cared for her brothers and sisters and for many years has cared for her brothers, Daniel who is an invalid and Dennis, and also a nephew, William Carol. Two other brothers also survive Michael, of California and Timothy, of Spokane Washington; also two sisters, Mrs. Carol of Downeyville, and Mrs. Racan of California. A brother William, predeceased her some years ago.

The late Miss Fitzpatrick was a faithful and devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church and was honored and respected by all who knew her.

HELEN FRY.

BAILIEBORO, May 19.—The sad death occurred last Wednesday morning, of Helen Fry, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Fry in her 15th year. The funeral took place Friday afternoon. A short service was held at her late home followed by a service in the United Church which was attended by large numbers of friends and relatives.

Helen was in the 3rd form of PortHope High School. A member of the United Church Sunday School, also of the girls soft ball club.

Rev. Mr. Swayne officiated at the services assisted by Rev. R. M. Patterson, Janetville. Pall bearers were Eldridge White, Melville Wood, Arthur Bateman, Frank Barnard, Carl Lang and Lloyd Jewison.

Placarding Houses Action Of Board

The Board of Health decided this morning to increase the pressure on house owners who have been slow to follow the board's orders to install sanitary conveniences. A check up was made of those houses not having conveniences and final notices will be sent out. Where the final notice fails to bring an immediate installation of conveniences the Board will resort to placarding the house.

The health of the city was reported as good by Dr. T. W. H. Young, M.O.H., and Dr. C. B. Waite's report on the milk was also good.

During April there were three cases of scarlet fever and four cases of erysipelas in the Isolation Hospital. Leave of absence for two months was granted Miss Alice Price, matron of the hospital, to go to England.

The Board of Works will be asked to remove the large boulders from the hospital grounds and repair the roads the cost to be borne by the Board of Health.

TEXTILE WORKERS ARE OUT

ROUBAIX, France, May 19. (CP) Textile strikers increased in number to-day with 37,000 men out here and 41,000 at Tourcoing. Corresponding numbers were idle in other centres of the district. The men are protesting against a wage cut.

LADIES TO NAME FIVE DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

Women's Liberal-Conservative Association Hears Mrs. Howard Fallis.

LIFE OF PREMIER.

The regular meeting of the Women's Liberal Conservative Association was held in the Paragon Hall yesterday afternoon with a good attendance.

The President, Mrs. G. S. Cameron presided and the meeting opened by singing O Canada. A fine report of the last meeting was given by the secretary Mrs. J. Cridland and adopted.

J. F. Strickland, M.P.P., came in for a few minutes and spoke on the Conservative Convention to be held in Toronto on June 24th, when according to the constitution of the Conservative Association, a leader must be chosen by the party and ten delegates were to be chosen from each riding Therefore the Women's Association were asked to chose five. It was decided that the executive meet and choose these and also five proxies at a future date.

The program was in charge of the A and B group.

Mrs. J. Bell gave a splendid address on the life of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, describing his birthplace, his mother and his fine home life. She said all down through the ages, God chose great men as leaders as Joseph, Abraham, Moses, Lord Wellington, Gladstone. Sir John A. McDonald and she believed Mr. Bennett had been divinely chosen to lead Canada in this time of depression and that he would help us in this great struggle and ultimately bring us triumphantly through if the people would have patience.

Charles Coleman rendered two fine comic solos "A Bonnie Bonnie Lassie" "Down Lovers' Lane" accompanied by W. C. Thompson, organist of St. Luke's Church. Mrs. Howard Fallis gave a talk on Outstanding Current Events.

First she spoke on the depression of the present time and said there were many signs of times brightening. Canada has come through other times of depression and will again. Two things peculiar to this time of depression (1) Great War, Debt of world (2) Russian Menace.

Great Britain is paying at the rate of a half million dollars per day and will be paying thus, for 140 years if there is not a cancellation or re-adjustment of the war debt.

It was hoped that at the Convention of the International Chamber of Commerce of the World meeting in New York recently some steps would be taken for a re-adjustment or cancellation of the war debt. Several leading financiers of the United States expressed themselves as being in favor of this. If the United States Government could see its way clear to do this it would establish such a feeling of good will and give the countries of Europe such purchasing power that their factories would soon be humming and their six million of unemployed busy and happy.

"In regard to the Russian Menace, it affects Canada in regard to wheat furs, lumber and canned salmon, especially They under almost slavery conditions, can sell their products more cheaply than Canada and under the present policy of Great Britain they flood its markets."

She referred to the same improvements in Canadian industries since the tariff had been raised. Revival of the Textile Industry, Campbell Soup Factory locating in Toronto, Swansdown Flour Co building a factory in Montreal., Stee Factory locating in Sault Ste. Marie and many others assembling their machinery in Canada. Speaking of the opening of the wheat conference of all the Wheat Producing Countries of the world at which Hon. Howard Ferguson was presiding and to which he had very diplomatically invited delegates from Russia. She was hoping for good results. Another important event was the great success of Hon. R. H. Bennett's plan of twenty million dollar loan and she referred in closing to the attitude Hon. Mackenzie King in placing all the obstacles possible in the way and wasting time over discussion of trivial things instead of all pulling together when there is such pressing need. She pointed out that we should be all good enough polititians to say "This government was elected by the majority of the people and we will try to help them all we can for the good of Canada.

Mrs. Cameron expressed her thanks to all who had taken part in the program and her delight at the good attendance. It was decided to adjourn for the summer months and to hold our first meeting for the autumn in October on the regular date, the third Monday in the month and that certain "ratepayers protest."

Alderman Turner stated that in examining the fire extinguishers, Chief Gimblett was merely keeping the city's fire protection up to a high state of efficiency. The charge for the work of servicing the extinguishers in every case was turned into the citys' treasury.

The financial report on the Fire Department's work in refilling the extinguishers was submitted by Alderman Phelan, showing that the total collected for such was about $100

Alderman Tuggey and Mayor Denne stated that Chief Gimblett should not try to compete with local firms in the work.

Alderman Turner—"I would not suggest that the privileges of the Chief of inspecting and servicing apparatus upon which he is a specialist should be lessened."

Mayor Denne—"Who said he is a specialist?"

Alderman Turner—"We hire him as a specialist."

Not on the committee Alderman Holland asked to express an opinion. He stated that his experience had been that Chief Gimblett's attention to servicing fire extinguishers in local manufacturing plants had proved a great convenience to the manufacturers.

By a motion of Aldermen Turner and Stocker, the question was left for settlement to Chairman Cotton of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, with power to act.

In Police Court

Two 13-year-old boys faced Magistrate Langley in Juvenile Court this morning charged with stealing bicycles. They admitted that they had been making a business of stealing bicycles and selling them for about a dollar apiece.

Detectives last night brought in eight bicycles which are thought to have been stolen by the boys. They were all obtained from one house, which is the boarding place of a number of Poles.

The boys each pleaded guilty to two charges brought against them. They were remanded to the care of the Children's Aid Society to await sentence.

Police urge anyone having lost a bicycle recently to visit the station and examine the ones just recovered.

ALL NIGHT BLAZE GUTS FACTORIES DESTROYS HOMES

$1,500,000 DAMAGE.

HARBOR GRACE, N. F. May 20. —(AP)— The most disastrous fire in many years today swept through the little community of Carbonear on the west coast of Conception Bay.

At Dawn, as the flames reached out from the industrial centre of the little village to entrap many homes in the outskirts, the damage was estimated at $1,500,000. The blaze, which started shortly after midnight, destroyed the principal industrial plants of the village during the night and swept on unchecked as daylight came.

The Hopkins Boot and Shoe factory, J. and J. Maddocks Plant, the plant of Saunders, Howell and company, Ltd., and the large fisheries supply plant of W. and J. Moores were destroyed; five homes were burned to the ground, and an unknown number of homes and smaller industrial plants were badly burned or were still burning.

Engine Breaks Down

Squads of firemen made their way over the road from St. John's. They finished their journey on foot when their engine broke down near Harbor Grace. Fishermen came by boat from nearby villages as news of the conflagration spread through the coastal communities along the bay.

As the flames spread and daylight came, the arriving volunteers were sent to the undamaged buildings on the borders of the fire zone to extinguish the smaller fires spread by wind-blown embers and sparks. The fire centre worked steadily east through the more densely populated sections of the village.

The cause of the fire was unknown but it was believed to have started in a kiln.

Carbonear is the port of entry on Conception Bay and has a population of approximately 5,000. Its chief industry is fishing and the manufacture of fishing supplies.

WORK TO START ON NEW CHURCH

New Gospel Hall Will Be Erected on McDonnel Street East of Water.

START IN MORNING.

Work will commence tomorrow morning on the erection of a new church for the congregation of Gospel Hall on the site of the old Duncan home on the south side of McDonnel street just east of Water street. The contract is in the hands of McIntyre Brothers. The building which will have a frontage of 48 feet on McDonnel street will consist of an auditorium and full sized basement. The Gospel Hall congregation worshipped for many years in quarters at the corner of George and Brock streets and the decision to build a church was made some time ago.

LONDON, Ont., May 20.— J. Mortimer Hunt,. well-known in the city as Manager of the London branch of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company, was found dead in his garage early today. Asphyxiation is believed to have been the cause of his death.

He was a little more than 40 years of age and had been manager of the local branch of the rubber company for about 15 years, coming here from Toronto.

Married 4 Times; Commits Suicide

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 20.—(CP) — Ralph Barton, widely known illustrator, committed suicide today in his home.

Barton had been married four times. Just a month ago his last wife, the former Germaine Marie Tailleferre, divorced him in Paris, charging desertion. They had been married at Ridgefield, Conn., in 1926.

The artist was born in Kansas City and studied in Paris.

GEORGE VOIGT IS ELIMINATED BRITISH GOLF

Syd Roper Defeats Strongest U. S. Contender in Fifth Round.

ONE HOLE MARGIN.

WESTWARD HO, Devon, England May 20 (A.P.)—George Voigt of New York, last United States contender, was eliminated to-day in the fifth round of the British Amateur Open Golf Championship by Syd Roper, British star, by a margin of one up.

Capt. H. C. C. Tippett conquered Tolley three and two.

The Amateur Cup, which Bobby Jones took home last year for its third trip across the Atlantic, is sure to stay in British hands this year, as all foreign threats have been removed.

Voigt fell two rounds shy of his place last year, when he went to the semi-finals, only to lose to Jones by the same margin as Roper defeated him to-day.

George had trouble in his previous four rounds at the tenth and eleventh and those two holes to-day proved his undoing. The tenth, a 354 yarder, is a dog leg around a sea of rushes and the 11th requires accurate shooting down the fairway with the spear-tipped bull-rushes on either side, waiting for the careless golfer. Voigt drove into the rushes on both holes and although he got out both times could not catch the accurate-shooting Roper.

Voigt had won his morning match from Bernard Darwin, London writer-golfer, and had Roper two down at the end of the first nine.

The young insurance clerk, who took Bobby Jones to the sixteenth hole last year at St. Andrews, with the Emperor Jones playing the sub-

JUSTICE GARROW GRANTS DECREES FOR 3 DIVORCES

Three Applications for Divorce, Three Decrees Granted, a Perfect Average.

NON-JURY SITTING END.

The Mariage of Harold Kincaid is Last One to be Dissolved.

COBOURG, May 20.—Three applications for divorce. Three decrees granted! A perfect average.

So much for the marriage-wrecking faculty of the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario which concluded here Tuesday afternoon with Mr. Justice Garrow presiding.

The third divorce case was disposed of Tuesday morning, severing the "nuptial bond" to which Harold Kincaid of Cavan Township and his young wife Laura Kincaid pledged their troth at Peterborough in 1914 when they were married by the Rev. R. G. Peever, minister at that time of the George Street Methodist church.

A clandestine trip to Toronto with Sidney McLaren, an unmarried neighbor, last November, and their two nights together in H. Graham's rooming house at 270 Huron street, was the chief evidence used against Mrs. Kincaid.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., of Peterborough, was solicitor for the plaintiff, and J. W. Stevenson of Peterborough represented Mrs. Kincaid, who was not present and offered no defense to the action.

Identified From Photograph

Archie Walker and H. Graham of Toronto provided the Huron Street link in this case. Both identified Mrs. Kincaid from a group photograph taken at a picnic at Orillia last summer. This snapshot has already seen court service. It was produced as an exhibit during the spring assizes here about two months ago in Harold Kincaid's action for alleged alienation of his wife's affections by William Nill. The picture was returned to Cobourg, for the purpose of the divorce trial, from the Appellate Court where it is still held pending Kincaid's appeal against the decision dismissing his suit against William Nill.

Archie Walker, a Toronto taxi driver, identified Mrs. Kincaid in the Orillia photograph as the woman he drove from the Don station to the rooming house at 270 Huron Street.

H. Graham, proprietor of the rooming house, amplified that Lesbian chapter. His identification was positive. That was virtually all the court needed to know.

To Visit Relatives.

Harold Kincaid recalled his marriage in 1914 following a friendship of more than ten years. Last November 27th his wife told him she

To Say Nothing of Olives, Sardines and a Place to Sit All Day.

NO FUSS OR WORRY

By GORDON A. SINCLAIR

CADIZ, Spain, April 15.—If you can figure a city turned completely inside out with it's tail where it's head ought to be that city is Cadiz. The houses and hotels and churches present their worst and dingiest sides to the street. Inside, in the central garden, is beauty and charm and sanctuary.

The poor insist on giving away what little they have to the church or such wandering nomads as me. The merchant puts his most expensive things in the window. Your hotel room opens off a balcony instead of a corridor. The main public square is dominated by a modern tiled lavatory of which the city council is very proud while the sprawling Moorish cathedral which people cross oceans to see is more or less neglected down by the wharves. The public slaughter house is in a palm dotted park. The best hotel is farthest away. Once a man has a job he has it. Nobody is ever fired for anything and employes wouldn't think of imposing on their workers

Clear Woodstock Man Of Calf In Cafe Prank

LONDON, Ont., May 20.—Stanley Muir of Woodstock district has been freed of all blame in the Glencoe "Calf in Cafe" case, which was aired in County Court here, but a conviction has been registered against Peterson Mullins. Mullins was found guilty of disorderly conduct and given suspended sentence. The case was the outcome of the misbehaviour of a calf which was carried into a cafe on the main street of Glencoe, as a prank. The Magistrate found Muir had nothing to do with the incident.

LONDON, May 20 (A.P.)—Mamerto Urriolagoitia, Bolivian Consul General at London, The Daily Herald says, plans to lead a British party into the forest along the Amazon, exploring the river's tributaries from the east back as far as Bolivia and penetrating the Matto Grosso district.

Urriolagoitia was the leader of a previous expedition into the territory. He hopes, he said, to collect data which will aid in the development of Bolivian resources.

RELIEF BOARD WELL ORGANIZED IN PETERBORO

Many Agencies Contributed to the Success of the Relief Association.

WORK REVIEWED.

In closing their season when the most arduous work of the society is necessary—the winter months — the Peterborough Relief Association and its personnel can look back on what was started in something of the nature of a community experiment and ended by proving a triumphant achievement in co-operative effort. Many agencies contributed to the success of the effort which was made this year in a co-operative way to supplement the excellent work of the Central Charity Board by a new relief organization, composed of some forty affiliated bodies, and successful it certainly was. Peterborough ranks high in the list of cities of the Dominion where a real constructive effort was made to assist those who stood in need of aid.

Best Organized Effort.

N. R. Vinton, field organizer for the Red Cross Society, in a recent visit to the city, said that the Peterborough Relief Association represented the best organized effort met with in his experience.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, May 20 (C.P.)—The stock market was depressed by weakness of American Telephone to-day, which declined more than 5 points to another new low since 1927. A brisk rally in the early dealings quickly faded out. Coca Cola dropped more than 8 points, and issues off about 2 to 5 included American Can, Continental Can, Allied Chemical, Fox Film, Case, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman and American Water Works. The market closed with a heavy tone, trading was in moderate volume, the day's transfers approximating 2,000,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Ont., May 20. (CP)—Opening strength along leading issues was not maintained past the noon hour but, on the whole, the mining market gave an improved performance to-day. Turnover was at greatly reduced rate, total sales of 210,576 shares comparing with 302,308 yesterday and 374,172 a week ago.

Both International Nickel and Noranda lost part of their early leads, but managed to close up a quarter each. Pend Oreille was off another 10 and Hudson Bay down 5. Other base metals were quiet.

$270,000 Damage In Tank Explosion

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 20 (C.P.) — A 10,000 gallon by-products refinery exploded to-day, and sent a spray of burning tar over the plant of the American Tar Company, three miles south of Fairfield, a Birmingham suburb, and caused a fire that did damage estimated at $270,000.

DISTRICT ROUSED BY PUPILS' PRANK

Six-year Lobo Village Lad is Shoved in Empty Furnace for Scare.

PAPERS FAILED TO IGNITE.

LONDON, Ont., May 20 (C.P.). — Shoved by four other pupils into the furnace at the Lobo Village Public School, little Jimmy Brown, 6-year-old son of J. L. Brown of that village, had a terrifying time for a few minutes while lighted matches sputtered at his ears. About the boy papers were piled and he screamed in terror as his tormentors threatened to set them afire.

The recess adventure of the Brown child, in his first year at school, has caused a furore in the Lobo district, which is just subsiding, following action by the School Trustees. Two girls and two boys are said to have put the child in the furnace to frighten him into silence regarding petty extortions they are said to have practiced. It is said that Jimmy had been the target for many tricks and that his oppressors threatened him to force him to pay tribute.

The four are said to have lighted matches after Jimmy was put in, but luckily the papers did not catch fire. After a few minutes of terror Jimmy was freed when other children arrived on the scene.

The school teacher, Miss Bessie Ross, co-operated in investigating, and was exonerated of all blame.

Name Special Body Beauharnois Probe

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20.—(CP)—The Beauharnois project will probably be investigated by a special committee of the House of Commons. The suggestion made yesterday by Premier R. B. Bennett was that the enquiry should be conducted by the banking and commerce committee or a special committee. The view among members of various political groups today is that a special committee might be preferable, as the largeness of the banking and commerce committee would possibly prove cumbersome.

The order of reference to the committee for the enquiry is now being worked out.

Movie fans of Paris spent more than $12,000,000 for admissions last year.

LABORITE TAKES SEAT IN OGMORE BY BIG MAJORITY

Representation in British House of Commons is Increased to 278.

VOTE 19,356 TO 5,219.

By-election Necessitated By Death of Rt. Hon. V. Hartshorn, Lord Privy Seal.

OGMORE, Glamorganshire, May 20. (CP)—The Labor Party's representation in the House of Commons was increased to 278 to-day when Edward Williams was elected in the by-election in Ogmore, one of the safest Labor seats in Great Britain.

The vote was:

Edward Williams, Labor, 19,356; J. R. Campbell, Communist 5,219; majority, 14,137.

Held Seat Since 1918

The by-election was necessitated by the death of Rt. Hon. Vernon Hartshorn, who was Lord Privy Seal in the Labor Cabinet. M. Hartshorn represented Ogmore as a Labor member since 1918. He was elected by acclamation in that year, re-elected in 1922, returned unopposed in 1923 and 1924, and in the last general elections the vote was: Hartshorn, Labor, 22,900; D. L. Powell, Liberal, 11,804; H. Abbott, Conservative, 4,614, and J. R. Campbell, Communist, 1,525.

There are now only three vacancies in the House of Commons—Rutherglen, Gateshead and Stroud, and polling takes place in Rutherglen and Stroud tomorrow, the results being declared on Friday.

In Rutherglen two candidates are contesting the seat vacant by the death of William Wright, Labor, elected with a majority of 5,289 in a four-cornered fight in 1928. Candidates are David Hardie Labor and Captain Moss, Conservative.

In Stroud there is a three-cornered fight for the seat vacant by the resignation of Sir Frank Nelson, Conservative elected with a majority of 5,972 in a three- cornered fight in 1929. The candidates are Robert Perkins, Cons., A. W. Staunton, Liberal, and Sir John Maynard, Labor.

Diamond Production Restriction To End

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 20.—(AP)—The committee of the Amsterdam Diamond Exchange today adopted a proposal by the international committee for the diamond trade to end restriction of production in the diamond industry on May 24 because of the refusal of South African producers to co-operate in a restriction scheme.

ASSESSMENT BATTLE LOOMS IN MONAGHAN-APPEALS MADE

Sixty Farmers Have Signed Petition Asking Increase on Suburban Lots.

MAY AFFECT WHOLE COUNTY

An assessment battle, which may embroil the whole county, is promised in North Monaghan township.

The dissatisfaction among suburban and farm residents of the township over land assessment values, which has long been fermenting, has at last broken out into action.

About sixty farmers have sent a signed petition to the Township Council requesting the assessment on suburban lots be increased to conform more with the assessment on farms. Not only that but G. N. Moncrief, a farmer on the highway and the leader in the movement to secure higher assessment on suburban property, has entered specific appeals against the assessment of 18 suburban residents.

Moncrief states in his appeal that these lots are "not assessed at their actual value." This is said to open a wide question which may involve the assessment values of all property in the township and perhaps the whole county. Suburban residents declare that they will take the appeal before His Honor Judge Huycke and they maintain that this will cause all property in the township to be re-assessed at actual value.

The Court of Revision for the township will be held in the Court House at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of May 27, and there promises to be fireworks.

Some of the 18 suburban residents against whom Moncrief has entered appeals against their assessment include: Ernie Johnston, assessor; Bert Sanderson, assessor last year;

Chinese Reds Slay Three Native Priests

PEKING, China, May 20 (C.P.).—Chinese Communists killed three native priests and captured five missionaries, including Bishop Ricci, in a raid on the Catholic mission at Chayuenkow near Laohokow, in the Province of Hupeh, according to a telegram received to-day by the apostolic delegation here.

Large Rum Cargo Taken Off Finland

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 20. (AP)—The rum running vessel Serpen, carrying 24,000 gallons of alcohol, was captured to-day in Finnish territorial waters.

The police report several ships, believed to be bearing about three million gallons of alcohol, now are lying off the coast awaiting an opportunity to land their prohibited cargoes and authorities are taking elaborate precautions to prevent smuggling.

A number of liquor laden vessels have been captured during the last several days by preventive officers.

H. B. Rye, former reeve and warden of the county; Hy Wood; W. J. Byers and George Patton, both members of the township council; Cecil Hayes and Harry Hickey, contractor who laid the sidewalks in the township last year.

SLAYER SURRENDERS TO POLICE, CONFESSES DETAILS OF HIS DEED, BUT REFUSES TO GIVE IDENTITY

Believed Wegener Body is Located

BERLIN, May 20 (C.P.). — Reports to the Wolff Bureau to-day said a relief expedition in Greenland had found the body of Professor Alfred Wegener, German explorer, 93 miles from his camp at Eismitte.

Eskimos had found it before the expedition arrived, and wrapped it in furs, the report said.

Murder Takes Place After Trio Escape House Purposely Set Afire.

MATTOON, Ill., May 20 (C. P.). — Mrs. Carrie Bowers was shot to death, and her two daughters, aged two and five, were strangled and then beaten to death to-day by a man believed to be J. M. Johnson, formerly of Arkansas, who walked into Mattoon Police Station and confessed.

The man would not further identify himself. He came here six months ago with Mrs. Bowers and the two children in an automobile bearing an Arkansas license.

He held himself out to neighbors as a former employee of Mrs. Bowers' husband, who had died. He worked for a time as a gasoline station attendant.

Set House on Fire.

Johnson confessed setting fire to the house in which he lived with Mrs. Bowers. The police declared he intended to burn his three victims but that when they escaped the flames he took them in his automobile five miles east of town and there shot the woman to death, and killed the girls.

Ropes were found about the bodies of the little ones. Their heads had been beaten with an automobile crank and they had also been shot.

Neighbors said Johnson apparently had been kind to Mrs. Bowers and fond of the children.

SPREAD IN PRICE OF MILK DENIED BY G. A. GILLESPIE

Head of Silverwood's Dairy Claims Spread is Four and One-half Cents.

LOWEST IN ORGANIZATION.

"We are paying the same price to farmers for milk for city delivery that we have paid since May of last year," said G. A. Gillespie of Silverwood's, Limited, to The Examiner to-day in refutation of certain statements which were made at Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Health.

"It was said that there is a difference or a spread of seven cents a quart between the price of milk to the producer and the price to the consumer," Mr. Gillespie continued. "Speaking as the representative of Silverwood's, Limited, and especially for the information of the many citizens who buy their milk supply from our company, I may point out that the spread in our prices is four and one-half cents and not seven cents as stated by members of the Board of Health. That margin of four and one-half cents takes care of all our overhead, that is, the cost of all our modern sanitary methods of handling milk and delivering it to the people. This includes bottling, pasteurization, delivery and other expenses connected with the proper care and handling of the milk from the time it comes to us from producers, who are among the very best farmers in this county, until it is delivered at the homes in this city."

Bound To Carry Weight.

Mr. Gillespie remarked that any statement made by Mayor Denne is bound to carry weight because of his position as Mayor of this city.

"That is why I want to reply to remarks made at the Board of Health meeting. A statement by Mayor Denne may be very damaging, and as representative of Silverwood's, Limited, in Peterborough, I would like to

HEALTH OFFICERS MEET IN TORONTO

Dr. W. J. Bell Advocates Setting Up Health District System.

CLAIMS SERUM STORED UP.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (C.P.)—While Government health officials mustered all their resources in securing serum to fight last year's spinal meningitis crisis, there were Medical Officers of Health in Ontario who stored the health-giving units in case an outbreak might occur in their district, Dr. W. J. Bell, Deputy-Minister of Health, stated this morning in the opening address of the seventeenth annual meeting of the Ontario Health Officers' Association.

For the first time, it was revealed that at the height of the battle with the greatest spinal meningitis scourge that had ever swept the Provinces, there was not an ounce of serum in the "ice-box" of the Department of Health.

"We found that a number of our men were storing it up," said Dr. Bell. "We want your assistance and your co-operation in a case like this. Be fair to the Department. Use the serum freely, but do not deprive those who need it, unnecessarily."

Dr. Bell advocated a Health District system, which would be formed with the combination of two or three counties under a health officer, assisted by a sanitary engineer, a sanitary food inspector and a number of health nurses. These officials would be paid by the Government and would be responsible to the Department of Health.

Committee Sanctions Montreal Island Line

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20 (C.P.).—The Railway Committee of the House of Commons to-day passed one section of a Canadian Pacific Railway Bill which would give permission to construct a connecting line on Montreal Island. The clause was passed on an 18 to 5 vote. The committee turned down two suggested amendments, the first that it be stipulated the line be built in an open trench, and the second, that the City of Montreal be made a party to any application concerning the line made by the railway to the Board of Railway Commissioners.

The projected line would run from the C.P.R.'s terminus at Place Viger in Montreal to L'Epiphanie on the Montreal-Quebec line. The committee did not deal with further clauses of the bill concerning branch lines in Western Canada.

Bennett Promises Beauharnois Probe

CLAIMS RIVER BEING DEWATERED AS CANAL IS BIGGER THAN PLANNED

Gardiner Makes Startling Allegation of Conspiracy, Fraud and Corruption.

KING IN DEBATE.

Senator McDougald's Share of Profits Are Set at $30,000,000.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20 (C. P.).—Investigation of the Beauharnois Power Corporation, its subsidiary companies, and its hydraulic development scheme in the Soulanges area of the St. Lawrence River, will be made by a Parliamentary Committee. This announement was made in the House of Commons yesterday by Premier R. B. Bennett after a day-long debate on the corporation, its financial make-up, its probable effect upon the canalization of the St. Lawrence and whether it was living up to its charter rights and privileges.

For some time, Premier Bennett has been gathering information on the Beauharnois project. he informed the House. It had been shown by Government engineers that the beauharnois Canal, now under construction, was larger than provided for under the original Order-in-Council.

River Being Dewatered.

"The St. Lawrence River undoubtedly is being dewatered if the cubic feet per second provided for by the original lease granted to the company by the Province of Quebec plus the lease to take away 30,000. second feet additional, is given effect to," the Premier declared.

T. A. Reid, Liberal member for New Westminster, B.C., toward the close of the day drew attention to the discrepancy between the domestic and foreign grain freight rates on the Pacific Coast. He intimated he would move an amendment to the motion to go into supply, which possibly will come before the House to-day.

Robert Gardiner, U.F.A. Leader, precipitated the Beauharnois discussion when he moved the adjournment of the House "To discuss a matter of urgent public importance." It developed into one of the most hectic days of the session. Mr. Speaker Black on many occasions called members to order for using extravagant language and otherwise for transgressing the debating rules of the House. A tense atmosphere hung over the chamber; crowded galleries leaned forward to catch every word and the members, generally, forsook the lobbies and remained in their seats in the House.

The whole Beauharnois project was held up as a gigantic conspiracy to secure for private interests the entire flow of the St. Lawrence river for hydraulic purposes. Allegations of fraud, misrepresentations and improper dealings were levelled against the promoters. Charges were made that members of the Senate were interested in the power scheme. It was insinuated Beauharnois officials had attempted to corrupt the judiciary of the Province of Quebec. Frequent interruptions, heated cross-chamber repartee, points of order and objections punctuated the discussion practically all day.

Asks for Probe

ROBERT GARDINER,
Progressive leader, who made charges concerning the Beauharnois Canal construction in the House of Commons yesterday and asked for a probe into the undertaking. Premier Bennett, after hearing Mr. Gardiner's charges, promised that a parliamentary committee would be apopinted to investigate the affair.

Welcomes Probe

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal Leader, welcomed an investigation because some members of the U.F.A.-Labor-Progressive group "will get a chance then to make good some of the general statements they have been making on the floor of this House about Judges, Members of Parliament and everyone else who

NEW GOLD FIELD DRAWS HUNDREDS

Over 500 Claims Staked on Creek Between Fife Lake and Montana.

REGINA, May 20 (C.P.)—Ranchers, farmers, elevator men and travelling salesmen have joined the gold rush on Poplar Creek, near the Montana border. At a late hour yesterday more than 500 claims were reported staked on the creek between the Saskatchewan settlement of Fife Lake and Montana.

Fife Lake is in a remote plains area covered centuries ago by the glacial movements, and is not far removed from Dakota regions, which experienced exciting gold-mining scenes in the seventies.

Gold fever has reached 125 miles north to Regina, and city folk were among those who rushed by automobile over prairie trails to the scene. Provincial officials scoffed at the likelihood of gold discoveries of importance.

PARTY WRECKED ON BAHAMA ISLE SAFE AT NASSAU

Bishop Roscow Sheddan and Companions Live Three Days on Biscuits.

CAPTAIN DROWNED.

Craft Goes Down in Ten Minutes After Striking Reef in Squall.

NASSAU, Bahamas, May 20.—(A. P.)—Bishop Roscow Sheddan, of the Nassau diocese of the Church of England, his sister Evelyn, and other survivors of the wrecked yacht Livonia, recuperated to-day from three days on a diet of biscuits while marooned on a distant island. The yacht's captain, Joseph Taylor, was drowned in the disaster.

The survivors said they had suffered no ill effects from their experience from explosure, exhaustion, and the monotony of the biscuit menu.

The Livonia, used by Bishop Sheddan in visiting churches in his diocese, sank after striking a reef off Plansor French Cays during a squall. The craft went down within ten minutes, the survivors said, but all aboard managed to reach shore.

Despite the warning of the Bishop, Captain Taylor dived into the waters in an attempt to recover some of their belongings and he drowned. Efforts to recover the body proved unsuccessful.

COBOURG MEN AWARDED $500

Seven Are Awarded For Capturing Young Bank Bandits.

BY BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

COBOURG, May 20.—Seven local men have received awards amounting to $500 from the Canadian Bankers' Association for their assistance in the capture of the three youths who held up the staff of the Dominion Bank here February 17 and escaped in their flight with $1,685 cash.

The largest reward was given to Cecil Wilson, garage owner, whose recompense for rounding up one of the bandits was $125. George Rorabeck, W. Throupe and L. Taylor, who together acounted for another of the trio, received $100 each, and Stanley Newton, M. Margles and H. Wicks $25 each.

James Forbes and Thomas Smith of the bank staff, also prominent actors in that noon hour excitement, have been rewarded by the Dominion Bank for their part in giving the alarm and the imediate pursuit.

The robbers, Leslie Forbes of London, Ont., Walter Clifford of Nova Scotia and Harold Blanchard of Montreal, were sentenced by Judge Huycke to two years imprisonment at Guelph.

RESERVE LIMIT STIRS ARGUMENT

Italy Casts Vote for British Formula Against German Proposal.

ISSUE TABLED.

GENEVA, May 20 (A.P.)—Renewed debate in the League of Nations Council to-day on the principle of limiting trained reserves and war materials disclosed that Germany had lost Italy's support in this controversary over the provisions of a projected general disarmament treaty.

The question was raised when the council attempted to determine the form of a questionnaire which the States will be requested to fill out preliminary to the conference next February 2. The form would disclose the current state of each country's armaments'

Julius Curtius, Germany's Foreign Minister, urged the use of a form which would include a report on the status of trained reserves and war materials on hand. Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, characterized that as "too idealistic" and pointed out that the Preparatory Arms Commission already had rejected the principle.

Briand Backs Henderson

Aristide Briand, speaking for France, reiterated his country's case against limiting trained reserves and supported Mr. Henderson's suggeston of a tabular form harmonizing with the provisions of the draft convention produced by the Preparatory Commission.

Dino Grandi, Italian Foreign Minister, also cast his vote for the British formula, asserting that the Italian Government believes the question of principle should not be reopened. At the Preparatory Commission Italy supported the German stand.

The issue was tabled until Friday.

Geneva was selected as the place for the General Disarmament Conference next February.

SOUTH AMERICA LAND OF PROMISE

Prince George Advises Young Britons of Opportunities There.

Raps British News Service.

LONDON, Eng., May 20. (CP) — Young Britons were advised to "jump at any opportunity" to go to South America by Prince George in a speech before 500 members of the London Chamber of Commerce.

"But only the best men are wanted out there" he said. "It seems to me that agriculture on the pampas would be a great life for any young man from this country. It's a fine, healthful occupation and any sporting interests can be satisfied outside of working hours."

The Prince insisted that because of radio and telephone, Britain is really not so far from South America.

"I called London from Santiago, Chilie, 7,000 miles away" he said "and I found the connection better than many I have had in London."

Like his brother, the Prince of Wales, Prince George criticised the British news service to South America.

"Our service is poor compared with that of the United States" he said. "This applies to both cable and radio. It should be remedied by those responsible. We should see that the flow of our news is pre-eminent or at least on an equal basis, as regards speed and volume, with that of the United States".

Following a five-day fight the fire was under control Saturday evening.

KAUFMAN DIED FROM EXPOSURE

RELATIVE IDENTIFIES BODY.

QUEBEC, Que., May 20 (C.P.).—Following an inquest presided over by Dr. Rodolphe Auger, of St. Joseph de Beauce, held in the little border town of Armstrong, Que., this morning, a verdict of death from privation and exposure was returned in the death of Mitchell B. Kaufman, wealthy Massachusetts business man, whose body was found in the woods at the head of Riviere Loup, in Beauce County, yesterday morning. There were no marks of violence on the remains, which were in an advanced state of decay, and the only article found in the dead man's clothing was a pocket knife. Identification of Kaufman's body was made by his brother-in-law, Albert Wethler, and a representative of an American insurance company.

SHIPPING LINES SEEK PROTECTION

U. S. Companies Hard Hit By Inroads of Cunard and French Line Service.

WOULD CHANGE LAWS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19. — (By Ken Clark C. P. Staff Correspondence)—Legislation designed to discriminate in favor of United States shipping corporations in passenger service between United States ports and those of the British West Indies, Bermuda, and Canada will be pressed at the next session of Congress.

Looking about for some means of taking up the slack in trans-Atlantic travel during this period of depression. Cunard and lately the French line have inaugurated short cruises by their crack passenger liners between New York, Bermuda, Havana, Cuba, Nassau, and Halifax.

United States shipping interests took umbrage when the Cunard line put one of its express vessels on a cruise to Havana. The American lines protested, but a search of the coast wise shipping laws made it clear that no special protection was offered them by existing law.

Undoubtedly stimulated by the fact that the Eighteenth Amendment to the United States constitution does not apply on foreign ships, the traffice on these week-end and six-day cruises has been heavy.

They have offered not only a problem to the competitive American lines but have also been the subject of considerable discussion in Bermuda and the Bahamas. Passengers arriving at Bermuda aboard the big liners use their ships as hotels and this has aroused the inn keepers of the island. One proposition is to levy a tribute of $10,000 a day on all mobile hotels casting anchor in Bermudian harbors.

General Von Gluck 85 Years Old To-Day

BERLIN, May 20 (C.P.).—General Alexander von Gluck, remarkably hale and hearty for his years, celebrated his 85th birthday within the bosom of his family in the suburb Gruenewald.

The popularity of the old warrior, who is credited in Germany with having almost reached the gates of Paris during the Great War, was demonstrated by loads of flowers, letters, and telegrams from his former regimental comrades.

No New Discoveries At Wishart Inquest

WISHART, Sask., May 20. (CP)—Inquest into the death of Peter Daday, murdered at dawn May 12 on his farm in this district, was adjourned yesterday until May 26 following an all-day hearing at which there was no important development.

The autopsy report showed a shot from a bird-gun had severed arteries near the man's heart and that death occurred within a few minutes, while the slayer, still unknown, made his escape across the fields.

Nick Szmorang held as a suspect last week, retold his story that he was at a dance attended by Daday and his young wife, and that he went from there to the home of Steve Zellick to spend the rest of the night.

CLERKS WIN 1ST GAME OF SEASON

Defeat Old Time Rivals, St. Andrew's, 15-5 in Campbellford Town League Fixture.

DON MEYERS GETS HOMER.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 20. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). The first game in the schedule of the Campbellford Softball Association Town League was staged on Tuesday evening when the Clerks and St. Andrew's the old time rivals, clashed for supremacy, re Clerks registering the first win with a 15-5 score. The first ball was pitched by Mayor J. M. Bygott in honor of the occasion, with ex-Mayor C. H. Davidson at bat and Councillor A. D. Bennett catching.

Only one home run was counted in the game, this being made by Don. Meyers for St. Andrew's who made the count in the last innings. The Clerks started the counting with three and seven runs respectively in the first and second innings. St. Andrew's did not make a tally until the fifth round, when they knocked up a four count, coming back with one run in the last innings. The games played in the schedule will only consist of seven innings.

The teams:

Clerks—p, D. Maybee; c, H. McArthur; ss, O. Hendy; 1st b, H. Denike; 2nd b, Dickson; 3rd b, H. Gray; lf, Spicer; cf, Ed. Busch; rf, L. Homes.

St. Andrew's—c, T. Owens; p, J. Storie; 1st, b, W. Owens; 2nd b, T. Metcalf; 3rd b, W. McCombe; ss, S. Hutton; cf, Don. Meyers; rf, H. Dunk; lf, Ed. Runions.

CLAIMS RIVER IS DEWATERED

"In the committee," the Liberal Leader proceeded, "every one will be given a chance to prove any charge he may bring, but he will be obliged to prove it, not under the privileges which he has as a Member of Parliament, but by evidence which he can produce of a character which would be accepted in a court of law."

It still was not too late to secure "for the people of Canada their heritage which Sweezy and his friends are attempting to acquire by fraud and conspiracy," declared Mr. Gardiner. The King Government had no authority to approve the application to divert 40,000 cubic feet of water per second from the river. The Beauharnois development was "without real legal foundation and contrary to the laws and treaty obligations of Canada."

"To add insult to injury," the U.F.A. Leader proceeded, "they have secured this past winter 30,000 additional cubic feet per second from the Province of Quebec and are awaiting a favorable opportunity to ask for another order-in-council from this government."

McDougald Rapped

Senator Wilfrid L. McDougald came in for mention from Mr. Gardiner, who quoted him as telling the Senate he did not own stock in the Beauharnois Company. He had evidence, the U.F.A. Leader declared, to prove that Senator McDougald was interested in the promotion of the Beauharois Light, Heat and Power Company and subsequently received 208,000 shares of stock and $780,000 for his holdings in the original corporation. The securities Senator McDougald received were valued by the Beauharnois Company at $30,000,000, Mr. Gardiner said.

When the third party Leader attempted to read press reports of a legal action in which the Beauharnois Company was interested and which resulted in the switching of judges, he encountered opposition from all sides of the House. "These same gentlemen have been accused of corrupting the administration of justice," he asserted. Mr. Justice Greenshields had substituted Mr. Justice Patterson for Mr. Justice Boyer in the case, which was heard in the Quebec Courts. The inference was a reflection upon the judiciary of Quebec, declared S. W. Jacobs (Lib., Cartier-Montreal).

"I think," declared Premier Bennett "that he (Mr. Gardiner) will be well advised to leave out any reference to the judges of the country, but I cannot control his (Mr. Gardiner's) speech."

Later Mr. Gardiner said in referring to Senator McDougald: "When a member of Parliament profits by the exploitation of the public domain to the extent of approximately $30,000,000 and when the exploitation is only made possible by concessions granted by a Government at the head of which was one of his most intimate friends, the Right Honorable Leader of the Opposition, then, Prime Minister, a situation is created which demands the most far reaching and thorough judicial investigation."

Admits He Is Friend

Mr. King admitted he was a close personal friend of Senator McDougald's but that he did not entitle the U.F.A. leader to draw any inference he chose. Rising to a point of order, the Liberal leader said Mr. Gardiner had "reflected upon the judiciary, members of the Senate and now he has reflected upon members of this House. As a Parliamentarian he knows as well as anybody else that if a charge is made against any person and he wishes an investigation, all he has to do is to stand up in his seat and say he is prepared to make that charge and put his seat in jeopardy to prove it." If Mr. Gardiner were willing to do that, the Liberal leader said he was willing to join him in urging an investigation but "unless he is prepared to put his seat in jeopardy and deal with the matter in an open, manly and Parliamentary way, he should not be entitled to violate the rules of the House."

E. J. Garland (U.F.A., Bow River); Miss Agnes MacPhail, (Prog., Southeast Grey); Hon. W. D. Euler (Lib., Waterloo North); Hon. J. C. Elliott, (Lib., West Middlesex) and Leslie Bell (Cons., St. Antoine, Montreal) were among those taking part in the discussion.

WILL PRESENT PLAY.

A play entitled "The Dust of the Earth" will be presented on Thursday night in the Lakevale Presbyterian Church, Fowler's Corners. The play commences at 8 p.m., after which light refreshments will be served by the ladies of the congregation, who are always noted for their fine suppers.

BIGELOW TRIAL IS POSTPONED

Assignment in Bankruptcy is Made by Herbert Bigelow, Cavan Farmer.

ALIMONY CASE.

COBOURG, May 20.—An assignment in bankruptcy at Peterborough Monday afternoon by Herbert C. Bigelow, Cavan township farmer, defendant in an action for alimony by his wife Edna Bigelow of Victoria county at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario had the immediate effect of postponing the trial until June 15 at Whitby where the next sessions of the court in this district will be held.

G. N. Gordon of Peterborough appeared for the plaintiff, and J. A. O'Brien of Peterborough is solicitor for Mr. Bigelow.

When this alimony case was called Monday afternoon, Mr. O'Brien informed Mr. Justice Garrow that he had just received a telephone message from Peterborough apprising him of the fact that his client had made an assignment that afternoon. Mr. O'Brien was then awaiting a further message of confirmation from his office. For that reason he asked His Lordship to grant a stay of proceedings until leave was obtained from the registrar in bankruptcy to proceed with this action.

Mr. Gordon made the comment that "this was perpetrated only this afternoon, and it is quite evident why it was done and no notice given to me until I appeared in court."

Mr. O'Brien—I didn't see you until you came into court.

The Bigelows were married in 1912 and have three children, the oldest being eighteen years. In the statement of claim, Mrs. Bigelow sets out that her husband is at present under suspended sentence for assaulting her on March 24. The complaint ranges over other alleged domestic discords.

KEENE

Miss Simpson, R.N., of Peterborough is in attendance upon Mrs. George Hunter.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland did not conduct services in Warsaw on Sunday night, the induction of elders being postponed on account of the death of Mrs. Selkirk, Dr. Munro's mother-in-law.

Mrs. James McCann is suffering from serious injuries sustained in a fall down the outside stairs of her home.

Mr. Duncan Elliott had his shoulder dislocated last week when he was knocked down by a calf on the farm of Mr. Charles Hunter.

Miss Annie McIntyre had as her guests Sunday, Miss Macneral and Mr. and Mrs. Redpath of Peterborough also Mr. Munroe, of Kincardine, Ont.

NEW JUDGE SITS.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19. — James Parker, K.C., of Toronto, assumed the mantle of Judge of the County of York to-day, when in the presence of a large number of the legal profession, he presided for the first time over one of the County Courts sitting in Judge Denton's Chambers.

OBITUARY

MRS. F. HAMILTON.

BETHANY, May 20.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— The death occurred on Sunday at the home of her son, Dr. J. J. Hamilton, of Mrs. Frank Hamilton, in her 81st year.

The late Mrs. Hamilton, who was confined to her room constantly for almost two years, was predeceased by her husband eighteen years ago. The deceased lady was a member of the Anglican church.

She leaves to mourn her loss one daughter, Mrs. Lowes, of California; two sons, Dr. J. J. Hamilton, of Bethany, with whom she resided and Hector of Hollywood, California; three sisters and one brother and also four grandchildren.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday, May 20, at 1.30 p.m. and burial will be made in St. John's cemetery, Cavan.

JUSTICE GARROW GRANTS DECREES

was going to Toronto to visit relatives, buy a hat and a few other things. She left on Thursday evening and returned the following Tuesday. On the Friday of that interval Kincaid happened to pass McLaren's house. A light fall of snow showed no footmarks around McLaren's place.

The trial failed to disclose the source of the information by which Kincaid learned that his wife and McLaren had been together in Toronto.

To Mr. Justice Garrow, the plaintiff said he had been on friendly terms with McLaren, who had visited his home three or four times last summer and stayed for supper with the Kincaids.

Continuing his statement under Mr. Gordon's questioning, Kincaid said he had done nothing by way of condoning or forgiving his wife. They continued to live under the same roof until April 17 last when Kincaid moved to another farm. Their conversations were brief, Kincaid said, and his wife never looked after his room, made his bed or performed other duties of that kind.

"When I learned last December of the McLaren affair," he said, "I mentioned it to her. She admitted she went up to Toronto with him, and had made a mistake, but she said 'nothing out of place' happened. I couldn't do anything at that time. The lease of the farm I was on didn't run out till April.

To Montreal Next.

My wife said that if she ever took another trip it would be to Montreal where she wouldn't get caught."

"Sometimes she'd speak to me around the house since December. She's living on the place I left. Mr. Howson is there. He owns the farm."

Mr. Justice Garrow—You feel sure of what happened?

Mr. Kincaid—Yes. She admitted going to Toronto with McLaren.

To Mr. Stevenson plaintiff replied that his wife told him nothing wrong had taken place on the Toronto trip.

Darcy Gallagher.

Darcy Gallagher, a Cavan farmer, told of an occasion when he saw Mrs. Kincaid and Sidney McLaren together in Howden's woods.

Howden's woods adjoins the Kincaid farm," he said. "I was picking berries. I saw Mrs. Kincaid come out of her house and run across the garden. She passed near me and disappeared in the woods. I went on towards home. I met her and Sidney McLaren. They were just inside the fence. It was on the 29th of June last year. Sid faced me. Mrs Kincaid stooped over into the ferns as if to hide. They both ran into the woods."

With no evidence offered for the defense, Mr. Gordon asked the court to find that the plaintiff had established the facts of a reasonable inference of the statutory grounds for divorce

Question of Collusion.

"I have no hesitation in coming to that conclusion," His Lordship stated. "My difficulty is to make sure that there has been no collusion."

His Lordship dwelt on the fact that Kincaid had continued to live with his wife from December until April. It has been intimated that there might have been complete reconciliation especially in so far as Kincaid was concerned.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that Kincaid had merely 'remained under the same roof' with his wife until his lease expired this Spring.

"Condonation might have taken place", Mr. Gordon continued, "if she had expressed herself as willing not to repeat her conduct, but when she had told him that she would go wherever she felt like going, his attitude towards his wife never developed into condonation."

Mr. Justice Garrow referred to the fact that no defense was put in, although Mr. Stevenson was present.

Mr. Stevenson — Laura Kincaid wished to have a divorce if it was sought.

His Lordship cupped his chin deeper into his hands as he reflected on that statement. He said it seemed to confirm his suspicion that there might be some collusion in this case.

Mr. Gordon—It doesn't necessarily mean collusion, my Lord, when the woman throws up her hands in the face of evidence that is overwhelming.

And Mr. Stevenson added—To my knowledge there is no collusion.

Mr. Justice Garrow—With some hesitation I think that on the whole I should grant a divorce in this case. But, I may say that very little more would have induced me to think that thep laintiff in the goodness of his heart had condoned and forgiven the offense."

Custody of the four Kincaid children was not asked for in this action. They are respectively sixteen, thirthe plaintiff in the goodness of his Gordon said that a separate action would have to be taken, in the circumstances, to determine possession of the children.

LISBON ROCKED BY HEAVY SHOCK

Terrified Populace Flee to Streets as Walls Crack and Chimneys Fall.

NO LIVES LOST.

LISBON, May 20 (A.P.)—Portugal's capital city was rocked by two sharp earth shocks early to-day; one of ten seconds duration. No casualties were reported and the damage was slight.

The first occurred at 3.20 a.m. It created panic among the populace and they deserted their beds for streets and cellars. The longer one was felt a few minutes later, shaking the city severely.

The damage was small considering the sharpness of the tremors. Water mains were broken, building walls were cracked, a few chimneys were felled and household furnishings were knocked about. Shocks also were reported in the Madeira Island, and at Coimbra and Leiria, but no injury to life or property was reported.

Felt in Rome

ROME, May 20 (A.P.)—The seismograph at the observatory of Rome registered a terrific earthquake at 3:28 a.m. to-day, about 1,600 miles distant.

ZURICH, Switzerland, May 20. — (AP)—Heavy earth shocks were registered at 3:25 a.m. to-day at the observatories of Neuchatel and Zurich. The former calculated the epicentre at 2,000 kilometres away, probably in Morocco, while the latter placed it in the western portion of the Azores.

STUTTGART, Germany, May 20.—(AP)—Officials of the seismographical institute at Ravensburg said today a series of severe earth shocks had been registering since 3:42 a.m. The sharpness of the recording indicated the tremors must have assumed great proportions, it was said and the epicentre may have been Italy.

Pollyana

NORWOOD, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Norwood town hall was filled to capacity on Saturday night to see the four act comedy play, "Pollyanna" presented by Oshawa talent, members of Yorkminister Church directed by Mrs. A. W. Bell. Every member of the cast took his part exceptionally well. Special mention is due little Miss Yvonne Finlay, age 9, who played the important role of Pollyanna, Jr., while her mother, Mrs. Everet Finlay, took the part of Pollyanna, Sr.

The first act was a scene in Miss Polly Harrington's parlor on a summer afternoon in a New England village where some members of the "Ladies' Aid" had gathered to sew and pack a barrel of clothing for the heathen in far off lands.

The second act was in John Pendleton's library some weeks later who was a very rich bachelor whom they called the Hermit and who had lived entirely to himself with the exception of Bleeker his butler and Dr. Chilton a very close friend who visited him at times.

The third act was a scene in Pendleton's library an hour later while the fourth was in the same room five years later than act 3.

The names of the characters were (in order of first entrance): Mrs. Carmody, of the Ladies' Aid, Ethel Coy; Miss Carrol, of the Ladies' Aid, Libbie Botterill; Mrs. Gregg, of the Ladies' Aid, Annie Bird; Nancy, Miss Polly's servant, Edith Evans; Miss Polly Harrington, (little Pollyanna's aunt, Ellen Stally; Pollyanna, Jr., Yvonne Finlay; Pollyanna, Sr., Orono Finlay; Sodom and Gommorah, by themselves; Jimmy Bean, An orphan, age 12, Jack Germond; John Pendleton, Esq., bachelor called the Hermit, Allan McKenzie; Bleeker, Pendleton's (butler), Allan Penfound; Doctor Chilton, Pendleton's friend, Ira Gillette; Jimmy Bean, Sr. (age 17), George Perkins.

Mrs. Hermie Nicol, of Oshawa formerly of Norwood acted as soloist singing several numbers in her clear contralto voice which were very much enjoyed by all her former friends.

The General Motors Male Quartette also accompanied the cast and delighted the audience with the four numbers they rendered in such excellent style and harmony. Those gentlemen in the quartette were: first tenor, J. R. Ballantyne; second tenor, C. A. Toaze; first bass, C. W. Lambert; second bass,, A. W. Bell.

This play was brought to Norwood under the auspices of the United Church Sunday school of which G. A. Brethen is superintendent.

"GP" Tires are Custom-Built

Quality—Not Mass Production

It's not how fast we build tires, or how many we can make in a day. It's the extra time we take to build them right, and the extra material we put into them that makes them perfect. That's why "GP" Tires last longer. With us it's quality—not mass production. Every tire is custom-built. And they cost no more.

FIRE PROTECTION FOR NORTH MONAGHAN.

The question of fire protection for people living outside the city limits, particularly in the congested suburban area of North Monaghan, is again to the fore.

It is a matter that has long been before the municipal authorities, both of the city and the township.

The people of Peterborough maintain for their own protection a fire department that costs more than $68,000 a year.

It is surely not fair, therefore, that this costly service should be made available to protect people who pay nothing toward the cost of the department, and even a desire to be neighborly and helpful does not justify the city furnishing fire protection for its township neighbors, unless adequate payment for the service is provided.

The time has come when North Monaghan should provide its own fire-fighting department for the suburban part of the township, as has been done in similar suburban areas elsewhere in the Province.

A volunteer fire force, with the necessary equipment, would serve the purpose for many years.

In the meantime, the township should be prepared to make an adequate payment for the protection the city department may give to the suburban area.

LIQUOR SHIPMENTS.

Canada will continue to prohibit shipments of Canadian liquor into the United States.

A motion by Col. S. C. Robinson, Conservative member for Essex West, for the repeal of the law passed last year received practically no support in the House of Commons and was declared lost without a division.

According to the proposer, had a secret ballot been possible his resolution would have been carried.

That seems a bit fanciful, but it would not be surprising if the lack of support given the proposal failed to represent the real sentiments of a goodly number of the members.

The majority of Canadians, however, undoubtedly feel that while the action of prohibiting direct shipments has utterly failed to keep Canadian liquor out of the United States and that a considerable amount of revenue has been sacrificed, yet it is worth while to have the satisfaction of knowing that the Dominion is acting the part of a good neighbor in refusing to participate in a trade that is against the laws of the United States.

The gesture may not be proving very helpful in view of the eleven million dollars worth of Canadian liquor shipped to St. Pierre and Miquelon last year en route to the United States, but at least it absolves this country from any official share in an illicit trade.

PENSION CHANGES.

The announcement made in the House by Hon. Murray MacLaren, Minister of Pensions, that "the matter of Pensions Act amendments is now under consideration," is of considerable interest.

Of much greater value, however, would have been a statement from the Minister that the Pension Counsel have been instructed not to appeal against decisions of the Tribunals in favor of the applicants unless there is evidence of a very obvious miscarriage of justice.

As the special committee of the Canadian Legion has pointed out, this practice has been responsible for the greater part of the present congestion, and it is obvious that if the Government wishes to be of immediate service to disabled service men it will order a change in policy that will do away with the bulk of these appeals.

In addition, of course, it may be that the machinery devised last year has been found to be too elaborate, and that it will be necessary to substitute something more workable.

The Department of Pensions is well advised, therefore, to consider that and other features of the legislation.

In the meanwhile, however, much can be done to relieve the situation by reducing the number of Pension Counsel appeals.

The Minister of Pensions and his colleagues must be aware of the dissatisfaction that the present situation is causing.

"MAKE THE PUNISHMENT, ETC."

In Toronto last week a motorist who had been convicted of driving while drunk and who had been sentenced to seven days in jail, appealed the case, and Judge Denton not only dismissed the appeal but extended the sentence to thirty days, as more in keeping with the gravity of the offence.

This action has been greeted with much approval by Ontario newspapers, and the remark of the Brantford Expositor that "if magistrates and judges will listen to public opinion they will deal sternly with the class of driver who persists in mixing whiskey and gasoline," is typical of the general press comment.

There has been too great an inclination on the part of magistrates to inflict the minimum penalty for this most serious offence, and it is safe to say that the minimum sentence of seven days is imposed in at least three-quarters of the cases.

If drunken motorists are to be driven off the highways the courts will have to be more stern in their attitude toward those accused of the offence.

When a driver who, according to the evidence, drove while drunk at the rate of 70 miles an hour on the provincial highway escapes with the minimum sentence, as happened in a local case recently, there will be a general feeling that the punishment utterly failed to meet the crime.

Flagrant offenders of that kind should get the limit of the law and permanently lose the privilege of driving.

THE SILVER LINING APPEARS.

A break in the heavy cloud of economic depression that has hung over Canada for so long, has become discernible to the authorities of the port of Montreal. According to a recent issue of the Montreal Star, the outlook for shipments of grain from the port of Montreal is so bright this month and the next that already hopes are being expressed that the record year of 1928, when nearly 200,000,000 bushels were despatched, may be equalled. At all events, it is asserted that the picture as compared with 1929 and 1930 has changed completely. Stocks are reported to be low on the other side and Canadian grain is moving all over Europe. France is allowing the entry of a considerably larger percentage of foreign grain, and Germany has reduced the duty on account of the beginning of exhaustion in her domestic supplies.

This news is encouraging, indeed, for the recovery of prosperity in the Dominion depends very largely on the movement of wheat into the markets of the world at a profitable price. "If present indications are maintained I believe that we shall match our shipments for 1928," Louis Wolfe, of the firm of Louis Wolfe & Sons, stevedores, stated recently. "The prospects are just the same as they have been in the good years. Certainly, it looks as though we shall be continuously busy until the end of June. With business increasing every day, I think it safe to prophesy that more grain will be despatched from the port in the first three months of this season than during the whole of the 1930 period of navigation."

Other shippers declare that the situation has changed decidedly. There is likely to be a steady demand for Manitoba wheat in the interval until the new crops in Europe are harvested, provided the price remains on a parity with that prevailing in the markets of the world. The intrinsic merit of Canadian wheat causes it to be preferred if the price is right. Some of the shippers are so confident that they express the hope that the acreage in Canada will be as large as last year, because of the probable shortage in Australia and Argentina. It is to be hoped that these optimistic forecasts prove to be true, for if they do it will mean much to Canada.—Brantford Expositor.

A PATRIOTIC SERVICE.

This afternoon the Ontario Regiment is being given its annual inspection. It is turning out at its full authorized strength of four companies, two from Oshawa, one from Whitby and one from Port Perry and Cannington. It is parading as only a shadow perhaps of its former glory, but, nevertheless, a glorious shadow, a small body of officers and men who have devoted themselves to militia service, not because of any material gain, for there is none, but because of a desire to render a patriotic service to their country, to discharge a responsibility which they feel is theirs in maintaining a militia service in this part of Canada.

The need for economy in federal expenditures has played havoc with the funds available for this year for militia training. In spite of this, the officers and other ranks have stood by the old regiment, have kept up to strength by purely voluntary service, and have made every effort to attain a standard of efficiency that would reflect credit on the regiment on its day of inspection. The money did not matter. They did not care much whether they would draw any training pay. There were traditions to be maintained, sir. There was a history of seventy years of service to be kept alive, sir. So the Ontario stuck to their guns, did their training, and to-day, small in numbers but mighty in spirit, they pass before the eye of the inspecting officers.

Days will not always be lean, we hope, for the time will come when the Ontario will again march along, fifty-score trong, rising to their former glories because of the patient and sacrificial service of the regiment of to-day.—Oshawa Times.

SAYS MR. FERGUSON IS RIGHT.

(From the Farmers' Sun, Toronto)

"What's wrong with our people at home is that they don't care what becomes of their stuff after they grow it. All they want to do is to get if off the place and be rid of it. They neither pack it nor advertise it as they should." So Howard Ferguson, discussing the marketing of Canadian farm products in England, told a representative of the Globe in London, and the unhappy part of it is that his remarks are not unjustified. One has no need to travel to England to note that Canadian farm products generally, and Ontario grown particularly, are "dumped" on the market in the most haphazard fashion imaginable. There are exceptions, of course, notably British Columbian apples and Prince Edward Island potatoes, but, in the main, the method of marketing our staple commodities leaves everything to be desired. A great how d'ye do is made because early fruits and vegetables from the United States coming on the market before the home-grown supply is ready, the latter is scorned by the consumer, who having had his fill of the imported stuff, loses his taste for the home-grown variety by the time it makes its appearance. That is only partly true. The fact more often is that the consumer turns up his nose at the home-grown offering because it compares unfavorably with the imported article he has been buying. Especially is this true of asparagus, spinach, lettuce and the like, the importation of which is now practically prohibited by the tariff, but which used to reach the Toronto market at this season in a condition calculated to tempt the appetite and tickle the palate of the most finicky, and so achieve a ready sale. The Ontario stuff, on the contrary, as offered for sale in the city stores, too often makes a sorry show in comparison, and as a result soon becomes a drug on the market, while the people turn to imported oranges, grapefruit and so forth for their supply of iron, vitamins or whatever the fad of the moment may be. Some improvement is apparent of late in the marketing of Ontario potatoes and turnips, but we do not hesitate to say that, on the whole, Ontario is a long way behind the times when it comes to marketing staple farm products. Mr. Ferguson's remarks will be resented, of course. So will our own. We will be told that Ontario products are the equal of any and superior to most. That may be true. It is, nevertheless, beyond dispute that the machinery for getting them to the consumer in first-class condition is altogether inadequate, and offers a fruiful field for enterprising merchandising.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Grow less wheat is the United States solution for the wheat problem. Next?

The dole is likely to be the next thing to cause trouble for the British Government. As Andy says, the whole situation is a "picklement."

Neither Mr. Ferguson nor Mr. Massey, it may be remarked, looms up nearly as important in the eyes of the public as does the necessity for solving some of the economic problems Canada is facing.

What will become of the Consumers' League when the new Tariff Board begins to function?

Victoria County declares that it has had too much rain lately, which is a complaint that has a certain amount of novelty about it.

SECRET PLACES

BY

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments:

Feodor Staire, attached to the British Embassy in Paris, after serving in Madrid, was wealthy, was determined to make his way in the diplomatic world, was unmarried, and was bored by the modern young girl. On his 36th birthday he was on the Calais train, bound for London, when he met his old friend, Ronald Halkett, who seven months before had married the beautiful Greta Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham, who lived in Paris. Ronald mentioned his sister-in-law, Toni, but Staire was not interested. Then he was attracted to her when he saw her rescue a little pet dog from beneath a limousine in London and later when he saw her riding in the Row. Soon after her return to Paris, she went on a visit to the United States. In the meantime, Greta had met the Comte Henri D'Arblaye, who although received in the American colony in Paris, did not bear a very good reputation. Toni, who was about 21, met Staire on her return, at a dinner party given in a Paris restaurant. Greta had told Ronald she had a headache and did not wish to go but Toni met her unexpectedly in the cloakroom. Greta told her she had come with D'Arlbaye. Toni, who considered herself hard-boiled, danced with Feodor and was instantly attracted to him. When Feodor saw D'Arblaye he told Toni she should warn her sister. He said D'Arblaye was a wealthy South American, who pretended to be a Frenchman. They danced again and Staire made an engagement for luncheon the next day in the country. They were engaged when they returned in the evening and Toni asked Feodor to meet her with her mother's party that night at the charity ball at the Opera.

INSTALMENT IV.

"Of course I'll come," Staire told Toni. "Do you imagine I would stay away if you wanted me? Look out for me near the serious affairs. Do you realize that your mother will be a little surprised—to put the matter mildly?"

"It takes a lot to surprise mother where I'm concerned, and she loves Ronnie as if he were her son, and you are Ronnie's closest and oldest friend. She'll be pleased."

"I hope so," he said gravely. "If she does not think I am too old for you, Toni. It's a big gap."

"I never could bear boys," Toni retorted. "They're fatuous. They're raw. And I am marrying you, not mother Besides, just now Greta's taking up all the maternal attention."

"Great? Why?"

"She's being rather indiscreet—nothing in it, you know, but she's so lovely that she's conspicuous."

"She is lovely," he agreed and fell silent, his last night's anxiety for Ronald coming back into his mind. As if she guessed his thoughts, Toni spoke in her old impetuous manner.

"Last night I wouldn't have let you know, but to-day, now, it's different. You'll be in the family. Greta is upsetting Ronald by going about so much with D'Arblaye. Last night I pretended I didn't know. Ronnie was furious last night."

"It's a pity," Staire agreed, but said no more, and as he drew up the car outside No. 36, he forgot Ronald and Ronald's affairs in view of his own immediate concerns.

It was almost the first time he had been inside Toni's home and as the butler, grave and elderly and stout, let them in, Staire realized anew what a beautiful setting it made for the woman who was her mother. The salon, a long spacious room with two large windows, each leading from a little raised platform that ran along that side of the room, was full of the afternoon sunshine, and the shadow of dancing leaves from the trees outside lay across the Aubusson carpet; a lovely room to shape and color, and filled with lovely things. The dining-room Toni showed him was beyond the closed double doors of glass at one end, and at the other, on one side of the stone fireplace, a door led into her mother's dressing-room. Across the wide hall was a library and her own bedroom, and beyond againother rooms and various corridors, the whole apartment spacious and beautiful.

Milady was just back from her luncheon engagement, Henri, the butler informed Toni. She would be disengaged in one moment, and Toni seated herself on the arm of Feodor's chair and blew smoke rings into the air with a little gesture of defiance—not that defiance was needed—for Lady Alice who knew far more about Staire than her daughter, was very delightful to him, and did not even warn him against Toni's impetuosity—a forbearance that made Toni turn on her swiftly when Staire had gone a few minutes later.

"Mother! Why didn't you tell me I was rushing my fences?"

Lady Alice stood still for a moment, then she came across the room and put a hand on either side of Toni's face.

"Because for once, odd though it may sound, I do not think you are, Toni dear," Her voice was very gentle, her eyes sympathetic. "You love this man, I think," and at Toni's worless nod, she held her very close for a minute then released her and drew back.

"I'm delighted, dear, and Feodor Staire is a most attractive man. Now sit down and tell me your plans, if you have any."

Toni had hardly finished talking before Greta strolled in, nodded to them both, and said: "May I use the telephone, mother?" and strolled away again to the library where the instrument was; whereupon Toni, suddenly remembering Feodor's promise about the ball at the Opera, determined to ask her if shewere going, and did so when she returned.

"Yes; with the Delvilles," Greta's tone was nonchalant. "Why?"

"Is Ronnie?"

"No He's busy to-night. You're going, I suppose?"

"Yes. Mother's got a party."

"Who?"

"The Hardwickes and Colonel James, and the Comte and Comtesse de Verllane and Feodore Staire."

"Feodore Staire," Greta echoed, and for an appreciable second she stood quite still, then stooping took a cigarette from a box and lit it.

"I didn't know you knew Feodore Staire until last night," she said. "Is he—attached—already?"

Toni ignored the little sneer that came so strangely from that lovely mouth; she could afford to do so.

"More or less," she answered, with elaborate carelessness; "more, in the near future, I hope. I am going to marry him."

"What?"

This time there was no mistaking Greta's amazement, for she swung round and stared at her sister. "You're joking!"

"Why?"

"You don't know him. It's absurd—"

"It's true. You're being absurd, Greta. Why shouldn't I marry Feodor Staire?"

Toni's voice held a note of anger,and Lady Alice interposed to save further unpleasantness.

"It is quite true, Greta. After all, we know a good deal about Feodor Staire from Ronald, and I have met him several times in the past year. I am quite satisfied."

Greta pressed out the half-smoked cigarette and looked up at her sister.

"You are a fast worker," she said. "I hope you won't find it work for nothing."

"Which means you hope I will—oh, well, what do I care? See you to-night!" And pursing her lips to a whistle and doing elabrorate Charleston steps Toni quitted the room, leaving Lady Alice alone with her elder daughter; whereupon Greta dropped her slender length into a chair.

"Toni's impossible! The idea of her marrying Feodor Staire is preposterous! He'll be tired of her in a month."

"My dear Greta," for once Lady Alice's tone was severe "your constant criticism of Toni only reacts on yourself. Is Ronald so content with your latest--craze—that you can throw stones at your sister?"

The color faintly in Greta's face.

"I fail to see why you should consider D'Arblaye a craze. He dances well and he is amusing. Why should Ronald object?"

"I think he does, and I certainly do, although it is not exactly my affair now. D'Arblaye is not the right sort of man."

"Oh—absurd!" Greta's impatience passed the bounds of good manners. "Don't be ridiculous, mother. He's a man of the world. That's all. Do you expect a saint?"

Yet an hour or two later when Ronald—detained by his work in the office of L'Etoile, Gerald Astley's paper—telephoned to his flat in Passy, Greta's answer was charmingly reassuring.

"Oh, no, darling. The Delvilles, yes. D'Arblaye may be there—heres usually at the big shows, isn't he, but I'm with the Delvilles' party. You need not be in the least jealous. Stupid—you know I adore you."

Ronald hung up the receiver with a sigh quickly checked, and went on with his work; but he knew Greta, her wilfulness, the danger of her great beauty, and her absorption in herself. He was not afraid she would go too far with any of the fascinated men who hovered round her; she was innately cold, and an adept at taking much and giving little; none knew better than he how difficult it was ever to rouse her to any real warmth, or to move her either by passion or anger. Nothing gave her quite so much pleasure as the contemplation of herself and her social successes. She had not the temperament that is carried away by generous response or unwise warmth of feeling; Ronald had no need to feel real jealousy, but what he did feel was a soreness that she could so easily go against his wishes, and a sick disappointment that she, so lovely, so thoroughbred, could enjoy the society of such a man as Henri D'Arblaye

Toni opened her eyes one morning about a week later and lay in comfortable, drowsy luxury between waking and sleeping, wondering why she felt so extraordinarily happy. She had been used, this last week, to waking up happy, but to-day seemed even better than usual, and she wondered why, and then suddenly remembered that to-night was to be the big dinner party that her mother was giving to celebrate her engagement, and that on the morrow they were leaving Paris for Lady Alice's house in Brittany. Toni was very modern; she adored Paris, adored the excitement of town life; but she also adored the chateau in the park above the river, with its terraces, its garden, its animals and the delightful house-parties. It would be so new, so extraordinarily wonderful this year because Feodor would come there. Feodor and she would wander about those lovely gardens together, and, at the thought, Toni suddenly sat up, tossing back her fair, short hair.

"I believe I'm old-fashioned," she said aloud in a tone of horror. "I'm sentimental, I'm terribly in love, I intend to be a good wife, oh, damn! I must be getting old, or what's the matter? Does everybody change when they fall in love?"

Her voice, which had been louder than she intended, aroused the attention of her maid, who was in the next room, and as Marie came in, smiling at Toni, whom she worshipped, she said "Did Mademoiselle call me?"

Toni shook her head.

"No, I didn't call you, Marie; but it's time I got up. What is the time? Half-past nine! Oh, mon Dieu! And I've got a dozen things to do. My hair's got to be washed at eleven. My bath quickly Marie! Why didn't you wake me before?"

"Milady said you were to be left in peace as long as possible," Marie said. "You were tired last night, mademoiselle, you had had an exciting time; and to-day—to-day is more exciting than ever."

Marie, like all French women, adored a romance. She thought that Toni's love affair was the most wonderful she had ever known, and she equally adored Feodor, who was always charming in his manner to those who served him.

Toni had not yet gotten used to the fact that Feodor Staire was a great personality in the social and diplomatic world, but she did thrill every time she realized that he loved her, and she loved him. It was all so wonderful, it was like a fairy tale, and she looked down with an air of pitying contempt on one or two friends who happened to be engaged to men more or less their own age.

TURNING TO CANADA

Enclosing a clipping from the Dayton Daily News in which it was interesting to note that some American architects are turning to Canadian influence for new features in suburban homes The Examiner has received the following letter, (Ed.):

Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir—It is pleasant to hear so many Americans express the desire to spend their vacations in Canada which among its many other attractions, seems to be regarded as a fisherman's paradise. "Where is the best fishing to be found?" is always the first question asked, thus the Peterborough Game and Fish Association shows wisdom in its efforts to prevent fishing out of season. One prominent Dayton doctor said he could not remember how many vacations he had spent in Canada but he would go again this summer and take his family with him.

Dayton streets are so crowded with automobiles day and night that one would think here no business depression existed, but that it does exist is proved by the fact that this week many banks and building associations have posted notices that no sum larger than twenty-five dollars may be withdrawn from a savings account without giving two months notice. Anything under twenty-five dollars will be allowed the depositor at the bank's convenience (usually three or four days after you apply for it). This rule does not apply to checking accounts.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

OLGA M. WESTBYE.

What To-day Means To You.

"TAURUS"

If May 20th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a.m. to 11:10 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 8 p.m. to 9:45 p.m. The danger hours are from 11:50 a.m. to 1:45 p.m. and from 5:30 p.m. to 7:10 p.m.

Planetary aspects of May 20th denote influences which will make for curious and memorable experiences. They favor and encourage business enterprise, especially in connection with real estate or mining. Some unexpected good news will be received during the evening.

Children born on this May 20th will be, temperamentally, very matter of fact, straightforward, frank and easy to understand. They will always be calm and collected, never worry and never allow themselves to be stampeded. Fond of home and its comforts, travel will make little or no appeal to them.

Born on May 20th, your chief characteristics are persistency, perspicacity and level-headedness. You never allow disappointment or adversity to lessen your efforts. Neither does success weaken your stamina. Before embarking in any new enterprise or undertaking, you carefully weigh the "pros" and "cons" and, almost unconsciously, overstress the difficulties and under-estimate the rewards. Once in, however, you never let go, and work until success crowns your efforts. Your judgment, being always well-considered, is generally reliable.

Your mannerisms assist you very much, and, underlying your strong determination, thereis always apparent an atmosphere of affability that disarms criticism and promotes good feeling. You never show your true sentiments when they are inimical or pessimistic. You, too, shoulder your own mistakes and never try to "pass the buck."

Not afraid of responsibility, always fired by the ambition to do your utmost, self-confident and determined, your horoscope indicates that you will travel far, and achieve much. In your home life, those traits that will win for you, while on the outside, success and material prizes, will insure for you happiness and contentment. As husband or wife, you will, in good times or hard ones, be a real companion and a true pal. Your never changing attitude will halve all troubles and double all joys.

Heavy Fine For Banks Charging High Rate

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20 (C.P.)—Heavy penalties for banks which charge more than seven per cent. interest are provided in a bill which will be introduced in the House of Commons by H. E. Spencer (U.F.A., Battle River). It is an amendment to the Bank Act and provides a penalty for violation of the clause which now prohibits banks from charging more than seven per cent. Notice of the bill was placed on the Order Paper to-day.

Banks which violate the interest clause, according to the bill, would be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 and any director, manager or officer of a bank who charged more than the set rate would be liable to a fine not exceeding $1,000 or to imprisonment not exceeding two years.

The provision in the Act as it stands has been ignored by the banks, Mr. Spencer claims.

Parking In Toronto Is Set At 30 Minutes

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (C.P.).—Extension of parking time in the downtown section from fifteen to thirty minutes was approved to-day by the Civic Works Committee. Alderman MacGregor, mover of the resolution, pointed out that the change had been approved by the joint traffic committee. The alderman stated that many complaints had been received over the introduction of the present fifteen-minute limit.

The downtown section affected is bounded by King, Queen and Young Streets, where merchants alleged their business had been hurt by the reduced parking time limit.

HOOVER MAY LAY CORNER STONE.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19. (CP)—The Ottawa Journal says to-day that should plans for the construction of the United States legation building opposite the Parliament Buildings here proceed according to schedule, in all probability President Herbert Hoover will be in Ottawa about the middle of July to lay the corner stone of the structure that will cost in the region of half a million dollars.

CANADIAN WOMEN TO MEET ROYALTY

STRONGER TONE IS EVIDENT IN THIS MORNING'S TRADING

Stability of London Market Turns Tide of Trading Overnight.

BRAZILIAN ACTIVE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (CP)—To-day's action on Toronto stock exchange was typical of the public attitude towards the stock market at the present time. Opening prices were higher all along the line, the strength being due in no small measure to the stability of the London market, which had the effect of turning the tide here overnight. However, the turnover fell off on the recovery and before the end of the first hour stock prices began to slip again. The decline was not drastic but it indicated that the public is not anxious to make commitments on the upturn and that rallies will be short-lived for some time yet.

Brazilian was one of the strongest spots, selling above 16 the first hou where it showed a net gain of 2 points. Later it eased to just under 16. Nickel came out well above 12, later easing to 12 3-8, where it was still up ¾ of a point. C.P.R. up 27 the first hour, lost ½ point from its high. Ford, on the other hand, after selling down to a new low at 18, recovered partially. Page-Hersey added a couple of points to yesterday's final and held that gain. Bell Telephone was off and at a new low under 140. Oils were unchanged to a small fraction higher. Liquor Stocks sold unchanged for the most part and Service Stations, De Forest and a few other curb stocks were unchanged from last night.

INCREASE SHOWN BUILDING LINES

Statistics From 61 Cities Give Aggregate of $13,786,000 For April Activity.

INCREASE HERE.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20 (By The Canadian Press). — Continued increase in building activity is shown in April figures for building permits. Returns to the Dominion bureau of statistics from 61 cities give an aggregate of $13,786,000 for April, or $3,879,000 higher than March. As compared with April, 1930, however, there was a decrease of $3,191,000.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia recorded increases as compared with March, 1931. The greatest gain of $1,335,605 taking place in Nova Scotia.

As compared with April, 1930, Nova Scotia, Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia reported increases in the value of building authorized; Quebec indicated the most pronounced gain of $1,460,784, or 59 per cent. Among the remaining provinces, the greatest decline of $3,254,115 or 45.5 per cent., was in Ontario.

Of the larger cities, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver registered increases in the building authorized during April as compared with the preceding month, and also as compared with April, 1930, while in Toronto there was an increase in the former, but a decline in the latter comparison of the smaller centres, Halifax, New Glasgow, Moncton, Sherbrooke, Westmount, Belleville, Fort William, Ottawa, Owen Sound, Peterborough, Port Arthur, Welland, Woodstock, Brandon and Prince Rupert reported increases in the value of the building represented by the permits issued, as compared with March, 1931, and April, 1930.

TAKE NO CHANCES ON FINANCE BILL

OPPOSITION PROTESTS.

LONDON, Eng., May 20. (AP) The Labor Government took steps to-day to meet threatened obstruction from the Conservative opposition on the Finance Bill to put into effect the Snowden budget, which includes a land tax.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald served notice in the House of Commons that after the Whitsuntide recess a resolution would be proposed setting up a ime table for further consideration of the measure. His words were greeted by a storm of protests from the Opposition and cries of "Moscow" and other taunts were hurled at the Government benches.

Limitation of debate by application of the "guillotime" on the finance bill is unusual but not unprecedented.

Replying to Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, who said he believed it was a novel course regarding this measure, Mr. MacDonald said it had been done in 1910.

SURRENDERS TO GOVERNMENT

CHICAGO, Ill., May 20—John Factor, alias "Jake the Barber," sought for an alleged $5,000,000 swindle in Great Britain, surrendered to Government authorities to-day and was held for arraignment before a United States Commissioner.

CONFERENCE DATE SET.

SIMLA, India, May 20 (C.P.). — An official announcement to-day said that the second Indian Round Table Conference would meet in London on September 4.

Prairie Wheat Seeding Is Nearly Completed

REGINA, Sask., May 20 (C. P.)—Wheat-seeding in the province is now about 95 per cent. completed and coarse grains are about 50 per cent., according to telegraphic reports received by the statistics branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture. Conditions, except for wind, have been favorable for seeding operations, and spring work has been proceeding satisfactorily.

In some cases, however, farmers have preferred to delay seeding, particularly of coarse grains, on account of the dry condition of the soil. Since some of the reports were filed, a break in the weather has brought light showers, and in some cases snow, which has been fairly general, but in the central and southern districts more rain is urgently needed.

Germination has been fairly satisfactory although somewhat slow and in some cases uneven. All the first-sown wheat is now showing green, but growth generally has been slow.

BENNETT HONORED BY ROYAL SOCIETY

Premier Elected Honorary Fellow at Fiftieth Annual Gathering.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20.—(C.P.)—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, was to-day elected an Honorary Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada at the fiftieth annual meeting here.

The following scientists were elected Fellows of the Society: Professor N. B. Baker, Professor of Geology at Queen's University, Kingston, Dr. C. H. Best, of Toronto, who assisted Dr. F. G. Banting in the discovery of insulin, Dr. W. E. Cockfield, of Vancouver, Director of the Dominion Geological Survey, H. P. Gussow ,of Ottawa, Dominion Botanist, Dr. Harold Hibbert, Professor of Chembsitry at McGill University, Montreal, Dr. C. L. Pierre Masson, Medical Professor at the University of Montreal, Rev. Oliver Maurault, Director of Classical College of St. Sulpice at Montreal, Dr. Joseph Pearse, of the Dominion Observatory, Victoria, B.C., T. R. Rosebrough, Professor of Mathematics at the University of Toronto, and Dr. P. S. Warren, of Edmonton, Professor of Geology at the University of Albert.

WAGE REDUCTION TO BE OPPOSED

Amerıcan Labor Federation Suggests Metal Trades Organize Better.

CLAIM FAITH BROKEN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20. — (AP)—Better organization to keep "any unjustified, unsound, uneconomic burden from being forced upon labor's back" was suggested today to metal trade councils by the American Federation of Labor.

The Federation's metal trades department held that some short-sighted and selfish employers, encouraged by the advice of some of the nation's leading bankers, are reducing or attempting to reduce wages. Active efforts should be made to organize the unorganized. Such a step, it said, would enable more wage earners to "make use of collective action" against lower pay proposals.

Asserting the American wage earners and their dependents constitute 85 per cent of the population and it is the goods they purchase which maintain American industries, the department said "the present depression was caused principally by the failure of industry to pay wages in proportion to the wealth being created."

Would Shift Burden

"Some of those who reaped inordinate profits during the so called period of prosperity, are now endeavoring to force labor to bear the burden of the employers' unsound and uneconomic business policies," the department said.

The Federation itself and President Green of the organization have said that labor would resist any attempts at general wage reductions.

Secretary Doak of the Labor Department reported he had no information that general reductions were contemplated, but added the administration would consider such action a violation of faith since employers and employes promised President Hoover in 1929 to maintain the wage level despite the depression."

Two Cyclists Injured In Crash With Auto

BELLEVILLE, Ont., May 20 (C. P.). — Robert Orr and Eugene Hitchon, both of this city, were seriously injured, when the motorcycle on which they were riding crashed headlong into an oncoming car, four miles east of the city. One sustained a fracture of both legs, while Hitchon suffered a multiple fracture of one limb. It may be necessary to amputate the limb to save his life. They were admitted to hospital and attended by Dr. Robertson.

Provincial Police are investigating.

BORDER CHAMBER WILL RENDER AID

Plan to Forward Appeals of Commuters Turned Back From United States.

31 ON HAND AT PRESENT.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 20.—Coincident with the announcement of modified United States Immigration regulations regarding Canadian commuters, the Border Chamber of Commerce to-day announced details of its service to give assistance to local residents desiring to re-establish their American status.

Aid will be given by the chamber in putting forward appeals of former commuters who have been turned back from the United States by stringent regulations recently put in force. Regular hours for this service have been set, during which a special staff at the chamber office will devote its time to giving advice and assistance.

At the present time, 31 appeals against barring commuters, launched by the chamber, are being handled by the Canadian Legation in Washington.

The chief effect of the modification announced late Tuesday from Ottawa is the avenue which is left open for appeal against former rulings. Pretexts under which Canadian residents employed in Detroit were barred from the United States are expected in many cases to be found non-effective under new rulings.

Another important point is that those barred from commuting who had hitherto been classed as deported with the privilege of entering the United States even temporarily, removed, now have the chance to apply for re-entry with at least some hope of success.

SPREAD IN PRICE OF MILK DENIED

have our patrons know all the facts about our business. Speaking generally I would say this, no man who is buying milk is paying the farmer less money for the milk which is sold in the city. As for our company, we have around thirty farmers who are on contract to supply us with milk the year round. And I would like to take this opportunity of saying that I have been buying milk from ten or more of these producers for thirty-three years, and from all of them for the last ten years under contract. I think our patrons will appreciate the significance of that fact, which I am personally glad to be able to mention. These thirty producers who are under contract to supply us with milk the year round are outstanding farmers and dairymen.

"I would also like to point out that in the Silverwood's organization of about twenty-eight dairy concerns in Ontario the spread between our prices here in Peterborough, that is the difference between what we pay to milk producers and what the consuming public pays us for their milk is the lowest in the whole organization. That is another fact which the public should know. And furthermore, the quality of our milk from Silverwood's Peterborough dairy, and also the quality of our other dairy products which we manufacture, is of the very highest. We have the reports and we know. Our own tests are made at the local Provincial Laboratory. I think this goes to show that we are trying to provide our patrons with the best quality of milk in this province. I might also add that the price of milk in Peterborough all winter has been as cheap, if not the cheapest, in the province."

EARLY GAINS ARE RETAINED AT MONTREAL

Firmness General Throughout List During This Morning's Session.

POWER UP POINT.

Brazilian Shows Marked Improvement Gaining to 16 Mark at Noon.

MONTREAL, Que., May 20 (C.P.)—Firmness was general on the Montreal stock exchange this morning. Early gains ranging up to over a point appeared and were well maintained. The air firmness brought relief to the market which has been under the gloom of falling prices the past few weeks.

Brazilian howed marked improvement gaining gradually throughout the morning to touch 16 at noon. A net gain of 1¼ on the day. Nickel was in a better position, showing a net rise of ¾ at 12⅛.

Recovering from the selling pressure of yesterday, Montreal Power rose a full point to 50½. Canadian Pacific Railway climbed ¾ to 26¾ and held at that price throughout the morning. Canadian Car common rallied a point to 13. Canada Bronze eased off ½ to establish a new low at 26.

Quebec Power held an early gain of one point at 36 and Southern Canada Power was steady at 26⅛, up a point from yesterday. Consolidated Mining and Smelting stock moved slowly at the opening around yesterday's close, but at noon moved up suddenly to 87½, a gain of 1½ points. Steel of Canada advanced 1½ points on late sales to 28¾. Dominion Textile upward to 68 at noon, an improvement of 1½ from yesterday.

Moisture Relief Sends Chicago Wheat Lower

CHICAGO, Ill., May 20. (CP)—In the absence of reports on any actual damage by forests, grain prices averaged lower early to-day. Word of further moisture furnishings drought relief in Canada tended also to give bears an advantage. Ipening at 3-8 cents off to 1-8 up, wheat afterward underwent setbacks. Corn started unchanged to 3-8 lower and subsequently declined all around.

Traffic Officer Howard Patrols Highway No. 7

LINDSAY, Ont., May 20 (Special to The Examiner)—Highway Traffic Officer Howard, of Durham, Ontario, has been appointed as successor to Provincial Constable Porter, who has been transferred to Haliburton. Officer Howard will patrol Number 7 Highway between Sunderland and Peterborough. He assumes his duties at once.

LAWYER GETS 18 MONTHS FOR THEFT.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 20.— (C.P.)—John Love, barrister, was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment yesterday by Magistrate R. B. Graham. Love pleaded guilty to 12 charges of theft, totalling $11,260 of monies entrusted to his care by clients and estates. He was also found guilty of a forgery charge in connection with the will of the late E. Liddy, nurse of Winnipeg.

QUAKE RECORDED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Ont., May 20. (CP). An earthquake of moderate intensity was recorded on the seismograph at the Toronto observatory last night. The first vibrations started at 21 hours 31 minutes and 30 seconds Eastern Standard Time and lasted for nearly 4 hours. The distance to the epicentre was recorded as 5,256 kilometers. Observatory officials believed the 'quake to be in a south eastern direction.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 20. (CP)—Prime mercantile paper 2-2¼ per cent.

American exhibits at the recent commercial fair at Brussels, Belgium, attracted much attention.

SUPREME COURT OF PROVINCE NOT DIVORCE COURT JUDGE SAYS

Admits Judgment Must Be Given if Proof of Adultery is Given.

PAPERS MUST BE SERVED.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20. (CP)—The Supreme Court of Ontario is not a divorce court, Mr. Justice Logie stated in non-jury Assize Court today in issuing a pronouncement to counsel on the fact that seven divorce cases were on the list for today's session.

"I notice that there are six or seven divorce cases on the list" observed His Lordship. "The public must understand that the Supreme Court of Ontario is not a divorce court. If cases take such a short time to be presented it it only because proof of adultery does not take long to establish. If evidence of adultery is given, the court is bound to give judgment. The time it takes to grant a divorce is commensurate only with the time it takes witness to give evidence of adultery."

His Lordship made it clear that the degree absolute would not be made until six months after the date of pronouncement and, if any happenings contrary to the evidence occurred during the period the decree would not be made.

The court also emphasised that the papers must actualy be served to the parties concerned.

"Another thing that counsel must understand is that proof of service must be satisfactory" ruled His Lordship. "If an affidavit of service is fyled it must disclose the fact that the defendant and the co-defendant are the parties actually served."

Winnipeg Review

Wheat: Opened about unchanged yesterday morning with prices dropping fractionally under the previous close but the market gradually firmed up until prices were 7-8 to 1¼ higher than Monday night's close. Exporters and shippers were credited with buying 500,000 bushels of wheat, half of which was for export and the other half to fill tonnage. There was at times a little buying by seaboard houses, but this was of small volume. The market gave evidence of being more or less oversold, offerings were light and there was some short covering in evidence, with the pit crowd, both here and at Chicago, somewhat nervous in regard to the weather forecast with the possibility of frosts tonight in Kansas and Iowa with temperatures generally cold all over the winter wheat belt. Otherwise, there was no particular feature to the market and the trade volume generally was not large. The weather in the Canadian West has been cold with rains or snow fairly general but extremely light at many points, running from a trace to slightly over half an inch up to 7 o'clock this morning. Winnipeg and Portage La Prairie received the heaviest precipitation with further snow this morning, but the Western Provinces were reported as generally clear to-day There was no special feature to the demand for cash wheat, buyers were not anxious to load up and offerings were light with spreads mostly unchanged. The flour trade continues generally quiet. Liverpool closed unchanged to half higher and Buenos Aires was ¼ higher at mid-day, after opening ½ higher. Bradstreets available supplies, Canada and the United States decreased 7,549,000 bushels for the week, while afloat stocks increased 4,300,000 bushels, the total decrease being 3,249,000 bushels. The total North American supplies are now placed at 418,931,000 bushels as compared with a year ago of 336,026,000 bushels. Country marketings Monday 194,000 bushels last year 174,000 bushels. Winnipeg futures closed ½ to 1 cent higher, the deferred months showing the most strength.

Coarse Grains.—These markets were generally quiet. There was very little doing by way of export, although an odd load of barley was possibly worked. The pressure was light but the demand was quite limited. Oats closed 1-8 lower to 1-8 up, barley 1-8 lower to unchanged, and rye 1-8 higher.

Flax: This market held firm, closing ¼ to ¾ higher. Generally dull and featureless.

Liverpool due action 1-8 to ¼ higher based on Winnipeg July and October.

MARKET CLOSING ON EXCHANGES

Mining Corp. featured the golds and finished 15 higher for the day and Wright-Hargreaves was up 9. Hollinger, Granada and Eldorado were up 8 apiece. Dome and Lake Shore lost a few cents and Big Missouri and Sylvanite dropped 3 each. Central Manitoba eased another point.

Homestead, up a few cents, showed the only change in a dull oil section. Acme was firm and the rights, which expired at the close to-day, disappeared from the board.

TORONTO EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20.—(C.P.)—Toronto stock exchange market closed weak and lower to-day after having opened higher. The rally was short lived and gains were reduced early in the day as higher prices failed to entice active buying. In the afternoon the list sold off gradually, with the close witnessing another sharper dip.

Bell Telephone broke 6½ points to a new low at 133, Smelters 3½ points to a new low at 84, Abitibi 1 5-8 points to a new low at 3½, Service Stations 1½ points to a new low at 12½.

A number of other issues, including Gypsum, Ford of Canada, F. N. Burt, Page-Hersey Tubes, B.A. Oil, Imperial Oil, were at new lows on declines of a point or less. Page-Hersey shot up to 74 at the opening but closed at 71¾, where it was under yesterday's record low of 72. Bank stocks also suffered again. Canadian Bank of Commerce, Royal and Imperial recording new bottom prices.

Brazilian was an outstanding exception, closing 1 5-8 higher at 16. C.P.R. was up fractionally as were also B. C. Power "A" and International Nickel, though the latter issues were below their mid-day prices.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., May 20 (C.P.)—A decline of 5½ in Bell Telephone shares to 34 was among the more notable features of the afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange this afternoon.

The firmer tone which prevailed throughout the greater part of the list in the forenoon was interrupted by the resumption of selling pressure in some quarters in Wall Street. The majority of the leaders, however, managed to hold a fair proportion of their early gains, but here and there weakness developed.

WINNIPEG THEATRE OWNER DIES.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 20.—Victor C. Kobold, prominent business man and theatre owner of Winnipeg, is dead, aged 63. He was a breeder of high-class hunting dogs, which carried off premier honors at field trials and bench shows throughout the United States and Canada.

FREE RELIGION LEADER DIES.

LONDON, May 20.—(A.P.)— The Reverend Walter Walsh, D.D., leader of the free religious movement in London, died to-day following a short illness.

INTERLISTED ISSUES LEAD ON STANDARD

International Nickel and Noranda Among Stocks to Advance.

OTHER BASE METALS FIRM.

Higher-priced Golds Are Firmer—Better Demand in Oil Section.

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (C.P.)—Under the leadership of interlisted issues, prices recovered some ground in the forenoon session of the mining market today.

International Nickel moved up ¼ to $12.50 and Noranda advanced 85 to $21.50. Other base metals were quiet but firm.

Golds reflected the better feeling with upward movements. Wright-Hargreaves, Teck-Hughes and Hollinger were up 5 apiece when prices were taken at mid-day and smaller recoveries were in the majority throughout the group. Eldorado met better demand and moved up to 7 to 64. Macassa, off a couple, was one of the few issues that failed to respond.

In the oil section Homestead was active and Acme Gas gained a fraction. Acme rights were traded at a very low fraction as they have to be exercised before the close of today's market.

Calf receipts 630. Calves were steady at yesterday's advance with good to choice vealers from $7.50 to $8 with some tops at $8.50; fair to medium brought $6 to $7, with common mostly at $5.

Good and choice veals, $7.50 to $8.50; grassers, $3.50 to $4.

Hog receipts 630. Hogs were quoted at $7.50 f.o.b. for bacons or at $8@25 off car. Selects were $1 per head premium. Hogs off truck were quoted at $8 per hundredweight.

LIVERPOOL QUOTATIONS

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., May 20.—(CP)—Hogs 1,300; rather slow; packers inactive; fully 15 lower; bulk desirable 120-200 lbs., 7.50; bidding, 7.25 on 240 lbs.; packing sows, 5.75-6.15.

Cattle 75; largely cows, steady.

Calves 300; vealers active; fully steady; good to choice, 9.00 to mostly 9.50.

Sheep 25; lambs quoted steady at Monday's average.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, May 20.—Egg prices advanced, while butter, cheese and potato quotations held unchanged on the produce and dairy market here yesterday.

Carlot prices of fresh Ontario and Prairie eggs were higher, extras and firsts being up a cent at 21 to 22 cents, and 18 cents a dozen, respectively, while seconds were unchanged at 15 cents a dozen. British Columbia fresh extras and firsts, in carlots, also advanced a cent at 22 to 23 cents, and 19 to 20 cents a dozen. Quotations to retailers were unchanged. Receipts were 7,637 cases.

No. 1 pasteurized, fresh and regraded, butter, in carlots, was quoted at 20½ to 20¾ cents a dozen and to retailers solids and prints were unchanged at 22 and 23 cents a pound. Receipts were 759 boxes.

Ontario colored cheese was quoted at 9¾ to 10 cents a pound and receipts were heavy, totalling 2,946 boxes.

New Brunswick Green Mountain potatoes, in carlots, per 80-pound bag, or 90 pounds bulk, were quoted at 60 to 70 cents, and to retailers at 70 to 80 cents per 80-pound bag.

New No. 1 Floridas were quoted at $7 per 160 pound barrel and No. 2 brand at $5 a barrel. New No. 1 Bermudas were $2.25 per 50-pound box.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, May 20.—There was a stronger undertone to the local butter market yesterday and prices were steady with the top of the spread previously governing transactions, or 20c for No. 1 creamery solids, and 19c for No. 2. Butter was sold on this basis and it appeared as if brokers would be asking more money before the week's trading was concluded. There was a slight firmer feeling all around and buyers were unable to secure supplies at levels below the 20c and 19c range. Holders of Western supplies were asking 1c better than the prices in effect for Ontario receipts, or 21c for No. 1 creamery solids and 20c for No. 2. The Montreal market advanced a ¼c per pound on Monday at 20½c to 20¾c per pound for fresh and regraded No. 1 creamery pasteurized and the trend is upward.

Cream

Cream buyers were quoting prices level with those of last week-end, which was the range of 21c to 22c for special, 20c to 21c for No. 1, and 17c to 18c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points, and these prices figure as the bottom for Toronto creameries now that the butter market has shown definite signs of seeking higher levesl with the advent of grass supplies.

Cheese

New cheese sold at prices ½c higher than on Monday, the market seeming inclined to follow butter to higher levels. Brokers received 10c for new large, 10¼c for twins and 10½c for triplets. Prices to retailers were unchanged at 11½c for new large, 11¾c for twins and 12c for triplets.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 20.— Reports indicating that rainfall throughout the Prairie West had been lighter than at first indicated caused grain prices to rise here yesterday. At the high points wheat rose about 1c, and at the close quotations were from ½c to ⅞c higher, with May, at 59⅝c, July 60⅜c, and October 63½c.

There was some improvement in export demand, sales of close to half a million bushels of Canadian wheat being recorded.

PETERBOROUGH LUMBER COMPANY OLDEST AND LARGEST IN CITY

BOOM TO COMMUNITY

Established before Confederation, by the late Samuel Dickson, The Peterborough Lumber Company, Limited has operated continuously ever since. To-day they represent the oldest, largest and most reliable institution of their kind in this entire district. They offer to the people the most complete line of quality lumber, lath, shingles, wood, builders' supplies, etc. and the materials they furnish are guaranteed as to quality and adopted standards. Their phenominal success may be accredited to the exacting standards of the building materials they sell. The lumber used in construction should be most carefully chosen and you may be assured of maximum values when your purchase are made through the Peterborough Lumber Company, Limited. If you are a prospective home builder you will find it advantageous to consult with them.

This establishment adds in no little way to the progress and prosperity of the community. Thousands of dollars are brought in annually through them that would otherwise go to some other trade center. They employ many local men, who would have to seek employment elsewhere were it not for the existence of the Peterborough Lumber Co., Ltd., in fact, in excess of 75% of their gross income is paid in wages, taxes, improvements, etc. in this immediate vicinity. They are owned and controlled solely by Peterborough capital. They realize that in this county may be obtained the best of better timber and much of their products come from such timber. Approximately 75% of their lumber, too, is manufactured right here in Peterborough.

The Peterborough Lumber Co., Ltd. affords a most desirable market for builders and contractors. They are agents for leading lines of materials, such as Gyproc Wallboard, Seaman Kent Hardwood Flooring, Satin Finish Hardwood Flooring, Johns-Manville Shingles and Roofing, etc. We desire to direct the special attention of the public to this concern, which is one of the distinctive factors of the industrial efficiency of this section.

OBITUARY

HERBERT NORTHEY.

LAKEFIELD, May 20.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—The funeral of the late Herbert Northey took place on Sunday afternoon from the family residence and was very largely attended. Rev. Mr. Gilchrist of Toronto, was the officiating clergyman, speaking of the deceased gentleman's religious life which was a very real thing, as he consistently lived up to his belief and had the "faith that will not shrink though pressed by many a foe," and we believe him to be safe in God's own keeping.

The pallbearers were sl. brothers-in-law, W. J. Northey, Robert Northey, James Crapp, Bert Graham, Benial Harvey and Alfred Wakely. Interment was made in the Lakefield cemetery.

Mr. Northey who was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Northey, of Smith, was a son of a pioneer home as his father went to North Smith when there were no fences and the forest had to be cleared before the home could be made. Mr. Northey married Victoria Northey, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Northey, of Smith and she, with one daughter, Beulah (Mrs. C. E. Tatham) survive. There are also five brothers, J. J. Northey, William and Roy of Smith, and Aldous and Wesley of Peterborough, and three sisters, Mrs. James Crapp and Mrs. Bert Graham of Smith and Mrs. Davis of Peterborough.

Since his residence in Lakefield Mr. Northey built a summer resort at Katchewanooka Park at Henderson's Narrows and has become known to a considerable section of the tourists who make their headquarters on the Kawartha Lakes. A quiet man of retiring disposition Mr. Northey made many friends and retained their friendship by his sterling qualities of heart and mind. While resident in Lakefield he was associated with the Baptist church.

F. JAMES GOODMAN

ROSENEATH, May 20 (Examiner Correspondence). — Mr. and Mrs. James Grieve were in Toronto attending the funeral of the late Frederick James Goodman, who passed away after a short illness.

Deceased, who was in his 63rd year, was born in Cardiff, Wales, the son of Charles and Martha Morse, coming to this country when 14 years of age he settled in Toronto, where he was engaged in business as a contractor and builder for twenty-one years, and took part in the construction of many of the houses, churches and large apartment buildings erected in Toronto during that period.

St. Alban's Cathedral and old St. Hilda's College are two of the buildings which he helped to erect. Around Kitchener and Waterloo he took part in much of the building activities. The last twenty-five years of his life were spent at Rosedale, where he first erected a summer home for himself and later helped in the building up of a resort. For the past seven years the deceased man and his family have been residents during the winter months at Lindsay, returning to Rosedale, Toronto, for the summer.

He married his first wife, Isabella Hardcastle of Cobourg, in Toronto, twenty-three years ago; some years after her death, he married Minnie Arkwright of Rosedale, who survives him.

In religion, the late Mr. Goodman was a staunch Anglican and a member of St. Paul's Church. He was a valued member of the choir and a sidesman for the church. In the life of the church, he took a prominent part, and at Rosedale he gave the land and designed St. John's Church of that village.

Interested in fraternal work, he had been a member of the Masonic Order for many years. His other interests were varied, but he had a great love of Nature and the outdoor life and all things beautiful. An ardent disciple of Izaak Walton, and he was a skilful and enthusiastic fisherman.

Those left to cherish his memory are his sorrowing wife; two children from the first marriage, Ruby Evelyn at home, and Fred Launcelot of the Bank of Montreal at Winnipeg, Man., and the children from the second marriage, James R. of the Bank of Commerce at Sunderland, John of the C.P.R. Ocean Service, Toronto, and Morse at home.

MRS. T. G. BRERETON

BETHANY, May 19.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Word has been received of the death in Toronto of Mrs. T. G. Brereton, a former resident of Bethany.

The body will be brought to Lifford and burial will be made at St. Mary's cemetery.

The late Mrs. Brereton was the wife of the late Dr. George Brereton, of Bethany, who predeceased her in 1911.

HOME TOWNERS

TIDBITS INTERESTING AND HUMOROUS FROM CAMPBELLFORD

The report of car sales in this district do not substantiate the cry of hard times. Many new autos are to be seen on the streets.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Craighead and Miss Eaton were visitors to Midland on Sunday.

Mr. John Wong, a student of Albert College, Belleville, who spoke in St. John's United Church on Sunday evening and addressed the Campbellford Rotary Club on Monday, was the guest of the Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Tait during his stay in town.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Windrim and son Stanley motored to Port Hope on Sunday. Mrs. Windrim's mother, Mrs. T. W. Stanley, who has been the guest of her daughter for the past week returned home with them.

Mrs. K. E. Lewis, who has been visiting friends in town for the past week returned to her home in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mrs. Russell Hayne of Windsor, Ont., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Craighead on Monday, proceeding to Belleville to visit friends there the same evening.

Census enumerators for Campbellford and Seymour received instructions and supplies in the Public Library on Tuesday, Milton Maybee, ex-M.P. being in charge of the gathering.

Public Welfare Depart. Recommended To Council

TORONTO, Ont., May 19 (C.P.)—Creation of a Department of Public Welfare was recommended to council by the Board of Control to-day, based on a report presented by the Central Unemployment Relief Committee. This department is to be placed under a commissioner. Duties include regularation of all forms of social service supported by city funds; co-ordination of the work of all charitable institutions; to advise with respect to any new forms of social service proposed to be undertaken by the city and with respect to applications of charitable or philanthropic organizations.

MORE THAN LIKELY YOU HAVE IT

TOE itch, golfer's itch, ringworm of the toes, "Athlete's Foot"—it's a Canadian epidemic caused by the ringworm parasite, tinea trichophyton. It's a germ which has certainly made a nuisance of itself in these Provinces but—it cannot live in the presence of Absorbine Jr.

Look between your toes tonight: If the skin is slightly red, or unnaturally white and moist—if there are cracks, or tiny itchy blisters, or dry scales—then you, too, probably have the beginning of a case of "Athlete's Foot"!

Absorbine Jr. kills tinea trichophyton!... Exhaustive laboratory tests prove that this famous antiseptic penetrates deeply into flesh-like tissues and, wherever it penetrates, it kills the ringworm germ. At the first hint of infection, douse your feet generously with Absorbine Jr. morning and night—every day. And guard against infection by treating the feet after every exposure to any damp floors, even in your own home. If it does not yield readily to Absorbine Jr., see your doctor.

You have always found Absorbine Jr. fully efficient in relieving strains, sore muscles and bruises, and in healing cuts, abrasions and burns—you will find it just as good for "Athlete's Foot." At all druggists'—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Lyman Bldg., Montreal.

TWENTY THOUSAND EXTRAS HAUNT HOLLYWOOD'S CASTING BUREAUS

Lucky if They Work 40 Days a Year—Few Make Good.

A TOUGH GAME

HOLLYWOOD, May 20.—If you're going to Hollywood to look for a job—don't.

Casting men, producers, directors, actors and the mobs of "extras" who are rarely called and even less frequently chosen all say the same thing, and add "It doesn't matter who you are or what talents you possess, stay away from Hollywood, because already there are a dozen or a hundred of your very type already here—and perhaps starving."

It isn't an exaggeration to say they starve. Some do. Some faint while they are waiting at the casting office. Some of them finally realize that the moving picture industry is the hardest game in the world to crash, and return home. Others live on the charitable institutions in Hollywood. The few who can draw money from private sources do so as long as it lasts.

Mark Larkin, of the Association of Moving Picture Producers, told the writer to-day that there were more than 17,000 "extras" listed at the Central Casting Bureau in Hollywood. "And there are about 800 jobs a day for this mob," he said. "Over sixteen thousand of them wait for jobs that don't materialize."

"I don't know how they all live," an "extra" who stood outside the Paramount Studio said this morning. "Take me, for instance. I'm a married man. I've been in the show game for 27 years. I know my stuff. I've had forty days work in the past year. And I've been luckier than most of them.

"A man or a woman is a fool to think they can break into this game out of a blue sky," he went on. "Now and then somebody does it—but isn't it always someone who has had previous experience on the stage?"

"Haven't a thing to-day, and we're not likely to have anything," was the story given out at three casting offices where the writer called to-day. They handed out a card to be completed. The questionnaire sought to discover your professional name and your real name, your address, age, height, weight, color of hair and eyes, and the usual "in case of accident, who shall be notify? There was a space, too, for a list of applicant's wardrobe. Did he own a full dress? a tuxedo? A business suit? Sports clothes? Top coat? Riding habit? High hat? Cutaway? Or any other special clothes? And finally they sought to know whether or not you had any previous screen or stage experience, and if you played a musical instrument.

The movie racket is so tough these days, my informants all said, that it is practically impossible to even get your name listed at the Central Casting Bureau. They just aren't taking any more names. A staff of three telephone operators at the Bureau handle 900 calls an hour all day, from extras hoping for work.

Quite true, Dick Arlen, Janet Gaynor, Edwina Booth and Ramon Novarro were once extras. But they were the lucky "one in a million" who made the grade. In some cases luck played a part. In other cases, sheer ability. Or perhaps "pull."

For a certainty, if one can rely on the words of the big men in the movie industry in Hollywood, young people from eastern towns and cities who imagine they have a flare for the movies would do themselves and Hollywood a great big favor if they settled down in their own home town, even if they had to sell apples for a living. They don't have apple peddlars in Hollywood.

ROSENEATH

Mr. and Mrs. W. Blizzard and daughters Lillian, Miss Verna Thackeray and Mrs. Pierce, all of Cobourg paid a short visit with Mrs. Jackson and family on Sunday afternoon.

The Young Men's Bible Class is planning to hold its banquet on Thursday evening of this week.

Rev. R. W. Paton motored to Goderich on Monday to visit friends there for a couple of days.

Everybody is looking forward to the holiday next Monday, May 25th, when Roseneath will open the afternoon sports with a ball game between Brighton and the home team and a play "Peg O' My Heart" will be sponsored by the dramatic club of Millbrook, in the Orange Hall here, under the auspices of the Women's Institute. A big day is anticipated, so don't miss the fun.

The village and community has been in mourning and a gloom of sadness has prevailed for the past few weeks, and along with several deaths a few changes are being made. Mrs. Jackson who has lived in the one little cottage for over fifty years, left on Tuesday for Toronto to live with her daughters and will make her home with Mrs. J. Tilley, 55 Aziel street, West Toronto. Mrs. Jackson will be greatly missed in the village, where her home was ever open to her friends, she was always there to give that atmosphere of welcome and make a stranger feel at home. A few members of the Women's Institute called on Saturday night and left with her a little token of remembrance, a beautiful bathrobe and slippers, words fail to express the affection that mingled among the members and finally a good bye was given, and each one returning to their homes.

Mrs. Jackson's sale on Monday was largely attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Halstead and family visited her mother, Mrs. E. J. Milne, who has been confined to her bed through illness but is again able to be up for a short time each day.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Ellenor and daughter Marion, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Rowden and family, Bud, Don and Hilda, Mr. and Mrs. Kip Rowden and son Billy were guests of Mrs. Annie Lapp and sons on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. C. Davidson, and Mrs. Fry of Norwood were in the village on Monday and attended the sale at Mrs. Jacksons.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nichol and her mother, Mrs. Bradley visited friends at Wellington on Sunday.

HASTINGS

HASTINGS May 20 (Examiner Correspondence) — The Reverend George McKay, son of the Reverend George Leslie McKay the first missionary appointed to Formosa by the Presbyterian Church in Canada gave a stirring address in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Hastings, on Sunday evening.

There was a very large attendance of members and quite a number of visitors from other congregations. The Rev. Dr. Thomson the minister, had charge of the service, assisted by the Rev. G. R. Duncan of Warkworth. The message of Mr. McKay on the work of Christ which is being accomplished in the beautiful island of Formosa, was listened to with rapt attention. Although the service extended beyond the usual so interesting was the address that time passed unnoticed. His graphic description held the attention of all.

Mr. McKay described the setting of the land, which his father had chosen as his mission field 59 years ago. The island was about the size of Nova Scotia, or of Scotland, and has some beautiful mountain ranges. Up on these mountains were scenes very much like Western Canada where you find spruce, cedar, birch and other kinds of trees growing, while it was perfectly level with wonderful tropical vegetation and fruits such as oranges, bananas, grapefruit, and such like. It is a very beautiful island.

The people were for the most part, friendly to Christian missionaries, and many that were hostile came to our schools and eventually accepted Christianity. Many of the better classes were willing to be taught and of inquiring mind. He told of the fierce head-hunting tribes that dwelt in the interior regions and were still at war with the Japanese as they formerly were with the Chinese.

Going back to 1872, when his father came to Formosa he traced the encouraging progress that had been made. When his father began his work all were heathen and hostile. Now there were many churches, mission schools, and medical schools, with native pastors, teachers and doctors. There was a growing interest in religion and education extending even to the women, which Mr. McKay regarded as a sure sign of progress in the far East.

There are 75 churches in Formosa, many of them self-supporting, and the people believe in foreign missions. They do not accept Christ without counting the cost. They know that sacrifice is necessary to true religion, and they willingly accept it. The light of the gospel is penetrating Formosa and the future is bright for the Kingdom of Christ.

LAUNCH CRUISER AT KIEL HARBOR

World Called on to Follow German Example in Fulfilling Disarmament Obligations.

Von Hindenburg Officiates.

KIEL, Germany, May 20 (A.P.)—Nations of the world were called upon by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening today to follow Germany's example in fulfilling its disarmament obligations under the post war treaties.

Delivering the principal address at the launching of Gemany's new cruiser Deutschland, the Chancellor said, "Germany can with absolute right and quite seriously say that she has not neglected conscientiously to fulfill the disarmament obligations imposed upon her by the treaties.

"If ever a hope of humanity is to arise out of these treaties we expect that our disarming shall be followed by others. It is natural we should do our best to guarantee our people that little safety which the treaties leave us, and this too is in the interests of Europe and the world.

"In this solemn hour we hold out our hands most sincerely to those who concede rights equal to those they themselves enjoy."

People Not Shanged

The suffering Germany has undergone in the last few years, he said, has not changed the character of her people, "which is peace loving but proud and sensitive," and despite all distress and privation the German nation would make any sacrifice for its honor and for its ideal of justice for all nations of the world."

A hitch occurred in the launching ceremony when the hull slid prematurely down the ways before President Paul Von Hindenburg could smash the traditional bottle of champagne on its prow and deliver his prepared address.

He made the best of the situation, however, by speaking the formal words of the christening rite after the battleship was in the water.

"And now glide down into your element and join the ocean," he said. "Do your duty there. May it be to give proof of German work and German efficiency and to protect the Fatherland. Always keep your flag clean and high in honor. Then you will be worthy of the name which I give you—Deutschland.".

FOUR INJURED IN CRASH

PARIS, May 20 (A.P.)—Four persons were seriously injured and 20 others suffered slighter hurts to-day when the roofs were ripped off four railway coaches as they entered the Paris terminus from Montmargis. The accident was due to a switch engine mistaking signals and sideswiping the

Megan Lloyd George Under Sentence For Following in Father's Footsteps

LONDON, May 20 (C.P.). — Miss Megan Lloyd-George, M.P., daughter of the Liberal Leader, was under sentence to-day to sit in the House of Lords for "following in her father's footsteps."

In a mock trial at the London School of Economics last night a jury found her guilty and decreed she should be transferred from the House of Commons so that she could not hear the speeches of her father, now Leader of the Liberal Party.

Philip Guedalla, historian and writer, prosecuted the charge, accusing her of speaking Welsh to the danger of the public and of frequenting a building used by Lady Astor.

Pleading not guilty—or extenuating circumstances if guilty—Miss Lloyd-George said she had been subjected to undue influence at an early age, and that politics was a disease of the blood transmitted from generation to generation. As a child she never was asked whether she wanted a doll or teddy bear, she said, but whether she was a Protectionist or a Free Trader.

She called her sister, Lady Carey Evans, to testify that when she (Megan) couldn't sleep as a baby, Mr. X sang her the Land Song. Mr. Lloyd-George was referred to throughout the trial only as Mr. X.

FARMERS DEMAND RELEASE

Nobody Loves a Skinny Woman

Gain pounds of weight in few weeks with new IRONIZED YEAST—a special combination of dried brewer's yeast plus iron—*or pay nothing

Thousands are amazed at quick benefits of new Ironized Yeast. They gained pounds of good firm flesh in few weeks. Tired, weak, nervous people became peppy and strong. Blemished complexions changed to clear, rosy smoothness. Constipation, indigestion disappeared. Why does Ironized Yeast work so quick?

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one—special weight-building dried brewer's yeast and blood-enriching, strengthening Iron. The yeast is the same used in making malt and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured and concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value. Double-tested for strength purity and potency. Used by doctors and big hospitals.

To this concentrated dried brewer's Yeast is added three kinds of easily assimilated Iron to quickly make rich, red blood and tone up nerves and muscles. By this special process Ironized Yeast is made more effective than yeast or iron taken separately. Contains no starches, flours or gas-forming fillers.

If you are underweight, nervous, tired—if you suffer with constipation, indigestion, and your complexion is muddy or blemished, start Ironized Yeast to-day. Pleasant little tablets—no nasty taste, never upset stomach or cause gas or bloating. Never spoil, safe for all.

Go to any drug store to-day, get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast, and take the little tablets as directed. If not delighted with quick results, your money promptly refunded by manufacturer.

If inconvenient to buy from druggist, send $1.25 direct to Canadian Ironized Yeast Co., Ltd., Box 1323, Montreal, Que., Desk 2101.

18% STRONGER ...than any other tire

MOST makes of tires are stronger than they were two or three years ago . . . they have to be to stand up under the gruelling punishment of today's harder driving.

But remember this important fact . . . the modern Dominion Royal is 18 per cent stronger than any other!

What does this mean to YOU? It means that Dominions on your car will give you greater mileage and less trouble. It means that Dominions have a big margin of extra strength to endure road shocks . . . to withstand curb and deep-rut abrasion . . . to endure the strain of sudden stops . . . to resist the scorching heat of high speeds.

Your car deserves these stronger Dominion Tires . . . and the added protection of Dominion Inner Tubes. Here is a combination of strength and dependability that will relieve your mind of all tire trouble . . . and enable you to enjoy thousands of care-free miles.

18 per cent extra strength represents 18 per cent greater value . . . but Dominions cost you no more than ordinary tires. Buy Dominion quality!

THIS business of being well, is not as difficult as most people make it. According to the doctors, the rules for most of us are few and simple; eat, exercise, and sleep right; keep yourself internally clean.

Doctors pretty well agree that (barring germ diseases) most illness and headache, are due to failure or inability to keep "clean inside.

In blaming this condition for most of our sickness, so they agree on the safe way to relieve it—keeping clean inside by the Nujol type of treatment. Crystal clear Nujol is not a medicine. It contains no drugs.

Two things you have to remember if you want to enjoy "Nujol health."

One: Don't expect results overnight.

Two: Be sure you get Nujol. Your druggist has this drugless product in a sealed package, trademarked "Nujol" to protect you.

REV. AND MRS. D. R. CLARE, NORHAM HONORED BY MEMBERS OF CHURCH

Pastor and His Wife Celebrate Their Silver Wedding Anniversary.

PRESENTATION MADE

NORHAM, May 20 (Examiner Correspondence). — Members of the Norham Church congregation to the number of one hundred gathered in the Norham Church hall on Saturday evening to attend a banquet given in honor of Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Clare on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. The hall was beautifully decorated in white and silver. The bride and groom, on entering the hall, were met by showers of confetti and ushered to seats of honor at a head table beneath an arch of white and silver streamers and wedding bells to the strains of "Here comes the bride," played by the organist, Mrs. H. Wilson. Song sheets were provided and the first course of the banquet was interspersed with old-time songs, under the direction of the song leader, Mr. Huycke.

Mr. John Diamond filled the position of tastmaster and chairman for the evening, first proposing a toast to the King, in response to which the National Anthem was sung. This was followed by the toast to the bride and groom, who were then presented with a beautiful silver tea service and tray in Grosvenor design. The presentation was made by Mrs. N. Gummer and Miss Margaret Clare, and the following address was read by Mrs. Lorne Evans:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Clare,—We, your friends of Norham United Church have met with your family this evening that we might in some slight way do honor to you on this the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of your wedding day. It is a pleasure indeed for us as members of your pastoral flock to join with those who are nearer and dearer to you in offering our sincere and hearty congratulations as you reach this silver milestone of your married life. During the twenty-five years that have elapsed since you set out upon your voyage of married life, you have had your joys and sorrows, your successes and disappointments. But even as the beauty of nature is enhanced by the showers that fall from the cloudy sky, so your life has only been made more beautiful by the occasional shadows that have drifted across your path, and we who have known you and your children feel that you have received the greatest joy that married life affords, in the love and respect and loyalty of your own family.

As a church and community, we are glad that the past four years of your life have been spent in Norham. During your sojourn here you have won our love and admiration, and there is no department of our church that has not been made richer by your untiring efforts. You have been our true friends, not only when we dwelt on the mountain tops of joy, but you have gone with us even down into the valley of sorrows.

And now we ask you to accept this silver tea service as a token of the devotion of your family and the love and loyalty of your friends. We pray that God's blessing may crown your work as you continue to labor among us, and that health, happiness, and prosperity may attend you, not only while another quarter of a century rolls by, changing the silver into gold, but even on until God sees fit to call you from your labors here to higher service in His heavenly kingdom.

Signed on behalf of the Norham Church by J. W. Newman, Secretary of Norham Church; Mrs. N. Gummer, President of the Ladies' Aid; Gordon Mitchell, Superintendent of the Sunday School; Mr. F. Huycke, President of the Dramatic Club; Mrs. Ewart Huycke, Vice-President of the Young People's Class; and on behalf of your family by Margaret and Wesley.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare, though taken completely by surprise, expressed in a few words their appreciation not only of the gift, but also of the spirit of thoughtfulness and love which had planned it.

The following program was then given:

Quartette, "The Church in the Wildwood," by Mrs. H. Wilson, Miss F. Clare, Mr. C. H. Curtis, and Mr. F. Huycke.

The toast to the Church was responded to by Lorne Evans, F. Huycke, and W. Newman.

The toast to the Sunday Sochool, responded to by Gordon Mitchell, Oscar Laver, and Mrs. S. Brenton.

Recitation by Mrs. Laver, "Dick Brimi Wedding."

Toast to the Ladies' Aid, responded to by Mrs. D. Evans and Mrs. P. Windover.

Trio by Messrs. R. Knight, H. Curtis, and F. Huycke, "Hear Dem Bells."

Toast to the Women's Missionary Society was responded to by Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Laver.

Duet, "Song of the Flowers," by Mrs. H. Wilson and Mrs. Douglas Knight.

Toast to the Young People's Class, responded to by Blair Huycke and Mildred Curtis.

Duet by Miss Parsons and Margaret Clare, "Jesus is my neighbor."

Toast to the Mission Band, responded to by Edith Brenton.

Reading by Mrs. Lorne Evans, "Calling the Doctor on the Telephone."

Toast to the Dramatic Club was responded to by Ewart Huycke and Norman McCubbin.

Trio by Messrs. Knight, Curtis, and Huycke, "A Short Wife and a Long Wife."

The toast to the Communityy was responded to by D. Turney and C. H. Curtis.

The evening closed with singing "God be with you till we meet again."

GIVE DESCRIPTIONS OF W.M.S. LABORS

Mrs. Robert Nelson Has Charge of Keene United Church Society Meeting.

KEENE, May 20 — The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Keene United Church was held on Wednesday when the vice president, Mrs. Robert Nelson was in the chair, and the devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. Leggett after which the Study period was taken by four ladies, who in turn told the story of the Society's work in Canada as visited from the air, each taking a different direction and seeing the Mission halls, homes and hospitals, as they went by.

The business to be transacted was to look after getting the quilts put together for the June quilting at which a ten cent tea will be served.

A resolution was passed that the money which was left after paying for a spray for the late Miss Margaret Brough was to be given to Mrs. Rennie to purchase flowers for the sick. Letters of thanks were read from Mrs. McFee, Mrs. James Edwards, Mrs. Charles Mather, Miss McCrea and Mrs. Plunkett for flowers and plants received during illness.

The society mourns the loss of one of its most esteemed members in the person of the late Miss Margaret Brough, who was a source of inspiration and help.

JOHN WONG IS ROTARY GUEST

Addresses Campbellford Rotary Club on World Conditions Relative to China.

CONFIDENCE OF NATIONS

CAMPBELLFORD, May 20 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent)—"World conditions in relation to China," was the subject of the address given by John Wong, a Chinese student of Albert College, Belleville, at the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club held on Monday, with the president, H. N. Carr, in the chair.

Mr. Wong, who is a very able speaker, pointed out the great need of international goodwill and co-operation, stressing the fact of changing conditions, the delusionment of weak governments and the general unrest that prevails in the world today. Much of this unrest had been caused by the Great War, he thought, stating that millions were mobilized for the purpose of destruction and millions more engaged in the making of weapons for the purpose of destruction. After the war, effort was made to produce more foodstuffs and manufactured goods, with the result that there is now over-production and a period of depression.

The speaker pointed out that experts were prophesying a return to prosperity, but argued that this could only commence by the fostering of a better international relationship. "China will be a factor in the economic readjustment," he declared, saying that she was the most independent nation in the world, having an immense population. He deplored the fact that in the past China has been subject to gross injustices by being forced to sign away certain rights that legally belonged to her, emphasizing the fact that Canada, having no territorial rights in China and being independent could do much to foster friendly relations with that country and the rest of the world.

By means of trade and square dealing this country could do much toward the building up of international confidence and goodwill between China and the British Empire, the speaker thought. He pointed out that there were many native born Chinese in Canada and the goodwill of these immigrants could do more to foster the spirit of goodwill and international confidence than a whole army of trade commissioners.

In conclusion, Mr. Wong stated that the trade with Europe that has so long existed was now shifting to the Pacific. Ten per cent of Canadian wheat is sold in China and the demand for grain and fish is increasing.

"The future of Canada's grain trade is bound up with the Orient," he declared, and it will mean a long and patient endeavor on the part of the nations to stabilize the condition. It will need education and experience in international trade to create this spirit of confidence among nations.

Dr. H. B. Longmore expressed the thanks of the club to the speaker.

QUEENSBORO Y.P. HOLD MEETING

Graduation Exercises of Belleville Hospital Will be Held on Wednesday.

VISITING CHOIR

QUEENSBORO, May 20 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Young People's service in the United Church on Friday evening under the direction of Mrs. Everson was well attended. Calvin Tanner, Miss Jessie Delyea and Miss Ida Cassidy read the scripture lesson. Miss Helen McCaw read a paper on "What is a Christian." Mrs. Calvin Tanner sang sweetly, "If I have wounded any soul to-day." Miss Marion Love gave a paper entitled, "Pentecost and Environment" in which it was pointed out that whoever will can live right just where they are. Jesus gives power to overcome our surroundings. At home may be the most difficult place to do right but if we can do it there we can do it anywhere. Miss Margaret Kincaid, of Belleville then offered a prayer. Miss Jessie Lynn gave a paper on "Can we overcome our environment." Here it was pointed out that we are largely responsible for the atmosphere in which we live and sometimes are obliged to oppose the ideas of our social group. Next week the meeting will be in the form of a play, "Mother Mine" to be given by Young People from Moira in the orange hall.

Graduation Exercises.

The graduation exercises of the Training School for nurses of the General Hospital, Belleville, will be held in the Collegiate Institute, on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock and a reception will be held at the Nurses' Home the same evening at 10 p.m.

A choir of sixteen members from the Cooper United Church congregation, occupied the choir loft and led in the service of song in the Queensboro United Church on Sunday evening. The pieces rendered were, "We Come," "I Will Lift up Mine Eyes to the Hills" and "The Nearer the Sweeter."

Mrs. Thomas Dunning and Master Billie are spending a few days with Mrs. C. B. Hamm.

Miss Margaret Kincaid, of Belleville, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Wallace Kincaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollins visited his brother at Plainfield on Friday.

The Rev. J. F. Everson, Mrs. Everson, Mrs. C. B. Hamm, Mrs. John O'Rourke, Mrs. George Holmes, Mrs. Charles Thompson, Mrs. William Cassidy, Miss Marion Love, Mrs. Wallace Kincaid and Miss Jennie Thompson represented the Queensboro W.M.S. at the open meeting held in Eldorado, at Fox's United Church on Thursday.

Mrs. Harry Sager, of Ottawa, is the guest of friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Pine, of Eldorado, spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Harry DeClair.

George Graham, of Madoc, spent the week-end with Roy Rollins.

Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Everson attended the graduation exercises in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, where their youngest daughter, Miss Flossie, was one of the graduating class.

Miss Kathleen Sager, of Enterprise, Mr. Allan Wright, of Napanee, Mr. Clarence Jeffrey, of Belleville, and Miss Ruby Everson, R.N., of Belleville, were the guests on Sunday of Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Everson.

Countess Willingdon Receives Mrs. Gandhi

SIMLA, India, May 20.—(C.P.)—Countess Willingdon, wife of the new Viceroy, captured the hearts of India's women to-day when she received Mahatma Gandhi's wife at the Viceregal castle and talked with her for more than an hour.

Mrs. Gandhi promised to send her some of the homespun "kuddar" of which her own gown was made.

Girl Awarded $5,000 Result Of Car Crash

TORONTO, Ont., May 20.—(CP)—Because she had been unable to enjoy a good night's rest or take part in sports since her right ankle was seriously hurt in a motor collision, on August 22, 1929, Miss Susan Belle Kelley, Toronto, to-day obtained a verdict for $5,000 damages with costs from a York Assize court jury. That sum had been asked against Douglas B. Briggs, Mimico druggist, in the rumble seat of whose car she was at the moment of the collision.

The action was undefended.

EMBEZZLEMENT LAID TO BANKER

American State Bank Head Charged With Transferring Money to Personal Account.

$2,360,000 INVOLVED.

DETROIT, Mich., May 19.—Robert M. Allan, former President of the American State Bank, was charged with embezzlement, abstraction and misapplication of $200,000 of the bank's funds in a warrant issued today.

Allan is charged with transferring a total of $2,360,000 from bank's general reserve to his own personal account from June 1, 1930, to March 31, 1931. The $200,000 mentioned in the warrant is claimed to comprise several specific transfers made between June 3 and September 15, 1930.

The affairs of the American State Bank recently were taken over by the Peoples' Wayne County Bank, and all deposits were guaranteed.

Ivanhoe Institute Elects New Officers

IVANHOE, May 20 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Ivanhoe Women's Institute held their annual meeting on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Clayton Wright at West Huntingdon. There were twenty-five members present. The meeting opened with the opning ode followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Mrs. Sandy McCurdy gave a reading. The election of officers resulted in Mrs. Joseph Haggerty, president; Mrs. S. Fargey 1st vice president; Mrs. W. Shaw, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Searles, secretary treasurer; district director, Mrs. W. Shaw; delegates for district annual, Mrs. Reg. Haggerty and Mrs. W. Shaw; press secretary, Mrs. W. French.

Mrs. Kingston's group were the losers in the contest and they will entertain the winners at the June meeting. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

Ask Federal Gov't Pay For Prisoners' Keep

SARNIA, Ont., May 20. (CP)—The city council has referred to the finance committee for consideration a resolution from the Windsor Council regarding the cost of maintaining Immigration Department prisoners.

The resolution, in brief, protested to the Federal Government against the practice of saddling municipalities with the cost of maintenance of persons committed to county jails under the immigration act for investigation or deportation. It was suggested that the Federal Government bear the burden.

Plan To Deposit Muskie Fry in Victoria Lakes

LINDSAY, May 20.—(Special to Examiner)—A representative of the Department of Game and Fisheries is depositing 5,000 muskie fry in the big lakes in Victoria County. During the week-end 5,000 were deposited in Cameron Lake, and Balsam and Sturgeon Lakes are each to receive five thousand. The fry are from the Pigeon Creek hatchery near Omemee

KING'S WHARF

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Minicolo, of Peterborough, spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Perdue. At the evening devotions Mr. Minicolo delighted the congregation of St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, with his solos, singing "O Salutares," "Tantumergo" and "Laudate." We all hope to hear Mr. Minicolo again in the very near future.

SOVIET PROTESTING

MOSCOW, May 19. (AP)—All the morning newspapers devote leading editorials to the vigorous note dispatched last night by the Soviet Government to Finland protesting against circulation there of anti-Russian propaganda.

Although most of the comment followed a restrained and careful tenor they declared in effect that if results from the anti-Soviet campaign prove disastrous to the peace of the two countries and perhaps to the world, Finland will have herself to blame.

HELEN O'CONNELL WINS THE PRIZE

Only Two "Do You Know" Questions in To-day's Issue of The Examiner.

OPEN TO EVERYONE

Miss Helen O'Connell, 282 Perry street, was adjudged the winner of the "Do You Know" contest to-day. The answers to the questions in the "Do You Know " stories were very nicely arranged by her.

To those who are not yet familiar with the contest we give the following explanation—Each day several articles appear in The Examiner describing the services of some of our better institutions. Every article ends by asking a question about the firm of which it was written. To compete in the "Do You Know" contest, you have simply to look through the various pages of the paper, locate the articles, call the firms and have them to give you the answers to the questions. When you have obtained the entire set of questions submit them in an artistic manner to the "Do You Know" editor at The Examiner. A three dollar cash prize is given each day for answers that are written in the most clever or original manner.

Only two stories appear in this issue, which makes competing very easy. Two or three minutes time may make you the winner of the day. Get in the game. Nobody is barred, not even those who have previously won, in fact, we would be very happy to see a contestant of such artistic talent and persistance that he or she might win more than once.

Seek Time Extension Of Relief Projects

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20 (CP)—Arrangements are being made for the extension of the time for completion of several unemployment relief work projects in the City of Montreal, Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor, was in Montreal yesterday and conferred with Norman Holland, chairman of the local committee in charge of unemployment relief works. It has been found practically impossible to complete several works including a couple of subways, before July 1, Senator Robertson stated.

NO BUSH FIRE IN ALGOMA.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. May 20 (C.P.).—Nigel Kensit, formerly assistant forester at Sudbury, has been appointed district forester at Sault Ste. Marie, replacing F. A. Macdougall, who has been appointed superintendent of Algonquin Park.

It is stated at the local office of the forestry branch that there are no bush fires in Algoma district. The rains of the last few days have been general throughout the district, and have greatly reduced the hazard.

Poses as Stranger When His Victim is Found Dead

Finger Print Betrays Him

A man was seen running towards a motor car which had crashed into a tree in a park in London. He told the police he was hurrying to give assistance to a man in the car who later was found to be dead.

The police arrested him on suspicion. They took his finger prints. He was a well known automobile thief. Then the police searched the car for finger prints and found one on the driving wheel. It corresponded with the thief's. The dead man had been a victim of careless driving on the part of the crook, who was held without bail by a coroner's jury on a charge of manslaughter.

Thus are finger prints used to protect society and to bring arrest and conviction to criminals.

Your Danger Prints on Foods

You may be surprised to learn that your finger prints are just as dangerous to you—in another way. Not through crime because you are not a criminal—but through disease germs—many kinds of them.

Your fingers pick up germs all day long from things which other hands have touched. These other hands may have checked a cough or a sneeze and so become covered with germs. Then when you touch some article of food your fingers leave on it these germs which enter your mouth and so attack your system. Life Extension Institute has shown that germs of 27 diseases—some very deadly—may be passed around in this way—among them, "flu" and colds.

The Pleasant Way to Safety

These germs must be removed from your hands many times a day—and always before meals. Germs are stubborn things—they resist heat and cold—but one thing they cannot resist—and that is the germicide in Lifebuoy Soap.

Laboratory tests proved it killed even virulent germs when other soaps had no effect on them. Think what a service this is to find in a soap—especially how important for children who are even more thoughtless about what they touch than adults. Yet Lifebuoy is a pleasant—a delightful soap to use.

Brings Beauty Aid

With two fine palm oils as its base, Lifebuoy is also a beauty soap, its creamy, luxurious lather brings health and beauty to the complexion as well as safety from germs. Why not take advantage of both these important factors? Millions all over the world do, every day. You will note a refreshing scent of safety—not a perfume—in Lifebuoy, which vanishes soon after use.

For freedom from body odour trust to the refreshing Lifebuoy bath. For protection from germs—a great service—keep a cake of Lifebuoy always on the wash basin. Teach the children to wash regularly with Lifebuoy. It is the Health Soap for all the family. Get a supply from your dealer today.

Delegates from St. George's Junior branch were Agnes Sturgeon, Ruth McBride, Mary Parkes, Eva King and Theodora Johnson.

An old pioneer family of Upper Canada that attains this month the anniversary of their arrival in the Dominion is the Burnhams, whose name is bound up with the early history of Peterborough. The Hon. Asa Alward Burnham died in May of 1873. He had been one of the original Senators from Ontario and was a civil engineer of much repute. He was a brother of the Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, who was administrator of this district and a noted civil engineer in the employ of the Canadian Government. On the occasion of the official visit of the Governor-General of Canada, Sir Peregrine Maitland, to Peterborough, in 1826, when the name of Peterborough was suggested at a dinner party held in a large log house on the Market Square, he was accompanied by the Hon. Mr. Burnham, who lived for many years in Cobourg and whose son, the Rev. Mark Burnham, formerly rector of the Anglican Church in St. Thomas, Ontario, later came to Peterborough and was rector of both St. John's and St. Luke's Churches. He died in 1877. Two of his sons were John Burnham, K.C., M.P., Dr. George Burnham, whose son, Mr. J. H. Burnham, ex-M.P., still resides here . Another son was Zaccheus, whose widow lives on McDonnel Street with her daughters, and whose son, Mr. Mark Burnham, is on the old homestead. Other Burnham names linked with the early history of the city are those of Elias Burnham, its first lawyer, who erected sevxeral business places on George Street, and sat for twenty years on the Town Council, also Dr. George Burnham, Sr., a brother of the Hon. Zaccheus, who came here in 1835 and assisted much in the educational and temperance work carried on in the early days. It is related of the Hon. Zaccheus that, in the early days of his administration of th district, he sold the barren stretch of country which is now Lakefield, for the sum of seven and pence, to Colonel Strickland.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

AWAKE AT NIGHT

The stillness lay like a vast, waveless sea
Around my being's shores. No little sound
Crept in through all the black immensity
Wherewith the starless night had ringed me round.
And then cicada sent his strident note
Across the silence, piercing, shrill, and clear,
And from the mocking-bird's enchanted throat
A liquid lyric fell upon my ear.

Night sounds, night songs, wind speaking through the trees;
Then suddenly, a thud of running feet,
A gasp of laughter broke my reveries
And sprayed swift echoes down the sleeping street.
All through my life, sometimes, awake at night,
I shall lie wondering at that riant flight.

Just Between Us Women

When you very suddenly deide that you would like to go shopping, do you call some friend on the telephone and ask her to accompany you, or do you go alone?

* * * * * * *

After making enquiries, I find that the majority of our housewives do not not go shopping alone.

* * * * * * *

Of course we all like company, but when two persons go shopping together they must both be seeking the same things unless the other is to waste her time during the expedition.

* * * * * * *

Perhaps you never thought, of it in just that way, but nevertheless that is true.

* * * * * * *

If speed is to be promoted, shopping alone is preferable, assuming the shopper knows exactly what to get and where to go for it. When the object of the expedition is the selection of a single piece best suited to its purpose from a vast array of things of kindred kind, then consulting is advisable, following the adage that two heads are better than one.

* * * * * * *

Such consultant shopping comes periodically in families when wall paper is to be selected and other furnishings which are common to all.

* * * * * * *

There are many times, when mother and daughter or two friends go shopping together yet the advice wanted pertains to but one out of many purchases.

* * * * * * *

In such instances wisdom suggests that the one joint purchase be the first thing sought so that the two may separate afterwards and speed be fostered.

* * * * * * *

It is when two or three articles are listed about which joint judgment is desirable that each shopper must expect to be unoccupied part of the time.

* * * * * * *

It takes patience to stand around while another is busily looking for thing that are of no interest to you. The time is wasted for someone, unless companionship lends pleasure to the trip, or the happiness of helping in a wise decision proves a s ufficiently balancing compensation.

RED VELVET COAT IS MOST POPULAR

Lady Oxford Follows This Useful Mode in Black and Pink.

LONDON GOES QUIET.

(By Betty Twist)

LONDON, Eng., May 20 (Special to The Examiner). We have stepped out of the salon of the dress establishments into the real life of the London season. It is not still we see the spring creations in wear, and we escape from the lure of the mannequins that we can judge which of the new fashions have come to stay. One style that has definitely caught on is the short velvet coat with the evening gown for the more informal occasions. At all the debutantes' dances one sees so many of the young people thus attired, and quite a large proportion of them appear to have fallen for the red velvet coatee with a white gown.

For afternoon wear, also, the short coat has scored a hit. At the Royal Academy Private View, where the dresses seem to claim as much attention, at least from the feminine section of the audience, as the pictures, one observed Lady Oxford wearing a black and pink taffeta coatee, of Victoria inspiration, with her black dress and hat. One knows that what Lady Oxford is wearing to-day everyone will be wearing to-morrow, but she was not the only one to have adopted this useful mode. Another very effective ensemble was a blue frock completed with a quaintly cut terra-cotta short coat, and the blue hat which matched the frock was tilted right off the forehead.

It must be recorded that London is holding to the black and white scheme despite all the propaganda that is carried on for other colors. A ravishing selection of shades was provided by the British Manufacturers for summer wear. The British color coucil has just procured its autumn color forecast, with 25 colors and 60 shades including "Crock O' Gold" and "Beggar's Cloak". The autumn will probably find London women still faithful to black and white, with large white camellias for decoration. There was Viscountess Elibank, Countess Howe, Lady Simon, and youthful wearers of the popular toilette were Lady Georgiana Curzon, the debutante who has earned a name as the Victorian maiden because of her sheltered upbringing, all her education having been conducted at home. Lady Mary Lygon and New Lady Melchett.

For the full glory of evening dress, nothing could rival the opera which has just commenced its Covent Garden season. Lace gowns, unadorned, but relying for their effect on the grace of their draperies, are seen everywhere in the auditorium. For instance, Lady Hoarse wore grey lace at the first night, while several well-known debutantes were sponsoring white lace gowns. Lady Amherst, also, was garbed in lace of a delicate rose color, and she struck the fashionable blue velvet. Opera goers have a unique opportunity to follow the lead of royalty in the matter of clothes, for practically every evening some member of the royal family is present. The Duchess of York is attracted by the fine embroideries which are competing with lace in popular favor. Her gown was of an off-white tinti, covered with embroideries of pearls and diamante. Her jewels were simple, just a narrow bandeau of diamonds which set off her dark and beautiful hair.

MAY MEETING HELD BY ST. JOHN'S W.A.

Interesting Reports on Society's Activities Read By Officials.

The May meeting of the W. A. of St. John's church, was held on Tuesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. H. A. Morrow, in the chair. A special feature was the warm welcome accorded to Mrs. A. W. Turner.

The meeting opened with hymn and prayer by the rector, Dr. R. C. Blagrave and in view of the fact that a very full meeting was anticipated with reports, etc., Bible readings and history was dispensed with.

The minutes and treasurer's report were read by the secretary-treasurer and all other branches reported, Mrs. Rigden, Dorcas convenor, receiving special congratulations from the president on the quality of the recent bale packed and sent to the Indian school. The president assured us that nothing finer was on exhibition in Toronto.

Discussion followed relative to the forthcoming Board meeting to be held in St. John's on June 4th. Particulars can be obtained from any of the members regarding this. It was decided to hold the annual picnic as usual the 16th of June in the church grounds, with a short meeting first in the Parish House, followed by tea and a social hour on the lawn. This will be the last meeting until autumn.

The delegates who attended the annual meeting in Toronto last week then gave their reports. Those attending on behalf of the afternoon branch were Mrs. D. Eldred and Mrs. Cooper, and their reports were most interesting and instructive.

Mrs. N. Stanger reported for both 'Juniors,' 'Little Helpers' (baby's branch) which was also very entertaining. A hearty vote of thanks was voiced by Mrs. T. MacBrien which all warmly responded to.

The meeting closed with the members' prayer and Benediction, after which a dainty tea was served by Mrs. Lemmings and her refreshment committee.

BIRTH OF HEIR TICKLES MAHARAJA.

KASHMIR, India, May 20—(CP—In honor of the recent birth of an heir-apparent the Maharaja of Kashmir and Jummu to-day issued a decree permitting widows to re-marry, providing free education for girls and making gifts of land to certain of his subjects who have served the State well.

FOODS AND HOT DAY FATIGUE

Most persons are easily fatigued on hot days. So common is this experience that we think it natural. But it is not. A properly fed person will be just as alert mentally and physically on hot as on cool days. It is acid residues in the blood from eating acid-forming foods that cause hot weather tiredness. Foods that alkalinize and vitalize the blood and body cells keep one "in the pink" on the hottest days.

Roman Meal is the only alkaline cereal or grain food. It should be the grain food of choice for cereal, bread and cakes, especially during hot days. It can be eaten uncooked or icy-cold, recipes for both on package. Hot or cold, cooked or uncooked, it alkalinizes the blood and puts one up on hot days. Milk, vegetables and fruits also alkalinize and should be freely used with Roman Meal in summer to build up resistance against winter strains and diseases. Miss Ethel Law of New Zealand, is Guest Speaker for Occasion.

An unusually interesting and enjoyable evening was spent in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. last night on the occasion of their annual meeting which also marked the fortieth anniversary of the organization.

Mrs. E. E. Harvey, the president, presided and presented the splendid program, calling upon Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church to conduct the devotional service. The scripture lesson chosen from the 8th chapter of St. John, was Christ Is picture of two worlds, the spiritual and the physical.

The truths of this passage were applied directly to Y.W.C.A. work, for while it is necessary that we dwell in a physical world, yet we may cherish the ideals of the spiritual life and introduce them to others.

Note of Optimism

The president's address carried a high note of optimism in that the year just closed had been one of unqualified success, in every department of its work.

In the life of the girls, the "Y" stands not only for activities, pleasures and friendships, but for something beyond all these. "The happiness of the "near hills" may be enjoyed to-day," said Mrs. Harvey, "yet each should strive to reach the goal and vision of the 'far Hills'."

A pleasing variation in the program was the delightful solo "The Leaves and the Wind" by Mrs. Ford Turner, who graciously responded to the with a tender little Scotch love song, the composition of a Canadian, Dr. Albert Ham. Miss Mildred Hetherington acted as accompanist.

Guest Speaker.

The Association was privileged in having as guest speaker, Miss Ethel Law, of New Zealand. Newly appointed secretary of the National Staff of the Y.W.C.A.

On behalf of the National Board, Miss Law brought congratulations to the Peterborough Branch on having attained its fortieth anniversary and spoke of the tremendous service they must have rendered in that time.

In her illuminating address, Miss Law brought an inspiring picture of the world-wide significance of this great work among women and girls.

In an interesting introduction the speaker outlined her route across the Pacific and Western Canada, a journey which covered six weeks in her itinerary.

Some idea of the distance between New Zealand and Canada was conveyed in the fact that the ocean trip required nineteen days.

In describing her own country, Miss Law spoke of it as "a lovely speck," not comparable in size to Canada, but a little larger than England. Its beautiful mountains rising from ten to thirteen thousand feet high, are similar to the Rockies, with the same lovely lakes scattered among them.

The forest growth is typical and totally different from that of Canada. Among the huge trees is a tangle of undergrowth including ferns ranging from the most fragile, to those of immense size.

The pioneer white people had not only these physical obstacles to overcome, but had to meet the resentment at their coming by the Maori the native race.

To-day these two races live side by side with the greatest respect one for the other.

Five per cent of the population is made up of the Maori, 94% of English, Scotch or Irish descent, and the remaining 1%, or less, of other nationalities. The result of this is that the New Zealand girl experiences great difficulties in trying to realize a world-sisterhood. In building up the idea of God's world-family, secretaries were sent by the girls to countries of lesser advantages, such as China, Japan or India. Later the idea was devised of bringing a representative girl from one of these countries to New Zealand, to establish friendly relations, which proved wonderfully satisfactory.

Great emphasis was placed by the speaker, upon the far-reaching effects of the "World Conferences" the last of which was held in Budapest, where 42 nations were represented, with English, French and German, the official languages. The next conference of this kind will be held in China in 1933, with Mandarin, Japanese and English as the official tongues. Such gatherings help to give us a clearer picture of the passage in Revelations which speaks of "All Peoples" all kindred, all nations, all tongues, which are to be gathered into the beautiful "City of God".

In closing, Miss Law said "It is a great thing to be identified with the Y.W.C.A., which belongs to this great world-organization working for the kingdom of God and the City of Beauty."

Reports of Activities

Reports of the year's work were given first by Mrs. R. H. Turner, in the financial statement. This was followed by the report of the nominating committee read by Miss A. Wood: Mrs. T. Cruickshank, Honorary President, Mrs. E. E. Harvey, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. W. D. Scott, Miss M. Dickson, Miss M. Hamilton, Miss E. Morrow, Mrs. R. Neill, Mrs. R. H. Turner, Mrs. G. MacDonald, Mrs. W. R. Widdess, Miss E. MacVannel, Mrs. D. F. Drummond, Mrs. N. D. Buchanan, Mrs. A. A. Moir Mrs. G. E. Porter, Miss A. Wood, Mrs. H. Wightman, Mrs. H. M. Yelland, Miss L. Davidson, Mrs. R. J. Kidd, Mrs. T. N. Grier, Mrs. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. R. Harstone, Mrs. B. Shortley, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. L. J. LeClair, Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, Mrs. G. Boucher and Mrs. R. H. Parsons.

Association Report.

The Association report given by the General Secretary, Miss Leta Brownscombe, was an interesting and comprehensive resume of the year's activities in the local "Y" and camp.

Annual reports mark the passing of time and so to-night we come to the 40th annual report of the Young Womens Christian Association of Peterborough. As we review the work of the pastyea may we pause to pay tribute to those who looked ahead and dreamed dreams, and may we not be content with the present but keep on planning and building for the future.

As the years pass the Association becomes busier and the demands on it more varied in character.

During the past year 2460 were registered in different departments, 5250 enjoyed special parties and entertainments and an estimate of 4800 were served through employment, special visits, information and library, an average of 2000 coming into the building each week.

Mrs Morrison Supt. of our residence, who has served the Association so faithfully for a number of years believes that it is imperative that the girls away from home should be surrounded by the best possible home influences and live among congenial and happy surroundings and by taking advantage of the many opportunities in an association such as ours an all round life can be developed.

This department has looked after 500 transients during the year, 41 normal students, 4 collegiate and 16 business college students, 8 teachers, 1 school nurse and 75 business girls and 15 coming in regularly for dinner. There were also a number accommodated while looking for work.

In Residence last year some 66,500 nourishing and appetizing meals were served and 22,500 beds used. Is it any wonder then that food fisappears and linen wears out.

Immediately after supper each evening the girls gather in the green room for prayers. The aggregate attendance was 3200.

Many happy gatherings and parties are held in the girls rooms, the kitchenette proving of real service.

The Life Saving classes which were conducted throughout the season held examinations in October and November. 12 girls received proficiency and bronze medallion certificates, 3 of the youngest members ever known in the history of the Association receiving their proficiency. Five pupils passed the difficult Award of Merit examination.

In November the annual swimming exhibition opened by Dr. Moir, was given before a crowded audience. Keen competition was shown for the Morrow Senior Championship, the Gordon Junior Life Saving Cup ,the Hamilton Junior diving championship and the O'Connor Fenton Baby Cahmpionship and the 12 other prizes.

The aggregate attendance of the swimmers for the season, 2530. The aggregate attendance of the class pupils for the season, 1660; 304 pupils taught to swim during the season.

The feature events for the Gymnasium season commenced with a special gymnasium programe in connection with the Fall Junior and Senior Raffies followed by splendid registration in various classes.

Six teams of business girls have been allowed the privilege of using the Y.M.C.A. bowling alleys, and Business Girls and Ladies Badminton clubs have used our gymnasium early afternoons and two evenings a week.

In spite of the financial depression the results were quite gratifying and the Y.W.C.A. and Physical Director, Miss Littlefield received much praise, many saying this year's Pageant even succeeded all the former wonderful exhibitions. The spectacle of such large enthusiastic classes shows the work of this department.

The total number of class pupils plus 70 basket ball players is 540. The aggregate attendance for the gymnasium season, October to April, was 15,980.

Camp.

Last summer was our second season in our own delightful camp and again proved a real success. One hundred and ninety girls enjoyed a holiday at Camp and came back enriched in health and spirit. There is something about Camp which lifts one above the every day

Camp has shown to me a way
Which seeing I needs must follow
Glimpsing ever the things that are
And are to be.

The first two weeks of July are devoted to Junior Camp and under the leadership of Miss Marion Walker ,Camp Director for July, a most wonderful holiday was enjoyed with special camp program.

During August, Miss Elizabeth Kennedy again directed Camp, proving a very capable and much liked director.

The Camp shower held last spring provided many appreciated extras for Camp. In September a Campers' Reunion was held and in October a junior Camper's League formed which has met monthly and has raised money for a diving board.

Educational

Seven regular classes in this department reached 341 girls. We were most disappointed in not having a special lecture series this season or even the one lecture on Russia which we had arranged with Dr. Locke of Toronto, to give. The classes under this department were St. John's Ambulance, Home Nursing, Elocution, two English Classes, Junior Story Hour and Travel Series.

A total of 258 are registered in seven organized clubs which meet regularly and through their meetings seek to develope a more abundant life, basing their programs on Physical, Intellectual, spiritual, social and service standards. During the summer all clubs and classes unite in an outdoor club with campfire supper each Tuesday evening, in charge of one of the secretaries.

The religious work committee also conducted a series of talks taken by Rev. Moorhoues, Rev. Wren, Dr. Middleton, Dr. Yelland and the general Secretary. The total attendance being 90.

Beside the activities listed under Special departments, there are numerous other little services the Association offers; a splendidly equipped library and reading room, a place to rest while waiting for friends, rooms registry, information of all kinds to strangers, a baby creche which enabled mother to get work, an employment bureau which answered over 2000 calls and this year because of unemployment the secretaries have given considerable time to studying individual cases, trying to find employment, encouraging the girls and interesting them in the Y.W.C.A.

Girls from all the factories were in turn invited to parties at the Y.W.C.A. by our Clubs.

Our Travellers Aid and Immigration Department made over 60 calls and invited new comers to Canada to the 'Y' several interesting cases requiring a great deal of follow up work.

Our rooms are used by 4 city organizations for regular meetings and by others for special meetings, parties and recitals.

The Association secretaries visit factories, schools, stores and offices in order that all girls may know of the opportunities offered by the Y.W.C.A.

A large share of the numerous calls on a community Association such as ours are met by the Assistant Secretary, Miss Sherin, who also gives leadership to three clubs and the immigration work and willingly endeavors in large or small opportunities to promote Association ideals.

The Peterborough Association is 93% self supporting, the citizens of Peterborough kindly subscribing the balance 7% through our Financial Campaign.

Members of the Board of Directors and staff wish to express at this time, our sincere appreciation to all who during the past year, and the past 40 years have assisted the Young Women's Christian Association of Peterborough, and we look forward to the coming years confident of continued interest and help as the Y.W.C.A. endeavours to promote its purpose.

"To lead young women into personal loyalty to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour and into active membership in the church of their choice; to associate them in the development oftheir spiritual social, intellectual and physicul well being and to make the Association a social force in the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

Respectfully Submitted.
Leta H. Brownscombe
General Secretary.

A vote of appreciation to Miss Law, Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe and Mrs. Ford Turner, was tendered by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner,with Mrs. Shortley as seconder.

The National Anthem brought to a close this part of the program.

Pool Exhibition.

The splendid work of the Physical Director, Miss C. Littlefield, was exemplified in the exhibition held in the gymnasium and swimming pool for the entertainment of the guests.

This included several pageant numbers, with wand work by Misses S. Ecobichon, R. Revere, T. Schiarizza, H. Shiarizza, M. Simpson, Jean Ball and M. Richardson.

Those performing with clubs were: Misses E. Bradley, G. Burns, D. Allen, Grace Cunningham, L. Kingdon, M. Wood, E. Johnson, H. Johnson and G. Hutchinson.

Graceful dance numbers were given by the following girls in the Sweetheart dance "Taps": Hazel Bradley, Gladys Johnston, Isabel Duffus and Thelma Butler.

A Mexican hat dance: M. Kingsbury, G. Johnson, I. Duffus, T. Buller, K. Thackeray, D. Parsons, A. Johnson, S. Yeotes and E. Beatty.

Fairies: G. Cunningham, A. Johnson, S. Yeotes and J. Cole.

Flower Dance:I. Davidson,M. Wood, Mrs. Osterlain, B. Willis, Q. Hope, P. Forbes, N. Hepburn.

A fine swimming exhibition was given by members of the Senior and Junior Stunt Classes in which the following took part: L. Kingdon, H. Bradley, E. Bradley, M. Kingsbury, I. Duffus. Of the Senior class and three babies: L. Long, D. Doukas and F. Fowler.

The guests were later entertained in the Rose Room with dainty refreshments and a social hour enjoyed. The table was lovely with its centre of rose tulips and the rooms were fragrant with a profusion of apple blossoms.

Pouring tea were Mesdames L. J. LeClair and T. Barrie, assisted by members of the Social Committee including: Mesdames J. E. Middleton, M. Y lland, B. Shortley, A. M. Weldon and Miss M. E. Elliott; and the following girls of the residence. Misses Peggy Donaldson, D. Mutton, Marion Mix, B. Dawson, M. McHarg.

Peterborough Senior Ball Club Is Organized

DELEGATES ARE APPOINTED TO ATTEND C. O. B. L. MEET

Matters of Finance, Equipment and Transportation Discussed by New Officers.

SITUATION OUTLINED.

An enthusiastic number of prominet manufacturers of the city met in the Chamber of Commerce last night and organized the Peterborough Senior Baseball Club. Officers were elected a grounds committee appointed and two representatives chosen to attend the Central Ontario Baseball League meeting in Belleville to-night.

With a good attendance present, the meeting started on time. Robert Abbott was asked to take the chair. He immediately called for nominations for the office of president. Hugh Campbell was the unanimous choice. He thought there were others more suitable for such a responsible position, but agreed to take it and do all he could toward making it a success.

Two vice-presidens were thought to be advisable, and George A. MacDonald, as first, and J. A. Bell as second, were voted in. Vic Hamilton was elected to be secretary, and C. P. Borland agreed to be the treasurer.

The executive selected by those present included: M. L. Sweetman, Charles Westbrook, Jim Coursey, Jack Marshall, Martin Hewitt, R. M. Glover, Gordon Matthews, W. L. Ferguson, Max Swanston and Robert Abbott. All are well-known sports followers and have assured the club of their assistance.

Situations Outlined

The chair was turned over to the president, who asked Bill Kay for an outline of the baseball situation in Peterborough and the seniors' prospects for the summer. The latter decribed how things were shaping up early in the spring, when Peterborough first entered the C.O.B.L., and then how the backers had trouble getting many of the better players to sign. So they withdrew from the Central League. Bill then said he got the opinions of many around town and including the players. He found public opinion favored a senior team. This, along with his duties on the O.B.A.A. decided him. He talked to Robert Abbott of the Raybestos, and they decided to withdraw their intermediate team from the E.P.L. and offer it as a foundation upon which a senior team could be built.

Mr. Abbott spoke briefly on the matter of finances, and he offered the Rays' complete equipment to the senior club. This will be accepted for the time being, those present decided.

The president expressed the club's appreciation for what Robert Abbott, Bill Kay and the Raybestos have done in sacrificing their team this year to get senior ball started again. He then brought up the matter of grounds. A general discussion followed, and the feeling was that, if the Council would fix up the James Stevenson Park, that place would be preferable. The bigger team could co-operate with the City League, which will also use the diamond.

A committee composed of Vic Hamilton, Gordon Matthews and Hugh Campbell, will interview Walter Stocker on this matter, and report back at the next meeting.

Delegates Appointed

Two representatives, J. A. Bell and Vic Hamilton, will attend the C.O.B.L. meeting in the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, to-night and enter the Peterborough team. They will also endeavor to get suitable dates for home games. It is not known yet if Oshawa will enter or not.

Transportation, equipment, finances, and various other business details came in for some discussion but it was thought that more could be done concerning these matters after to-nigh's league meeing. Another meeting of the local club will be held Friday evening at seven o'clock at the same place, and final pre-seasonal business will be cleared up. The meeting was then adjourned.

MASONICS BEAT INDIAN RIVER

Indian River Outfit Beaten 14 to 9 in Otonabee Softball League Game.

SUPPORT LACKING

INDIAN RIVER, May 20.—In the Otonabee softball league game Monday night, Indian River lost to Masonics 9 to 14. The game was closely contested, being six to seven at the end of the third innings in favor of the Indian River boys. From then on the Indians failed to score until the sixth when Ronald Spencer's second home run of the game accounted for two more runs, while Masonics continued to put over a run or two in each inning.

For the locals, Roy Spencer found his curve ball hard to get over the plate at times while costly errors fairly evenly divided among the players, really proved their undoing.

Centre fielder M. Doherty played a perfect game in the field making some spectacular catches while Ronald Spencer, the Babe Ruth of the team drove in 5 of the 9 runs with his circuit clouts.

The line-up:

Indian River—H. Fitzgerald, lf; Roy Spencer, p; Ronald Spencer, 1b; C. O'Brien, 3b; M. Doherty, cf; Joe Devlin, ss; M. Fitzgerald, rf; B. Quinlan, c; Rolly Tedford, 2b.

Masonics—H. Garnet, 3b; S. Wood, 2b; Ross Comrie, 1b; S. Laing, p; M. Fife, cf; J. Wallbridge, rf; S. Comrie, ss; S. Davidson, c; R. Reid, lf.

Umpires — Mick Walsh and J. Cromrie.

No-Foul Rule for Heavyweight Bout

CLEVELAND, O., May 20. — (C.P.).—No-foul rule, with possible reservation, will prevail when Max Schmeling defends his heavyweight championship against "Young" Stribling in Cleveland stadium July 3.

Announcement that the title would not be decided on a foul was made by the Cleveland Boxing Commission yesterday. The commission, however, considered amending its decision so that in the event of low blow forces the end of the bout, heavy cash penalties might be inflicted.

Schmeling leaves to-night for Conneaut Lake Park, Pa., to start training. Stribling plans to take up his quarters at Geauga Lake Park, near Cleveland, to-morrow.

SPORTS by JIMMY THOMPSON

THE WRESTLER THAT WORKS ON OPPONENTS NERVES TO WIN

Lee Wykoff, former university star of St. Louis, now considered one of the foremost college wrestling stars in the country, has wrestled but five years professionally and can make the proud boast that he has never dodged an opponent that any one of the promoters have pitted against him. His first defeat in the New England States, more commonly known as the stumbling block to most good men, came at the hands of the well known Gus Sonnenberg. This defeat, Wykloff claims, was due to his own carelessness. Prior to that time he had beaten some mightly smart men such as John Frigerg, Joe DeVito, Stanley Pinto, Gus Pappas, Tony Bernardo and drew with Pat McGill, Martin Plestina, Stanley Stasiak and Farmer George McLeod. With such an imposing record Lee gets his high rating. However, on being asked on what he thought his success had mainly depended, Wykoff explained that in his experience he had found that to concentrate on the nervous system of his opponent was his greatest asset.

Belleville Seniors Are Fielding Strong Team

BELLEVILLE, May 20. —Manager Walter Gerow of the Nationals had the local baseball squad out for the first time last night, and prospects look bright. The veterans catcher, "Peeny" Mills, was on deck, while two pitchers warmed up, Tommy Pointer and "Hoot" Gibson. Two other hurlers, Alex Weir, who has been here for some years, and "Lefty" Morris, formerly of the Hillcrests, are both on their honeymoons, having been married last Saturday. Les Tice of Windsor, was at first base, as Harry Mills was an absentee owing to an injury. Vern Weir, Meaghar and Flagler alternated at second base, while "Sonny" Green and Jack Kerr worked out at shortstop.

Bob Scott appears to have the third base cinched as there were no other aspirants for the position. There were several candidates for the outfield, including Darragh, Green, Smith, Buck, Young, Gretney and others. This looks like a formidable array and the Nationals will again take some beating in the Central League this year.

Keystones Drop 2nd Straight to Leafs

O'NEILL NINE BUNCHES HITS TO BEAT KEYS

Connect for Safeties in Third and Eighth Innings for 9-2 Victory.

ART MILLS EFFECTIVE.

Score Six in Third, Harris and Shiver Hit With Bases Loaded.

TORONTO, May 20 — Launching two hearty batting attacks upon Reading pitchers, the Maple Leafs made it two straight victories over the tailenders at Maple Leaf Stadium yesterday afternoon, the score on this occasion being 9 to 2.

Clayton Van Alstyne, who held Montreal to four hits and registered a 1 to 0 victory in the Quebec city last week, was the victim of the Leafs' first batting assault. They pried six runs off him in the third inning and what they did later didn't really matter in the ultimate result. The ball game was won in the third, for Art Mills, who occupied the mound for the Leafs all through the piece, did some effective flinging and seldom was in danger of having that early lead threatened.

In the eighth inning the O'Neillmen took a liking to the offerings of Pitcher Kirsch, who was the third of the visiting heavers to go into action, and they added three more runs on four hits.

The Keys went into the lead in the second inning, but compared to what happened in the third, the one run they had looked quite insignificant.

Score Six Runs

Van Alstyne breezed through the first two innings, but Pete Stack opened the Leafs' half of the third with an infield hit that Conroy couldn't run in fast enough to get and make a play on. Mills attempted a sacrifice, but Stack was nailed going into second. Then Joe Rabbitt shot a single into centre, Mills halting at second. Nolen Richardson worked Van Alstyne for a base on balls, the pitcher handed him four wide ones in succession. With the bases loaded, the veteran Joe Harris stepped up to the plate and smacked the first ball pitched into centre field, Mills and Rabbitt scoring, and Richardson halting at third. Harris went to second on a wild pitch that Catcher Legett retrieved in time to hold Richardson back. Strong worked the pitcher for a walk and the bases were filled again. "Chick" Shiver then came through with a double just inside the right field foul line and three runs scampered in. Strong had to slide for the plate, and the play was close, but he was declared safe. Shiver, for some unknown reason, attempted to steal third and Legetts' throw had him beat easily, only Conroy could not hold the ball after Shiver slid into the bag. Shiver scored on a long fly to left by Billy Rogell.

It was one of the biggest scoring innings the Leafs have enjoyed in many games and the lead was sufficient to give Mills all the confidence in the world over the remaining innings.

LEAPS TO DEATH.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19. — The body of Lee Soo, Queen street, was found below the Spadina avenue bridge just souht of St. Clair avenue, to-day. Notin gihe body crumpled up on the edge of the creek, the passerby notified police, and following a short investigation it was intimated Soo jumped from the bridge.

WINGS BEAT ORIOLES.

BUFFALO, May 20. — The Newark Bears made it two straight over the Buffalo Bisons to bolster their hold on first place when they took the third game of the series here yesterday afternoon 4 to 1. Andy Cohen's shot over the left-field wall with a man on was the most potent factor in Newark's victory.

"Heinie" Mueller saved the Bisons from being kalsomined when he drove a long smash over the right-field fence in the fourth inning. Mueller's drive was the only hit off "Lefty" Milligan up to the sixth inning, but the Newark southpaw was removed in this inning when he filled the bases on three consecutive walks. Al Harvin came in and easily quelled the Bisons for the rest of the route.

ROYALS BEATEN IN TENTH.

MONTREAL, May 20.—The Royals lost a ten-inning game to the Jersey City Skeeters here yesterday afternoon, 5 to 4, when Marty Griffin walked in the winning run with the bases full to allow the Skeeters to even the series at two games each. The visitors scored four unearned runs off Griffin in the sixth, three errors giving them all their tallies after two were out. The Royals rallied with three runs in the ninth after two were down on clean singles. Griffin was wild and passed 9 men, allowing but 7 hits.

WINGS DEFEAT ORIOLES.

ROCHESTER, May 20. — Rochester defeated Baltimore here yesterday, 4 to 2, in a game cut short by a downpour of rain after two were out in the seventh inning. It was the second loss in like manner this trip for the Orioles. Monte Weaver pitched well, but allowed his hits after errors by his team-mates and all the four runs of the winners were unearned. Hill was tight in what few pinches offered and turned down the Maryland crew.

Post-season Predictions of Close Race in National League Comes True.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

After starting out as if to upset the "dope", major league baseball teams are quite busy these days proving that the boys who follow the game from day to day are pretty sure of what they are talking about when they predict how a pennant race will turn out.

"A close race in the National League and the Athletics again in the American" was the word that went out before the season. A glance at today's standing shows the St. Louis and New York National League clubs battling for the lead, only half a game apart. The Philadelphia Americans, while they have not been able to out-distance their leading rivals, are on top and have done their best to make it a runaway by winning eleven straight games.

The A's downed the Detroit Tigers 5—0 yesterday for victory No. 11 behind the unbeatable pitching of Big George Earnshaw. The Philadelphia right hander gave just two hits while his teammates, led by Al Simmons, made good use of nine blows off Waite Hoyt. Simmons, hitting in his 17th successive game, connected for a single, a double and a triple.

The victory resulted in no gain for the A's, however, for their leading rivals, the New York Yankees, staged a comeback to hand Cleveland its eleventh straight defeat, 8 to 6. The Indians, whose weakness is one of the season's puzzles, made a great attempt to break their losing streak by driving Charley Ruffing from the mound in the second inning. But Henry Johnson pitched good relief ball and Clint Brown could not still the big bats of the Yankees in the early innings.

Washington lost some ground as rain stopped the game at Chicago. Wet grounds halted Boston and St. Louis. Timely slugging enabled the National League leaders and their strongest rivals, the Cardinals and Giants, to continue their race. The Cards beat Brooklyn 6 to 2 as the Robins failed to give Babe Phelps good support. They got only two runs on eleven hits off Hallahan and Derringer and made five errors. Phelps pitched a good game up to the eighth but then St. Louis cut loose for five runs. The Giants took things fairly easy against Cincinnati, using Young Bill Morrell on the mound for the full game and holding Critz out of the lineup, but they won out easily, 9 to 3.

The fourth and fifth innings brought in seven runs, five of them coming on homers by Hogan and Ott.

The third place Boston Braves continued their pursuit of the leaders by pushing Chicago deeper into fourth. Aided by three Cub errors, first inning and won out 9 to 5. "Ace" Elliott of the Phillies was in the hole again but this time it was not of hos own making. He relieved Jim Elliott in the ninth inning with none out and the bases full and retired the Pirates in time to save a 3 to 2 victory. The victory left Philadelphia only half a game behind the fifth place Pittsburghers.

SUGAR BOWL DOWNS ALL SAINTS' TEAM

The Sugar Bowl nine last night defeated the All Saint's outfit 11 to 2 in a City Softball League fixture played on Central School grounds. The game was the best one of the season and the losers in the early part were more outlucked than outplayed. A rally in the third for the Bowl outfit gave them six runs but outside of this innings the game was close throughout. The Saints managed to get their men on bases but failed to come through with the hits when they were needed.

All Saint's were held scoreless until the sixth innings when they scored their only two counters. The Sugar Bowl scored one in the first and second, six in the third and then for the next three frames were well held but came back with three in the final frame.

Jack Hope pitched real good ball for the losers but failed to get the support which was given Bill Simmons by the winners.

The line-up were:

ALL SAINT'S—B. Frost, ss; J. Olaveson, c; R. Wilson, 1b; J. Hope, p; C. Evans, rf; G. Palmer, 3b; F. Worsencroft, lf; A. Sanderson, 2b; F. Dyer, cf.

SUGAR BOWL—H. Dormer, 1b; V. Dallin, lf; J. Gillespie, cf; J. Playford, rf; B. Weese, 2b; W. Bradshaw, 3b; G. Dormer, ss; W. Mahood, c; W. Simmons, p; T. Miller, rf.

Because of the unsuitable condition of the Bangkok landing field, Siam's connection with the Netherland air mail service from the East Indies to the Netherlands had to be abandoned.

HEID DOON LADDIE

(By Ivan Kirkhouse)

TORONTO, May 20.—Brilliant color schemes and immaculately blending sartorial perfections seem not in the best of taste with the lads who shoot good golf this year. The tendency is all toward inconspicuousness and comfort, modest gray flannel trousers with windbreakers or coats are rapidly ousting the flashy stockings, jerseys and knickers of recent times.

The move is certainly in the right direction, as when we stop to think of it, is there an article of male attire more uncomfortable than a pair of golf knickers, except possibly a high collar and boiled shirt? The band of the knickers tight on the leg, covered with two or more thicknesses of heavy woolen stocking and topped off with a garter, do not lead themselves to comfort, especially on a hot summer afternoon.

The Canadian Open Champion, Tommy Armour, made a statement several years ago, that half the average golfers' troubles were caused by using too light clubs, referring to their irons as "tinney". Tommy is noted for his tremendously strong hands and forearms and thought him a bit prejudiced on this account, while there are several very good golfers playing with light clubs, the more one thinks of the statement, the more weight it carries.

Timing difficulties are easily one of the major obstacles to be overcome before one can hope for consistantly good scores. The faster the swing the harder it is to gauge properly, and with the average players natural anxiety to hit the ball, a light club coming down like a flash certainly doesn't help matters any.

That very keen and experienced golf student, George Cummings of the Toronto Golf Club, and the daddy of all teachers, says the best driving he ever did in his life was with a light club, but gave it up when he became convinced that a heavier one was more consistent; Seymour Dunn, the famous pro at Lake Placid, says practically the same thing in his very thorough book on teaching, published some years ago. These two authorities should and do know their stuff as they have given the better part of their lives to the close study of their professions.

A good solid head is apparently even more necessary on iron than a wood, due to the heavy lies so frequently met and the greater accuracy required when the short shot is to be played. Again this is the case with which backspin is put on with a light mashie niblick. George Duncan describes this as "cutting the legs from under the ball" and the light blub with the faster swung head, gives greater spin. But generally speaking the heavier headed clubs seem more steady and reliable. Most golfers have one iron in their bags that is an ultra special pet and it is surprising how many of these favorites are of the "battle-axe" variety. An inveterate golfer and friend of the writer's has a bludgeon which he calls a spade mashie, but is really a big edition of a mashie iron that has his entire affection and confidence—why he lugs around a flock of other irons is a mystery, he hates them all as he brings out Reliable Annie for any distance from 175 yards down, and how he can push them up with it! He "fives 'em" to death with it.

BARNARD DARWIN BEATEN 3 AND 2

Roger Wethered, 1923 Champion, Eliminates Allan MacBeth in Fourth Round.

OTHER RESULTS.

WESTWARD HO., England, May 20 (A.P.)—Playing consistently, stars of the British golfing world came successfully through the fourth round of the British Amateur Championship to-day and went into the fifth round this afternoon. Roger Wethered, who won the title in 1923; Syd Roper, Wollaton Park, and Cyril Tolley, remained in the running.

While these players met the expectations of the experts, J. A. Sout, long a figure in British championships was defeated by Captain H. C. C. Tippett and W. Lister Hartley, who played excellently in the Open last year, fell before Reginald Straker. John de Forest, Addington, was another to go into the fifth round.

The chief challenge to British hopes of retaining the championship, won last year by Robert Tyre Jones of the United States, loomed threateningly when George Voigt, New York, gained the fifth round by defeating Darwin, London.

Experts are looking forward eagerly to this afternoon's encounter between Voigt and Roper. It was recalled that Roper, a young insurance clerk, gave Jones a terrific battle last year, shooting fifteen fours and a five against the golf wizard from Atlanta, Ga. Despite this spectacular golf he lost to Jones three and two.

Tulloch, who defeated Hill, three and two, in the fourth round to-day, will meet Roger Wethered in the fifth round.

The 19-year-old Newey eliminated the veteran De Montmorency, five and four, to enter the fifth round. Newey's accurate approaching and clean putting were too much for his more experienced opponent.

KING'S PLATE AN OPEN RACE

All Ready for Canadian Turf Classic at Beautiful Woodbine Park.

PROVINCE-BREDS ONLY

TORONTO, Ont., May 20 (By The Canadian Press)—About a score of thoroughbreds will go to the post in the 72nd renewal of the King's Plate at Woodbine Park here on Saturday, May 23. They will be contesting the oldest horse race run continuously on the continent. The King's Plate (it was the Queen's Plate then) had royal patronage from its beginning in 1860, and has come to be the classic of the Canadian Turf, with the same appeal in this part of the Dominion as the Derby at Epsom Downs or the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

And like all great races the King's Plate has its glorious uncertainties. For a time during the winter it looked as though the 1931 Plate would be a walkover for R. W. R. Cowie's fine colt Frothblower. Frothblower, by Cudgel out of Chrystobergil, won four starts and was second four times out of his eight races as a two-year-old last season. The only horses to beat him were the Seagram Stable's Spherette and Connie Smyth's Rare Jewel. And both Spherette and Rare Jewel died during the winter.

Frothblower however will face strong opposition when the barrier is sprung and the field is off on the mile and an eighth race which has $10,000 added and the King's 50 Guineas waiting at the finishing posts. The Seagram Stable holds a strong card in Freethinker, Goldader and Toe Dance. The Thorncliffe Stable, winners with Shorelint two years ago, have a promising pair of contenders in Bronze and Oil Rite. Ryland H. New, winner last year with Aymond, pins his hopes on the four-year-old Par Excellence and the three-year-old Royal Guest. Besides the eight named, there is always the possibility of surprise from the lesser-known runners.

The King's Plate is for three-year-olds and upward owned by a British subject resident in Ontario, that have have been foaled, raised and trained in the province and have never won a race except as two-year-olds, have never left Canada and have never been for a period of more than three months out of the province. Thus, the four and five-year-olds in the race on Saturday—notably the four-year-old Freethinker and W. E. Bulmer's five-year-old Postville—have not only failed to win since they were juveniles but have to give weight to the three-year-olds. Freethinker indeed was a highly regarded candidate for last year's Plate, but hurt his knee in training and did not race as a three-year-old. Now he comes back, apparently sound and fit, as the most outstanding of the many unkown quantities in the race.

For the first time, the King's Plate this year does not make the feature of a brilliant opening of the Canadian Turf season. Thorncliffe Park, on the outskirts of Toronto, opened the Canadian season on May 13. The Woodbine meeting from May 23 to May 27 has several good features, some of the oldest and most valuable races of the Canadian Turf.

CASUAL COMMENT

Well, the seniors are away to a flying start, but they're not up in the air. The club was organized last night when the officers were elected and two appointed to attend the Belleville session to officially enter the Petes.

• • • • • • •

And this time they're in, and no fooling. When the experienced sportsmen and manufacturers get behind a thing, it always goes over the top. It did in other years, and with the number back of it this time, the Central League outfit has the proper start.

• • • • • • •

They've promised to give their employees the time off for out-of-town games, and this won't be very much as several of those games are scheduled for holidays. But, the big fellows will do everything necessary to help the players.

• • • • • • •

Hugh Campbell, the president, is a live-wire and will get results or know the reason why, George A. MacDonald and J. A. Bell, who were elected vice-presidents, are a couple of real sports, and strong for senior ball. And who else will make such a secretary as that old experienced baseball follower, Vic Hamilton?

• • • • • • •

C. P. Borland has had enough experience handling money to do all right as treasurer. He should have little difficulty in keeping track of the finances, even if the Petes should outdraw the Yanks.

• • • • • • •

And what an impressive looking list comprises the executive! It looks like a Who's Who in Peterborough. Everyone a prominent business and sports man. You just can't beat them, that's all.

• • • • • • •

A whole flock of other well-known men have offered to get in and help the club if necessary. They want to see the best possible team from here, and they want to see them go right through to the Olympics. Well, we may have been slow and unsure at the start, but we're going now. Watch our smoke!

• • • • • • •

The Kiwanis Junior City League team will work out tomorrow night at six down at the King Edward School grounds. Manager Jack Deannard has a smart looking outfit lined up again this year.

• • • • • • •

The Girls' Softball League opens here on Friday, when Brintons and Westclox meet at the Bowl. The diamond is in good condition, and the grandstand is completed, so there'll probably be a regular mob out for the opener.

• • • • • • •

Tonight at six, a rejuvenated Examiner team takes on the Westclox in a Men's Softball League game at Central. Jake Beckerman will have his usual crew of fence-busters out, and there should be a battle.

• • • • • • •

Bud Westbrook, Ken Kingston and Cy Haskill are some of the new Examiner players who will be seen in action in the re-vamped lineup this evening.

• • • • • • •

There are no school games tonight, but they'll be right back with a pair tomorrow night, Central plays at King George and Queen Alex plays at King Edward, and the schedule has only another week to go.

• • • • • • •

The lacrosse players were hard at it again last night at the Exhibition Grounds. They had a practise game for about an hour and the fellows were going great. They'll be all set for the holiday game.

• • • • • • •

The baseball game between Prince of Wales and King George Schools yesterday evening saw some heavy hitting. When the losers sock the pill for four singles and three triples in a row to make seven runs, you can imagine what the winner were doing.

• • • • • • •

Of course, the 17-8 win for the East City outfit came about partly through sloppy fielding and wild pegging by the visitors. But the boys were leaning on that ball when they stood up to the plate. Anyway, they sure enjoy these games, and that's the main thing.

Lacrosse Team Shaping Into Good Condition

A full turnout of lacrosse players were on hand last night at the Exhibition Grounds; J. Kleggar, well known Hespeler senior player was also present. He thought the Peterborough players were in good shape and could put a first class team on the field.

Walter Firth, secretary of the local club, has received word from the O.A.L.A. that Oshawa had been heard from, but there had been no definite word received from Campbellford, concerning a grouping. The affiliation fee is ten dollars.

The next practise is called for Thursday night at six on the same grounds, and all players are requested to come out on time. A meeting will be held right after the workout.

Famous Rugby School Has New Headmaster

LONDON, May 20.—(CP Cable)—Percy H. B. Lyon, Rector of the Edinburgh Academy since 1926, has been appointed Headmaster of famous old Rugby School, founded in 1567. Mr. Lyon is only 38 years of age, and was educated at Rugby and Oriel, Oxford. He had a distinguished war record, serving with the 6th Battalion Durham Light Infantry. He was awarded the Military Cross. Mr. Lyon is also the author of the Newdigate prize poem of 1919, and of "Songs of Youth and War," and books on poetry.

The retiring headmaster is W. W. Vaughan.

Rugby Unions To Air Problems On Saturday

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 20. (CP) Dr. Gordon Shrun, president of the British Columbia Canadian rugby interests at the conference to be held in Regina Saturday at which the differences of the Western Canada rugby union, the Western Intercollegiate rugby union, and the B. C. rugby union will be aired and some solution sought.

The executive of the B. C. union, which held a special meeting last night, gave Dr. Shrum full powers to act for it at the Regina conclave.

SOCCER NOTES

The meeting of the P. and D.F.A. will be held next Tuesday evening in Chamber of Commerce Rooms after the Deloro and Caledonians game.

Canadian General team to-morrow evening will be as follows: J. Bolton, goal; W. Bruce and J. Lewington, full backs; J. Murphy, J. Stannard and H. Daynes, halves; J. Quinn, J. McMaster, B. McMaster, Stan. Clark and H. Darling, forwards. Reserves: Clyde, Grant and B. Bolam.

Gordon's Lead Loop With 10 Victories

Gordon's defeated both Gilbert's and the Fleming Cubs in the last two nights in regular Sacred Heart School Baseball League games. The score over Gilbert's was 10—7 and over the Cubs 18—9. The standing of the teams at present:

| | Won | Lost | Tie |
|---|---|---|---|
| Gordon's | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Fleming's | 1 | 2 | 0 |
| Creighton's | 1 | 2 | 0 |
| Gilbert's | 0 | 4 | 0 |

Baseball Gossip.

The Kinsmen Bantams will practise to-morrow night at six down at the King Edward grounds. A full turnout is requested.

Yesterday's Stars.

George Earnshaw, Athletics—Shut out Tigers with two hits for Philadelphia's eleventh straight victory.

Wally Berger, Braves—Clouted two triples and single in 9-5 victory over Cubs.

Barney Friberg, Phillies—Drove in winning run to beat Pirates 3 to 2.

Willard Morrell, Giants—Stopped Reds with eights hits, winning first Major League start 9-3.

Lou Gehrig, Yankees—Hit seventh home run of season in 8-6 victory over Cleveland.

SUNDAY TENNIS IS NOT ALLOWED ON NEW COURTS

Directors of Lawn Bowling and Tennis Club Decline to Grant request.

MANY NEW MEMBERS.

At a meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling and Tenins Club, held last evening in the club-house, it was decided unanimously to decline to grant the request of some of the senior tennis players for the privilege of playing tennis on Sunday. The directors feel that the company, operating as it does under a civic charter, cannot afford to grant the request of the tennis players concerned, as to do so would lead to Sunday bowling with inevitable protests from citizens, especially from those living in the vicinity of the club-house. The directors feel that it should be recognized that the Peterborough club is in a different situation from a private club operated outside the city limits, on its own private greens. The tennis courts are in splendid condition, much work having been done on them lately, and everything is in good shape for a good season's play.

A considerable number of applications for membership in the tennis section, both senior and junior, were accepted by the directors last evening. The junior section of the club will be particularly strong this year.

Last evening, on the request of some members that a dual membership should be established, so that by paying extra fees a member would be entitled to both the bowling and tennis privileges of the Club, it was decided to grant the request. The combined membership was placed at $25.00 a season.

It has been found that some players not entitled to play have utilized the privileges of the Club, thereby at times preventing bona fide members from playing. In order to protect the interests of actual members, it was decided last evening to restrict the use of the tennis courts to paid-up members, holding membership cards, and to follow the example of other clubs by requiring members to register in a book, kept for the purpose, before going on the courts to play. This arrangement, it is believed, will place the tennis division on a much better basis.

The annual election of officers of Tennis Club will be held on Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the club-house.

Woodward's Scout II. Wins Yorkshire Cup

YORK, England, May 20 (C.P.).—William Woodward's The Scout II. to-day won the Yorkshire Cup and $500 from J. de Rothschild's Prince Paradise. J. Kayton's Timber was third.

The Scout won by a neck, with Timber three lengths behind Prince Paradise. Six others also ran the two miles, among them A. Macomber's Brumeux.

The Scout was the favorite at five to two, with Prince Paradise 100 to seven, and Timber 20 to 1.

KING GEORGE EASY WINNERS

FINAL COUNT 17-8.

King George team, playing on their home grounds, had little difficulty in walloping the Prince of Wales outfit 17 to 8 in a School League game yesterday evening.

The losers played a ragged game in the field, and except for the sixth inning had trouble solving the delivery of "Stew" Williamson. He fanned nine and only allowed four hits for five innings, but he was hammered for seven more in the sixth one. His teammates had seven errors, most of them coming in the sixth when the losers rallied for seven runs.

The Wales team kicked in with an even dozen miscues, and these along with the sixteen hits garnered off McIlmoyle accounted for the one-sided win. Mac struck out nine but was wild at times, and had three bad innings.

The visitors scored one in the first, and were blanked from then until the sixth when they went on a hitting spree, pushing in seven runs. In this frame, they hit four singles and three triples in a row, which along with some wild pegging by the leaders, gave them the seven. They failed to get on in the last frame.

Take Early Lead

The winners ran in three right at the start and one more in both the second and third innings. A flock of hits and errors gave them six in the fourth, and it continued in the next go to give them four more. They only crossed the platter once in the last.

While there was a lot of bad errors, and some smart ball at times, too, nothing in the way of a spectacular play was seen. Williams, however, on short for the Princes, played a nice game, trying hard for everything that came near him.

Prince of Wales—Robertson, 3b; Kingdon, c; Menzies, 1b; Roberts, lf; Rusaw, 2b; Platt, cf; Williams, ss; McIlmoyle, p; Hope, rf.

Umpire—F. H. Dearborn.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Prince of Wales. 100 007 0— 8 11 12
King George .... 411 641 x—17 16 7

HAROLD MOTT WINS QUINTE C.I. TITLE

Eugenia May is Senior Champion While Sheila Carman Leads Juniors.

BELLEVILLE, May 20.—Field day for the collegiate institute and vocational school was completed yesterday. The field events were run off last week, a rainstorm interfering with the track events. The senior championship for boys was not decided until the half-mile was run. Harold Mott, Tom Brynes and Ralph Champagne had a chance, and, as these three were the only ones to toe the mark, it resolved into a great race, with Mott winning by a yard. Champagne broke down fifty yards from home, the pace being too hot.

Don Phelps won the intermediate championship away off, while W. Hilton annexed the junior championship. Sheila Carman was much the best of the junior girls while Marion MceLan showed the way in the intermediate section. Eugenia May won the senior flight by herself.

The times in the several events were good, considering the condition of the track and the boys will compete at the district meet, to be held in Kingston later in the summer, the winners to go on to the Ontario championships to be held in Toronto.

NEW CAR FERRY TAKES TO WATER

CARRIES 700 PASSENGERS.

QUEBEC, Que., May 20.—(C.P.)—Sponsored by Mrs. Charles Dalton, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, the new Dominion Government inter-provincial car ferry S. S. Charlottetown, was launched this morning at the Davie shipbuilding yards of the Canada Steamship Lines at Lauzon, Que.

The car ferry was built at a cost of $2,225,000. The vessel has a tonnage of 1380, is 324 feet in length and has a beam of 50 feet. She has a carrying capacity of 750 passengers, 50 automobiles and sixteen railway cars or coaches. All materials used in the construction were produced in the British Empire and, wherever possible, in Canada, officials of the Canada Steamship Lines, builders of the new vessel, stated to-day.

COCHET WITHDRAWS.

ROLAND CARROS STADIUM, Aureuil, France, May 20 (C.P.).—Henri Cochet, the world's ranking tennis player, to-day officially withdrew from the French hard court singles championship, leaving John Borotra as the main French hope.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess.)

I close my doors. You have no right
To open them by day or night.
—Midget the Mouse.

Midget is a true Mouse. Yes, sir, you would know that just to get a glimpse of him. What you wouldn't discover at a glance, however, is the fact that he is a member of a particular branch of that family. Unless you had him in your hands to examine, or happened to be watching him gather in seeds and so saw his cheeks gradually swell without apparent cause, you wouldn't suspect the pockets in his cheeks. All the members of his branch of the Mouse family have these pockets and so are called Pocket Mice. Midget is the smallest, so small that he will weigh less than an ounce. He is a pretty little fellow with a yellow silky coat. Because of the latter he is called the Silky

Pocket Mouse. Some of his cousins and neighbors have such coarse hairs in their coats that they are called Spiny Pocket Mice.

Farmer Brown's Boy had seen Midget in the moonlight and had quite fallen in love with him. Now, moonlight is all very nice for certain things, but not so satisfactory as sunlight for seeing clearly. So it came about that the next morning right after breakfast Farmer Brown's Boy was back at that place where the night before he had watched Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat and Midget. Not a single kernal of the grain he had left there remained. He got not so much as a glimpse of either of his acquaintances of the night before. Only fairy-like footprints in the sand remained to prove that those pretty, lively little folk in fur had been there.

Of course, he knew that the smallest daintiest prints had been made by Midget and so he began to trace these in the hope that they would lead him to Midget's home. After a while he came to the end of one of these little trails and he guessed right away that Midget's home was close by. He looked for a hole in the sand, but no hole could he find. Under a small bush was what appeared like a very low mound and on the edge of this Farmer Brown's Boy noticed a tiny heap of sand as if it had been thrown out by someone digging a hole. He looked more closely and saw what looked as if it might be a doorway filled with sand. With a small stick he pushed away the sand and found that he was right. It was the opening to a small tunnel. Even while he was looking at it some grains of sand came out almost into his face, for he had his face very close to the hole trying to look in

Then Farmer Brown's Boy began to chuckle. "I do believe," said he, "that the door is actually being closed in my face."

It was Midget, for this was Midget's home; he was closing that doorway with sand just as fast as he could. He was making his little feet fairly fly as he kicked sand into place. Farmer Brown's Boy waited until the doorway was quite filled with sand. Then he removed it as before, and as before Midget immediately began to kick sand to close the door. Presently Farmer Brown's Boy found another closed door and opened this with precisely the same result. It was perfectly clear that Midget wanted no visitors and didn't mean to have any if he could help himself.

"Well," said Farmer Brown's Boy, "for a little fellow you are smart. I imagine that an open doorway wouldn't be the safest thing around here. I don't know who your enemies are, but an open doorway would be an invitation to walk in or dig in. A closed door isn't likely to be noticed. And you are right on the job to close it as fast as it is opened. You and I must become acquainted. Yes, sir, we must so. I guess I'll have to come around here after jolly round hot Mr. Sun goes to bed. It is evident that you are far too sensible to come out in the heat of the day."

So Farmer Brown's Boy didn't bother Midget any more then, but started back for the ranch.

MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS

Price 50c a box

Was Weak and Run Down

Could Scarcely Do Housework

Mrs. Edward A. Allen, Bezanson, Alta., writes: "I would like to tell you of the great benefit I have received from your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I was feeling very much run down in health, and was so weak I could scarcely do my housework, in fact, I would have to lie down in the afternoon for an hour or so. I saw your Pills in the drug store and took a box home with me, and I was delighted with my renewed strength. I have recommended them to a neighbor and feel sure they will help her too."

Sold by all drug and general stores, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

beyond having them stick around 12 to 14 hours a day.

Giant Of Bath Tub.

I got up early today anxious to bathe, eat and see these mysteries. The first snag came in the bath tub. A perfect giant of a bathtub where even a hippopotamus could have splashed merrily about. Two kinds of water, both cold. I let the "caliente" tap run and run and run hoping it would warm up. This upset the chambermaid who came around to see how come.

I asked about the warm water. "Saturday was a fete day senor," she explained, "yes—well." "The wood did not come." "What wood?"

"The wood we heat the water with." "Oh, I see, why didn't it come?" "A fete day senor. We could not ask the man to fetch us wood on a fete day."

"I suppose not, but did this fete spring on you all of a sudden, or did you know it was coming?" "Why senor, it was the fete of the flowers. A regular fete." "Then why didn't the wood man lay in an extra supply of wood to meet the holiday?"

"Ah senor, such effort you expect. How could we ask the man to do such a thing?" So I gave up there and then. You can't win.

The woman came around to see if something couldn't be done to ease my disappointment. She thought perhaps a cup of coffee would help and it did. She said there was hot water every morning between six and seven.

I descended on the unsuspecting town and sought breakfast. They brought one roll and one cup of coffee out to the garden. That's all you can get here before noon. To find bacon and eggs you'd have to buy the hotel. A boy rallied around with an English paper dated May 15, 1930. Evidently that's the date an Eglishman last checked in here.

I strolled down those delightful narrow streets. Eleven feet by actual measurement and yet they drive cars on them. The cars come fast too and pedestrians have to crowd into niches and doorways. The shops seemed busy so early in the morning. Cotton stuff was cheap, so were the embroideries and laces. There was one shop specializing on things for the Spring bride and they were so cheap as to make Canadian trousseau hunters cry with envy. Veils of Spanish handmade lace for a few dollars.

Tables All Over Roads.

I came into a broad street—thirty feet—here a car could be safely driven. But the place was given over to cafes with the tables spread all over the road, leaving just a narrow lane down the centre.

It was not yet nine o'clock but the cafes were crowded with men drinking coffee-cognacs. Waiters were trotting around with three long spouted pots all steaming. They contained milk, coffee and cognac which was poured into thin glasses in about equal quantities. I asked for white wine. They brought me a little dish of olives, a little dish of sardines neatly spiked on toothpicks and the wine. The cost was one Canadian cent which entitled me to bask in that particular cafe all day long, meet my friends there, write mail, get my shoes shined and take lessons in Spanish.

These cafes line all the broader streets and the sea front. On one I spotted the first English words I had seen in town. The sign read, "This is a good coffee house. Come in and we will take your money. All varieties of stranger money are taken here." To test out this frank advice I went through a very pocket filled with a mongrel assortment of cash and brought forth one Moroccan franc. It bought a drink. This barred me from future cafes because two wines before lunch is enough for me.

As I waited a group of stevedores came in with lunches in tin pails. They had a loaf of bread each, a couple of red fish half size between a lobster and a shrimp, and some raw onions. I watched them peel and eat the fishes starting on the whiskers. Immediately the whole group offered me food. That is the predominant Spanish characteristic. The stranger must be fed. And the stranger, I had been told, should take what is offered him.

So I joined the group and munched away on the small succulent lobsters. They were really delicious. Since I wanted no more wine I supplied cigarettes and the men seemed delighted and honored to smoke with me. We stayed there in the bright sunlight most of the morning. A great bell somewhere nearby told of the passing of the day. Otherwise you might have been sitting in an eternity of slow motion. No hurry, nobody going anywhere, nothing to do, all day to do it in, lots of eat and drink and a brilliant sun. No papers hot off the press with the latest news. The hopes and tragedies of the outside world pass over this ancient city and the people like the winds of night. Manana, tomorrow is time enough for work.

I have written of Galicia, wine and herd country of the North, that women seem to do all the heavy work while men sit around smoking and boys mind babies. Here in Andalusia it is entirely different. Men do most of the work. In 100 miles of country driving yesterday I never saw one peasant woman at work in the fields. Over the same distance in Galicia it would have been easy to count 1,000 of them.

MOTHS CAN'T LIVE with FLY-TOX

Like oil and water, FLY-TOX and Moths do not mix. When FLY-TOX spray touches moths or moth worms they die. They can't live with FLY-TOX.

With the hand sprayer, send fine FLY-TOX mist directly on clothing and furs, on rugs and upholstery, into chests and closets. Kill the moth before the damage is done. Moths will riddle clothing with holes and leave it damaged beyond repair. FLY-TOX will kill all the moths and stop moth destruction. Guaranteed not to stain. Harmless to people.

RELIEF BOARD

work to her credit, remarked that overlapping was elliminated to a remarkable extent, that the society had done very creditably a difficult piece of work, that investigations were thorough and administration kindly and efficient.

The association had its inception in a meeting called during the first week in January, by Mayor Denne, and two days later, after a preliminary conference with the Central Charity Board, officers were appointed and arrangements got under way. It was gratifying to note at the inception of the new society that a resolution of the Central Charity Board, after discussion of the aims of the new society, recognized the need of such an auxiliary effort, and promised the cordial co-operation of the civic Board which looks after regular cases of need.

At the organization meeting, called immediately after the meeting which saw the inception of the new society, representatives were present and offered their co-operation, from many local service societies: The King's Daughters, the Red Cross Society, the Central Home and School Association, the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, The Examiner Cheer Fund, the Catholic Women's League, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, the Canadian Legion, the Women's Friendly Bible Class of St. John's Church, the 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E., Trinity Church Social Service Club, the Employment Service of Canada, the Rotary Club, the King George Home and School Association, the Big Sisters, the Local Council of Women, the Home and School Council, the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E., the Trades and Labor Council, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Peterborough chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's United Church, and others.

$12,738 Contributed

A committee of Ways and Means was appointed whose special function was to devise methods of raising money, and it was decided to make an appeal to all those employed on full time to contribute one day's pay a month for two months, also to ask those whose income is derived from investments to give one days' income a month for two months.

The campaign which resulted was one of the most successful campaigns of its kind ever attempted, and upwards of $13,000 was pledged, of which amount $12,738.22 has to date been paid in cash. It can easily be said that this achievement has probably never been duplicated heretofore in any part of the province. In this connection also, special mention is made of the kindness of the Canadian General Electric Company in giving gratis the services of N. E. Crowe, whose valuable organization work was no small factor in the success which attended the efforts of the committee in bringing this campaign to a successful issue.

Relief Bureaus

The bureau for distribution of food and other supplies and used clothing was in charge of Mrs. W. R. Morris, head of the Women's Section. Through the kindness of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, rooms over the offices at 435 George street were provided, comfortably heated for the workers, and these were open daily from two to five o'clock in the afternoons, with an extra hour on Saturday mornings, from the last week in January until the last week in April. Within the past few weeks, it has been open for two or three days and is now closed for the season, as demands have diminished to a great extent.

The fitting up and preparing of the bureau was made possible through the kind assistance of A. B. Cunningham and J. Elliott, who did the carpentry work, the Peterborough Lumber Company, who supplied the lumber, and Parker's and Lansfield's cleaning establishments, who donated the hangers for clothes.

A corps of energetic women workers, in the clothing bureau, the records office, the sewing rooms and outside in the investigating work, gave their time generously and without any recompense, during the long winter months.

It was only through the generous and untiring co-operation of citizens that the bureau was made possible, as they donated more of the stock of clothing, shoes and furniture that was necessary to carry on with and meet the demands that were constantly made. Special gifts from time to time of milk and bread and vegetables were made, and the Red Cross Society also donated through its local branch, a quantity of new socks and new khaki pants. Sewing machines for use in making new garments were loaned from several homes.

The Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs assisted materially in various ways and the co-operation of several physicians, dentists and lawyers was enlisted in relieving suffering and helping in other matters that came up for consideration, from time to time.

A much-appreciated gift was that of C. J. Glaspel of the Wander Company, who gave several dozen two-pound tins of cod liver oil and malt extract which helped greatly in building up the strength of under-nourished children.

Many people were helped to obtain medical, dental, hospital and nursing services and medicine and extra nourishment was supplied where needed.

The main object of the association was ever kept in mind; to assist those who were facing an emergency condition. If the emergency appeared after two or three weeks to be of a permanent nature, these people were referred to the City Relief Board, which is the correct body to take care of such cases. The City Relief Officer has co-operated most cordially with the association, and before any request for food or fuel was dealt with at the Relief Bureau, the records of the City Relief Office were consulted.

The system of investigation was very thorough and records were carefully kept. The larger service associations co-operated in this way and thus overlapping was greatly curtailed.

Small committees were appointed for the purpose of investigating in the various sections of the city and their work was carefully done. Follow-up visits were made where it was found desirable or necessary.

In giving out orders for food or milk, the smaller dealers were regarded as well as the larger places. The orders were distributed all over the city, the method being to give orders on the stores where the needy had been getting their food and therefore, possibly, running up accounts. This was felt to be a fair and equtable method, even though it entailed a great deal of book-keeping on the part of those paying the bills.

Many Needs Filled

At the Bureau, during the time of its operation, three hundred registration cards were filled out. More than 2,000 pieces of used clothing, boots, shoes and overshoes, were given out and repair work on shoes was also done, and kndly donated.

There were dispensed food, fuel, medicine, new underwear, working pants and shirts, sweaters, overalls, socks, working mitts, new boots and rubbers for men, women and children; also a large quantity of warm bedding, beds, cots, mattresses, stoves, sewing machines, chairs, tables and other household accessories. These were obtained through requests made in The Examiner and sent to those in need. Every article asked for through the paper was received, without any exception.

Thirty-five expectant mothers were registered and layettes were supplied or arranged for. These were made by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion and by a group of young ladies working under Mrs. W. R. L. Blackwell, also by several individuals. The Public Health nurse and several societies heartily co-operated in the care and visiting of these cases.

In the list of three hundred people assisted, about fifty were included from North Monaghan and assistance of different types, in food, clothing, fuel and boots, was given to them also. It was decided by the association that, apart from the humanitarian aspect of such assistance, that it was only right to assist in the township, as a number of the men who contributed to the fund for the needy resided in North Monaghan and worked in the factories of the city, and also bought their supplies in city stores. Therefore, the society felt compelled to recognize the needs of North Monaghan citizens, especially when so many of the township's streets are directly adjacent to the city.

The North Monaghan Ratepayers' Association was formed, and decided to identify itself with the Peterborough Relief Association. From time to time during the winter, it made several contributions to the funds.

A hostel opened on Hunter street proved a great boon, not only to transients without means of obtaining lodging elsewhere, but also as a temporary lodging house for local single men out of work.

This hostel was made possible through the generous kindness of Joseph Bell, who provided a store and adjacent rooms on Hunter street for the purpose. Through the co-operation of the Provincial Red Cross Society, military stores were supplied, in the way of a number of palliases and bolsters and a quantity of bedding, while the local branch of the Red Cross Society showed great co-operative interest by providing tables and chairs and laundry facilities which were among the most appreciated of the furnishings, being used by most of the men who found harbor there.

The committee in charge is also greatly indebted to Mark Burnham, who provided straw for the palliases; to Fanning's Laundry who gave gratis the laundering of bedding material, to the amount of $30.95, and to the McDonald Lumber Company, who provided lumber for platforms for the beds.

During the time the hostel was in operation, upwards of 200 men were provided with sleeping accommodation and upwards of 800 meal tickets were issued.

Before the hostel was opened, it was discovered on enquiry, that M. Costello of the American Hotel had served about 150 meals gratis to men who came to his place asking for a meal.

In connection with the hostel, the committee wishes to express its appreciation of the advice and co-operation afforded by the Chief of Police and his staff. Meal tickets and tickets for lodging at the hostel were deposited with the police. This gave the officers an opportunity of registering the men and also of sizing up the applicants, so that they were able to keep the undesirables at the Police Station and thus ensure protection of the citizens.

One of the minor activities of the organization was the procuring of positions and work for men and women both and quite a lot of good was accomplished in this way. In order to enable men to saw wood, for city relief, hardware dealers contributed saws which were loaned out.

In the administration work of the association, a financial committee was appointed to meet every Monday morning in order to pass accounts, thus ensuring prompt payment to the various dealers from whom supplies were purchased. A small committee of the organization also met with the Central Charity Board at the regular meetings of that body and various conferences were held on matters affecting the relief work of the city.

The books of the association were audited monthly by W. L. Ferguson and F. Hills, and a copy of the audited statement is on file at the Chamber of Commerce and may be seen at any time by any interested citizens.

A reasonable balance of money has been carried over and it is hoped it will be sufficient for the needs of the coming Fall and early Winter months.

In the work of the campaign, the Chamber of Commerce kindly donated use of its rooms and also paid for the telephone in use at that time.

THE SON OF TARZAN No. 69 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The son of Tarban compuirdacay-

Many miles to the west, as Meriem struggled in the arms of the Swede, Morison Baynes paced back and forth before his tent. He kept urging—his boy to heap more brushwood upon the fire. It had suited his purpose to send Hanson instead of going himself to meet Meriem, but as the hours passed and they did not come, his conscience troubled him. After a sleepless night Baynes realised he has been tricked!

Moreover he knew that he was deserted; left purposely with little food and one black in the savage jungle. As he pictured the probable fate of Meriem at the hands of the Swede his rage grew greater. Then as the thought sunk deeper that it was all his own fault he was filled with shame and loathing at himself. Could he still make amends? At least he could try. Several hours later he picked up the track of horses.

As Meriem fought with Malbihn, her hands pinioned to her sides by his brawny grip, hope died within her. She knew how useless it was to cry for help. As she was slowly being overcome, one hand came in contact with the butt of the Swede's revolver where it rested in the holster at his h ip . Quickly she drew it forth. Instinctively Malbihn's hands flew out to stop her, but Meriem leveled it at his heart and pulled the trigger.

The hammer fell futiley upon an empty sheil Malbihn was again clutching her. For a moment she eluded him, but at the very entrance of the tent he caught her. Wheeling upon him with the fury of a wounded lionness. Meriem grasped the long revolver by the barrel, swung it high above her head and crashed it down full in Malbihn's face. With an oath of pain and rage the man staggered backward, released his hold and sank unconscious to the ground.

100,000 Brown Trout Placed In Eagle Lake

Eagle Lake will soon be another "fisherman's paradise" because yesterday 100,000 brown trout were placed in its waters by the Government representative, aided by Arthur Head and Percy Blade. The fish were contained in 30 cylindrical cans four feet high and a foot and a half in diameter. Each can was filled mare than half full with water and ice, and so the whole load weighed a little over three tons. The transmigration of the fish was accomplished without losing one of the total number. They were given a change of ice at Burleigh Falls en route to Eagle Lake.

The restocking of this lake is entirely a Government undertaking Another lot of fish were placed in the lake last spring, and investigations show that they are thriving. It is expected that this year's addition will spawn this fall.

Only two more years after this are left for Eagle Lake to remain a reserve. After that time the lake will be open to fishing, and the enthusiast will certainly be able to put in a good day's fishing then.

GENERAL'S BODY FOUND IN RUINS

Woman Whom Two Victims Rushed to Save is Rescued Alive But Badly Hurt.

CRAWLED IN STONE CAVE.

TOURS, France, May 20. —(AP)—Police and volunteers directed by army engineers today recovered the body of General Robert H. Dunlap, United States Military Corp, from the ruins of a barn adjoining the Chateau of Cinqmars, where he was buried under a landslide yesterday.

They also brought out the body of Fenis Briant, a farmer on the estate and rescued Mme. Briant, alive but badly injured.

Her leg was amputated by a surgeon who had remained at the place all night in the hope that the three might still be living when the debris was cleared away. She was taken to a hospital in critical condition.

The woman had taken refuge in a stone cave over which the barn was built. There was air there and when the rescuers heard her cries early this morning they managed to run down a tube through which they fed her some milk.

It appeared that the General and Briant had been crushed to death as they rushed into the barn to save the woman when the landslide came. A huge rock wedged between two walls probably saved her life, but another wall fell in upon her, crushing her leg.

ROYAL SOCIETY MEMBERS MEET

Session in Toronto Includes Over 200 Specialists From Over Dominion.

RECEIVE REPORTS.

TORONTO Ont., May 20. (CP)—Two hundred statesmen of science and men of letters assembled at the University of Toronto to-day for the 50th annual meeting of the Royal Society of Canada. The fellows of this body all of who have distinguished records in their chosen fields, constitute the National Congress of Research and Literature.

Five sections of the society are meeting separately to hear nearly 300 reports and papers which cover the most important work accomplished in science and literature during the past year. At a meeting to-night, Dr. Charles Cansell, Deputy Minister of Mines for the Dominion, will deliver his presidential address on "Canada's position in the mineral situation of the British Empire."

To-day the society got down to the business of receiving reports, with interest centering in the study of mathematics. Led by Dr. J. C. Fields, research professor of mathematics at the University of Toronto, several Canadians have recently made important contributions to mathematical theory.

Coming from universities and government departments, fellows of the society represent every part of the Dominion. Among the distant visitors are Dr. J. S. Plaskett, Director of the Dominion Observatory at Victoria, B.C., and Prof. R. L. Jeffery of Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S.

Milk Price Reduced Two Cents By Dairies

BELLEVILLE, May 20. — Belleville dairymen announced to-day that commencing to-morrow morning, the price of milk will be reduced in the city from ten to eight cents a quart. This move was made in view of the prevailing low prices of dairy products. Practically every milk dealer in the city has adopted the new schedule of prices. "We are giving a lower price to the farmer for the milk, and the consumer is now going to get the benefit of it," one prominent local dairyman told the Ontario Intelligencer to-day. Butter, cheese, and other dairy products have sagged in price, and milk must ultimately follow, the reported was told.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES ARE HELD IN ST. PETER'S SCHOOL

PRIZES AWARDED.

The annual Commencement Exercises of St. Peter's High School were held on Tuesday afternoon, May 19, in the Knights of Columbus Hall with John Corckery, as chairman. His Excellency, Right Reverend Bishop O'Connor, the clergy of the city and surrounding parishes, the members of the School Board, representatives of the Knights of Columbus, and many friends were present to congratulate the graduates and the prize winners, and to enjoy the splendid musical entertainment provided by the High School pupils. Each number of the short, well-chosen program received highest commendation from those present, and revealed a high degree of talent in those taking part. The following items comprised the program:

Vivat Pastor Bonus, Chorus, Happy Days; Orchestra, Echoes from Naples; Violin solo, Joseph Nolan; Two-part song, Senior girls; Orchestra, The Alumni; Valedictory, Miss Mary Buchanan, Distribution of prizes; School song, God save the King.

The principal event of the afternoon was the distribution of prizes for the highest Academic standing in the Departmental examinations of June 1930 This list included also prizes given by His Excellency, Bishop O'Connor for the highest standing in Christian Doctrine for the year 1931.

His Excellency, Bishop O'Connor extended his congratulations not only to the prize-winners whom he designated as the capital letters on the page, but also to all those who had done a good year's work. "Much of the success," he said, "was due to the teachers". Whether viewed from an Academic standpoint or otherwise, St. Peter's School is unsurpassed by any of its kind in Ontario.

An outstanding feature of the program was the valedictory read by Miss Mary Buchanan, which contained a short retrospect of happy days at St. Peter's and a loving tribute to those who had contributed to their happiness.

The students were honored by the presence of His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, Reverend Fathers Costello, Corkery, Finn and Masterson, of the Cathedral Parish; Very Reverend Dean O'Sullivan and Reverend C. Carroll of Immaculate Conception Parish; Reverend Fathers O'Brien and Maloney, of Sacred Heart Parish; Reverend J. V. McAuley, Ennismore; Reverend M. J. McGuire, Douro; John Corkery, J. E. Sullivan, Jas. Murty, F. Fairen, representing the School Board; D. A. Costello, District Deputy Knight of Columbus, Dr. E. M. Crough, Grand Knight, Dr. F. P. McNulty, V. J. McElderry, K.C. These speakers of the afternoon congratulated the prize-winners, expressed their appreciation of the program and from their larger experience gave advice to those who were yet on the threshold of life, expecting much and fearing nothing.

The singing of the School Song and the National Anthem brought the pleasing event to a close.

The following is the prize-list:

Prize List.

Desborough Tells How He Met Prince

LONDON, May 20.—(By Thos. T. Champion, C. P. Staff Correspondent)—Lord Desborough, who swam twice across the Niagara River in the course of an epic athletic career in his younger days, revealed at the artists' benevolent dinner last night how he first met the Prince of Wales.

"The prince and other juvenile members of the Royal family were hurling balls from the gallery of a covered tennis court which I have at home at their august parent below," Lord Desborough said, "and I am not sure their august parent had not started the interchange of missles."

Electrical Appliances Displayed In Window

In the south window of The Examiner office is a very attractive display of electrical appliances, shown by Grant and Thorpe. It demonstrates quite admirably just how nicely such machines can be arranged. In their shining nickel finishes, against a background of red white and blue they tempt the eye of the housewife, passing by. A gay scarlet brownie directs attention to the exhibit.

There is a sample of many of the household conveniences which make work easy for the domestic employee or the lady of the house. An electric stove is prominent, in a spotless finish of pale grey and white; there are electric toasters, waffle irons, percolators, irons, curling tongs and electric clocks.

Grant and Thorpe handle all the electric products of the Canadian General Electric Company, with the exception of the electric refrigerator.

BOWLING NOTES.

The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club has arranged with the S. F. Bowser Co., Ltd., of Toronto, to install, through the Miller-Powell Co., of Peterborough, four new poles on the bowling lawns, with four flood lights having 2,000 watt power each. There will be two lights of 1,000 watts on each pole directed in different direction so that this extra light will reach all parts of the greens. Last year the lawns, while well lighted, as compared with some greens, nevertheless left something to be desired inasmuch as at times the shadows of the players interfered with the clear vision so necessary for accurate bowling. The installation of these extra lights should make the Peterborough lawns as well lighted as any bowling lawns in Canada. The directors were able to secure this improvement without extra cost to the club as their contract with the S. F. Bowser Co., who installed the lighting system last year, required that the service supplied be satisfactory to the Club.

If there are any members of the Club who do not know what things they should and should not do in bowling, they will be able to learn them by reading "50 Don'ts" which have been attractively printed and are to be hung in the Club House. This is the gift of George Cairns.

In case any members of the Club are looking for a special invitation through the mails to attend the Club tournament next Monday, it might be stated that the directors have decided that the columns of The Examiner are so widely read, it should not be necessary to send out a notice through the mail. Thus all members are expected toaccept the notices in The Examiner as their invitation to be on hand next Monday afternoon and evening.

It was decided last evening that the prizes next Monday would be awarded as follows: Should any teams win all four games then the prize will be awarded on the basis of those having the highest wins. Should no team have four wins then the prize will go to the team with three highest wins. Three prizes will be awarded on this basis. A fourth prize will be awarded to the team which has not won a prize which has the largest single score.

Mrs. Hughes Reads Conference Report

Interesting reports of the annual conference of the Woman's Auxiliary held in Toronto last week were given by Mrs. Hughes, Deanery officer, at the regular meeting of St. Mark's Otonabee W.A. held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. Dixon. Mrs. T. Graystock presided over a good attendance of members and Rev. J. L. Hughes conducted the Litany and opening prayers.

After the usual business, the members decided to have a sale of cooking, flowers, plant slips, etc., on the market on Saturday morning next. At the close of the meeting a dainty tea was served by the hostess.

FATALITY OCCURS IN EARLY HOURS OUTSIDE CLUB

Crashing Blow in Eye Knocks Captain H. Ransome to Sidewalk.

NATIVE OF KING CITY.

Police Arrest Two Ship's Masters and Two Mates—Seek Professional Boxer.

MONTREAL, Que., May 21. —A punch in the eye during an early morning street fight today brought death to Captain H. Ransome, 44, of the S. S. Aycliff Hall, a lake boat carrying grain from Port Colborne, Ontario to Montreal. Captain Ransome whose home is in King, Ontario, died of a cerebral haemorrhage a few minutes after he was knocked down. Detectives hold the masters of two other lake vessels and two ships' mates as material witnesses for the inquest tomorrow, though they believe another man, a professional boxer, was the man who struck Captain Ransome.

The Aycliff Hall, owned by the Hall Corporation Line, has been in port since Sunday night discharging grain. With two ships' masters and two mates, Captain Ransome went ashore last night for the evening. At four o'clock this morning a street fight took place outside an uptown club.

Struck In Eye

A crashing blow in the eye knocked Captain Ransome to the sidewalk. His friends picked him up and found his eye badly blackened by the blow. Thinking him just knocked out, they took him to his ship in a taxicab and then called a doctor when Ransome failed to come around.

Dr. A. Masson pronounced Captain Ransome dead and the homicide squad of the city police removed the body to the morgue and took the four lake sailors to headquarters for questioning.

An autopsy performed later this morning by Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medico-legal autopist, revealed that the punch in the eye had caused an extensive hemorrhage within Captain Ransome's brain, bringing almost instant death.

Born In King City.

KING, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—Captain William H. Ransome, killed during a fight in Montreal to-day, was born in King, and always made his winter home here. For 20 years he had been attached to the Hull Corporation of the Great Lakes Steamship Line, leaving here each year in April and returning home in November.

He was well-known in local circles, being a member of several local clubs and King City Masonic Order. He was a member of Eversely Presbyterian Church.

Captain Ransome is survived by his widow and one daughter, Iona, aged 18. A son, Rene, was drowned near here seven years ago.

FOUR BADLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Driver Loses Control and Machine Somersaults Down Hill Near Bonfield.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

NORTH BAY, Ont., May 21. (CP) Suffering from injuries sustained when their car became unmanageable when descending a steep hill in the town of Bonfield, 22 miles east of North Bay, last night four young Scotsmen, formerly of Montreal, are being treated in the Red Cross Hospital at Bonfield for painful and serious injuries. They are, John Hamilton, 19, Harry Cathcart 21, Charles Roder 25, and George Cuason 26.

The party was travelling from Montreal to Northern Ontario in search of work. Approaching Bonfield from the east they did not observe that they were coming to a hill and the result was that they hit the sharp incline at a good rate of speed. The car broke from control and after leaving the road somersaulted a few times before resting on its side a complete wreck.

The occupants were severely injured but all are expected to recover.

Three Men To Stand Manslaughter Trial

HAMILTON, Ont., May 21 (C. P.). — Chief Clark of Wentworth County left to-day for Crowland, Ont., where he has been informed that J. Plumbtree, wanted in connection with the death of John Riley of Toronto, is being detained on a charge of manslaughter.

Arrested on charges arising out of the death of Riley, there are now three men in the toils—J. Plumbtree at Crowland, Dan Connelly in this city, and Percy Eddiott at Cayuga. They will all be brought to face trial in County Criminal Court.

Airplane Crash

New York Millionaire Reported Killed in North of County.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED.

Did an airplane carrying Albert Keslick Darling, Long Island multi-millionaire, crash somewhere in the woods of Peterborough County today?

Inquiries from Philadelphia, New York, Ottawa and Toronto to The Examiner office this afternoon stated that Darling was believed to have been flying to his summer residence in the lake district when he crashed to his death.

Long distance phone calls to Chief Ranger Crosby, of the Forestry Branch at Tweed, and throughout the district had failed late this afternoon to gain any information of Darling's plane or its possible fate.

As far as The Examiner could learn, Darling's plane has not been sighted since it nosed its way from the American shore. The fate of its wealthy passenger remains a mystery, although urgent calls from Philadelphia maintained that he died in a crash in the Peterborough woods.

Darling was said to travel incognito and had assumed the name of McNabb. Despatches referred to him as "Albert Keslick Darling McNabb."

Greece exported nearly 130 tons of cocoons last year.

Archbishop of Canterbury Sits as Judge, Presenting Unique Spectacle in Court

LONDON, May 21 (C.P.). — A unique spectacle was seen to-day in King's Beuch Law Court when the Archbishop of Canterbury attended the bench to sit as a judge in an ecclesiastical case.

It was the first time the present Archbishop had presided over such a trial under a law of 1926 which provides for his appearance on the bench alongside a Judge of the Supreme Court nominated by the Lord Chancellor.

The case was an appeal by the Rev. S. A. Norris Huxley, rector of a parish in Norfolk County, from an inhibition pronounced against him by the Bishop of Norwich for alleged neglect of duty and use of bad language.

Many prominent churchmen attended the proceedings. Justice Talbot sat with the Archbishop of Canterbury on the case.

NORMAL STUDENT STRUCK BY BALL

Joseph Jenkins is in a Serious Condition in Nicholls Hospital.

CONCUSSION OF BRAIN.

Joseph Jenkins, eighteen-year-old Normal student, is in Nicholls Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain caused by a baseball hitting him on the head last night at Nicholls Oval.

The boy, whose home is in Little Britain, resides at 198 Barnardo Avenue. His father arrived at the hospital early this morning, just after Joseph had regained consciousness. He is attended by Dr. Loudon, who would not say how serious the accident was until another twenty-four hours had elapsed, but thought the patient was coming along satisfactorily.

The boy was playing with a Normal School baseball team at the Oval against the Lakeviews, and was batting when hit on the head by a hard-thrown ball. As it was getting dark at the time, he probably couldn't see it coming until too late. He was immediately rushed to Nicholls Hospital.

He came to Peterborough last September, and has been attending the Normal since then. His father was notified of the accident and arrived here this morning. He will remain until the boy is on the road to recovery.

WELL-KNOWN MARINER DIES.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., May 21 (C. P.). — Captain W. C. "Kert" Jordan, one of the best known Great Lakes sailors, died to-day at his home in Collingwood, from heart trouble. Deceased who was 64 years of age, was born in Collingwood, and lived here all his life.

He was in command of the steamer Agawa when she went ashore during a snowstorm off the south shore of Manitoulin Island in the fall of 1927, and was deprived of his papers, but they were restored to him several months ago.

KILLER FACES THREE CHARGES OF MURDER.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 21 (C.P.). —Three charges of murder were formally laid against John Streib, 45, in Police Court to-day, in connection with the murder of three children of Mrs. Lillian Walters here yesterday. Police stated the slayer ran amok through the house while the mother was away at work.

Blazing Gun Meets 2 Chicken Thieves

LONDON, Ont., May 21 (C.P.). —A blazing shotgun met two chicken thieves as they prowled around the farm of Henry G. Whiting, who lives just east of Crumlin, late last night. From subsequent developments, county police believe that one of the roost raiders was hit.

The shooting opens up the offensive planned by district farmers against chicken thieves, who have been extremely active in Middlesex of late. Within the past few weeks hundreds of dollars worth of poultry has been stolen and chicken breeders have armed themselves to combat the menace, avowing their intention of blazing away at the nocturnal prowlers on their farms in future.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21 (C.P.) —Strength of the rail shares dominated to-day's stock market, despite occasional selling flurries in miscellaneous issues. The market was irregular at the finish, although many prominent issues were higher. Issues gaining 2 to 6 points included New York Central, Pennsylvania, New Haven, Chesapeake and Ohio, Union Pacific, Southern, and Santa Fe. American Can and Eastman gained about 2, and U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and Woolworth sold up moderately. Allied Chemical, Vaiadium, and Worthington were soft spots. Bethlehem Steel rallied after a 2-point decline. Transfers were around 2,500,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—The rally that set in around midday on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day failed to hold until the close and prices slipped off from the high for the session. The close showed a large majority of declines.

Noranda, after recovering from $19.75 to over $20, sold back to $19.80 for a loss of $1.20. Sales of copper were reported in New York to-day at 8¾, the lowest on record. International Nickel was steady throughout and up a fraction on end.

Gold stocks lost a portion of the midday recovery and finished with losses of 10 to 50 cents. Wright-Hargreaves recovered from $2.85 to $2.74 for a net loss of 11. Vipond, Kirkland Lake and Sylvanite were down a few

MURDER OF TWO PROMINENT MEN COMES AS MAGAZINE WAS READY TO EXPOSE GAMBLING OVER CITY

Police Start One of Greatest Man Hunts Ever Staged, For Assailant.

BLAME GANGSTER REVENGE.

Shooting Follows Hour's Conference in Wealthy Victim's Office.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 21 (C.P.). — Assassination of Herbert Spencer, magazine editor and crusader against organized gambling, and his friend, Charles Crawford, wealthy politician, started police to-day on one of the greatest man-hunts ever undertaken in Los Angeles.

On the eve of a projected expose of gambling by Spencer's magazine, the editor was shot through the heart and the politician was mortally wounded late yesterday in the latter's office by an unidentified man whom Crawford had admitted. Officers said the circumstances indicated gangster revenge.

Death overtook Crawford before he could keep a promise to identify the killer, who escaped in an automobile. Apparently confident that he would live, Crawford told detectives before he underwent an emergency oepration that he would tell only "If I'm due to go." He died three hours after being wounded.

Threatened Before.

Early to-day detectives, spurred by a statement from Spencer's widow that "the overlord of gambling here had threatened to get Herb," searched haunts of gamblers and gangsters for a "swarthy man about 35 years old, of heavy build."

An hour before the tragedy Spencer, formerly city editor of the Los Angeles Evening Express, left his office, telling an associate that he was going out to get some more "underworld stuff" for the magazine, which had published a number of articles on alleged gang and vice activities here.

Ray J. Radke, secretary to Crawford, reported to police that shortly after Spencer entered Crawford's office a man appeared and asked to see Crawford.

Admits Visitor

Crawford greeted the visitor at the door of his private office and asked him to enter. Radke said the men talked about an hour. Suddenly two shots rang out. Radke heard a scream and a yell from Spencer: "Get that fellow." The door burst open and the gunman fled to the street. Radke rushed into the office and found Spencer dead. Crawford, sitting in his chair, arose and collapsed.

Governor-General To Visit Toronto

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.)—The Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, will arrive in Toronto tomorrow morning, on his first visit to the city since his appointment as Governor-General. His Excellency will be welcomed at the station by the Lieutenant-Governor; Premier George S. Henry, and many other prominent Torontonians.

A civic reception will take place at noon in front of the City Hall, following which, His Excellency will place a wreath on the cenotaph.

BILL TO LIMIT FIREARMS USE TO BE HELD UP

Will Seek Justice Department's Opinion Before Taking Action.

WANT LEGAL EFFECT.

Allow Officers to Use Arms Only in Taking Person Who Has Committed Felony.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21.—(CP)—The opinion of the Department of Justice will be secured before any action is taken on Senator George Lynch-Staunton's bill to limit the use of firearms by police officers. The opinion, it was decided today by a special committee, will be only as to the legal effect of the bill and not to its propriety.

The bill which would amend the Criminal Code, would have the effect of placing the onus upon police officers of determining when firearms might be used when a suspected law-breaker takes flight. It would have the effect of making it possible for an officer to use arms when attempting to apprehend a person who has committed a felony but not when arresting a man who is suspected of committing a misdeameanour Under the law as it stands, it was declared, a policeman may use a gun when any suspected law-breaker takes flight. This said Senator Lynch - Staunton, amounted to full powers of murder.

Have Power To Murder

During the committee discussion, Senator C. E. Tanner said something should be done to limit the powers of Federal preventive officers "who are more skilled in politics than in law enforcement." These men, he

THIRD READING GIVEN LAND BILL

Lord Banbury's Move For Rejection is Defeated by 62 to 6 Votes.

RETURNS TO COMMONS.

LONDON, May 21 (C.P. Cable)—The Labor Government's Land Utilization Bill came before the House of Lords this afternoon for third reading, and Lord Banbury, who had taken a leading part in drastically amending the bill on its previous appearance, moved for its rejection. The motion was defeated by 62 to 6 votes, and the bill read a third time.

It now returns to the House of Commons, which will consider the amendments effected by the Peers. These remove the teeth from the bill—the Labor Government's plan for providing large-scale farms and smaller demonstration farms in an effort to absorb some of the unemployed. Practically the only things left are the provisions for allotments and small holdings and these have been very much restricted.

Lord Banbury's motion this afternoon was opposed not only by Liberal spokesmen but by the Conservative Leader, Lord Hailsham, who argued the rejection of the bill would give the Government ground for charging that the Upper House had opposed the Governments' attempt to put unemployed men to work on the land.

ROSEDALE FOUNDER DIES

TORONTO, Ont., May 21. (CP)—Mrs. C. B. Harvis, widow of the late E. J. Harvis, founder of the community of Rosedale, died at the home of her daughter here to-day in her 90th year. Mrs. Jarvis was born in Canada in 1842, shortly after her parents had migrated from England.

IF YOU FALL IN LOVE IN SPAIN YOU ARE PROBABLY IN FOR DUEL

Spanish Women Are Almost Sacred and Guarded Behind Steel Doors.

AND THEY LIKE IT.

By GORDON A. SINCLAIR

SAN FERNANDO, Spain, April 15. —(Special to The Examiner. Copyright, 1931).—"Have a good time—but hands off our women." This in effect, is the advice of Spaniards to you and I and other outsiders who cross the frontier into this once powerful country. It holds good in any province except Galicia, the wildest and woolliest part of Spain.

The female of the species is here above the rabble, almost semi sacred. Every male of the family from the remotest great uncle to the youngest second cousin has the right and duty to preserve the maidenly charms of his women folk to enquire into the life habits and bank balance of anyone who pays them attention, and to defend their honor with the sword.

I can imagine how completely and thoroughly I'd get the gate if I dared interfere in the love affairs of my feminine cousins. They'd read the riot act all in capital letters complete with exclamation marks and asterisks. Not so beneath the yellow and gold banner of Spain. The harem may have pas-

WOULD-BE THIEF GREETED BY SHOT

Victim Caught By Police After Chase is Taken to Windsor Hospital.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 24 (C.P.)—Eugene Emery, 25, of East Windsor, is in Grace Hospital suffering from the effect of gunshot wound. Attendants report they have found traces of 21 pellets in his back, legs and arms.

The man was shot this morning when fleeing after an attempt had been made to rifle gasoline tanks at a station on No. 2 Highway, at the corner of Pillette Road. The shot was fired by Ed. Hurley, proprietor of the station, and Emery was later arrested by Provincial Constable Jack Rowecliffe, some distance from the scene of the shooting.

Emery is under police guard at the hospital and his condition is reported as being favorable.

SUGGESTION MADE CANADA DETACH CURRENCY FROM GOLD STANDARD

Economist Claims World's Supply So Cornered By U. S. as to be Unfit for Monetary Uses.

AT ROYAL SOCIETY.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.)—Declaring the world's available gold supply to have been so effectively "cornered" by the United States as to render it unsuitable for monetary purposes, B. K. Sandwell, economist of McGill University, in an address before the Royal Society to-day, suggested that Canada alone, or in cooperation with the rest of the Empire might detach her currency from the gold standard and substitute some other basis, possibly platinum.

"The difficulty of setting up a new metallic basis is admittedly great, but it is small compared with the difficulty of carrying on with metallic basis, the value of which is utterly distorted by the fact that the whole world supply of it is owned to a single nation," said Prof. Sandwell.

"In 50 years," he said, "at the rate other countries of the world are paying their debts, there will be accruing to the United States twice the present gold supply of the world, and production of gold will increase only sufficiently to provide for that amount. Nothing will be left for the debtors.

Effective "Corner."

"The United States is thus the possessor of a very definite and effective 'corner' in gold," Professor Sandwell said, and indicated that "the sooner any country, including even the United States, detaches the measuring rod of its debit and credit

Estimate Increase Russian Wheat Crop

LONDON, May 21 (By George Hambleton, C.P. Staff Correspondent).—Russia estimates her coming wheat crop at not less than 33,500,000 tons, an increase of 7,000,000 tons as compared with her crop of 29,500,000 tons last year.

Out of last year's crop consumption within Soviet Russia amounted to 23,400,000 tons, leaving a surplus of 6,100,000 tons, "towards the beginning of a new campaign," says the statement submitted by the Russian delegation to the wheat conference. The quantity of wheat exported from the last crop will probably reach 500,000 tons.

Toronto Manufacturer Passes Away Suddenly

OWEN SOUND, Ont. May 21 (CP) P. H. Temple, 52, Humewood Drive, Toronto, died suddenly at the Paul House, Meaford, where he had been a guest overnight. In company with one of the travellers of Robbonecraft, Limited, of which he was president, he motored to Meaford on Wednesday. He was in good health before breakfast, and was resting in the sitting room of the hotel when he collapsed and died before medical aid could be summoned. He is survived by his wife, four sons and two brothers. The remains will be taken to Toronto Friday morning.

MOTHER RETURNS FROM HER WORK TO FIND TRAGEDY

Son 18, Two Young Daughters Shot, Slashed With Razor.

LODGER BLAMED.

Slayer Found Unconscious of Self-Inflicted Wounds—Under Heavy Guard.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 21. —(CP)—The killing of three children by razor-blade and gun is laid today to the hands of John Streib, 45-year-old lodger in the same house as his alleged victims. Two daughters and a son of Mrs. Lillian Walters, 38, were murdered yesterday in their suburban Winnipeg home, and police state Streib, wounded by self-inflicted razor-cuts, has confessed to the killings.

George Walters, 18, and his sisters Doris, 12 and Irene, 9, are dead, and Streib is stated to have admitted that he shot all three with a revolver and then slashed the girls' throats with a razor because they had not cried. Mrs. Walters, who left her husband several years ago, found the children dead and Streib unconscious when she returned home from work last night

Several Disputes

Unemployed since last fall, Streib was to have left the Walters' home yesterday after several disputes regarding his status in the house. He had sought several times, according to Mrs. Walters, to become her husband, but she had refused. She had told him before she set out yesterday morning to her kitchen-work at a department store, that he must leave that day.

Friends had advised Mrs. Walters to force Streib to leave the house, but she had demurred because he was unemployed and because he was "kind to the kiddies." Tuesday, conditions became more difficult when young George was "laid off" by the iron-plant where he worked, but Mrs. Walters struggled on to keep the family with the pittance she earned at her work.

Finds Shambles

Tired from her day's duties, she returned home last night to find her home a shambles. The two girls lay shot dead and their throats cut. Mrs. Walters fled to the nearby residence of Rev. D. N. Buntain, her pastor, and returned with him to find her son dead in another room and Streib unconscious. The wounded man was rushed to hospital, where he is being guarded by police.

SENATOR REPLIES TO CANAL CHARGE

Hon. W. L. McDougald Denies Use of Political Influence in Beauharnois.

REPLIES TO GARDINER.

OTTAWA, May 21.—The Beauharnois question reached the Senate yesterday when Hon. W. L. McDougald made the following statement in reply to the assertions of Hon. Robert Gardiner in the Commons Tuesday.

"I think I should rise on a question of privilege. According to the newspapers yesterday morning my honor and integrity as a member of this House have been attacked in another place; and I desire to draw attention at once to a statement which I made in the Senate in April, 1928, regarding my position in the much-discussed Beauharnois Power Company newspaper articles reflecting on myself and other members of the National Advisory Board reporting on the St. Lawrence waterways, insinuating that our decisions and recommendations were influenced by personal interest in power development on the St. Lawrence.

"In this House I stated at the time that I had no interest in the Beauharnois Power and Light Company or in the syndicate. That was absolutely true and correct. I may say at once that I had been invited on many occasions to be a member of that syndicate up to that time, but had always declined. After that date I was asked again, and had the whole project investigated from every angle. When I was satisfied that it was a proper undertaking, a proper project for me as a member of this Senate, as a business man, and as a citizen of Canada to take a financial interest in, I agreed to do so. Some six months later, in October, 1928, I took

100,000 Out On Strike In Lille District

LILLE, France, May 21 (A.P.)—More than 100,000 textile workers, including 40,000 Belgians, were on strike to-day in this region over wage difficulties. Empty factories were guarded, but there was no violence.

Employers at Roubaix and Tourcoing, on the Franco-Belgian frontier, have asked the Minister of Labor to reopen the wage negotiations, inasmuch as Belgian workers were not represented in the former parleys which ended in a strike.

The Belgians, who normally cross the frontier daily for work, are not affected by French social insurance, which is deducted from wages and is one of the principal causes of the walkout.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—Charges of freight rate discrimination against the two extremeties of the country, the Maritimes and British Columbia, were heard yesterday in the House of Commons. # NOTED INVENTOR DIES OF BURNS

Body of Charles E. Vawter Being Sent to Blacksburg, Va., For Burial.

TRAPPED BY BLAST.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 21. —(CP)—The body of Charles E. Vawter, widely known inventor, who was fatally burned by an explosion in his laboratory here, was enroute to-day to Blacksburg, Va., seat of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, where for many years he taught physics.

Mr. Vawter, member of a family prominent in Virginia educational circles, died yesterday. His death followed by 24 hours the blast which occurred in his workshop at his home in the Germantown section.

The inventor was lubricating a motor while testing a new high tension ignition device designed for aeroplanes, when a spark ignited the oil, causing an explosion. The burning liquid fired his clothing.

Among the more than 200 radio and electrical devices he is credited with having invented or perfected were electric testing instruments, circuit-breakers and an attachment which made it possible to use the house wiring system as a radio antennae.

After his graduation from the University of Virginia, he entered the teaching profession. Ten years ago he retired from the faculty of Virginia Polytechnic Institute to devote his time to experimental work in electricity.

Besides his widow, four sisters and a brother, all of Virgina, survive. Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Blacksburg.

DELEGATES SEEK HAPPY MEDIUM

U. S. Proposal to Cut Wheat Acreage Clashes With Russian Leanings.

CANADA HANGS BACK.

LONDON, May 21 (C.P.).—Committees of the World Grain Conference to-day sought to reconcile divergent views as to the best method of absorbing the international wheat surplus.

The United States delegation's proposal to restrict acreage has clashed with Russian approval of the Danubian basis—the Polish scheme of export quotas—and neither side appears prepared to give ground.

Meanwhile, the United States, Russian and Danubian delegates having divulged their plans, Canada and Argentina are hanging back, pending developments, and are ready to throw their influence to the faction which appears to have the best chance of drafting an agreement.

A comparison of exporting nations' pre-war and post-war figures shows that Canada, Argentina, Australia, and the United States stand to lose considerable trade if, as the Russians proposed, the 1909-14 five-year average is taken as a basis from which quotas would be evolved.

The committees are struggling with a mass of statistics in an effort to square the circle of glutted grain markets and few buyers. The conference re-convenes to-morrow.

ORANGE ORDER ASKS B.N.A. ACT BE UNCHANGED

Claim Premier Henry and Price Had No Right to Attend Ottawa Parley.

OTTAWA TO GET PROTEST.

Retention of Privy Council Appeal Demanded—No Shipping Law Change.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.)—Alarmed by the recent conferences at Ottawa between the Dominion and Provincial Government representatives regarding the Colonial Laws Validity Act and the Act of Westminster, leaders of the Grand Orange Lodge in Ontario, both East and West, have formulated a resolution of protest.

It is being drafted as an emergency measure by Orange leaders, and will be dealt with and forwarded to Ottawa within the next three days, according to The Mail and Empire today.

The protest, addressed directly to Premier R. B. Bennett, requests no "tinkering" be done to the British North America Act; that the Shipping Act be left alone, and that any interference or abridgement of the right of appeal to the Privy Council be checked.

Sponsored by Nesbitt

According to the paper the whole issue was the subject of an address here last night by Russell Nesbitt, K.C., M.L.A., before the Prince Albert Lodge. He reviewed the circumstances which prompted the launching of the protest. He stated the position taken by the Orange leaders entails a strong criticism of Hon. George S. Henry, Premier of Ontario, and Attorney-General W. H. Price, for attending the Ottawa conference and for agreeing to attend a later constitutional conference "to determine the conditions upon which the Provinces of the B.N.A. Act may hereafter be amended or modified.

It is contended, Mr. Nesbitt said, that Premier Henry and Mr. Price had no authority to attend any such conference; that the matter had not been discussed by the Ontario Legislature, and that without authority of a resolution from the Legislature, their participation in the conference was unwarranted.

Five Points

The position taken by the Orange Order is outlined in five cardinal points, as follow:—

1—There must be no tinkering whatever with the British North America Act.

2—The Prime Minister and the Attorney-General of Ontario had no right to attend the Ottawa Conference, nor to commit Ontario to anything at that conference, nor to agree to attend a future conference to "tinker" with the British North Americ Act without full discussion in the Ontario Legislature and the authority of the House.

3—That the appeal to the Privy Council must not be abrogated or abridged.

4—That there must be no interference with the shipping laws.

5—That the Orange Order is Imperialist to the core, believing in one king, one flag, one navy, one empire, the preservation of the rights of minorities, and the safeguarding of the right of the subject to appeal to the foot of the throne.

NEW OUTBREAK STARTS IN CUBA

Citizens in Several Provinces Reported Clashing With Troops.

POLICE DISARMED.

HAVANA, May 21 (C.P.).—Reports from Oriente Province early to-day said that a revolutionary uprising had broken out in Manzanillo and Guani and that citizenry had engaged in open warfare with troops. First reports were received by the Spanish language newspaper El Pais and later the Government organ Heraldo de Cuba admitted hearing of trouble.

No official report was available on the severity of the fighting, but El Pais was informed that there were a number killed and wounded.

Unofficial Government sources said that there had been a minor outbreak but that troops stationed at the points in question had quickly restored order.

Reports reaching Santiago said military authorities at Puerto Padre had disarmed police there, having been informed that the latter were prepared to join citizens in a revolutionary movement.

Gang Leader Stabbed In Mysterious Fight

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21 (C.P.). — Charles "Vannie" Higgins, described by police as a gang leader and beer baron, was taken to hospital to-day suffering from three stab wounds in the chest. The case was a mystery to police.

Higgins, detectives believed, was stabbed during the morning while in Flushing, Queen's. Two men and a woman in a New Jersey automobile brought the wounded man to the hospital and left him there. Several minutes later detectives were notified by hospital authorities that Higgins was a patient.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney once described Higgins as a Broadway racketeer and friend of Legs Diamond. Diamond and Rothstein were both taken to the same hospital when gangland bullets assailed them.

Bridge Collapses; Weight of Truck

CORNWALL, Ont., May 21. —(CP) — Unable to stand the weight of a heavy transport truck, a wooden bridge over the Beaudette River, 25 miles east of here collapsed yesterday, throwing the truck and trailer 15 feet into the shallow water. The driver Remi Theoret, was uninjured.

Montreal-Cornwall traffic is being detoured at the point until temporary repairs are made.

NAME HENDERSON TO HEAD PARLEY

British Gov't Approves Selection as Chairman of 1932 Disarmament Meet.

CURTIUS PLEASED.

GENEVA, May 21 (A.P.) — Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, announced at the opening of to-day's session of the League of Nations Council that the British Government had approved his selection as chairman of the 1932 Disarmament Conference.

He read a message from Premier Ramsay MacDonald expressing great pleasure at this honor to the British delegate.

Chairman Julius Curtius, German Foreign Minister, voiced the satisfaction of the council at the announcement, saying it would have been impossible to have found a better chairman and that the choice of Mr. Henderson was a fine omen for the success of the conference.

NELSON SCRIVER HOME DAMAGED

Hastings Has First Fire in Some Months on Wednesday Evening.

ORIGIN UNKNOWN.

HASTINGS, May 21. (Examiner Correspondent).— Hastings suffered their first fire in some months on Wednesday evening when the residence of Nelson Scriver on Front street, was partially gutted and thoroughly water soaked. The origin of the fire is unknown. Smoke was first noticed coming out of the roof. The house located where it is at the lower end of Front street near the plant of the Hastings Tanning Company could be reached by hose from a hydrant near the tannery power house In this way volunteer workers were able to keep the fire under control and confined mostly to the roof. The fire brigade made a good run with the derrick from Wellman's garage, bringing the engine to the water front. Mr. Scriver's loss will be quite heavy as very little household effects were removed and everything was water soaked.

PRESS DEMANDS CURTIUS RESIGN

Would Have Germany Quit League Nations Over Customs Union Action.

OFFICIAL CIRCLES DIFFER.

BERLIN, May 21 (A.P.)—The industrial organ Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung editorilly demands that Foreign Minister Julius Curtius resign and that Germany withdraw from the League of Nations, because of the treatment accorded the Austro-German Customs Treaty at Geneva.

Claiming that Herr Curtius suffered a severe defeat in this vital question, the paper says:

"We have no reason to fear or to protest the submission of the treaty to the Hague Court. But it is a despotic presumption and a serious blow against German prestige for the League of Nations Council to reserve for itself the final decision after the World Court has acted and to order suspension of the Customs Union negotiations not only after the court's decision but until the council gets around to passing its own verdict."

Official circles immediately issued a disclaimer, saying that not the action at Geneva but the newspaper's statement had injured the Foreign Ministers' authority.

Bishop To Resign Diocese Of Nassau

MIAMI, Fla., May 21 (C.P.). — A special despatch to the Miami Herald from Nassau, Bahamas, says Bishop Roscow Sheddan will resign as head of the Nassau Diocese of the Church of England and return to England. The despatch says the Bishop has made reservations to sail from Nassau via New York on June 7. No reason for his resignation was given.

Bishop Sheddan, his sister Evelyn, and members of the crew of the Diocesan yacht Livonia returned to Nassau on Tuesday after they were rescued from a distant Bahama island following the sinking of the craft in heavy weather.

Captain Joseph Taylor of the Livonia was drowned when he attempted to recover some of the Bishop's belongings from the wreckage.

Bishop Sheddan is a native of Cowes, Isle of Wight.

SUNDAY GOLF BARRED

WINNIPEG, Man., May 21. —Winnipeg will not play miniature golf on Sundays this summer, it has been decided. What threatened to be a council chamber battle ended when course owners informed the city they had decided against operating on the seventh day in view of many protests launched with the council.

SAILS FOR HOME

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, May 21. —(AP) — Captain Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish flyer, who participated in the removal of Augustine Courtauld from the Greenland ice cap, sailed last night for Copenhagen on his way back to Sweden. He is due Monday.

MEDAL PRESENTED.

COBOURG, May 21.—At a meeting and banquet of the Northumberland Regiment, at Colborne, Colonel R. E. Birdsall, Honorary Colonel of the regiment presented Major J. M. Bygott of Campbellford a colonial long-service medal.

TREMORS FELT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21—Earth tremors were recorded by the Fordham University seismograph at 6.05 and 6.14 p.m. yesterday (E.S.T.). Officials said the shocks were about 4,700 miles away, probably off the coast of Chile, and were of the intensity of the recent quake at Managua, Nicaragua.

an interest in the Beauharnois syndicate. I want to assure this House and the country that I was not considering politics or party in any way in becoming a member of that syndicate, and was influenced solely by my business judgment.

Received New Stock.

"Now, when that syndicate was dissolved, I, along with other members of the syndicate, received shares of common stock in the new company and a proportion of the money. I may add that I put dollar for dollar in the syndicate with every other member of it, and when the syndicate was dissolved I received my portion of the common stock and my portion of the money distributed, the same as every other member of that syndicate.

"Now, I have no apology to make for accepting the chairmanship of that company, or on behalf of that company. I state at once that the men who had the vision and the courage to undertake the building of that great power canal, with all its potential advantages, should be commended instead of being condemned."

Senator Casgrain—Hear, hear.

Senator McDougald—At the present moment the Beauharnois Power Company are employing 3,000 men on the site of work; they are employing 3,000 men in factories manufacturing parts. That is 6 000 men, and that figure, when multiplied by five, which is the average number dependent on the workingman, makes the Beauharnois Power Company at the present time the employers of 30,000 people of this country, who are getting their daily bread from the activities of the Beauharnois Company.

"I need hardly draw attention of honorable members of this Senate to the fact that a project of that size and magnitude is bound to be criticized in certain circles, but I am sure I can say to you that before the $30,000,000 of debentures were issued, before they were brought from the Beauharnois Power Co. by bankers who undertook to underwrite these debentures, they had every phase of the company investigated by the best legal brains in Canada. I need only mention a few of the legal lights who passed on the legality of that undertaking to allow honorable gentlemen to know that the project had the most careful consideration from the legal points and from the standpoint of finance.

OBITUARY

MRS. MILES McGOVERN.

COBOURG, May 21. — One of the oldest residents of Hamilton Township, Mrs. McGovern, widow of Miles McGovern, was buried yesterday. Had she lived two years longer she would have reached the century mark. Mrs. McGovern before her marriage was Mary Kewin. The service was held to St. Michael's Church and Cemetery here.

ROBERT CRAIG.

TORONTO, May 21. — Following a two months' illness, the death occurred at the residence of his daughter, 118 Vaughan Road, of Robert Craig of Fergus. In his eighty-fifth year, Mr. Craig was born near Belfast, Ireland, coming to Peterborough with his parents when a small boy. He was first employed in the printing department of the Peterborough Review, and later was with the Cobourg Sun. For 60 years Mr. Craig resided in Fergus. For some years, together with his brother, John Craig, he edited the New Record, published in Fergus. Later Mr. Robert Craig entered the music and sewing machine business. Three years ago he retired from active business and came to Toronto to reside. He was a member of Fergus Presbyterian Church. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Edith Wood, of Vaughan Road, and Mrs. Mary McIntyre, also of Toronto, and one son Logan, editor of the Wingham Advance-Times. Seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren also survive. The funeral service will be held this evening at 7.30 o'clock from the parlors of McDougall & Brown 554 St. Clair Avenue. Interment will be in Fergus.

HAZEL SPRY.

CORDOVA MINES, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence). — The funeral of little Hazel Spry, daughter of Mr. R. Spry of Cordova Mines, was held on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from her father's home to the Free Methodist Church, where service was held by Rev. N. Bosko. The little girl, who was in her eighth year, had been ill for about five weeks. Four of her schoolmates of School Section No. 12 acted as pallbearers. Grace Steenburg, Laura McGregor, Olive Barrons, and Theda Barrons. A beautiful floral wreath from her schoolmates and teacher, Miss Anderson, spoke eloquently of the affection of her classmates for their departed comrade. The remains were interred in the family plot at Rockdale. The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved family.

WILLIAM MOON

PORT HOPE, May 21—William Moon, resident of this district, died at the family residence Tuesday. He had been confined to bed for six weeks. He was born in Rossmount, north of here, sixty-six years ago, and after farming in that district all his left, moved to Port Hope fifteen years ago. He was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and belonged to Hope Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 114. He is survived by his widow, whose maiden name was Rachael J. Jamieson; two daughters, Mrs. George Hollinsworth, Toronto; Mrs. Robert Warrington, Hamilton, and two brothers, Arthur of Dale and Walter of Rossmount. The funeral was held to-day under Masonic direction.

FREIGHT RATES

petitions against the domestic rates. This amounted to a want-of-confidence motion against the Government and Premier R. B. Bennett made it clear he could not accept it. It was the intention of the administration, he said, to hear the petitions as early as possible.

Reviews History.

In reviewing the history of the last appeal to the Privy Council against the rates fixed by the Board of Railway Commissioners, the Prime Minister said it had not been decided before the King Government left office. His own Government, although cognizant of the situation had not had time in which to deal with it.

The debate was not concluded yesterday, and will continue when the House opens this afternoon.

Possibilities of general elections in New Zealand and Australia this summer might cause some delay in the holding of the Imperial Economic Conference in Ottawa, Premier Bennett announced early in the day. It previously had been scheduled for August and the Government now was negotiating with the other Empire countries to determine their wishes in the matter. He promised the House a full statement when the Government received any definite information.

The propriety of certain types of questions appearing in the records of the House came up for discussion before the orders of the day were called. It was precipitated by Dr. J. F. Lefleche, (Cons., Richmond-Wolfe), enquiring as to the educational and financial qualifications of Senator Edward Tobin.

This question, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King declared, was an "offensive reflection" and highly improper. Some questions arose more from a "personal vendetta" than from a desire to serve public interests. Premier Bennett agreed with some of the remarks made by the Opposition leader and then referred to some of the difficulties encountered by House officials in composing the records. Mr. Speaker Black said Dr. Lefleche's question would be expurged from future records of the House.

Sir Allen Aylesworth, in the Senate, said he "deeply resented" the same question because it reflected upon a member of that chamber.

Occupy Floor Most of Day.

British Columbia members occupied the floor most of the day on the Reid amendment. Figures were presented to show Canadian grain could be shipped from Manitoba either to Shanghai, China, or Liverpool, Eng., cheaper than to Vancouver or New Brunswick for domestic use. There should be no difference between the export and domestic rates, it was argued.

Hon. Peter Veniot, former postmaster-general, presented the case for the Maritimes. The domestic rates should be reduced, he contended. If it were placed at a proper level, New Brunswick would have two large flour mills.

Hon. Ian Mackenzie Lib.-Vancouver Centre); A. W. Neill (Ind., Comox-Alberni); W. G. Weir (Lib.-Macdonald); C. G. Coote (U.F.A.-MacLeod); W. J. Loucke (Cons.-Rosetown), were among those who argued in favor of a reduction in the domestic rates.

The Liberal Government had been in power nine years and had done nothing to equalize the rates, declared H. J. Fraser (Cons.-Fraser Valley).

SATURDAY'S TAG DAY.

In these columns last week attention was called to the annual tag day on behalf of St. Vincent's Orphanage, the impression being at that time that the appeal would be made last Saturday.

The tag day, however, is to be held on Saturday of this week and a liberal response is urged on behalf of this most worthy cause.

It should not be forgotten that the St. Vincent's Orphanage tag day was one of the two original campaigns of this kind to be held in Peterbcrough and that for a long period the Children's Aid Society tag day was the only other fund-raising effort of the same character.

For many years the Orphanage has been assisted in its work by this appeal campaign to which the citizens have invariably subscribed generously.

The work of the organization is well known to everybody.

The task of caring for neglected and dependent children is an activity that merits general support not only because of sympathy for the children themselves but also because of the community value of making useful citizens out of little ones who are being given a fresh start in life by means of this splendid organization.

TOO LONG AT THE WHEEL.

Public opinion will be strongly behind Premier Henry in his declaration that owners of transport trucks must see that their drivers are given proper rest and that they must no be kept at the wheel too long.

This is a matter that affects everybody who has to use the highways.

There is much said about the menace of the intoxicated driver, but probably a greater danger, because of the size of the machine he is handling, is the sleepy truck driver who, because of too long hours on the job, finds it impossible to keep from nodding off at the wheel.

"A driver," says Premier Henry, "cannot sleep for an hour or two on the roadside and be a safe driver after that. It is not safe for the heavy equipment beneath his hand—and what is of still greater moment—it is not safe for the travelling public."

The Premier is absolutely right on that point and the public will expect him to give emphasis to his remarks by dealing drastically with concerns that keep their drivers working many hours at a time until they are in no condition to be entrusted with the responsibility of guiding a ponderous truck on a public highway.

The Department of Highways will be expected to prevent that kind of thing.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CENSUS

The proclamation issued in connection with the taking of the Dominion census next month clears up a point in regard to which there has been a misunderstanding on the part of many people.

The impression seems to have been formed by a large number that in asking for information about radios, for instance, the design of the government was to check up on radio licenses throughout the Dominion and that other data asked for would be similarly used by other departments.

That of course is entirely wrong.

The proclamation is emphatic in its declaration that no such use will be made of the information as the following extract shows:

"The sole purpose of the census is to secure general statistical information regarding the population, agriculture, and trade of the country, and information is required from individuals only to permit the completion of such general statistics. The census cannot be used in connection with taxation, with military or jury service, with the compulsion of school attendance, with the regulation of immigration or with the enforcement of any national, state, or municipal law or by-law. For the due protection of the rights and interests of the persons furnishing information, every officer, agent, or other person employed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics is bound by oath under a heavy penalty to keep inviolate the information entered on the schedules or forms."

It should be noted too that it is not only the duty of every person to answer all the questions asked by the enumerators and that there is a penalty for those who refuse to do so.

MR. HEPBURN'S CHALLENGE.

Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal Ontario leader, has challenged the Ontario Government to bring on a general election following the convention next month at which a successor to Hon. G. Howard Ferguson will be officially selected.

There is little likelihood that his defi will be accepted by the Government, and frankly there is nothing like a general demand for an election at this time.

The present administration was returned to power only eighteen months ago. No great issue has arisen since that requires an appeal to the electors, and most people would be opposed to bringing on a campaign with the term of the Government not half completed.

Mr. Hepburn bases his contention that there should be an election on the ground that the people of Ontario are suffering from heavy taxation.

The pressure of taxation is undoubtedly grievous and if Mr. Hepburn or any other leader will come forward with a definite clear cut program of tax reduction the electors would be inclined to overlook the confusion and inconvenience of a political campaign and say: "Come on with your election."

No such definite program however is in sight.

It is difficult in fact to see where it might even be begun.

Unless this province is ready to scrap a lot of the service provided by the provincial administrations, stop our road-building program, and slash the whole government expenditure to pieces, there can be little hope of tax reduction.

Comparison is being made between Ontario and Quebec but if we are not prepared to stop our system of mothers' allowances, and old pensions, and other things of that nature there is nothing to be gained in contrasting the financial condition of the two provinces.

The social services provided in Ontario are responsible for the difference and if we want to equal the Quebec financial showing the way is open.

But do the people of Ontario want to take it?

There is sure success for the politician who can show how to bring about tax reductions and still provide the services that the people demand of their government.

LARGER, KINDER, BETTER.

(New York Times)

It was impossible to keep the war debts out of the discussions of the International Chamber of Commerce meeting at Washington. As well expect the directors of a bank to rule out all figures about assets and liabilities and insist upon talking only of the weather. The financiers and industrialists and public men composing the International Chamber of Commerce were simply bound to consider the whole complex problem of economic upsets throughout the world. They would have been shutting their eyes to one important factor if they had not considered the effect which the war debts have upon foreign exchange, for example, as well as upon the recovery of industry and trade. It was in vain for President Hoover and for Secretary Mellon to hint broadly to the delegates that the question of German reparations, connected as they are—though our Government has always refused to admit it—with the war debts owing to our Treasury, had better not be brought up in view of the unyielding attitude of the United States. Perhaps it was because of this warning that a director of Lloyds Bank of London, in his address to the International Chamber of Commerce, assumed a tone almost apologetic when asking if the United States, as the great creditor nation, might not think the time had come for "a rather larger, a rather kinder, a rather better attitude."

Let us at once put aside all talk of kindness in this business. Reconsideration of the war debts, if it comes, will not be out of pity for our debtors, but solely because we see in it our own enlightened self-interest. The fact is that for the United States to-day self-interest cannot be disentangled from world-interest. The two things go together. This was recognized in the very creation of the International Chamber of Commerce. Americans take their part in it only because they recognize the unescapable interdependence of nations in all that relates to manufacture, the production of food and raw materials, and markets for them. Not even the President, under whatever political pressure at present, can repudiate his own frequent utterances to this effect. Thus the whole affair must be approached, not sentimentally, but strictly as business. Ex-President Coolidge has, to be sure, just set his face like a piece of Vermont marble against the slightest concession in our demands for payment of the war debts. Yet his own Secretary of the Treasury once stated that realistic conception of the case, when he said that a re-established and prosperous Europe would be worth more in cash to the United States than the collection of all the war debts.

The plea for a larger and better adjustment of these foreign obligations is not one to our kind hearts but to our hard heads. If we can make more, gain more, by a feasible financial arrangement with our debtors than by extracting from them the uttermost farthing, we should belie our own shrewdness if we did not study how to do it. This is really the animating motive in the minds of the international bankers and captains of industry and exporters of American produce and owners of great shipping companies when they urge plans for placing the war debts upon a wholly new basis. They have no thought of letting Germany off scot-free. She has undertaken to pay, and she ought to pay. But she may well ask that she be informed of the total sum that will be required of her, and also aided in mobilizing her resources so as to facilitate payments and the earlier extinguishing of the entire debt. It is ideas of this kind which have been making headway slowly in France and England, and which are sure in time to find wider acceptance here.

Meanwhile, it is essential to have the case clearly presented. There is no purpose to forgive the foreign debts. When we speak of a larger and better attitude in dealing with them, what is meant is simply that the longer and sounder view should be taken, that we should not grasp at the shadow and perhaps lose the substance, and that, in a spirit as narrowly American as you please, looking to our own profit and ultimate advantage and place in the world, we ought to keep our minds open to every project which may reasonably be expected to take this strain off the commerce between nations.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT

The Beauhornois probe promises to supply Parliament with some political fireworks.

Saskatchewan reports a gold rush which will at least have the effect of causing some people out there to forget the wheat situation for the moment.

The Progressive group in the House of Commons serves the purpose of keeping the two old parties from falling asleep. The Beauhornois charges are a sample of the political dynamite in which the Gardiner-led party deals.

An Ontario school trustee who is opposed to the display of the Union Jack and who refuses to sing the National Anthem is out of place. Hamilton electors should leave Mrs. Agnes Sharpe at home next time.

Ontario municipalities are already beginning to plan for relief work next winter. It is a wise policy that will save trouble later on.

INSTALMENT V.

Between Toni and Greta there had been an added coldness during the week following the younger sister's engagement to Staire. Greta was never a great friend of hers—never had been. She was a good deal older than Toni; she was of an entirely different temperament; and deep in her heart now she was desperately, furiously jealous. She had been fond of Ronald; no woman could have been otherwise; he was considerate, kind, and loved her very faithfully. To many women, too, he was extremely attractive, but Greta was of the type that could never remain faithful ,at least in mind, and she was already tired and sick to death of her husband. She desired new experiences, and she had made up her mind that her next conquest, though she did not express it to herself quite so bluntly, should be Feodor Staire. The fact that Feodor Staire, who had the reputation of being very aloof with women, despite the attraction he had for them, and the respect he paid to them, should actually have fallen in love—and fallen in love with her younger sister—whom she affected to despise as a raw girl, stung her very deeply.

She had her affairs—the one with D'Arblaye in particular, which was already becoming at times a little inconvenient and tiresome. She doubted if she would have kept it up except for the opposition it had aroused, and D'Arblaye's great wealth, which enabled her to have a very good time, for his personality more than once had offended her, as did his manner. He had a way of treating her as if he considered she was his property; and Greta, far too independent and far too selfish ever to be dominated by any man or really to consider his feelings, resented this in no half-hearted way.

On the morning when Toni was scurrying through her dressing, full of delight thinking of the hours ahead, Greta was languid and ennuyee. That Toni, whom she regarded as little more than a child, should have captured such a man as Feodor Staire with his wealth his social pre-eminence, and his personality that made him one of the most sought-after men in Paris, infuriated her. She was wretched with jealousy, comparing the relative dullness and obscurity of her own marriage with the brilliant future before her younger sister; the slight to herself, the comments of her acquaintances, the thought that any man could prefer Toni to herself, was a bitter pill for her to swallow, and her temper was at its worst this hot morning. She had spoken snappily to Ronald before he had gone off to his work, had grumbled at her maid, and now, after finishing her toilette, had gone to the telephone. For once she had no engagement for luncheon, and the prospect of her own society appalled her. Something must be done—she wondered what. There was always her mother's apartment, but generally it was full either of young people, so much younger than herself that they bored her to tears, or her mother's friends. Failing them it meant a tete-a-tete with Lady Alice, and for that she had no mind. She knew quite well how her mother viewed her flirtation with D'Arblaye. Still she could not and would not be alone; and going to the telephone she endeavored to make some engagement.

Bad luck awaited her; two of her friends were lunching out, a third was desolee but she had a sore throat and didn't think it was wise for her to see anybody. Greta hung up the receiver after that, a sneer turning down her lovely mouth. She understood Madeleine's sore throats when she had a new and exciting affaire only too well.

After that, in desperation, she rang up D'Arblaye and received from him the invitation she knew that he would be delighted to give.

"Lunch with me? I only wish you would. Where would you like to go? The Ritz, or is there any other place? Armenonville or Pre Catalan? Perhaps you'd motor out with me somewhere?"

At the end of the telephone Greta frowned.

"I hate the country," she said, "just hate it. What would we do, D'Arblaye, out in the country? No, the Ritz, I think."

"Very well—the Ritz at half-past one I'll get you our special table. And then, perhaps, afterwards—well, we can think of afterwards when we're lunching. Shall I have a party, or do you want to be just by ourselves?"

Greta was aware he had sounded rather hurt that his suggestion of the country had been so curtly negatived, and that would not do.

"Oh, I suppose we shall have to have a party," she said. "Of course, I'd much prefer to be just by ourselves, D'Arblaye, but people are talking a little, you know. No; I think we'd better not. Some wretched friend of Ronald's might be there."

"All right," said D'Arblaye's voice along the wire, "I'll fix the party. Au revoir, my dear, till then."

So that was that. Greta hung up the receiver, finished her dressing, looked at the time, saw it was still only a quarter to twelve, and yawning wearily strolled out of the room, ordered her car, and amused herself by glancing down the daily papers until the car came round.

It was a glorious morning, already very hot, and when Greta went downstairs to the street she wondered how long she was going to endure Paris. Ronald could not get away, that she knew, for at least another month. That would bring them to the middle of July. And Paris in July—desolating, impossible! And then she remembered that Madeleine had decided to take the very delightful small Chateau St. Bride, not very far from Lady Alice's house in Brittany, for the summer. It had once belonged to an Uncle, and was now let to a wealthy American. She also knew that Madeleine would be perfectly willing to ask anybody Greta herself wanted, so long as he did not interfere with her special affaire of the moment. Why not take advantage of such good luck? And why not arrange that some attractive man should be of the party? Ronald could not object. After all, what harm was she doing? Merely flierting mildly to pass the time.

Perhaps she had better call in at her mother's. It might be just as well to find out what Lady Alice's luncheon engagements was. She had no desire to find herself at the next table to her or to any of her friends, and she knew quite well that if Lady Alice did lunch out, it was usually at the Ritz. So she gave her chauffeur the order. On hearing that her mother was in, she said: "I'll wait. Don't disturb her for a moment,' and went into the salon.

There, rather to her surprise, she saw a tall, broad-chouldered figure at the window, who turned round sharply on seeing her, and she came face to face with Feodor Staire. Just for a second he stood quite still on seeing her, then bowed his rather formal bow, and Greta, no longer bored, walked across the room towards him.

"Why Mr. Staire, how do you do? At least, I suppose I may as well call you Feodor, since you're going to marry Toni. This is the first time I've seen you since your engagement.. May I offer you my good wishes?"

She held out her hand, letting her blue eyes meet his in a long, grave look. It was the way Greta usually looked at men when she wished to attach them to herself—a questioning, innocent, wondering look—a look that made them curious to find out just what she knew of life, and whether she were really the icicle she seemed, or capable of warmth and passion beneath that lovely, languid exterior. That look, and the golden notes of her voice, seldom failed, especially when she used the tone she did now, with her lovely rare smile.

"Please come and talk to me. I want to hear all about things. It's so interesting to think you're going to be my brother-in-law. I'd like to be friends."

Friends! Few men would want to be friends with her and she knew it. Therefore, it was so much the best way to suggest right off at the start that no other relation was possible. It made them begin to wonder if they could change her mind. But this man was different. She did not see the response in his manner or the change in his eyes that she was wont to see, and she changed her tactics.

"It's so extraordinary to me," she said, as she sat down beside her where she indicated, "that Toni's going to be married—my little sister Toni! I've always thought of her as a child; she's so adorable, so fresh and young. You'll take care of her, Feodor, won't you?"

He took out a cigarette case, opened it and offered it to her.

"Yes, I intend to do that," he said. "Toni is honoring me by marrying me."

"Honoring you?" Greta looked at him. "That sounds so funny," she said, suddenly smiling; "I can't think of my little sister honoring anybody, but just making them a most delightful pet. It's only because I can't visualize her grown-up. Our baby—she's always been such a darling! But anyway, now I've just got to face it, haven't I? Though we'll miss her terribly. One's always used to having Toni around; she's so very much there, she's so vital."

She saw at once that her only chance with this man at present was to praise Toni, and she was careful now to speak in the sudden, enthusiastic, confidential way that would make him feel she was absolutely genuine.

"I wonder if you know what Ronald's engagements are for to-morrow at lunch time?" he said, ignoring al she had said about Toni. "He phoned me day before yesterday that he had something he wanted to talk to me about. Have you any idea if he is free to-morrow?"

Greta shook her head; once more her eyes were wide open.

"I'm afraid I haven't," she said regretfully. "Ronald doesn't tell me his engagements very often, he's too busy. But I know he'd be terribly pleased if you could lunch with him. Why don't you ring him up to-night?"

"To-night? Isn't he coming to dine with Lady Alice?"

"I think it's rather unlikely as he may be kept late at the office."

What a stupid conversation they were having! For once Greta felt queerly ill at ease with this man. She did not like that slightly mocking light in his eyes as he talked to her. She had a feeling that he had not believed one word she had said about Toni, or even about her own feelings at the engagement; and Greta was not used to experiencing discomfort; she was not used to experiencing anything but admiration and adoration. It made her all the more determined to find out the weak spot in Feodor—to find it and play upon it; even, if necessary, to detach him from Toni and attach him to herself. She tried another way to interest him.

WINDOW CLEANING IS NOW NECESSITY

Foster Window Cleaning Company Offers to Citizens an Expert Service.

Peterborough and its environs have, for many years, had the advantage of what might seem a small routine service, and yet which would be appreciated as quite large and important if the Foster Window Cleaning Company were to suddenly go out of business. Window cleaning to-day is an essential business. What would our grandfathers thought of this? Yet in this day of modern division of labor almost every phase of service must be specialized. We must realize that windows are, of necessity, washed many times more efficiently to-day than in the days when every office, factory and other establishment had to depend upon some employee to perform the task.

Think of the convenience that is afforded the community through the service of Mr. John A. Foster and his assistants. You realize, if you are a housewife, that your windows need cleaning, that now, with Spring cleaning being done, your storm windows should be taken down. You are spared the drugery of doing it yourself or finding someone to do it for you. You simply give Mr. J. A. Foster a ring on the telephone and in a short time an expert, trained in correct methods of window cleaning, is on hand to do the work for you, leaving your windows shining, and leaving no muss around the house in doing it. This establishment makes a specialty of taking down your storm windows in the Spring and cleaning and replacing them in the Fall.

The Foster Window Cleaners specialize also in cleaning windows in stores, churches and industrial buildings. If your office is in some high building the washing of windows is a hazardous thing, done usually at a hazardous price. Through the services of Mr. Foster these windows, or windows in institutions of any kind, are correctly cleaned at a very small cost. They will be glad to give you estimates. They have seen a need and are filling it in a most satisfactory manner. Do you know what charge is made by Mr. John A. Foster in window cleaning?

What To-day Means To You.

"TAURUS."

If May 21st is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a.m. to 10:45 a.m., from 1:30 p.m. to 3:15 p.m. and from 7:10 p.m. to 9:15 p.m. The danger hours are from 11 a.m. to 12:50 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The planetary aspects of May 21st indicate that some financial losses may be encountered—the result of either extravagance or bad judgment. An opportunity, which if seized may lead to fortunate results, is foreshadowed. In the evening, benign conditions will prevail.

A child born on this May 21st will be shrewd, decisive and positive. It will always know what it wants and when it wants it. Truthfulness and directness will characterize its speech and actions. It will at a very early age, shed childish illusions, and will become practical and sensible.

Born on May 21st, you are a cheerful sort of person, always bright and always humorous perennially optimistic. No matter how dark the clouds, no matter how drab the outlook, you persistently refuse to be cast down and can always glimpse over the distant hilltops of time, a gleam of sunshine. In every disaster that comes, you can always sense some spot of humor, and in this way, an embarrassing situation never develops into disaster.

You work intelligently, and well. On the other hand you play enthusiastically, and with keen zest. You love constantly and endow the object of your affection with virtues and gifts far in excess of real merit. You look at everything through rose-colored glasses, and get a boundless measure of happiness out of your life. Figuratively speaking, if you lose one leg in an accident, you would comfort yourself with the thought that it might have been worse: you might have lost both. You can count on an army of friends and admirers, and in times of difficulty one and all can gather from you hope and comfort, and oftimes, strength to "carry on." Your good spirits are infectious and you and gloom have not even a bowing acquaintance.

Economic Parley May Be Delayed

OTTAWA, Ont., May 20.— (C. P.) —The possibility of some delay in the holding of the Imperial Economic Conference at Otawa, twas suggested in the House of Commons today by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. Answering a question by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, Mr. Bennett said that it had been the intention, if possible, to hold the conference some time in August. There was, however, the possibility of elections in both New Zealand and Australia, which might cause a difficulty. He promised to inform the House when he had definite information.

Also Agree With United States' Proposal to Reduce Acreage.

AT EXPORT PARLEY.

LONDON, Eng., May 21 (By Geo. Hambleton, C. P. Staff Correspondent). The Russians are willing to agree not to dump their wheat. At the conference of wheat exporting nations this afternoon the Russians made their statement. Of what they said no official word is yet available but the main points of the Russian case are understood to be:

(1) Agreement with the United States position not to dump wheat.

(2) Disagreement with the United States position that wheat acreage should be reduced.

(3) General agreement with the Polish and Australian proposals for the establishment of an international organization with the regulation of the market by means of export quotas.

The unwillingness of the United States to join any international organization for wheat marketing is reported to be raising difficulties for the export quota scheme. Apart from the Russian declarations the conference spent the afternoon in a discussion of the committee reports. It was officially stated afserwards that proceedings revealed general agreement on a number of points.

Woman Driving 70 Skids On Turn—Dies

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 21—(C.P.).—Mrs. Ruth Graham, 34, was killed instantly early to-day when a roadster she was driving failed to make a turn at a street corner and crashed over a small stone wall onto the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad. Attendants at a nearby gasoline station, who witnessed the accident, told police the car was travelling 70 miles an hour.

dragging Mr. Heller from the wreckage.

Mr. Wigle's plane was the last of a group of four to leave the ground. His plane followed one piloted by Dr. J. Clark Griffen, of Detroit. Climbing into a strong west wind, Mr. Wigle turned to the south.

As the Wigle plane banked for the turn, it was caught in the washback of Dr. Griffen's propellor. The illfated plane sideslipped and plunged for the ground in a nose dive.

Mr. Wigle's injuries in the crash consisted of a sprained ankle and a sprained wrist. His face was scorced and his hands burned.

Dr. Laing announced that Mr. Heller had been severely burned about the head, hands, and legs. He had suffered a fractured right arm and fracured right leg.

Headed for Brantford

The four planes were headed for Brantford.

The trip to Brantford was scheduled as the first of a series of flights to neighboring airports to be made each Wednesday during the summer under the auspies of the Border Cities Aero Club.

Following the accident at the airport, the other three planes returned to the field and landed. The trip to Brantford was resumed however after members of the party had made sure that their services were not required at the airport.

SUGGESTION MADE

agreements from its present slavish conformity to an utterly unstable metal the better it will be for that country."

Commenting on the proposal to relieve the situation by stabilizing the price of silver at 20 ounces equal to one of gold, instead of 66 to one as at present, Prof. Sandwell said he could see no reason why producers of silver should be singled out for such a favor any more than the producers of wheat.

Payment of international debts already contracted on the gold basis would have to be paid in gold, he explained, but he saw no reason why Canada could not act independently in establishing her own currency on some other basis for the purposes of her domestic exchequer.

British Concern Firm In Great Traditions

LONDON, May 21 (By The Canadian Press).—That British journalism had always maintained a high tradition was a tribute paid by John Buchan, M. P., in proposing the toast to "Journalism" at the annual dinner of the Newspaper Press Fund in London recently. Mr. Buchan, who is a noted scholar and author, said he could bear witness from personal experience that those who trusted and dealt frankly with the members of the press would never find their confidence betrayed. The real strength of British Journalism, he said, lay in the vast amount of competent anonymous work done on the newspapers.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, M.P., former Chancellor of the Exchequer, who presided at the dinner, was eloquent in praise of the press. Refesring to the remarkable developments in the production of daily newspapers, Mr. Churchill said that a newspaper office with its printing machines at work suggested to him a combination of a first-class battleship and a first-class general election. No press in the world had the incorruptibility of the British Press, and none was so fair and decent towards the private life of individuals. Nor was there any press in the world in which public men who were interviewed by newspaper men could more confidently rely on being treated honorably and not misrepresented or betrayed in the matter of personal confidences.

An interesting feature of the dinner was the announcement of the receipt of a telegram from Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, conveying her greetings and good wishes for the prosperity of the press fund. Her husband, the late Duke of Argyll, was Governor-General of Canada, 1878-1883, he being then the Marquis of Lorne.

RAIL ISSUES AGAIN BOLSTER TRADING ON NEW YORK LIST

Light Selling Flurries Have Little Effect Upon Bulk of Prominent Stocks.

COPPER IS LOWER.

(By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor)

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21.—For the third successive day, the stock market was bolstered by an improved tone in the railroad issues to-day.

Selling flurries continued to sweep through the market, but had little effect upon the bulk of prominent issues. The bi-monthly settlement day in London brought forth no adverse developments, and uneasiness on that score appeared to have been ill-founded.

Although the list encountered considerable scattered selling at times, particularly in the late morning, it stiffened notably in the early afternoon. In the carrier issues, gains of a point or two appeared in New York Central, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Pacific, Illinois Central, Union Pacific Santa Fe and Atlantic Coast Line. Small early losses in U.S. Steel, American Telephone and American Can were replaced by gains of a point or so. General Electric and Anaconda sagged to new lows, but the former recovered. Losses of 2 to 4 points, many of which were later modified, appeared in Allied Chemical, North American, Eastman, Coca Cola, Dupont, Air Reduction, Bethlehem Steel, Loews, Western Union, Worthington and Vanadium.

The copper issues generally worked lower, although they have been so thoroughly deflated that losses were small. Red metal was available at 8¼ cents a pound, a record low, although large producers still held to the price of 9 cents, and some export business was done on the basis of that domestic price.

HEAVY SELLING IN LEAD STOCKS

One and Two Point Losses Carry Weighted Index Down Below That of Wednesday.

LOWEST ON RECORD.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—Special issues were singled out in selling operations on Toronto stock exchange this morning. The market opened somewhat firmer but soon turned downward again, following the course for weeks past. Losses ranged from small fractions to one and two points and carried the weighted index down below that of yesterday, which was the lowest on record.

Page-Hersey was a target, being forced down to 70¾ under heavy turnover. Yesterday's low was 71¾. To-day's price was the lowest since July, 1927. Ford of Canada was another stock pushed for sale, though in this issue bulk of selling came from New York. Ford touched 17 on odd lot transactions, which compared with 40 for the old stock made back in 1922.

Nickel was fairly steady around 12 and C. P. R. held at 26½ to 27. Walkers sold at 5 and 5-8 with plenty of support apparent at 5. Smelters hit a new low at 8 and Noranda sold under 20 for the first time in weeks. Brazilian was easier at 15. Service Stations at a low at 12, Standard Paving down 1 at 8½.

B. A. oil sold at 9⅝ and fractionally lower, Imperial hit a new low at 10 8, while International Petroleum appeared at 10¾ and 10 7-8. Supertest lost 1 to 18.

DIES OF EXPOSURE.

KTCHENER, Ont., May 21.— (C. P.)—His resistance run down through exposure and insufficient food, Martin Woefle, a German immigrant, died to-day in the hospital. He had been taken to the hospital from the city police cells where he had been given lodging for the night.

Moss Gold Mines Making Progress

Norman R. Fisher, president of Moss Gold Mines, Limited, has just returned from the mine after an extended visit of inspection.

He makes the following statement:

"Splendid headway is being made with the new construction and development program recently inaugurated upon completion of the necessary financing, and recent developments underground have been highly satisfactory, considerably enhancing the property's prospects.

"A hoist has been installed underground in the 375-foot station and a start made in continuing the shaft to a depth of 800 feet.

"This sinking will receive precedence over all other underground work until its completion, but concurrently with it lateral development work will proceed and the already developed ore will be prepared for extraction when the mill is ready to take it.

"The site selected for the mill is being cleared ready for its immediate installation. Considerable of the equipment and supplies for the purpose are already on the ground and the balance will be delivered over the new road about to be constructed from the railroad to the property.

"Larger camps to house the increased working force are under construction, using lumber provided by a saw-mill recently erected at the property to take care of the company's requirements."

MARKET CLOSING ON EXCHANGES

cents apiece. Ventures, Sudbury Basin and Sherritt-Gordon all showed losses on, end the oil stocks were weak.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.) — Inter-listed issues responded to a late rally on New York and rose above their lows for the day, but the general tone on Toronto Stock Exchange was nevertheless soft at the close today.

During the greater part of the session the market continued its downward course and many new lows unequalled for several years were made.

Bell Telephone added another 3 or 4 points to the 6 point loss of yesterday, selling down to 129¾ to-day. Ford of Canada broke under the weight of New York selling to 16½. Page-Hersey Tubes reacted to 70¼. Service Stations to 12, and the oils to new lows: B.A. Oil at 9⅝, Imperial Oil at 10⅜ for an odd lot. Imperial at its low was under International Petroleum, but it closed higher above 11 with Int. Pete. at 10⅝.

Brazilian closed just under 16, Nickel higher around 12½. Walkers sold at 5¼ just before the close, but failed to hold.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., May 21 (C.P.) —Leading stocks showed a firmer tendency as the Montreal Stock Exchange closed to-day in pace with the New York market. Canadian Pacific Railway shares advanced steadily throughout the afternoon, reaching 28½ as the market closed, a net advance of two points over the closing price yesterday.

Bell Telephone was still under pressure and sold down to 10½ at the close, registering a net loss of ½. Consolidated Mining and Smelting recovered a point, up to 85 at the close. Montreal Power was very active throughout the afternoon, and closed strong at 50½, a gain of ½.

Eastern Dairies picked up 1 point at 18, and Steel of Canada gained ¾, closing at 28¾.

Great Britain, with a decrease of 10 per cent, and Japan, with 1.6 per cent, are the only principal World Powers showing a decrease in military expenditures in 1930.

Winnipeg Review

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Bawlf Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Wheat: The wheat market acted nervous and erratic yesterday, opening about unchanged, prices advanced about ¾ cent, all of which gain and more was lost after the first hour but the market staged a strong comeback and advanced to new highs for the day during the last hour. The buying was nearly all local, more especially by those who had bought offers Tuesday, but there was a little scattered buying at times that was credited to Chicago interests on spreads and this market showed a little stronger tone than Chicago. Export houses and shippers were doing very little but export sales overnight and this morning were placed at 300,000 bushels the demand for cash wheat was only moderate although perhaps a shade better than for the past few days. Spreads were about unchanged and offerings were not pressing. There were several unfavorable reports received from winter wheat territory indicating that the crop has lost ground the past week or two from different causes. Canadian West has become more settled, with many districts in Saskatchewan and Alberta not having received sufficient moisture during the past three days to materially change the situation. Liverpool closed unchanged to 3-8 higher, while Buenos Aires was ¼ lower at noon. Chicago closed strong, corn showing a tendency to advance near the close. Winnipeg futures closed 7-8 to 5-8 higher.

Coarse Grains.—The only feature to these markets was some liquidation by tired holders of barley which broke prices early. Oats closed unchanged to 1-8 higher, barley 3-8 lower and rye unchanged.

Flax: Flax was firm but there was very little going on locally. Closing 1¼ to 2 cents higher.

Liverpool due action ¼ higher to unchanged based on Winnipeg market.

NORANDA WEAK ON STANDARD

Generally Lower Trend in Golds Features Standard Morning Session.

OIL SECTION QUIET.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—Weakness in Noranda and a generally lower trend in the golds featured the early session on the Standard stock and mining exchange to-day. Volume continued moderate.

Noranda was under pressure from the start, and near noon broke through the $20 level, for the first time in weeks. This price compares with the close yesterday of $21. After the low had been reached, the stock recovered somewhat to sell above $20. International Nickel sold unchanged at $12 as was Hudson Bay at $4.00. Sherritt Gordon, Gem Lake, and Amulet were all lower.

In the golds, Hollinger lost 25, Lake Shore 25, Macassa 1, Teck Hughes 15, McIntyre 15, Wright-Hargreaves 15, Kirkland Lake 3, and Mining Corporation 4. Big Missouri alone moved against the trend, showing a fractional gain at 26½.

Oils were quiet, and important price changes were lacking. Nordon, Homestead and Imperial had small losses, while Chemical Research was somewhat higher at $2.70.

FURNITURE MEN FOR 5-DAY WEEK

Idea Would Mean Increased Efficiency and Wider Employment.

AGAINST WAGE CUTS.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (C.P.)—No wage cuts, but a five-day week which would make possible wider employment and increased efficiency in production is favored by the leading furniture manufacturers in the United States. Narmon McClave, Grand Rapids, Mich., President of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, said to-day. The association which convened here yesterday for a three-day meeting, will meet in joint session to-morrow with the Furniture Manufacturers' Association of Canada to discuss mutual problems and policies on production and operation costs.

"The general feeling among the large manufacturers at this time is to maintain wages at their present scale," Mr. McClave said. "In our divisional meetings, the manufacturers were called upon to express their views, and the sentiment was strongly against any wage cuts in the United States at this time.

"Many manufacturers said they had placed their plants on a five-day, 40-hour week basis, and through increahed efficiency were effecting saving in production costs and at the same time maintaining a high standard of construction."

Mr. McClave suggested that a nation-wide appeal in both United States and Canada for adoption by all industries of such operation plans would be a sound economic move.

BELL TELEPHONE BREAKS 4 POINTS

Brazilian Traction Also Easier, Suffers Point Decline on Montreal Exchange.

NICKEL IS STEADY.

MONTREAL, Que., May 21, (CP)—While the general run of the more active stocks were not more than fractionally disturbed as to price, Bell Telephone again took the spotlight by dropping four points following a break of 5½ points yesterday.

Brazilian Traction also turned easier. This leader was off more than a point to slightly under the 15.

The turnover in Montreal Power assumed leadership proportions again and the price eased slightly with the bulk of the turnover at 50 compared with 50¼ at the close yesterday.

Nickel was a steady actor holding closely around 12. Shawinigan eased ½ to 40, Power Corporation off ½ to 46½, Breweries down ½ to 27, McColl-Frontenac off ½ to 12. While C.P.R. acted steadily within a narrow range of 26¾ to ¼.

Abitibi common which broke 1¼ yesterday from 5 to 3¾ steadied back to the former level again following some firmness in the preferred. Building Products, for some time was a very quiet issue, broke 2½ to 17¼.

BROADCAST KING

Namee is now, but I do know that the statement that the separation is by mutual consent is false. I don't even know what charges she makes."

The romance began before McNamee's rapid rise to fame. In 1924 Mr. McNamee was a young baritone trying to make a living. At the Dutch Reformed Church in Bronxville, he met his future wife, Josephine Garrett, a soprano.

When McNamee became one of the best known names in radio, his wife would sit at home to hear his broadcast. As he put it, she was his 'severest critic." Mrs. McNamee herself once wrote for a newspaper: "As husbands go, I can't imagine anybody just like Graham."

At first McNamee was too poor to have a radio set in his home so his wife used to stand in front of a radio store on the street listening to her husband's broadcasts.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 21. (C)P—A Canadian company backed entirely by Canadian capital and Canadian business men is being incorporated to take over the British Columbia interests of the Alaska-Washington Airways, it is announced. It will be headed byRichard J. Cosse, who will assume the duties of president and managing director.

Mr. Cosse stated the present daily service between Vancouver Victoria and Seattle will be meaintained. In the immediate future it is hoped to extend service to other points. While the Canadian company will have an entirely Canadian personnel, an affiliation interest will be maintained with the Alaska-Washington airways for transfer of passengers and mail in United States territory.

South African Corn In Canadian Market

Union Official Tells of Factors Which Tend to Handicap Trade in Corn.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, May 20 (By The Canadian Press). — "What South African farmers must do if they wish to take part in the world's maize (corn) market is indicated by the Trade Commissioner for the Union of South Africa in New York in a letter published in the latest issue of the Commercial and Industrial Gazette," says The Cape Argus in a news article. The Commissioner points out that the increased interest in the marketing of South African maize in Canada has had good results, but he also mentions a "fly in the ointment" towards which the farmers of this country must direct their attention, that is, dirty corn or maize, containing a large percentage of chaff and dust and small pieces of cobs, a considerable loss being the result. In other respects the grading seems to be satisfactory in the shipments.

The Commissioner remarks that some 30,000 tons of South African maize were imported into Canada via Atlantic seaports during last season, and also several thousand tons via western seaports across the Pacific. He suggests that the financial terms which South African shippers demand, namely, that the funds for the maize should be placed in South Africa before the grain is loaded, are proving a handicap to the possibilities of a greatly extended trade with Canada, the shippers not assuming any responsibility as to outturn or quality other than the certificate that the grain was in good condition at the time of loading.

The Commissioner says: "A substantial quantity of maize is imported into Canada as chicken feed, and according to information received from importers in Vancouver, experiments have proved that poultry prefer South African maize to that of other countries, which suggests a particular flavor or other quality in our product which induces the poultry to prefer it to others."

TRAGEDY STALKS OVER WISCONSIN

Fire Chief Killed — Citizen Shoots Wife and Two Sons —Barber Suicides.

WOMAN IS INJURED.

MADISON, Wis., May 21. CP)—Citizens of this State were startled by a number of things to-day. In rapid succession news reports revealed:

Fire Chief Milford Graham was killed, a woman injured and eight firemen rescued when an explosion blew the front wall out of a building at Springs Green, Wis.

Joseph Fleischmann, 35, shot and killed his wife and two small sons last night and for five hours held his two daughters, another son and three adults in a state of terror while he talked incessantly of firing deer rifle bullets at them. This happened at Medford Wis.

At Green Bay, Wis., George A Richardson, 56, resident of the McCartney National Bank shot and killed himself in the washroom of the bank shortly after the institution opened for business.

Handicap greyhound races now are popular in London.

Strong in Mineral Wealth as Whole But Easy Interchange Essential for Progress.

INFLUENCE ON HISTORY.

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (By The Canadian Press)—There must be no obstructions to easy exchange of minerals and mineral products between Great Britain and the dominions if the industrial and economic security of the Empire is to be maintained. This was the message of Dr. Charles Camsell, deputy minister of mines for Canada, when he delivered his presidential address to-night before the fellows of the Royal Society of Canada now in session at their 50th annual meeting at the University of Toronto.

"The strength of the British Empire as a whole, in mineral supplies, is a condition not generally appreciated by the people of the Empire, and is not as well known as it should be even to the men concerned with the administration of empire affairs and the development of Empire policies," said Dr. Camsell. "If this strength is contrasted with the weakness of each unit of the Empire, were that unit to stand alone, there would be a greater appreciation of the value of Empire cohesion and of the encouragement of intra-imperial trade in minerals and mineral products. To my mind the mineral situation presents one of the strongest arguments, other than sentimental one, for the working out and adoption of such policies as were proposed at the recent Imperial Conference.

Influence on History

"Few persons ever stop to consider how vital an influence minerals, and especially metals, have had upon human history, how they have affected the everyday life of the individual, or how at different times they have influenced the progress of nations and determined their courses. It is only within recent years that the value and influence of minerals, and especially the fuels and industrial metals, have been fully appreciated. To some concerned with the industry there is a natural temptation to attach great weight to the coming into use of copper, iron and other metals. These events were, however, not actually revolutionary, though they lutimately had profound effects. More minerals have been produced and used in the past 25 years than in the preceding 6000 years. This is illustrative of the rate of progress of modern civilization and the place that minerals occupy in our present-day industrial life.

"Within recent years, due to the amazing rate at which minerals have come into use, there has developed a profound appreciation of the value of mineral resources to the industrial nations of the world, and a new significance has been given to their ownership and control in both national and international affairs.

"The result is that more and more intensive study is being given to the subject by men on whose shoulders rests the responsibility of advising on or directing the affairs of nations. We find this question of the control of mineral resources and the distribution of supplies occupying a place in the discussions of the League of Nations, or the subject of study of special committees."

Dr. Camsell pointed out the handicap imposed upon the great industrial nations by lack of certain essential minerals or raw products has had its reactions, or it has been one of the greatest incentives to industrial and scientific research directed towards the development of synthetic products. "In the international field," he continued, "the experiences of the war have led certain nations to encourage their citizens to secure control of foreign deposits of essential minerals.

"We, in Canada, are becoming more and more conscious of the great asset that we have in our mineral resources, of their growing importance in our industrial and commercial life, and of their value as the chief reason for the opening up and settlement of our northern lands.

"The growth of Canada's mineral-producing industry has been more rapid than that of any other portion of the Empire. Owing to the geographical relationship to that country, the greater part of our surpluses of mineral products go to the United States, while most of our deficiences are made up of imports from or through that country. This has been the condition for some years past, but the gradual growth of barriers to Canadian materials entering the United States has quite naturally stimulated the idea of a greater measure of intra-imperial trade in mineral as well as other products—a trade that would provide for an exchange of surpluses between different units of the Empire. This idea was presented and improved in principle at the Imperial Conference of 1930."

Cricket

LONDON, May 21 (C.P. Cable). — Kent defeated Northamptonshire in an English county cricket match at Northampton to-day by ten wickets. Scores were: Northampton, 188 and 16 (Hardinge five wickets for 12 runs); Kent, 22 and 10 for no wickets (Hardinge 64 not out).

WOMAN DIES OF KNIFE WOUNDS.

TIMMINS, Ont., May 21.— Mrs. Bernier Leak is dead from knife wounds following a stabbing affray here last night. Mike Shakoon is in hospital suffering from knife wounds said to be self inflicted. The police say a charge of murder will be laid against Shakoon. Some of his relatives are being held as material witnesses.

GILL NET SOUGHT BY GAME WARDEN

Outfit is Reported to be Set in Mud Turtle Lake, Victoria County.

CAR IS WRECKED.

LINDSAY, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—Game Warden R. W. Windsor is on the still hunt in the northern part of Victoria County for a long gill net which, it is understood has been set in Mud Turtle Lake. It is suspected that the parties owning the net are men who act as guides and derive a substantial income from those they are driving from the district by netting fish.

Falling asleep at the wheel of his car on Tuesday night, J. Strachan, garageman, of Sunderland, had a narrow escape from serious injuries when his car took to the ditch on the Orillia road. When leaving the highway, the car struck a telephone pole, and was completely wrecked. Mr. Strachan was severely cut about the eyes and face with flying glass.

The death took place Tuesday evening of a well known resident of Lindsay in the person of Mr. Terrance O'Loughlin. The deceased had been in the employ of Flavelles Limited, for over a quarter of a century. He is survived by one brother and three sisters.

District Churches

ROSENEATH

"The place and power of spiritual music" taken from Psalm 150, verse 1. These were the words Rev. R. W. Paton, M.A., chose for his text on Sunday evening. How often we read in the Bible of God's singing. When Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt and across the Red Sea, they sang. When the Hebrew people brought the ark of the covenant out of its test, and placed it in King Solomon's temple, they sang. When Jesus and His disciples celebrated that memorable last supper, they sang a hymn before they went out to Gethsemane. God's people hence always wanted to sing, and it is very fitting that they should.

Music can be made the noblest expression of Christian aspiration. When we pierce to the very heart of religion and find it in the mood of worship and aspiration, it is always a song. Music is a gift of God. It is a radiation of Divine Truth. It refines and ennobles. It smoothes the rough place in life and soothes the lonely heart. Music reveals God. It has therefore an important office to fill in religion in those great duties which we call duties of God.

Music is the language of emotion, as speech is the language of intellect. Through it we make known the inmost desires of our hearts. Music is the language of celestial throngs. True eloquence is thought winged with music. Music is the symbol of consecration; the consecration of body and soul, to the glory and praise of God. Music is Divine.

We want a definition to cover every devotional mood and so we prefer such a definition as this. "A hymn is the uplifting of the soul to God, in terms of song." The great purpose of a hymn is not only to show God to the human, but also to show the human soul to God.

Hymns may be broadly classified into objective and subjective hymns. The objective ones tell us about God, they are occupied with the devout contemplation of duty. Their themes are the glory and majesty, the mercy and goodness of God, the incarnation, the passion and the resurrection of Jesus Christ, the mission of the Holy Ghost, the judgment and the glory to come. Subjective hymns are those which describe the feelings of the individual soul, hymns which tell us how we feel and how we should feel, when we come into God's presence. When we think of religious music we immediately think of the Hebrew Psalter. It is the literary and spiritual forerunner of the Christian hymnal. It is more than probable that for a long while the Hebrew Psalter was the chief vehicle of Christian praise. The fundamental notes of sacred music were first struck on the Hebrew lyre.

But music has another mission to fulfil. It softens and removes the asperities of men. It helps to unify the human race. Our sectarian divisions take rise for the most part in the intellectual sphere. The best hymns that help us most, are free from the sectarian taint for when men get into the atmosphere of worship and praise they are in touch with the spirit of heaven. It would indeed be a most instructive object lesson on unity in diversity, if we could bring together the hymn writers of any modern hymnal and get them to sing their hymns together. If all these wonderful people were together, discussing theological problems, forms of church government in ritual, they would be in a state of discord, but singing together, when not the intellect but the heart speaks, they make music.

It is scarcely possible to exaggerate the influence of hymns as sung in the sanctuary since the early days of Christianity, a crowning glory of the church of God has been the place and power of spiritual song, in her worship and life. The church has come singing down through the ages. God's people have always wanted to sing.

At the opening of the service the New Hymnary was introduced and dedicated to the service of God by the Rev. Mr. Paton with Mr. Archie Mouncey chairman of the board of stewarts, representing the choir and Mr. William Roberts, clerk of sessions, as representative for the pulpit.

The selections sung by the choir were very fitting to the service and greatly enjoyed by the large congregation.

Have you enough Life Insurance?

No matter how large or how small your estate, it will suffer heavy deductions before it reaches your wife or family. Doctors, nurses, hospitals, undertakers, lawyers, etc., not to mention succession duties, if the estate be considerable, will reduce the net amount payable to your heirs by anything from 10% to 25%.

Take your pencil and try a simple sum in arithmetic, using an actual case as an example:

| | Typical Case | My Case |
|---|---|---|
| Total face value of all my life insurance policies | $5,000 | $ |
| Estimated value of my real estate, securities and other assets | $2,000 | $ |
| Total | $7,000 | $ |
| Less 15% as indicated above | $1,050 | $ |
| Total estate (net) | $5,950 | $ |
| Invested in good securities at 5% this should yield my family an annual income of | $297.50 | $ |

Car Stolen From Tweed Is Recovered

TWEED, May 20 (Examiner Correspondence)—Jack Trudeau has recovered his car which was stolen from his garage recently. The car was found about ten miles south of Tweed in a woods, covered with brush and Mr. Trudeau was forced to cut trees at different places to get his car through the woods.

A man who had gone out to fix fences noticed the car and notified Mr. Trudeau.

OBITUARY

W. G. HUTCHINS.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Born in England and for many years a resident of this country, William George Hutchings passed away in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on May 19, in his 72nd year.

The deceased came to Campbellford yearly a year ago with his wife, and was employed by D. C. Moore, local monumental mason, as a stone engraver. He was taken ill on Sunday last, and rushed to hospital, where he eventually died.

Surviving are his wife of Campbellford and several children, both in England and Canada. The funeral service was held on Thursday, May 21, at Campbellford, with interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The Rev. R. C. Tait, pastor of St. John's United Church, officiated.

MRS. JOHN SELKIRK

WARSAW, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—The funeral of the late Mrs. John Selkirk was held on Monday afternoon at one o'clock from her own home and burial was made at Apsley, Rev. Mr. Sutherland and the United Church minister at Apsley conducting the service at the grave.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland spoke of the patience and courage with which the late Mrs. Selkirk had borne her long illness and reminded his hearers that death is simply a doorway and that as Christ rose, so shall we.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson read the lessons at the home.

The pall bearers were Hector Munro, a grandson; Z. Miller, of Lakefield, nephew; and David Tucker and brother, of Peterborough, nephews.

C.P.R. Nationalization Asked By Gardiner

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—Notice of a motion asking the House of Commons to declare that "the Government should take into consideration the advisability of nationalizing the Canadian Pacific Railway," has been placed on the order paper of the House of Commons by Robert Gardiner (U.F.A., Acadia). The main object of the proposal, Mr. Gardiner said to-day, was to avoid waste and duplication in connection with the two great Canadian systems.

Supreme Court Hears Appeal Of Steinberg

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21 (C.P.).—The appeal of Abraham Steinberg from a conviction for the murder of Samuel Goldberg at Toronto is being heard by the Supreme Court of Canada to-day. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., counsel for Steinberg, argued that Mr. Justice Jeffrey, the trial judge, had not properly directed the jury in the case.

The appeal comes before the Supreme Court of Canada after the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario refused to upset the conviction, although two judges delivered dissenting judgments.

EXPERT REPAIRING OF SHOES PROMISED

Model Electric Shoe Repair Absolutely Guarantees All Its Work.

When the heel of your shoe becomes worn on one side, when rough or stony walks give your feet pain, or there is a broken part in the upper, it is time to visit the Model Electric Shoe Repair. They repair your shoes in the best way to give you the longest number of walking miles. All work performed by them carries an absolute guarantee and, if you wish, they will call for and deliver to any part of the city. If you have foot troubles tell them about it and they will rebuild your shoes to overcome the trouble. When your shoes are run over on one side they should be built high on that side. If you have weak arches you should have the sole built up on the inside to keep the weight off of the arches. It makes no difference what your foot troubles are, the Model Eelectric Shoe Repair will eliminate the cause.

The average person waits until their feet are upon the ground before thinking of having their shoes repaired. A good shoe is built of good leather, both in uppers and soles, but even with these good qualities they will not stand excessive abuse. By this we mean wearing the shoe until there is not sufficient uppers left to securely fasten the new sole. The adage, "A Stitch in Time Saves Nine," may be correctly applied to shoes. The time to have them repaired is when the wear first begins to show, and you will find no place so well prepared to serve you as the Model Electric Shoe Repair They feature everything for both the repair and care of your shoes. In stock they carry laces and polishes for every type and color of shoe.

Mr. M. Veneranda, the owner and manager of the Model Electric Shoe Repair, sees to it that only the highest grade of leather goes into your shoes. He is a veteran in the business and you can depend upon his talented services. Just ask your neighbor—No doubt he or she has at sometime had shoes repaired there. If so they will undoubtedly advise you to do so also. Do you know the shoe repairing prices at the Model Electric Shoe Repair?

NORWOOD CHURCH CELEBRATES EIGHTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Dr. Kannawin of Toronto Delivers Two Splendid Addresses.

EDIFICE DECORATED.

NORWOOD, May 21. (Examiner Correspondence.)—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Norwood, celebrated their eighty-fifth anniversary on Sunday, May 17. The weather was delightful for the occasion while the church altar was a profusion of beautiful spring flowers.

Rev. Dr. Kannawin, of Toronto, delivered two very inspiring addresses to large congregations. Rev. A. C. Reeves in introducing Dr. Kannawin at the morning service, gave statistics which were very interesting to the present generation stating that the first Presbyterian services were held one hundred years ago 1931. The congregation of Norwood was organized in 1846, fifteen years later by Rev Walter M. Roger, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, making this the eighty-fifth anniversary. The first Presbyterian building opened July 12th 1851, while the corner stone of the present church was laid on May 17th 1878, fifty-three years ago the building was completed in 1879 and opened by the Rev. Dr. Fotheringham.

Rev. Dr. Kannawin took for his morning text "The Abundant Life." He said "we honor the memory of pioneers today with regard to the great purpose of Jesus' ministry expressed in the words: "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly" achieving his purpose. Jesus is using two instruments to day. First, The church which is like a river in its life giving power and second, The Bible."

In the afternoon, Dr. Kannawin gave an address to the Sunday school, while in the evening, he spoke particularly to the young people taking for his subject "The Parable of the Prodigal Son" who wasted so many things impressing upon the young people to-day to make the very best of their opportunities and not waste their young lives that the youth of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow.

Rev. G. E. Downing, pastor of the Baptist Church, read the scripture lesson while the congregation joined heartily in the singing of the old familiar hymns. In the morning the choir rendered the anthem "I love to tell the Story" duet parts taken by Miss Helen McNaughton and Miss Evelyn Godin, while Mrs. Jean Porter gave a splendid solo "Open the Gates of the Temple." In the evening the anthem was "Praise Ye the Lord." Mrs. Porter rendering another beautiful solo. Mrs. Leonard Sedgwick presided at the organ.

The usual annual congregation social followed on Monday evening, the flowers from the church being used to decorate the Sunday school hall, making a very attractive appearance.

Rev. A. C. Reeves presided while those assisting in the program were Mrs. Porter, Miss Ruth Wildman, Mrs. Mervin Baptie, Mrs. J. Rogers, Miss H. McNaughton and Mrs. Leonard Sedgwick ably acted as accompanist. Three splendid addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Lennox, of Havelock, Rev. Gordon Duncan, of Warkworth and Rev. Dr. Thompson, of Hastings, Dr. Thompson speaking particularly on history of synod and Presbytery during the past 100 years. His reminiscences were most interesting as he dwelt on a number of humorous situations.

Miss Muriel Darling Gives Report on Peterborough Convention.

DARTFORD, May 21 Examiner Correspondence).—The W.M.S. of Dartford was held at the home of Mrs. Lydia Atkinson on Saturday, May 16. The meeting was opened with a hymn after which the Lord's prayer was repeated. Mrs. Will Hopkins then read the scripture after which the business was discussed. Mrs. Warren Atkinson invited the ladies to her home for their June meeting. The roll call for the next meeting is to be answered by the name and address of some present missionary of Japan. Miss Carrie Atkinson then read Dr. Margaret McKeller's talk from the Cobourg Presbyterial. Mrs. Ward read the chapter from the book of study. Miss Dorcas Atkinson then lead in prayer after which Miss Muriel Darling gave part of her report on the Peterborough W.M.S. Convention. The meeting closed with the benediction. A dainty luncheon was then served by the hostess.

Y.P.S. AT LAKEFIELD CLOSES FOR SEASON

Members Present Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Kemp Silver Tea Service.

LAKEFIELD, May 21. (Examiner Correspondence.)—At the closing meeting of the season of the Young People's Society, of the Regent St. United Church held on Monday evening, a very pleasing feature was the presentation to Rev. and Mrs. D. A. Kemp, of a silver tea service on behalf of the young people of the church, as a lasting tribute of the affectionate regard which they feel for Mr. and Mrs. Kemp, who have been outstanding friends of youth. The presentation was made by Miss Margaret Richardson and Mr. Stanley Darling and an address was read by Mrs. Stanley Richardson, expressing the feelings of the Society, most of the members have grown up during the six years residence of the Kemps and who learned their first lesson of individual services for the church from these kind friends and wise counsellors. The boys began in most cases in the Tuxis Square or Trail Ranger groups and the girls in the C.G.I.T. movement and the result has been a strong young people's society with a membership enthusiastic for service and better living and higher thinking.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemp were deeply touched by the remembrance which was unexpected and a very delightful surprise to them both. In replying, they spoke of the approaching separation which however will not be so very great in mileage and there will be interchange of visits to keep us close together.

Mrs. Jones contributed a reading and Mrs. MacMillen a solo, while Mr. Burrows gave a short talk on Temperance. These items were all appreciated and added much to the pleasure of all present. A floral spelling match was held, the prizes which were donated by Mrs. Richardson were won by Mrs. MacMillen and Mr. A. E. Higgins. Refreshments were served and the gathering dispersed. The young people's society will re-open in the autumn.

LODGE CELEBRATES 26TH ANNIVERSARY

Veterans of 25 Years in Lakefield I.O.O.F. No. 358 Are Presented Jewels.

LAKEFIELD, May 21. (Examiner Correspondence.)—On Monday evening, the Lakefield Lodge No. 358 I.O.O.F. celebrated the 26th anniversary of its inauguration and a very delightful evening was spent. There were several visitors from other lodges of the order and some of the old members who had moved from the village, returned and the occasion was a friendly re-union with an opportunity at the close for informal chat and reminiscences. J. H. Chant, of Unionville, a charter member of the Lakefield branch, was one of the oldest if not the oldest member present, being a forty five year veteran.

Charter members, who had joined in May 17, 1905, who were present, were presented with 25 year Veteran Jewels on behalf of the lodge by District Deputy James Price, of Peterborough, they were: F. J. Burgess, E. J. Butter, W. J. Charlton, S. J. Charlton, D. H. Charlton, Theo. Crawford, Bert. Dans, R. S. English, Bruce Garbutt, H. C. Garbutt, G. G. Hendren, George E. Johnson, David Miller and G. H. Spence.

Among the absent veterans entitled to the Jewels were: J. E. Kelly, Bert. Kidd, F. E. Kline and R. D. Murduff.

The chairman for the occasion was Bro. W. G. Morrison, who by his inimitable wit and his fine enthusiasm kept the program going along well and the enjoyment of the evening will long remain a very happy memory. The District Committee presented Bro. James Price with a past District Deputy's Jewel, a well earned and highly appreciated honor.

Refreshments were served at the close of the formal program and a very happy evening was spent. The officers of the Lakefield Lodge are:

N. G., Bro. Percy Darling; V. G., Bro. Charles Lee; R. S., Bro. F. J. Burgess, P.G.; F. S., Bro. N. A. Moore, P. G.; Treasurer, Bro. W. G. Morrison, P.G.; Warden, Bro. Clarence Bell; Conductor, Bro. A Tonic for Run-Down Purses

A & P ESTABLISHED 1859 "WHERE ECONOMY RULES"

If your pocketbook is thin and run down, or just suffering from that tired feeling, the chances are it's not getting the right food. For purses, like humans, soon waste away on the wrong diet.

There's no tonic in the world for overworked, delicate pocketbooks like an A & P diet. Try buying your food exclusively at an A & P store for a while and watch your purse start to perk up. Within a week it will be gaining weight, and by the end of the month it will be so fat you will probably have to start reducing it on some extra silk stockings or something. . . . Millions of purses are healthier because their owners trade in A & P stores.

New Gas Used to Ripen Fruit Costs Less Than $1.00 Per Car.

EXPERIMENT IN CANADA

(By Michael O'Mayo)

If you were to visit the orange and lemon groves of "sunny" California at picking time, you'd be astonished at the greenness of the fruit packed for distant shipment. Yet when you buy a dozen at Smith's corner store they are a pleasing golden color. They have been gassed to make them glow!

The flaming radiance of the tomato is not a gift of the sun. It is the result of a goodly dose of ethylene, first cousin to the stuff you put into your automobile to stop cylinder noises.

Thousands of years ago the Chinese ripened pears and other fruits by placing them in tightly closed rooms and burning incense round them. Centuries later fruit shippers on this continent have discovered that if they kept a small kerosene stove alight in their iced cars, orange and lemons and bananas changed color rapidly. Enter, then, the era of the stinking stove!

Six years ago Dr. Denny, of the Boyce-Thompson Institute for Plant Research at Yonkers, decided to investigate. He began treating green citrus fruits with the various odors that every lamp owner knows, and discovered that one of them alone—ethylene—produced the desired coloration, even when mixed with air in such small proportions as one to a million. Exit the bothersome stoves!

Professor R. B. Harvey, of the University of Minnesota, by a series of elaborate tests, perfected this new method of ripening frhits and vegetables. He experimented with bananas and found that liberal doses of ethylene gas speeds-up the decomposition of the green pigment called chlorophyll into colorless compounds and gives the yellow pigments known as carotinoids a chance. The time needed to ripen green bananas was greatly reduced with surprising results. Chemical analyses of the various fruits proved that the sugar content was increased; that there was less loss of water and weight and that greater amounts of banana oil were consequences of gassing the green fruits. But most important of all his discovery was that this artificial ripening prevented rotting.

Doing it in Canada.

Similar results have recently been secured at the Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Fredericton, N.B. Elaborate tests at that Canadian institution prove that the employment of ethylene gas forces the yield of extra early tomatoes. Picked green, one variety of tomatoes yielded an increase of 87 per cent in the first three weeks of picking. Allowed to ripen naturally on the vines, this variety yield 47 tomatoes weighing 11½ pounds. Nearby fruits were given identical treatment except that they were picked green and subjected to ethylene treatment with the result that 91 tomatoes weighing 21½ pounds were ripened in the same time.

A wide range of fruits and vegetables can be so treated. Celery, pineapples, oranges, lemons, grapefruits, limes, apples and cantaloupes are among the products now being treated on a large scale and successfully with ethylene gas.

"Fruits keep better if picked before they are mature," Professor Harvey informed the writer. "The ripening process softens the cell walls, making the ripe fruits more susceptible to bruising. Nor must you forget that ripe fruits constitute the finest of food for destructive fungi, and that's very important. Ripe tomatoes are available for only a few weeks in the year. For the rest of the year they must be shipped from Florida, Texas and the Bahamas. Picked green, these southern fruits have been ripened by heat with the deplorable result that half carloads have been destroyed by fungi before arrival. The judicious application of ethylene gas during shipment prevents this loss with the result that not only does the housewife enjoy better tomatoes but at a lower price."

A Dollar a Carload

"How much does this new ripening process cost?" I enquired.

'For less than a dollar it is possible to ripen a whole carload of fruit" was his astonishing reply.

Ethylene has other and equally surprising uses. Dr. Denny has discovered how to awaken potted lilacs from their frozen dozing; how to quicken gladioli into leaf after their thirsty sleep. More! He has awakened dormant spuds to life with the aid of this gas.

Every farm boy knows, of course, that if you plant a newly dug potato it will not sprout. Spuds demand three or four months sleep depending on the variety and the place from which they come. And much the same is true of a wide range of plants.

Enter the scientist with his amazing discovery that ethylene will break down this period of dormancy—much to the delight of truck-gardeners and florists. The latter, for instance can now offer lilacs in bloom at Christmas whilst Canadian housewives will soon be enjoying new potatoes at the same unseasonable time.

ANCIENT OSTIA BEING REVEALED

Port of Rome, Powerful In Trade Fifteen Centuries Ago, Rises From Dust.

"KILLED BY THE SEA"

OSTIA, Italy, May 21 (By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—Ostia—Rome by the sea—is rising again from the accumulated rubbish of centuries.

Little by little as excavations proceed, Ostia, after 15 centuries of oblivion, is revealing how the old Romans lived and worked and thought and died. For Ostia differs from the more familiar monuments of Rome itself. It has no great palaces of the Cæsars such as tower in massive ruins from the slopes of the Palatine Hill. It has no great coliseum with its endless tragedy of the martyrdoms and massacres that made a Roman holiday. Ostia has its baths, its theatre, its temple to Jupiter, its forum. But it is rather in its row on row of houses of the common people, in its regularly laid streets, its byways, that Ostia lives again.

For Ostia was founded as the port of Rome when the first kings ruled from the Capitoline Hill. Under the Republic, it became a great port of trade. To Ostia, the Romans brought their wheat from Egypt. There, in great granaries, they stored enough in bulk, to feed the heart of mighty Rome for a year. Obelisks still standing in the squares of Rome were brought from Egypt by way of Ostia. Under the Empire, Ostia grew until its population reached 100,000, Rome itself numbered a million and a half.

Ostia was killed by the receding sea. Year by year, the sea crept slowly back. The mouth of the Tiber silted up. The course of the river changed. Gradually the Romans left it. Invading Barbarians pillaged it. Succeeding centuries covered it with dust and rubbish. And the giant ruins of Ostia now rise from green fields a mile and a quarter from the sea.

Yet one cannot wander its paved streets, in and out of its red brick houses, without a thrill. Here is a line of old shops. On the pavment outside, worked in mosiac, a leather dealer advertises wares brought from the ends of the Empire. A wood merchant proudly announces his fuel. A silversmith, his workmanship. A little further, a house rises to the balcony. Empty niches mark where once stood little statues of household gods. The walls of a restaurant tell in pictured fresco of excellent fare. In stately splendor, a merchant from the East built his home

Across the forum, facing the old temple of Jupiter, stands a marble statue. Its arms are broken. It glows in the setting sun.

With one foot firmly planted on the world, it pictures a Rome that was.

DESCRIBES NU-ERB AS A MEDICINE WORTHY OF NATION-WIDE ATTENTION

Says That Every Canadian Man and Woman Who Suffers Should Know of Its Merits.

TREVOR WERTHEIM.

"After what Dr. French's NU-ERB has done for me I do not hesitate to say that every man and woman who is not well should know of this wonderful medicine," said Mr. Trevor Wortheim, Peterborough, in a recent interview with the NU-ERB Specialist now located at Bond's Drug Store in this city.

"As the result of a serious illness and operation last fall my entire system was in a terribly worn-out and run-down condition. I actually suffered a complete nervous breakdown and was continually bothered with a sour stomach, gas and heartburn. Constipation was a condition which I simply could not overcome. I lost 17 lbs. and all of my strength and vitality seemed to go along with the seventeen pounds when it disappeared.

"An announcement in The Peterborough Examiner to the effect that I could get a free sample of Dr. French's NU-ERB led me to try this wonderful medicine.

"Although it is hard to believe, yet it is absolutely true that at the end of the third day when I had finished my sample of Dr. French's NU-ERB my condition was already much improved. Of course, I immediately purchased a further supply of this medicine and it is making me feel better every day. My strength is coming back and I have more pep than I have had in a good long time. So far I have used about two bottles of Dr. French's NU-ERB and am gaining back some of the 17 lbs. I lost. Needless to say the sour stomach, gas and heartburn are all things of the past now and I never have to resort to harsh cathartics anymore to get relief from constipation."

QUESTION OF TONGUE EXTENDS TO NURSES

South African Medical Men Discuss Question of Bilingualism in Examinations.

KROONSTAD, South Africa, May 21 (By The Canadian Press).—The use of either English or Afrikaans in the oral exam nation of nurses was discussed at a meeting of the Northern Free State Hospita Board recently. The discussion aros out of a consideration of sev ral resolutions taken by the Board of the National Hospital at Bloemfontein on bilingualism in nurses' examinations. These resolutions were submitted to the Kroonstad Board with a request for its support in representing them to the Minister of the Interior.

The resolution which caused most discussion read as llows: "That in respect of oral examinations no examiner b: appointed to conduct an examination in a medium which is not his ot her home language." It was pointed out that there were many doctors whose language was Afrikaans but who had received all their training in Rnglish.

Dr. C. H. Derksen, a prominent medical authority in the Orange Free State, took his own case as an example: "My home language is Afrikaans," he said, "but as I studied in Edinburgh, all my training was in English. I could not possibly translate all the medicinal terms into Afrikaans, and I could give a lecture far better in English than in Afrikaans."

The view was expressed that the resolution was carrying things too far. It was pointed out that a doctor trained in Holland, for instance, might have to onduct an oral examination of English nurses in which case the candidates would never understand the Dutch terms used. It was considered far better to leave the candidate to choose her own language and examine her in that medium.

The secretary explained that the trouble had arisen over the fact that Dr. Leipoldt was stated to have made incorrect translations of some questions put in English at a recent examination. Dr. Derksen said that about 90 per cent. of the doctors practising in South Africa whose home language was Afrikaans, had received their training in England, so that it would be absurd to pass the resolution.

It was decided not to agree with the resolution but to communicate further with the Bloemfontein Board. The following resolution from Bloemfontein was unanimously agreed to: "That in respect of written examinations, for which candidates present themselves in both official languages, the panel of examiners be so arranged that one at least be English-speaking and one Afrikaans-speaking."

Loves Public Posts; Age Not Burdensome

Sir James O'Grady, at 65, Pleased With Prospect of Governing Falkland Islands.

LONDON, May 21 (By the Canadian Press)—Some British newspapers have been commenting on Sir James O'Grady, at the age of 65, undertaking the new position to which he has been appointed by the Labor Government, that is, Governor of the Falkland Islands, after having recently concluded six years of responsibility as Governor of Tasmania, but Sir James himself claims that he is yet a comparatively young man and still fit for important work and responsibilities.

"When I think of the fine work being done in all parts of the world by handfuls of our men, I cannot bear the thought of settling down and doing nothing," he said recently in an interview here. "It is not in my make-up to do so. Not long ago I was at Lagos, in West Africa, and I saw how they had transformed the place. They are a fine set of men, whom I am proud to accept as an example.

"Who wants to settle down when you can take part in such fine work? I am going out to the Falkland Islands with new life. I did not ask to go. I was asked and I replied: 'It is for you tosay If you think I should go, go I will.'

"I do not know anything about the islands yet, and I do not imagine that life will be lonely because they are so far away. I anticipate meeting active people with plenty of work to do, and I intend to help them to grapple with their problems and work with them."

TWEED, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence.)—A splendid entertainment was given in the auditorium recently, being sponsored by the Tweed Hockey Club when the program was largely made up of vocal numbers by Mrs. Stobie and Mrs. F. F. Houston, of Belleville; Mrs. R. C. Fawcett and Miss Dorothy Sager of Tweed, Mr. Allen of Belleville gave a number of piano solos and little Paula Fawcett made her debut with, "The Sidewalks of New York." Dr. Locke contributed some violin numbers followed by an exhibition of club swinging by Mr. Davis. Mr. Moffat gave a reading and a musical skit was presented in which the following took part: Mrs. Dales, Mrs. Connor, Mrs. Fawcett, Mrs. Grier, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Davis, Dr. Dales, and Messrs. Hindle Connor, Shanque, Boland, Smith Jones, Way Davis, Clark, McGee and Luffman, it being part'cularly well staged.

W. S. Gordon presided for the entertainment.

The three vacancies on the High School staff have been filled by Miss Maud Hammett, of Tweed, Miss Clive Straeight, of Toronto and T. J. Calnan, of Toronto.

R. H. Ketcheson of Belleville, Chief Census Commissioner for South Hastings, was in Tweed recently, instructing the enumerators.

W.M.S. MEETS.

The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday with Mrs. Way in charge when Mrs. Robinson read the Devotional Leaflet and Mrs. Way contributed a reading. Reports of the Branch meeting held at Peterborough were given by Mesdames Hicks and Cook. Mrs. Tummon favored the gathering with a solo and a chapter of the Study Book was taken by Mrs. Moffat. At the close of the meeting tea was served and a social hour spent.

ST. PAUL'S CLUB.

Marmora Society Hears Interesting Talks by D. E. Bell and Rev. M. Levason.

MARMORA, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Men's Club of St. Paul's Church held another very interesting meeting at the White Hall, Marmora, on Wednesday evening, C. H. Busk presiding over an attendance of twenty-seven. Under general business, it was decided to only have one meeting in June and to call off those for July and August. Final arrangements were made for the holding of an open social on Wednesday, May 27 at which a checker contest will be one of the features. The program for the evening sustained the good reputation which the club has enjoyed for its programs. After community singing, D. E. Bell gave an excellent talk on his observations made during a trip to Victoria, B. C., last year. J. F. Baker then sang a comic song in his customary pleasing style. A talk quite out of the ordinary and most edifying was given by Rev. M. J. C. Levason, on "Clocks." Light refreshments were served at the close.

At Trent River

Miss Josephine Terry has as her guest for over the holiday, Miss Ethel Mason, of Meamsville. Miss Mason is owner of the Farmerette Camp there, having 85 young girls from all parts of Ontario, for July for fruit picking. Miss Mason supplies fifty fruit farmers with girls to pick fruit. These girls, during this time, secure their accommodation with Miss Mason, having two bunkhouses and eight tents for their use. This is Miss Mason's first visit to Trent River and she is delighted with the natural scenic beauty of this popular resort.

Mr. John Boyd left Tuesday for Sudbury, after spending a few days with his uncle, Mr. John Boyd.

Mr. Hoffman, of Cleveland, guest at "Maple Inn," Cook cottage, has been successful in catching some fine pickerel this week.

CORDOVA MINES

Miss Hattie Spry, of Toronto, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. L. Spry and her brother, James Spry.

Mr. Wright, of Seattle, Wash., Evangelist, conducted services last week at the Free Methodist Church here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Barrons and family, spent the week-end at Oshawa, the guests of Mrs. Barrons' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker. They were accompanied home by Mr. Wannamaker, who will remain here for a visit with his daughter and family.

Miss Evelyn Steenburg, of Havelock spent Sunday with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton, of Beaver Creek, spent Sunday with Mr and Mrs. James Kennedy.

Mr. Jack Wiggins, of Havelock, spent the week-end with his brother Jack, here.

An effort is being made to have a branch of the Women's Institutes formed here. It is understood that the District Director will pay a visit to Cordova Mines some day in the very near future. To those who are familiar with Institute work this will be welcome news. Many good things are given by the government free, to members of the Institute. Free literature on many phases of domestic and farm interests are distributed and courses of various kinds are to be had through the medium of an Institute branch. There are short courses in Home Nursing, Dressmaking and Millinery, Domestic Science, etc. which the Institute sponsors, and for which skilled instructresses are sent out by the Government to any branch requesting the same. Those interested in the formation of an Institute branch here will do well to get together and work with this end in view.

At Stirling

On Tuesday evening the Men's Bowling Club gave a dance in the community hall. The hall was well filled, many from Madoc, Belleville and Campbellford attending. Music was supplied by Charlie Allen and his orchestra.

Kenneth Stapley made a total of 99 out of 100 points in the rifle shoot, thus winning the Strathcona medal. Reginald Clark came second making a score of 98.

The school gardens are very beautiful under Mr. Lambs care. The tulips are among the finest in the village.

Mr. John Tanner has been appointed sanitary inspector for the village.

Mrs. Ross Coulter, R.N., gave a lesson in first-aid to the girl guides on Tuesday afternoon.

Warsaw

The baseball games played at the United Church Entertainment were for the seniors, Warsaw, 7 and Lakefield, 4; and for the juniors, Lakefield, 23, Warsaw, 10. A large number attended the United Church entertainment on Tuesday evening. Mr. Henry Batten, president of the choir, was chairman at the beginning. After the first number he put the program in charge of Rev. J. W. Wilkinson. The following numbers were given:

Male voice quartette, "Annie Laurie" with all joining in the chorus. Solo, Mrs. Hull, of Lakefield, "The Old-fashioned Town"; encore, "Just a wearyin' for you"; reading, Mr. W. S. Anderson, "Engineer Bill," encore, "The Deacon's Calf"; Mrs. Porter, of Norwood, solo, "Peg Away," encore, "Smilin' thru"; reading, Mrs. Fred Crowe, "Pamola Describes her Wedding Trip," and "Hunting the Mouse"; duet, Mrs. Hull and Mr. H. Batten, "Springtime in the Rockies," encore, "The Little Old Garden"; reading, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, "Lasca"; male voice quartette, "She Sleeps" and "Let the Lower Lights be Burning"; solo, Mr. Petrie, "In Your old Sunbonnet," encore, "When Father Papers the Parlor"; solo, Mrs. Hull, "In The Garden of Tomorrow"; solo, Mrs. Porter, "The Little Irish Girl"; solo, Mr. Petrie, "When the War Breaks out in Mexico."

Mr. Wilkinson thanked the people for coming, and those who had taken part. The receipts at the gates, and the booth were satisfactory. The evening was pleasant. God Save The King.

LOOKING AT THE NEWS

Improvement in letter writing by the elimination of stock phrases as "your letter received and contents noted" is urged by Governor Pinchot. Personally we would be satisfied to receive letters pared to the bone so long as they continue three words: "Enclosed find cheque."

* * *

The Duke of Wellington was master of concise letter writing. His reply to the woman who threatened to publish certain correspondence contained only seven words: Dear Fanny—Publish and be damned, Wellington.

* * *

And yet there was something stately about other letters written a hundred or so years ago, ending thus: "I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient and obliged servant.'

* * *

That was the way they did it when it had to be done by hand, now with labor-saving devices, we purpose exchanging courtesy for curtness.

* * *

The art of letter writing is well-nigh lost, thanks partly to the stenographer and typewriter, no one today writes such letters as made Mary Wortley Montague and Madame de Sevigne famous. When they took pen in hand they had things to say, and they said them. They didn't mind the time or the work. Their thoughts flowed from head to pen to paper. To-day, the convenience, or embarrassment, of stenographer and typewriters seems to freeze the genial current. What dreary, artificial stuff Pepy's Diary and Greville's Memoirs would have been if those industrious gossipers had used typewriters? There's no use telling people now to "Use the pen—there's magic in it." If Horace Walpole were living to-day he wouldn't use it because it would delay his golf game.

* * *

All that the "modern conveniences" have done is to make us look for further efficiency, hence the proposal to cut out all the forms of polite correspondence such as "In reply to yours of even date," and "thanking you in anticipation." The fact is that the less we have to do and the more help we have in doing it the less we want to do. Mechanization has thrown thousands of manual laborers out of employment and has but incited us to reduce the work of our machines.

* * *

Modern authors will continue to turn out books by dictation, but we shall have no such diary as Evelyn's and no books made up of casual letters all the more interesting because not intended for publication. That's where our descendants would have received their best insight into the manners and customs of our time, and the most candid criticism of men and affairs. But they are not going to get them from us as we got them from our leisurely yet painstaking forbears.

* * *

Conscience money is still being received, showing that the still small voice can yet be heard occasionally over the noise of radio and the roar of traffic. One man sends a railway company enough to pay transportation for a child because on one occasion he misrepresented the age. And he lives in Los Angeles where Aimee Semple's temple stands. But the palm still belongs to the man who many years ago sent $20 to the treasury at Washington because nineteen years before, he had defrauded the customs, and his conscience had been troubling him. In a postscript he added: "When my conscience troubles me again I'll remit the balance." He is not the first, nor the last, to compound with that importunate creditor.

* * *

With Rt. Rev. Isaac O. Stringer, B.A., D.D., now the archbishop of Rupert's Land, "The path of duty was the road to glory." Almost forty years ago, on being graduated from Wycliffe, he went into the Arctic region as an Anglican minister among the Eskimos, a thousand miles away from a railway and the comforts and conveniences of modern civilization. Letters to and from him were lost months in transit. In 1911 he was lost for over a month and when found by Indians he was reduced almost to a skeleton. Hardships and privations were no detriment to him. He sought no easy path and did his work without thought of earthly glory. His elevation to the bishopric of the Yukon and now to archbishopric, is a tribute to the zeal and devotion, the courage and intrepidity of a great missionary. I. O. Stringer and the writer of this column went to school together at Kincardine, Ontario, boarded at the same house and slept in the same room. Of course, he had other advantages beside that, indeed it is quite possible that even if we hadn't roomed together, he might still have became an archbishop. You can never tell. The influence of early environments opens up a larger field for interesting speculations.

SAILS FOR ENGLAND

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21 (C.P.)—Maurren Orcutt of Englewood, N.J., winner of the Metropolitan Women's Golf Championship for the past four years, sailed last night in quest of the British Women's Championship, a title which no United States player has yet captured. The tournament will be played over the Portmarnock course in Ireland, beginning June 8.

Showing Canada to Canadians

Canadians like to speak of this country's magnificent distances, the potentialities of boundless prairies, the matchless scenery of mountain and valley, of our frontage on two oceans, but this very vastness contains within it the seed of discord and misunderstanding. The remedy for such ills is knowledge, and whatever tends to broaden the scope of our Canadian experience develops at the same time our appreciation and understanding of problems which are none the less national because their immediate effect is within the Maritime area, or the Prairies, or British Columbia.

Certainly no Canadian knows his Dominion who has not travelled through the West, through wheat fields, which extend for hundreds of miles, dotted with thriving towns and flourishing cities, and then beyond the scenic Rockies to the lovely coast province. In order that residents of the Eastern Provinces might the easier become acquainted with the West, the Canadian Pacific Railway some years ago organized an annual tour "Across Canada and Back." To-day it is announced that the eighth of these tours, personally conducted by Dean Sinclair Laird, of Macdonald College, Quebec, will set out from Toronto on July 27 and in three weeks afford its fortunate members the privilege of travelling some thousands of miles by rail, steamer, and automobile, to traverse four provinces and visit a score of cities.

The tour has much to commend it. The itinerary has been planned with great care to assure a maximum of pleasure and profit and a minimum of personal inconvenience, and is inevitable that the special trains which carry the party will bring back to Toronto on August 17 better all-round Canadians, than they take into the West.

This Practical Beautiful Inexpensive KITCHEN FLOOR . . .

Was Sponsored by Miss Mary-Etta Macpherson . . . co-operating in the recently completed Pattern Selection Contest

Brighten busy kitchen hours with a colourful Dominion Inlaid Linoleum floor: a practical floor that cannot wear out and one that light mopping keeps spotlessly clean.

In fact there isn't a room in the house in which Dominion Inlaid Linoleum cannot be laid to advantage. Designs have been created expressly for each; some gaily colourful, others restfully mellow, but each an artistic masterpiece.

Choose to your taste for every room and give your decorative flair full scope. For, with Dominion Inlaid Linoleum as a basis, you are following the practice of leading interior decorators who always start with the floor.

Dominion Linoleum Rugs and Dominion Printed Linoleum also afford unusual decorative scope. Long-wearing, inexpensive. Designs for every room.

JURY CAUTIONS MOTOR DRIVERS

Gordon Ferrill and Roy Scott Met Death Through Car Accident.

EXCESSIVE SPEED.

LINDSAY, Ont., May 21.— (Special to The Examiner.)—Inquest into the death of Gordon Ferrill and Roy Scott, both of Harcourt (Haliburton county) was resumed at Lindsay yesterday. Several witnesses were examined by Crown Attorney Anderson before Coroner Logan. It was pointed out that the four young men, Messrs. Gordon Ferrill and Roy Scott (both deceased) and Levi Bower and a brother of Ferrill, were returning from Lindsay at the time of the accident; that they had passed a wagon on the road half a mile from the scene of the accident and that the speed of the car had been increased; that the road was somewhat narrow and that the car ascended a small knoll and apparently was travelling at such a rate of speed as to leave the ground temporarily for a few feet. The car swerved to the west and then to the right east side of the road, with fatal results. All four occupants of the car were thrown out, the two in the front seat dying from their injuries, while the two in the rumble seat practically escaped uninjured.

The following verdict was introduced:

"The death of Gordon Ferrill and Roy Scott was caused by an automobile accident on the boundary road between Victoria and Peterborough counties on Saturday, May 9th, 1931, when the car in which they were travelling from Lindsay to Harcourt left the road two and a half miles south of Kinmount, due to being driven at an excessive speed for a narrow road, causing serious internal injuries which resulted in the death of the said Gordon Ferrill who died in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, Ont., on May 10th, about noon, and Roy Scott, who died in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, on May 11th about noon. Note—As a warning to others we strongly advise all motorists to refrain from indulgence in intoxicants."

OFFERS COMMUNITY BETTER LAUNDERING

Modern Systems, Limited, Have Business Down to Science—Also Clean and Dye.

The Modern Systems, Limited are an indispensable factor of the latter day business and social life. So well does this concern meet the popular demand for better laundering, cleaning and dyeing that they have become one of the essential features of the community. They know by science and experience exactly how to remove those aggravating spots that get on ones clothes in the most unexpected manner. When your garments are sent to this establishment every trace of soil is promptly and efficiently eradicated, every vestige of style is precisely restored. The service rendered by the Modern Systems, Ltd. makes good dressing sensible and economical. There, too, experts will tint your garments to the exact shade specified. This dyeing service is more than satisfactory—including the price.

For years the Modern Systems, Limited have served the people of Peterborough and environs. In the past eighteen months, under the able management of Mr. Thomas Wheeler, they have made rapid strides. Innumerable homes now send to them everything that they want clean and fresh—laundry, suits, delicate dresses, curtains, etc. Their excellent laundry work, together with the superior service and low cost, is driving wash day drudgery from the homes of our city. Women are fast learning that they cannot, themselves, do their washing so cheaply as can the Modern Systems, Limited.

At this progressive establishment there is a personnel that is ever striving to give even greater satisfaction and there is a department for everything. They will be pleased to take care of your laundry and dry cleaning needs and you will find them well worthy of your patronage. We take pleasure in congratulating these veteran launderers, cleaners and dyers upon their wonderful success, their progressive business methods and the capability of their management. Do you know prices on two services rendered by the Modern Systems, Limited?

Orphanage Tag Dag To Be Held Saturday

The tag day for St. Vincent's Orphanage will be held this Saturday, May 23rd. The small children who live in the big house on the hill and the gentle Sisters who look after them pray for good weather on the annual tag day. Even a peaceful saint, secure in a celestial home, may, they believe, turn a kindly ear to requests for a warm sun, on a day when little children are to be helped. The kindly St. Vincent who looked after small children during his time on earth, keeps guard over the altar in the little white chapel at the Orphanage, and there the small boys go regularly to say their morning and evening prayers and to ask the good patron of their home to help them in many small ways.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, May 21.—With receipts of eggs down at least 25 per cent. from the peak of production, prices on the local market have lately shown a gradual strengthening, and yesterday a definite upward move was made. It only involved the top grade, however, which with the coming of warmer weather has become scarce, but the advance in prices on graded lots was ½c to 1c on extras and country shippers and retailers 1c per dozen on extras.

Egg Prices

Country shippers were quoted 18c for extras, 15c for firsts and 13c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Retailers were offered extras in cartons at 24c, extras, loose, 22c; firsts, loose, 19c, and seconds, loose, 17c. Brokers quoted graded eggs in free used cases at 20½c to 21c per dozen for extras, 18c for firsts and 15c for seconds, and carlots of Prairie eggs at 21½c for extras, 18½c for firsts and 15c for seconds, in new cases.

Butter

Late Tuesday afternoon and yesterday local brokers were able to secure 20½c for large lots of high scoring No. 1 creamery solids, which was ½c better than previously obtainable. The general price ranges were 20c to 20½c for No. 1 buyers, and 19c to 19½c for No. 2, but buyers were active and brokers were not hard pressed to clear receipts of choice lots at the top figures. They were asking prices of 21c for No. 1 Western butter and 20c for No 2, but most shipments went on to Montreal on this basis, the freight being the same to the Quebec city and the market there able to absorb supplies on the 21c level.

Cream

There were various reports as to cream prices throughout the Province but Toronto creameries were quoting steady figures at 21c to 22c for specials, 20c to 21c for No. 1 and 17c to 18c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points.

Cheese

Brokers quoted new cheese at prices level with those of Tuesday and trading was slow to fair. New large was offered at 10c, twins at 10¼c and triplets at 10½c. Prices to retailers continued steady at 11½c for new large, 11¾c for twins and 12c for triplets.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, May 21. — On the produce and dairy market here yesterday butter prices advanced and potato quotations were irregularly lower, while egg and cheese prices held unchanged.

The butter market, No. 1 finest fresh pasteurized in carlots gained a quarter of a cent at 20¾c to 21c a pound. To retailers solids and prints were unchanged at 2 and 23 cents a pound, respectively. Receipts were 450 boxes.

New No. 1 Florida potatoes per 160-pound barrel lost 75 cents at $6.25 and No. 2 stock was 50 cents lower at $4.50. New Brunswick Green Mountains, in carlots, per 80-pound bag, or 90 pounds bulk, were unchanged at 60 to 70 cents, and to retailers at 70 to 80 cetns per 80-pound bag. New No. 1 Bermudas were unchanged at $2.25 per 50-pound box. Prince Edward Island whites were quoted at 80 to 83 cents per 90 pounds and Quebec whites were 60 to 70 cents per 80 pounds.

Carlot prices of fresh Ontario and Prairie eggs were unchanged extras being quoted at 21 to 22 cents, firsts at 18 cents and seconds at 15 cents a dozen. British Columbia fresh extras and firsts, in carlots, were unchanged at 22 to 3 cents and 19 to 20 cents respectively. Quotations to retailers were unchanged. Receipts were 7,908 cases.

Ontario cheese was unchanged at 9¾ to 10 cents a pound and Quebec cheese was quoted at 9¼ cents a pound. Receipts were 372 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 21. — Active buying, with sellers scarce, accompanied upturns in wheat prices yesterdayy. The market was nervous over unconfirmed rumors of a revolution in Russia and because of predicted frost last night in Kansas and Nebraska. Crop damage from freezing temperatures in Canada was also a bullish factor, and there were advices of crop deterioration in Southwestern Kansas owing to lack of moisture.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼c off to &c up; corn at ¼c decline to ½c advance; oats a shade to ⅝c high, and provisions varying from 2c setback to 7c gain.

Wheat closed at the highest prices of the day during the early dealings. An advantage to the bear side resulted from temporary complete absence of any reports of actual damage by frost on Tuesday night and because current advices indicated some drought relief in Canada. Subsequently, however, wheat rallied strongly after forecasts were out pointing to freezing temperatures both in winter and spring wheat territory last night.

LIVERPOOL QUOTATIONS.

LIVERPOOL, May 21.—(Closing).

Wheat—Spot nominal.

Hams—Long cut 12 to 16 lbs., 79s; short cut, 12 to 14 lbs., 73s; extra skinned, 99s; picnics, 5 to 8 lbs., 54s.

Petroleum—No. 1, 11d; No. 2, 1s.

Rosin—Types 'F' and 'G' 14s 6d.

Turpentine—Aspirits 47s.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 21. — Frost reports from Prairie areas influenced wheat values here yesterday, and at the close net gains of ⅝c to 1 cent a bushel had been recorded.

The May future closed at 60¼c, July 61½c to 61⅝c, and October 63¼c to 63½c.

Scattered buying by local interests constituted the main support, but the amount of wheat offered for sale was light, with outside buyers staying away from the pit yesterdayy. Overnight export trade was meagre.

Cash wheat demand improved, but sales were limited by light offerings. Coarse grains trade was quiet.

Persons Liable for Refusing Information—Officials Under Oath of Secrcey.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — A squad of eight persons will be busy next month in the Township of Seymour taking the Dominion census with an additional four in the town of Campbellford. The enumerators for Seymour, according to school districts, are as follows: 1, West's, Ralph Locke; 2, Connelley's Reginald McCollough; 3, English Line, Miss Phyllis Haig; 4, Menie, Harry B. Atkinson; 5, Petherick's, Victor Irwin; 6, Stanwood, Chester Irwin; 7, Meyersburg, William Fraser; 8, Trent River, Melville Wight.

For the town of Campbellford: Ward 1, W. I. Stillman; Ward 2, William Hume; Ward 3, Mrs. W. J. Abernethy; Ward 4, Hylton Coxwell.

People of the town and township are asked ot give every possible help to the enumerators. According to a proclamation in the Canada Gazette, persons refusing to give the necessary information will be subject to a fine.

On the other hand, for the protection of the persons furnishing information, it is pointed out that every officer, agent or other person employed in the taking of the census is bound by oath and under a heavy penalty to keep secret all information secured.

BOGUE DRUG STORE CARRIES FINE LINE

Carry Extensive Stock of Pure Standard Drugs, Sundries, Kodaks and Films.

For many years The Bogue Drug Store has been conducted as one of the finest retail drug establishments in this part of Ontario. They carry an extensive stock of pure standard drugs, sundries, kodaks and films, etc., and are agents for Neilson's ice cream and Willard's and Moir's chocolates. A post office sub-station is maintained there and they have the agency for the United Cigar Store. As chemists and druggists they render a service to their customers that is one of friends and advisors. You are always sure that any prescription taken to this store will be compounded carefully and correctly by a qualified registered pharmacist. Physicians of this section recommend The Bogue Drug Store as druggists who always use the right ingredients in the most exacting manner.

The drug and prescription business is a profession requiring scientific knowledge of medicine, chemistry, law and the ingredients, uses and functions of many thousands of articles that make for the security of the health of humanity. When we consider that a certain common drug which is frequently prescribed, produces wakefulness in doses of one-twentieth of a grain, and sleep in doses of one-eighth of a grain, we can readily understand the necessity of using standardized drugs, handled by competent, registered pharmacists. At The Bogue Drug Store you find a complete line of everything a good drug store should have. Their service is distinctly of value to the amateur photographer. There you may secure your films and paraphernalia, and when your snapshots have been made they will develop and print them in the best possible manner.

Mr. W. Stanley Bogue, Phm.B., the proprietor of The Bogue Drug Store, is a Peterborough man, who is ever active in the building of the community. We are pleased to offer our commendation of the service of his store. Do you know their prices on kodaks, and upon film printing and developing?

$3 cash prize given daily for neatest correct answers to questions in these articles. Call the above firm to assist you (Eight in today's issue).

Bethany Institute Will Stage Music Festival

BETHANY, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence)—The members of the Women's Institute held a special meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening when there were 16 ladies present.

The president wished to be relieved of her duties but owing to the unanimous feeling of those present, she was prevailed upon to continue in office with voluntary assistance of another member.

The school prize money was discussed at this meeting. A music festival is being prepared to be given in the future when the progress made by the pupils during the past year, will be noted. Mrs. Campbell is an efficient teacher and will have the full support of the surrounding community. Three schools will meet at the Bethany Hall.

As has been the efforts of the Society in the past, it will again have a sale of ice cream. Committees were appointed to purchase ice cream in Lindsay, transportation from there being suitable. A committee was also appointed to make out a schedule for those to wait on tables, each Saturday evening during the season. Two ladies were appointed a committee to wait on the council to secure permission for use of the hall and also permission to forward some other necessary work around the stage openings.

MARMORA W. I. NAMES OFFICERS

Mrs. H. W. Sabine is Chosen President — Financial Report Given.

LIGHTS GO OUT.

MARMORA, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence).—The May meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held at the White Hall on Monday evening, Mrs. H. W. Sabine presiding over a good attendance. The meeting opened with the 'Maple Leaf" and the institute ode.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read in addition to minutes of the previous meeting. The financial report was presented by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. F. R. Wells, and showed a satisfactory year's operation. Mrs. H. W. Sabine reported the sickness of several members. This raised the question of the advisability of the appointment of a sick committee. This will be attended to at a later meeting. A letter was read from Miss E. Hopkins, requesting the holding of a coaching class, but this matter was laid over. After a few other matters of minor importance had been dealt with, election of officers by ballot took place. Mrs. E. C. Prentice and Miss M. Brown acted as scrutineers.

1931 Officers

The following were declared officers for the ensuing term: President, Mrs. H. W. Sabine; first vice-president, Mrs. D. E. Bell; second vice-president Mrs. F. R. Wells (all re-elected); directors, Mrs. E. C. Prentice, Mrs. E. Schofield and Mrs. W. A. Sanderson.

District director, Mrs. (Dr.) D. Thomson; auditors, Mrs. C. A. Bleecker and Miss M. Brown; representatives to the district annual meeting, which is being held at Eldorado on June 10 are Mesdames H. W. Sabine, D. Thomson F. R. Wells W. A. Sanderson and E. Schofield. Mrs. Louis Green was appointed organist.

Mrs. C. A. Bleecker mentioned the receipt of a letter from Mrs. Munro inviting suggestions for the annual convention at Belleville in November. Mrs. Bleecker suggested it would be a good plan for members to bring such suggestions to the district meeting at Eldorado. Convenors of standing committees were appointed for the first time in the history of the branch. They are as follows:

Health, Mrs. James Nobes; relief, Mrs. (Dr.) D. Thomson; community activities, Mrs. Frank Sweet; Home economics, Mrs. D. E. Bell; agriculture, Mrs. W. Pack; education, Mrs. E. C. Prentice; historical research, Mrs R. E. Bonter; Canadian industries, Mrs. H. W. Sabine. The summer meeting will be held in the library on June 18. The summer speaker will be Mrs. James Patterson, of New Hamburg, Ontario. Mrs. Sabine very ably gave the current events of the month. Mr. Lapp gave a demonstration of cooking with aluminum ware and served an appetizing dinner. The meeting ended unexpectedly through the electric storm which passed over the village extinguishing lights and causing a hasty exit.

McLAREN'S INVINCIBLE QUICK PUDDINGS

"Talkie" Film Will Aid Cathedral Fund

LONDON, May 21 (By The Canadian Press).—The Church and the radio have long joined hands. On Sunday evenings the British Broadcasting Corporation permits the broadcast o at least two, and sometimes three or four devotional services, and now the 'talkie" is coming to the help of church building funds. Archbishop Downey, who is at the head of the scheme for building a great cathedral on Brownlow Hill, Liverpool, has become a participant in a "talkie" film. His Grace tells of how his predecessors had always hoped to see a great Cathedral built in Liverpool and now what he describes as the finest site in the world has been secured. Other parts of the film offer striking comparisons between the cathedral which is to be, and some other buildings already famous. There is shown for example a view of St. Paul's, and in a moment there is superimposed upon this one of Sir Edwin Lutyen's drawings of the proposed Liverpool cathedral. This makes St. Paul's look almost like a doll's house.

Brownlow Hill is the most prominent point above the banks of the Mersey. When the cathedral is towards completion it is proposed to have a flood-light figure of Christ high on the western side, which will be visible far out at sea.

MISS HELEN BURKE WINS $3.00 PRIZE

Eight "Do You Know" Articles Apepar in The Examiner To-day.

Good construction, neat and correct answers and novel arrangement won to-day's three dollar prize for Miss Helen Burke, 485 Murray street. Several meritorius answers were received, and quite a number that were not complete. It is necessary for contestants to send a complete set of answers to be eligible for prizes. For instance, eight 'Do You Know" stories appear in today's issue. Answers must be received by The Examiner's "Do You Know" editor on all eight of the questions—not one alone.

The "Do You Know" contest consists of stories telling of the service of some particular firm. The last sentence of each of these articles is a question pertaining to the firm. The reader of the paper has only to call the firm to obtain the answers, construct in their own way, and mail or bring them to The Examiner. Each day someone is paid a three dollar prize by The Examiner for the set of answers which is adjudged best from point of originality, cleverness and neatness in construction. A few minutes time and a bit of care in the writing of the answers may win the prize for you on the articles in this edition.

You will find the articles distributed through various pages of the paper. To assist you in locating them there is a footnote at the bottom of each story. The footnote reads thus: "$3.00 cash prize given daily for neatest correct answers to questions in these articles. Call the above firm to assist you. (Eight in to-day's issue).

Test your ability. Find the articles, get the answers and send them in now. You will find it profitable and education amusement—and—"If you do not at first succeed, try, try again."

Marmora

Mr. H. P. Nayler is spending a few days in Ottawa.

Mrs. Merton Baker, of Springbrook, is spending a few days with Mrs. C. Nichol.

Mr. James Jones had a valuable horse killed during the electric storm on Monday, the animal being struck while standing near a wire fence.

Officers of Stirling A.F. and A.M. were visitors at Marmora A.F. and A.M. 222 on Monday evening and conferred the second degree upon a candidate.

causes Indigestion... Headaches... Sleeplessness

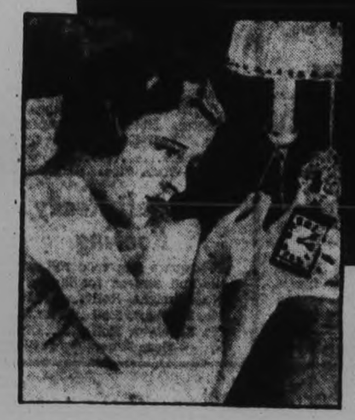
NO RANCID OIL in Chase & Sanborn's... it's guaranteed fresh when you get it!

WHEN coffee is fresh, the oil it contains is as sweet and fragrant as fresh butter . . . But when the coffee gets stale this oil turns rancid, spoils, becomes dangerously toxic. And it is this rancid oil which science now blames for indigestion, headaches, sleeplessness.

Avoid this risk . . . Use Chase & Sanborn's, the coffee that's guaranteed fresh.

This coffee is rushed to your grocer, fresh from our roaster . . . Every tin plainly marked with the date he receives it. And we watch those dates . . . inspect them regularly . . . replace any tin more than ten days old. You can't possibly buy a stale tin of Chase & Sanborn's Coffee!

You will love the rich, reviving flavor of this delicious quality blend . . . and you will be glad to find it reasonably priced. No higher than the ordinary packaged coffees.



DON'T RISK your health by using stale coffee . . . Fresh coffee is a wholesome, mild stimulant, which helps us to enjoy life thoroughly. But be sure the coffee you drink is fresh . . . Use Chase & Sanborn's . . . Then you'll know you're safe from dangerous rancid oil!

Half and one-pound tins.

HIGH PRICE shines in the luxurious of freshness. Here's an [illegible] photograph taken in a [illegible] grocery store where the [illegible] purchased exquisite coffee that was more than one year old. Isn't it [illegible]?

Guaranteed FRESH . . . Look for the date on every tin!

SORE THROAT AND RHEUMATISM

It is strange how some individuals, afflicted with rheumatism, are not willing to admit that they occasionally have a sore throat. They are naturally afraid that if the rheumatism can be blamed on the tonsils, that the tonsils will have to be removed. The thought of the operation makes them belittle the aeverity of the sore throat when it does occur.

As you know, just as tuberculosis, heart disease, pernicious anaemia and diabetes are now being cured owing to the intensive study made of them, so rheumatism is being cured more frequently, as all over the world research physicians are studying all kinds of rheumatic cases and their cause.

Dr. B. Schlesinger, London, England emphasizes the important part played by the tonsils in connection with acute rheumatism in childhood. He says "there can be little doubt that rheumatic relapses are largely brought about by acute and often extremely mild throat infections."

The time interval between the onset of tonsillitis and rheumatism is usually from ten to twenty- one days. Thus in many cases a mild attack of sore throat is entirely forgotten by the time that the rheumatism arrives, and it is hard for the patient to believe that such a sore throat, which did not really lay him up in bed, could be responsible for a severe attack of rheumatism. Yet if a record or history of these attacks of rheumatism is kept it will be found that they always followed an attack of tonsillitis.

Now in youngsters it is not advisable to remove tonsils under ordinary circumstances, even if they are large, if there are no attacks of tonsillitis. The tonsils were meant to remain until about the age of fifteen, when the boy or girl were emerging into manhood and womanhood. Tonsils are needed as a protection against, and to fight, ailments that attack the body, and if the tonsils are healthy they do their part in this work.

However, where tonsils may look fairly healthy, but attacks of rheumatism regularly follow even mild attacks of tonsillitis, the individual is taking grave chances, not only with crippling rheumatism but also with heart disease.

Parents should think this matter over carefully, and discuss it with their family doctor. It is most important.

M. McFadden and Son Carries Extensive Line of House Furnishings.

M McFadden and Son carries a most extensive and complete line of house furnishings. Showing, as they do, the newest and most improved methods for caring for the home, they are best qualified to help one to solve their furniture problems. This establishment is indeed Peterborough's people's store. They not only carry complete stocks of furniture and house furnishings, but specialfurnish their homes in an attractive and up-to-date manner that makes them more contented and hence more efficient. The very considerate method of payment allowed by M. McFadden and Son has made it possible for many in Peterborough and surrounding towns to furnish not only rooms, but entire houses. If you are planning to refurnish your home it will be to your interest to consult with them. You may be sure that they will give you every assistance in making selections, and the prices offered will be most reasonable.

As funeral directors every department of the service of M. McFadden and Son has been organised with the idea of giving an individual service, suited to the requirements of each case. A funeral home and chapel is maintained. Many people are taking advantage of this modern service, rather preferring to have all details taken care of there than in their own home. This institution may be trusted with all the little duties of helpfulness and their services are more that of sympathetic friends than of professionals. Their inmate ability to grasp each individual case makes their services indispensable to people who care.

The people of this community are fortunate in having men of such ability and resourcefulness in this profession, and we wish to compliment Mr. J. Gerald (Doc) McFadden, the manager of M. McFadden and Son, upon the admirable service his firm is rendering, both as furniture dealers and funeral directors. Do you know the average cost of a funeral completely conducted by M. McFadden and Son?

$3 cash prize given daily for neatest correct answers to questions in these articles. Call the above firm to assist you. (Eight in to-day's issue)

Apple sauce is one of the cheapest desserts, and the most healthful. To vary it, serve it in a baking dish, topped with toasted marshmallows, meringue, or with macaroon crumbs.

Mother Finds Out

"There are so many places one can go!" sighed Joan, as the family held its annual vacation argument. "If one only knew more about them!" "I wonder," suggested Mother, "if it wouldn't be a good plan to telephone some of them? Mrs. Smith always does!" The upshot of it was Mother did telephone, and the family decided on a place in no time.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

IT HAS BEEN many generations since comfort was so accented in decoration as it is to-day.

• • • • • •

In the time before the term "interior decoration" was known, when beauty was secondary and necessity foremost, comfort was in its supremacy.

• • • • • •

All household furnishings were the outcome of necessity originally, and this was always coupled with comfort. It has not been so far back that many who are alive to-day can remember the time when rooms must be decorative whether they were at the price of ease or not.

• • • • • •

Much strict period decoration was far from comfortable to live in, since the luxuries of the period they represented could not include the modern conveniences and developments to make living easier.

• • • • • •

Whn the era came that the appearance of a room was the criterion of its excellence in decoration, many old-time comforts were set aside as not sufficiently ornamental to be included.

• • • • • •

The craze for super-sanitation eliminated many comfortable furnishings putting in their place severe and hard fittings, but strange as it may seem this very influence is partly responsible for the return of some luxurious furnishings.

• • • • • •

For instance, carpets were once banished and portable rugs that could be taken from rooms were the favorite floor coverings because the dust raised when carpets were swept was undoubtedly unsanitary.

• • • • • •

The dust not only got into whatever remained in the room during the cleaning, but it was breathed in also by the one who swept. With the modern vacuum cleaners, carpets with their soft, luxurious tread are again in style.

• • • • • •

They make floors warmer and deaden sound oll over a floor and ease the feet of the occupants. They do not slip as rugs on bare floors do. Plain carpets save the life of rugs laid on them and bring out their beauty if the carpet color is neutral and soft.

• • • • • •

The return of footstools makes one more comfortable. The modern chair reading lamp, though portable only to a certain degree, is easier on the eyes, for it has a steady, bright glow.

• • • • • •

There is a long distance to go before the modern house in city, suburb, or outlying districts can have freedom from noise that has so much to do with comfortable living.

• • • • • •

This is an era of sound as well as mechanics, and while the latter aids comfort the former destroys. For this reason, every homemaker should try to do what she can to soften all noises in the home.

BILL TO LIMIT

said, without a warrant, had power to "murder a man who was carrying a package of cigarettes or a flask of liquor." He protested against the powers enjoyed by "irresponsible politicians who have secured jobs in the customs and preventive forces."

Senator W. A. Griesbach: "But under the regulations preventive officers are not permitted to carry guns or to arrest a man unless accompanied by a police officer."

Senator Tanner: "You should see them at work in Nova Scotia to appreciate the situation."

Senator Lynch-Staunton said his bill would not embarass the administration of law and order. It was in the interests of justice and civilization.

Ask Attorneys-General

Notice was given by Senator Griesbach he would move that opinions be secured from the various Provincial Attorneys-General as to the desirability of the proposed law. Administration of the law was their responsibility and he thought they would reflect public opinion.

Public opinion was not wanted, Senator Lynch-Staunton declared. "If public opinion were followed there would be no laws at all."

"Nor no Senate," interjected Senator James Spence facetiously.

Secession Movement Starts In Tasmania

HOBART, Tasmania, May 21 (By The Canadian Press). — A movement is on foot for Tasmania to secede from the Commonwealth and have control of her own customs and excise tariffs and revenue, with a continuance of interstate free trade, or preferential tariffs and freedom of intercourse between the Island of Tasmania and the other states in the Australian Commonwealth. The formation of a Dominion League of Tasmania is proposed in connection with the secession movement and an amendment of the Federal Constitution may be sought to bring about the suggested change in federal relationships in Australia. A referendum to the electors on the question of secession is being proposed by the secessionist element.

WEDDINGS

WILLIAMS—ROBINSON.

A quiet, pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Robinson, 182 Reid street, when their daughter, Myrtle Greta, became the bride of Leslie Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Williams of Toronto.

The bride, who wore a gown of pale pink georgette and lace, with hat and shoes to match, was attended by Mrs. J. L. Bean, wearing mauve satin and matching accesories.

Mr. J. L. Bean supported the bridegroom.

After the ceremony, a dainty repast was served at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams will live in Toronto.

MUSICAL PROGRAM STAGED AT GUILD

Mrs. Rollins Gives Meyerbeer's History—Mrs. Murduff Tells Story of Opera.

STIRLING, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Monday evening a musical program was staged under the direction of Miss Smith. Mrs Mae Nolan acted as leader. The scripture lesson was read by Harold Baker; Olga Tulloch sang a solo, "The Little Brown Church."

Mrs. Rollins gave a talk on, Meyerbeer the great composer. In 1791, the year Mozart died, there was born in Berlin, Meyerbeer, the son of a wealthy Jewish banker. Early in life he showed signs of musical talent. After visiting in Austria and Italy, he took up his abode in Paris, where his first successful opera was produced and made a fortune for the theatre.

His next work, "The Huguenots," appeared five years later, and at first was somewhat coldly received but later was recognized as the composer's masterpiece. Its music is beyond description, and its dramatic force has been pronounced "the most vivid chapter of French history ever written." His last opera was not produced until two years after his death. He died at the age of 52. He wrote "L'Africaino" and "Le Prophete." Mrs. A. Murduff told the story of the opera, "The Hoguenots."

Scene 1. A great hall of the castle of Neven. A party of gentlemen asembled drinking their wine, and the Count proposed drinking to "Love," and suggested that each man tell his own love affairs for the entertainment of his companions.

Raoul was the only Huguenot present, so he timidly related saving a fair maiden from ruffians and vowed to love her forever. Raoul's servant Marcel appeared shocked to find his master in such company. They called upon him for a song, and he at once responded by giving the fierce "Huguenot" battle song. The count had a caller just then whom Raoul recognized as his beautiful inknown lady. Raoul received at the same time a mysterious message bearing the crest of the princess Marguerite and telling hima court marriage awaited him.

Scene II. Garden of the castle where Princess Marguerite and her maids of honor were singing. The princess was melancholy on account of the religions turmoil of the land.

Soon, however, an oath of good-fellowship was taken and St. Bris consented to the marriage of his daughter to Raoul thus cementing a bond between the Catholics and Protestants.

Raoul refused her hand, thinking her the betrothed of De Neuus.

Scene III. A meadow on the banks of the Seine. Catholic students are sitting in front of an inn and opposite the Huguenot men and women in front of the opposite hotel. A bridal procession entered the chapel and De Nevus and Valentina are escorted to the altar. The Catholic denounce St. Bris as a heretic while the Huguenots uphold him. Both factions sang their respective war songs at the top of their voices.

Scene IV. A deserted square. The bridegroom has allowed his bride to spend the day at the altar in fulfilment of a vow and is to claim her at night-fall. St. Bris and Raoul are about to fight a duel. The troops of Catholics and Huguenots become involved. Marguerite appears on the scene and demands an explanation. The Huguenots are assassinated and the curtain drops on one of the most tragic operas of the modern stage.

Chas. Allen played an instrumental solo, "Going home"; Margaret Rosebush sang, "Is yo', yo is," and James Ward sang, "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

OPPOSE MUSIC IN SCHOOLS

KITCHENER, Ont., May 21 (C.P.)—On the grounds that it is dertimental to their business, forcing a few of them to abandon their work, 150 Kitchener music teachers will attempt to have all music instruction withdrawn from the public school curriculum here.

In memory of his famous brothers, R. F. and H. L., Rev. W. V. Doherty has presented new ornamental gates to the All England Lawn Tennis Club at Wimbledon.

FILM STUDIO IS LIKE BIG CITY

Even Supply Cockroaches or Pretty Girls at Moment's Notice.

ANSWER 25,000 QUERIES

(By Frank Chamberlain.)

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1931.)

HOLLYWOOD, May 21.—One of the most interesting men on the Metro Goldwyn-Mayor lot at Culver City, just outside Hollywood, is Paul Wilkins. Give Paul an hour's notice and he can produce a dozen red-headed girls who play the piano, a dozen ugly girls, twenty men over six feet tall, or thirty cross-eyed people. Paul is in the casting department, and has a telephone record of 2,000 pretty girls and 4,000 others who might be needed in the production of a picture.

Little do movie fans realize what tremendous proportions the moving picture industry has reached. In Ben Hur a cast of 3,000 people was used. In the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studio are 2,700 employees representing 117 different professions and trades. They include blacksmiths, cabinet makers, druggists, barbers, lawyers, powder experts, doctors and what-not.

A lot of words are used in the making of a picture. Last year at the same studio 750,000 words were memorized. $200,000 worth of raw silver was reclaimed from old films last year. 70,000 pieces of music form the second largest musical library outside Europe.

A moving picture studio is like a big city. Metro owns 187 automobiles. They used 120,000 gallons of gasoline last year; far more than an ordinary gasoline station would sell in a year. There are 3,400 doors in the studio. To close them all a janitor would need to walk some 22 miles.

Forty policeman guard the valuable property in the Metro studio. Cars can't travel faster than eight miles an hour in the lot. At cross streets cars must stop dead. Drivers ignoring this order are dismissed without warning.

The purchasing agent told me of some amusing things he has bought during recent weeks. A flock of cock-roaches at five cents each was one order. Twenty-five rubber nipples to protect a camera lenses was another. Chocolate syrup to imitate blood is a common purchase.

They use enough electricity in the Metro studio to light up a town of 60,000 inhabitants. They use enough lumber every year to build houses for a town of 5,000 people. They buy 125,000 articles in a year, from 150 different stores in 37 different countries.

The research department answered 25,000 questions last year. Questions like: "Are women admitted into a British officers' club?" "Do Russian Footmen wear knee breeches?" "When did fountain pens come into use?" "When did lawyers stop common usuage of wigs?"

Last year they bought 10,000 metal rolls for films: 8,000 floor mops, 3,600 keys—I don't know what for—and used 130,000 bank cheques.

In the studio are built typical streets one might find in New York, Paris, India, London or a hick town. These streets are re-modelled to suit different pictures. Rarely does a moving picture outfit take pictures on the streets of Hollywood or Los Angeles, and that's something I never knew before, and maybe you didn't either.

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical ones by far because they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They go on smoothly and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be called "the world's finest dyes!"

WRONG IMPRESSION FEARED CREATED

Matter in Dispute Involves Only One Transaction Examiner Finds.

The Examiner regrets that an erroneous impression may have been created through the publication of an item which appeared in the issue of The Examiner of May 18th with reference to a Peterborough lawyer. The Examiner is informed that the matter in dispute involves one transaction only and not a series of transactions as might be gathered from the wording in Monday's issue. The Examiner learns on enquiry being made that the claim as made is in dispute on the ground, among others, that the securities in question were not purchased but were being held for the lawyer and were to be delivered if sold, and have not been sold as he claims they were not as represented.

FEWER WOMEN COME OVERSEAS

Society for Settlement of British Women Reports 1,096 Sent to Canada Last Year.

36 PER CENT DROP.

LONDON, May 21 (C.P. Cable)—A selection of interesting letters from women whom the society has assisted to settle in Canada accompanies the report of the Society for Overseas Settlement of British Women, just issued. The report showed a drop of 36 per cent. in the number sent overseas last year, the total being 1,096.

"The other week," writes one of the society's corespondents in Canada, "I was asked if I would do a day's cleaning. I said certainly. I was met by a gentleman for whom I was to do the work, and received a long lecture on why ever did the Government allow us immigrants into Canada at all. You can just imagine how I felt." But the writer went on to express her feeling of gratitude when the same gentleman told her he would pay 10 cents an hour extra "because you are worth every cent."

The report noted that 280 women and 113 children had been deported from Canada during the past year. "Inquiries show that in the decision to deport women, it is made generally only after careful consideration. Hardship there is bound to be, but the society seeks to mitigate this by meeting the women on their arrival."

MRS. T. D. FINN DIES IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21. (CP)—Mrs. T. D. Finn, wife of T. D'Arcy Finn, managing editor of the Ottawa Citizen, died at the family residence here early to-day. Her husband and five children were at the bedside when she succumbed after an illness of several months. She was formerly Elizabeth Violet Caulfield of Kingston, Ont.

Burial will be made here Saturday.

Killed In Car Crash

ST. CATHARINES MAN DIES IN AUTO-STREET CAR CRASH

When the auto, in which he was riding in the rear seat, collided with a street car at Toronto, James Balsom, (inset), of St. Catharines, Ont., died later of injuries in St. Michael's hospital. Wreckage of car after crash is also shown. Frank J. McIlwain, driver of the automobile, was arrested on a manslaughter charge and released upon $5,000 bail.

POURING CEMENT ON ARMOUR HILL

Work Commenced This Morning on Laying Concrete on Hunter Street East.

COMPLETED THIS MONTH.

Workmen began pouring cement on the Board of Work's Armour Hill job to-day. The work has been pushed along rapidly since the job started two weeks ago. The aim is to have it completed this month so that it may be included under the Government's unemployment relief scheme.

The Council intends to make this road, which carries thousands of visitors to the Lift Locks annually a credit to the city.

General Co-operation Needed To Aid China

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 21 (A.P.)—Sir Arthur Salter, Director of the Economic and Financial section of the League of Nations, said to-day that international co-operation was imperative to aid China in re-establishing its trade in the silver standard.

Sir Arthur returned yesterday from the Orient, where, on invitation of the Chinese and Federal Governments, he surveyed China's financial needs. He was a guest of the Nationalist Government.

"Economically," he said, "China is trying to create an industrial independence. Potentially the trade population is 400,000,000 persons and they await the action of the world business interests, who should aid in finding a solution of China's financial problems. Thereby would open one of the greatest markets in the world."

1ST ST. JOHN'S TROOP

Twenty-two boys fell in for "Flag break" on Friday evening at the weekly meeting of the First St. John's Peterborough troop. The Scout Master was in charge of the meeting which was a record one, in that every officer and every leader was present.

The usual routine was followed. However, the recreational period was held outside with Troop Leader Millard in charge. A relay race was a feature of this period. This race proved very interesting and was quite closely run.

At the camp-fire the Scout Master spoke briefly of the troop camp, the church parade, and the "open night" and stressed the importance of each event.

VICTORIA DAY PARADE

Through the co-operation of the leaders of the Girl Guides and of the 1st St. John's Troop, the church parade of the Girl Guides, which was previously announced for Sunday morning May 24, has been combined with that of the Scouts, and will be held in the evening of May 24. Miss Connolly, Girl Guide Captain, has extended a hearty invitation to all Guides to attend, while the boys of the St. John's Troop are looking forward to a very representative turnout of their brother Scouts from other troops. All Scouts and Guides will be made welcome; those attending are asked to meet at the St. John's Sunday School Hall not later than 6.45 next Sunday. As far as possible both Guides and Scouts are asked to be in uniform.

LEAGUE FAVORS CREDIT COMPANY

Position in Liberia Leads to Lengthy Debate—Slavery Comes Up.

SESSION NEAR CLOSE.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 21.—(AP)—The League of Nations Council to-day formally endorsed a proposal by the Pan-European Commission for establishment of an International Mortgage Credit Company and went on to clean up issues of lesser importance preparatory to winding up its meeting.

There was some acrimonious debate regarding the League's position in Liberia. The Venesuelan delegate insisted that its Liberian policy must never be political lest the African Republic's independence be compromised.

Efforts to suppress alleged slavery there will be weakened, he said, if the League adopted "imperial functions."

Antoine Sottile, the Liberian representative, replied that assistance given by economic experts under the auspices of the League had been received in Liberia with gratitude.

"Slavery no longer exists in Liberia" he said, "but I know for a fact that it still exists elsewhere.'

BOY DROWNED, IS VERDICT.

COBOURG, May 21.—That Thomas Ashwell, 17 years old, of Toronto, came to his death by drowning, was the verdict last night of the Coroner's jury convened under Dr. T. C. Lapp. Witnesses called included J. R. Nicholls, at whose summer home the lad was visiting at the time of his death, Sunday, May 3, and deceased's elder brother William, who found the body off Allentoss Point, Saturday.

BRITISH PRESS RAPS PAMPHLET

Plan to Form Society to Find Jobs for English Youths Seen as Leg-pulling Stunt.

NOT WORTH ADVERTISING.

LONDON, May 21. (By Thos. T. Champion, C.P. Staff Correspondent) "The pamphlet hardly seems worth the advertisement it is getting but if it provokes a re-statement from Ottawa of the very moderate and sensible aims of the Anglo-Canadian educational committee this elaborate sample of embittered Vancouver wit will not have been wasted," commented the Manchester Guardian today on the pamphlet discussed by the Toronto Trades and Labor Council on May 7, urging formation of a Canadian Society to co-operate with an English committee "to find jobs for upwards of 30,000 graduates of English public schools."

The pamphlet, published in Vancouver and satirising the Anglo-Canadian educational committee has just reached certain English newspapers, who stated that following the discussion by the Toronto Labor Council the question will be raised in the Dominion Parliament.

The Manchester Guardian assumed the writer of the pamphlet was indulging "in a rather elaborate form of leg-pulling," and said it considered his sarcasm as heavy-handed.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

"SIT TIGHT"

Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown, the two funny faces, have the stage in this comedy, which is an uproarious, fast-moving affair with two wild and wooly comedians as its main actors. Winnie is "Dr. O'Neill," proprietor of a sanitarium where various health fads are practised on hypochondriacal patients, and Joe is her assistant, Herbert Mullins, better known as "Jojo, the Tiger." And he certainly assists. What he does to ball up the proceedings in the 'san' is plenty. One of his main achievements is the boiling to a dark brown of a steam-heated gentleman who craves a suit of tan. Jojo forgets to turn off the juice, while he converses with a flirtatious caller.

Winnie is as wild as ever. She sings one song in her well-known way and she does a lot of talking and wise-cracking in the fashion that put her over so big in "Show Girls of Broadway." She has a line of gab that pretty nearly matches Jojo's in vigor and force and the two spend a lot of time in sparring verbally, much to the amusement of the listeners. To speak musically, Winnie's style might be improved somewhat by a little pianissimo effect. She goes along in forte fashion most of the time and her mouth is just a little too close to the camera.

Tom Weston, who is a poor young man trying to get along, and Sally Dunlap, the pampered daughter of a very wealthy man, and in love with Tom, get mixed up with Winnie's health farm, and she stakes everything she has on Tom's ability to beat the wrestling champion of the world, Alex Romanoff. Before the real bout comes off and it is certainly a whiz, there is a fake match between Jojo and Winnie's ex-husband, stalling for time, and that is as funny as all the rest of Brown's capers. His Lamours "razmataz" gets into action in earnest. With his wide mouth wagging most of the time and with Winnie's effervescent hilarity and punch, there is plenty of entertainment in "Sit Tight."—Jeanette.

IN IMPROVED HEALTH.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 21.—Chief Constable Mortimer S. Wigle, of Windsor, who was struck with a heart attack while attending a wrestling match last night, was reported to be improved to-day.

TOSCANINI MAY BE DISCIPLINED

Govt's Disapproval of Action May Result in Temporary Suspension of Passport.

REFUSED TO PLAY ANTHEM.

ROME, May 21. (AP)—It was said on good authority here to-day that Arturo Toscanini, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra possibly may be subjected to some discipline" for refusing to play the Fascist national anthem at Bologna last Thursday.

This is expected in circles close to official quarters to take the form of a temporary suspension of his passport as a sign of the Government's disapproval of his action.

Toscanini, after his refusal to play the air at a concert, was set upon and slapped by several Fascists and later was asked to leave Bologna. He now is at his home in Milan.

If the predicted action is taken against him, it was said his passport likely would be restored soon and that he would be free to leave Italy when he wishes.

The Fascist version of the incident is that Toscanini, an Italian himself, knew he probably would be requested to play the national hymn as a courtesy to two members of the cabinet. When he refused, it was suggested that his concert master direct the air or that a military band play it before Toscanini's arrival. This the New York conductor also, refused although he was told he needn't be present when the anthem was rendered.

Fascists were described as regarding this as discourteous and bad form. They have deplored the violence of their followers toward Toscanini, but excuse it as a "natural outburst."

Consumer Is Ruling Business Situation

TORONTO, Ont., May 21.— (By the Canadian Press.)—The consumer sits on the throne and rules the situation in these days of business competition for the buyer's dollar, Bernard C. Jakway, Chicago, Ill., merchandising director of the National Home Furnishings program, said in an address to-day before the convention of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers.

When it gets down to the final analysis, he told the furniture manufacturers of the United States, women dictate the styles and determine the quality of merchandise they want for their homes.

With a necessity for reduction in production costs, Mr. Jakway appealed to the manufacturers not to sacrifice quality in construction or design in effecting any saving.

CHICAGO WHEAT DOWN.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 21.—(A.P.)—Good rains in parts of the Canadian prairie provinces, tending to abate drought l... to early downturns in wheat prices to-day. Indications pointed also to only slight damage from freezing temperatures in Kansas. Opening at ¼-1¼ cents off, wheat later held near to the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to 1-8 up and consequently sagged.

SENIOR BALL SCHEDULE SET BY EXECUTIVE

Peterborough Will Play Nationals at Belleville in Opener on May 25th.

HERE FOLLOWING SATURDAY

Max Swanston Elected to Office of Vice-President at Belleville Meeting.

Final arrangements to start the Central Ontario Baseball League on another campaign were made at last night's league meeting held in Belleville, with officers and representatives of the three teams, Peterborough, Kingston and Belleville, present. Oshawa had previously set word that they would not enter this year.

President Colling occupied the chair, with Secretary Thompson at his side. George Ada represented Kingston; J. A. Bell and Vic Hamilton were there in the interests of Peterborough; and Bo Colling and Walter Gerow spoke for Belleville.

Max Swanston was voted the office of vice-president of the league, that which was previously held by Joe Ranger.

After some discussion on the schedule, it was adopted as drawn up, with the exception of June the 10th. Peterborough plays in Belleville, but as the grounds are not available that day, the two teams will have to make some agreement when to play it instead.

Each club must name two prospective umpires from its own city, and these will be passed upon by the league executive. It was moved and carried that the umpires be paid six dollars a game, and ten for doubleheaders as well as expenses. The visiting team must provide the umpire-in-chief and pay all his expenses, while the home team pays the other umpire six dollars. In case of postponed games after the team has arrived, the umpires will receive half their usual fee. Lebarr and Colling will umpire the game on May 25th.

The president and the secretary have the power to pass on all players' certificates.

Following is the schedule:

May 25th—Peterboro at Belleville.
May 30th—Belleville at Peterboro.
June 3rd—Peterboro at Kingston.
June 5th—Belleville at Kingston.
June 10th—Peterboro at Belleville.
To be decided on.
June 13th—Kingston at Peterboro.
June 17th—Kingston at Belleville.
June 20th—Belleville at Peterboro.
June 24th—Kingston at Belleville.
June 26th—Peterboro at Kingston.

SCULLIN'S HOPES GIVEN SETBACK

Leader of New Opposition Party Throws Snag Into Economic Conference.

GOV'T WILL GO AHEAD.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 21 (C.P. Cable via Reuters). — Prime Minister James Scullin's hopes of returning the Commonwealth House of Representatives into a non-partisan "economic conference" during the present emergency in Australia received a setback at the hands of the Hon. Joseph Lyons, Leader of the new United Australia (Opposition) Party to-day.

Mr. Lyons, following a party conference and further discussions with prominent members of the Opposition, informed the Prime Minister that the most his party was prepared to do was to validate the present tariff proposals for a period of six months, and vote supplies for three months.

After this period, the Opposition leader stated, there should be a prompt appeal to the people by means of a general election.

Scullin's Reply.

Prime Minister Scullin has replied: "We cannot meet our obligations on June 30, without legislation. We cannot get legislation without the help of both Houses of Parliament. We must meet our obligations to save the country's honor, and this justifies such a conference. The Government's overtures have been rejected, but the Government will go on."

Meanwhile a committee of the Commonwealth Loan Council has recommended to the Council a 20 per cent. cut in Government expenditures, pensions scales, wages, and salaries. According to the Melbourne Herald, the committee also endorsed the proposal of Hon. E. G Theodore Commonwealth Treasurer, for a tax of about 1 per cent. on interest payments received by citizens on account of Government and public bonds.

Joe Turnesa Defeated In Leeds Tournament

LEEDS, Eng., May 21 (AP). Percy Alliss, British professional, to-day defeated Joe Turnesa in the second round of the $5,000 Leeds professional tournament, three and two. Turnesa won the tournament in 1929, and was medalist this year.

Tony Manero, United States, won his second round match from Reginald Whitcombe five and four. He will meet Alliss in the quarter finals to-morrow.

Alliss, who is pro at a Berlin club, had a flying stretch of threes on the first nine, which he turned four up, and never gave Turnesa a chance.

A. J. Lacey, British pro, defeated the last of the Argentinians, Jose Jurado, in the second round four and three.

UNKNOWNS WILL FIGHT IT OUT FOR GOLF TITLE

John De Forest and Eric Smith in British Amateur Championship Final.

FORMER DEFEATS ROPER.

Finalists Win Out To-day in Close One Hole Victories—Wind Plays Havoc With Shooting.

WESTWARD HO, Devon, May 21 (C.P.). — Two comparative unknowns, John De Forest and Eric Smith, to-morrow will fight it out over the rolling hills of Westward Ho for the British amateur golf championship.

They won through to the finals to-day in close one-hole victories over William Tulloch and Dr. John MacCormack, the Irish physician.

De Forest, son of a rich British baron, defeated Syd Roper, the conqueror of George Voigt, in the quarter finals this morning, and then led Tulloch around in the semi-finals. The latter was the only one of the eight quarter-finalists ever to go that far before in the British golfing classic.

Smith, a Cambridge University player, and the much-wounded Dublin doctor, who used to play in a steel corset to protect his Great War injuries, had a ding-dong battle of it, finishing the first nine all square.

The wind played havoc with hopes and aspirations to-day.

Quarter-Final Results.

The quarter-final matches resulted as follows:

William Tulloch, Glasgow, defeated John Morrison, former Cambridge all-round athlete, three and two.

John De Forest, youthful millionaire, defeated Syd Roper, insurance clerk, by two and one.

Dr. John MacCormack, Dublin, defeated Captain Tippet, Westward Ho, two and one.

Eric Smith, Cambridge University, defeated Peter Killer, three and one.

Tulloch, a dour Scottish giant-killer, was followed by an admiring gallery in his match against the burly Morrison, who had been a triple blue at Cambridge in cricket, soccer, and golf. Morrison, a player without nerves, putted badly and missed many opportunities.

De Forest putted with the utmost care on the return journey, laying prone behind his ball on many greens to get a careful sight, and he finally got the lead again at the 13th. He held this to the 17th, which he halved for a win.

Dr. MacCormack lived up to his national characteristic—adventure—by testing out many hazards as a result of topping second shots, and finding good few bunkers. Sometimes he took three putts, but Tippett was only three up at the turn. Dr. MacCormack staged an amazing recovery on the return journey. He won the tenth, when Tippett missed a chip shot, and squared the match at the 14th. MacCormack went into the lead for the first time at the 16th hole, where Tippett pulled his second shot. The Irishman won the 17th in five for the match.

Betty Nuthall Gains Third Tennis Round

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, May 21. (AP)—Betty Nuthall and Eileen Bennett Whittingstall to-day advanced to the semi-final of the women's doubles of the French hard court tennis championships, defeating Doris Metaxa and Collette Rosambert, 6-4, 6-2.

Mrs. Phyllis Statterthwaite and Muriel Thomas, of Great Britain, were defeated by Elizabeth Ryan, Californian living in London, and Cecile Assem, Germany, 6-4, 6-2.

Royal Family Leaves For Sandringham

LONDON, May 21 (A.P.)—Their Royal Court receptions over for the time being, the King and Queen left to-day by train for Sandringham, where they will spend the Whitsuntide holiday quietly. They expect to return to London Wednesday.

Before their departure Their Majesties were informed of the condition of the Duke of Connaught, who underwent a slight operation this morning.

TENNIS CLUB TO MEET TO-NIGHT

Election of Officers Will Take Place at Annual Gathering This Evening.

CALLED FOR 8 P.M.

A general meeting of the Peterborough Tennis Club is called for to-night at eight o'clock in the clubhouse. The election of officers for this year and other matters of club business will be gone through.

The schedule for games on the four courts at McDonnel street and Monaghan Road has already been drawn up, with June 6 set as opening day. The courts are in first class condition having been all fixed up again this spring. A number of members have been practising the past two or three weeks.

This is the second year of the Peterborough Tennis Club, and last year was a huge success in every way. Prospects are again good for this summer. The club boasts one of the finest clubhouses in the province, and their four courts will compare with others anywhere.

Every member, players and all, is urged to attend this meeting to-night to get a good executive, and start things off again.

SOCCER NOTES

In the benefit game to-night, the Caledonians will play the Canadian General and will field the following eleven: C. Griffin, goal; J. Pottie and J. Campbell, full backs; W. Robb, T. Craig and D. Emery, halves; G. Clark, A. McPhate, I. McPhate, D. Best and W. Grant, forwards. Reserves W. Rankin and W. McCracken.

Next Tuesday evening, May 26, the Caledonians will have the Deloro team as their guests in a league encounter at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 6:15 prompt. The referee will have to be fixed by the president, owing to no meeting previous to that date.

FIRE DESTROYS MILL.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 21 (C.P.). — The mill of the McFadden Lumber Company at Spragge was destroyed by fire early yesterday. No estimate of the loss has been received here so far, but it is understood that it is heavy. It is partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire has not been determined.

WILL RENEW GRANTS.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 21 (C.P.). — Grants for vocational education in Canada are to be renewed. In conformance with the election pledge of Premier R. B. Bennett, a resolution will shortly be introduced in the House of Commons "to appropriate the sum of $750,000 per annum for fifteen years for such purposes, payments to be made conditional upon agreements with the respective Provincial Governments."

Daughter Of Labor Member Gives Views

Miss Grace Woodsworth Believes That Women Use Franchise to Better Advantage Than Men.

MONTREAL, May 21.—(By the Canadian Press)—Worthy daughter of her father, Miss Grace Woodsworth, daughter of J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., dean of the small group of Labor members in the House of Commons has decided views as to the important part that women can play in the politics of Canada. Although not a "rabid" feminist, as she confessed in an interview, she nevertheless feels that women are as prominent as men and are using their franchise to better advantage.

As homemakers, women have a clear perception of existing conditions, and have many valuable suggestions to offer as redemial measures, in Miss Woodsworth's opinion.

Labor women understand the significance of politics through personal experience better than do their sisters engaged in distinctively different occupations, Miss Woodsworth said. She was pleased to note, however, that an ever-increasing number of women were interesting themselves in the fundamentals of politics, adding that she did not see any vague clash between what women and men could do in the public arena.

Acting as secretary to her father, Miss Woodsworth is gaining a valuable knowledge of parliamentary procedure and politics in general that should serve her in good stead in the near future. She finds the work a recreation and intensely stimulating.

With greater concentration than ever the Labor Party of Canada is endeavoring to strengthen its position in the Dominion. During the past few months more than 3,000 members were added to the enrolment, and greater numbers are expected shortly. It is in the organization work in the West that Miss Woodsworth is expected to be a bulwark of strength to the women campaigners.

Graduate of the University of Manitoba, Miss Woodsworth won the French Government scholarship, which entitled her to a post-graduate course on the continent, principally in France. Of medium height and decidedly attractive in appearance, with black hair and expressive eyes, she has the gift of holding the attention of her audience through the medium of a well-modulated voice and effective gestures.

B.C. Doctor Is Jailed Rather Than Pay Fine

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 21 (C.P.) —Dr. A. S. Murphy, whose name was removed from the roll of medical practitioners in British Columbia recently, went to jail yesterday rather than pay a $50 fine. He was sentenced to two months' imprisonment by Magistrate Paul McD. Kerr in police court.

Convicted on a charge of practicing medicine without being properly licensed, Dr. Murphy was fined $50, with the alternative jail sentence. He was not represented by counsel, but in his defense made a slashing attack on the Medical Act.

"If the Act were interpreted literally, the barber who puts bay rum on your hair is guilty," he declared. When sentence was pronounced, Dr. Murphy declared he had been "bled so much by persecution" that he could not pay the fine.

The prosecution was brought by the B.C. Medical Association.

Miss Lilian Baylis, lessee and manager of the Old Vic and Sadler's Wells, famous London theatres, has just received an anonymous gift of $5,125 for the playhouses.

In Police Court

It cost Robert Knox $25 extra in a court fine for his pugilistic endeavours Tuesday night to avoid arrest.

Knox was picked up on Water street about 9.15 Wednesday evening by Constable George Carey the junior member of the force. All the way to the station Knox put up a fight, until finally the officer brought him to earth with a flying tackle and slipped the handcuffs on him. It was his second offence under the L.C.A. and the fine is usually $50, but when the Magistrate was told that Knox had assaulted an officer the fine was jacked up to $75.

For Failure to obey the traffic lights, M. Thorburn was fined $5 without costs.

Restaurant Brawl Will End In Court

Two Chinese appeared before Magistrate Langley to-day and swore out an information charging a fellow countryman with common assault.

The assault is said to have taken place above a local restaurant. One Chinese had been pursuing the other for several days to collect a four-dollar debt. He met his debtor, who showed signs of prosperity but refused to pay. A fight occurred in which the debtor had his shirt torn from his back and the creditor collected his four dollars.

The debtor is laying the charge for the alleged rough methods adopted by the creditor.

Leafs Bow To Keystones-Giants Gain on Leaders

FRANK BARNES IS INEFFECTIVE

Southpaw Chased From Mound in Ninth Under Bararge of Hits.

RALLY FALLS SHORT.

TORONTO, May 21. — Frank Barnes lingered too long in yesterday's pastiming over at the Fleet Street Ballyard, and consequently the Leafs were forced to accept a 7-to-5 defeat from the tail-end Reading Keys, and be content with taking the first two of the three-game series.

After threatening to chase Barnes to the clubhouse in several previous frames, the Pretzel Eaters finally blasted him off the hilltop in the ninth, and thereby won the ball game. They needed the three runs that they produced in that chapter. Going into the inning they had a two-run lead, but the five-run margin with which they emerged offset a valiant three-run rally which the Leafs staged in their portion of the concluding frame.

Barnes was hammered for fourteen hits during his tenure of toil. "Hammered," expresses it. Most of the Reading drives were solid smashes to the outfield. With one out in the ninth, they produced four in succession, including a triple by "Rabbit" Whitman. Glenn Leibhardt was brought into the game at that stage, Manager O'Neill finally having become convinced that Barnes was ineffective. Leibhardt permitted a further hit to bring the Reading total to fifteen, but he managed to retire the side after that, a good throw by Rabbitt, which captured Poole sliding into third, aiding him substantially.

SPORTS By JIMMY THOMPSON

CABBAGE LEAVES PLAY PART IN A MARATHON RUNNERS' RACE

Marathon running is a sport that has commanded attention from the sporting fraternity for a great number of years. For centuries it has been a leading sport. There are a number of peculiarities that are still not known to the general public. Clifford Bricker of Galt, during his hey-day around the time of the 1928 Olympics, commanded no mean attention from sporting fans. His scientific and systematic manner in running were the wonders of all those who read about them. Many turned against this young runner after his apparently disappointing showing that year. The reason advanced by Bricker was that his calculations as to the speed over which the track could be run were not correct. In other words he ran what he figured to be the best that any human being could do it in and found that the European runners were faster than he calculated. Often you may have noticed that marathon runners wear a handkerchief on their heads during the race. The reason for this, which one would easily guess, is to protect them from the sun. But that is only part of it, strange as it may seem under these handkerchiefs are cabbage leaves that keep the head cool.

SPORTS DAY JUNE 3.

Horse Racing to be Featured at Event Sponsored by Seymour Agricultural Society.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — A big sports day will be featured on June 3 in Campbellford, sponsored by the Seymour Agricultural Society. This event will festure several kinds of sports, prominent among these being a program of horse races. It is also expected that two outside baseball teams will stage a clash.

The Fair Grounds, which will be used for this event, are in first-class condition. Considerable work was done on them last year by the Society, which now shows to good advantage. Some very fast horse racing should also be witnessed as the track is in better shape than it has been for years.

6TH LINE WINS OPENING GAME

Poor Hurling and Weak Field Work Features Electrics Girls 19-4 Defeat.

ON LANG DIAMOND.

Sixth Line girls' softball team got away to a perfect start last night in the opening game of the Ladies' City League, when they hooked up with the C.G.E. team on their home diamond at Lang and administered a decisive 19—4 defeat to the visiting Electrics.

The stellar pitching of Mary Hall on the mound for the rural team was the outstanding feature of the game. She turned back nine of the opposing batters in six innings and allowed only five hits, while her teammates although not given a great deal to do, turned in a snappy performance on the field. The winners seemed to have little difficulty in hitting the offerings of the two C.G.E. twirlers who failed to exhibit much of their customary control. On top of this a high catcher's box caused the local's backstop to miss a great many of the low balls which permitted plenty of freedom on the bases.

Lorraine Coursey started on the rubber for the Electrics, but was let down badly by her team-mates and retired in favor of Mae Connors in the fourth innings, who finished the game. The latter pitcher was nicked for eight hits and a walk which, together with loose fielding, accounted for fourteen of the runs in two innings. Kay Ashmore slammed out the longest hit for the C.G.E., a long fly into centre field, which went for three bases. Connors and Amyott both crashed doubles. Todd in left field and Baldry at third for the locals were the fielding stars.

The winners showed finish, pep and hitting ability which marks them as a real contender for the championship of the league, despite the fact that they were performing on familiar grounds. The heaviest hitting for the Sixth Line was produced by the pitcher, Mary Hall, who collected a single and two doubles in four trips to the plate.

The teams:—

Sixth Line.—L. Donaldson, c; M. Renwick, 1b; D. Chapman, ss; M. Hall, p; L. Bowie, 2b; M. Edwards, lf; D. Elliott, cf; I. Davis, 3b; H. Donaldson, rf; R. Millar, rf.

C.G.S.—L. Bosley, ss; V. Langton, 1b; M. Amyott, c; M. Connors, p; K. Ashmore, cf; M. Flynn, 2b; Baldry, 3b; M. Todd, lf; L. Coursey, rf.

FAULTY FIELDING COSTLY TO ROYALS

Skeeters Take Final Game of Series With Ninth Inning Tally.

MONTREAL, May 21.—The Jersey City Skeeters captured the final game and the series here yesterday afternoon, when they beat the Royals, 6 to 5, to win the five-game visit three games to two. Claset was the victim of some faulty Montreal fielding, and, though Nekola, Jersey starting pitcher, was also driven out, the Royals failed miserably in the pinches. Gautreau led with the stick, getting five hits, one of them a double, in five times up.

PRESSMEN FAIL HIT IN PINCHES

Examiner Drops Third Successive Game. Westclox Winning 10-5 Decision.

A SLUGGERS' BATTLE.

Lacking the punch with runners on bases was the cause of the Examiner's 10-5 defeat in last night's softball game with Westclox at Central. The weather wasn't promising, but seven innings were played, while a good crowd of rooters saw one of the best games played since the schedule opened.

It was strictly batters' night, neither of the pitchers proving much of a mystery to the sluggers. Eleven hits were gathered off Freddie Scates on the mound for the losers. Three were triples by Kitchen Ellis and Delahaye, and two were doubles by Ellis and Delahaye. The Examiner hitters collected nine hits off Cliff Carruthers, Board doubling twice and Scates once.

Both hurlers allowed four bases on balls, and Carruthers struck out three. The latter had great support by his teammates who only missed three in the field, while the Pressmen booted six.

Time and again, the losers had the bases loaded, with one or two out, but they couldn't get that needed wallop to tie the game up. They crossed the platter four times in the first inning, when Cliff walked three in a row and allowed a couple of hits. Scates was out at the plate in the second, after hitting a two-bagger. Board also got two on a hard drive, got around to third and scored in the third frame. They were blanked the rest of the game, though threatening all the way.

The Big Bens got three in the first and again in the third on hits and errors. Two doubles by Ellis and Delahey and one miscue gave them another pair in the fifth. The same players accounted for the runs in the sixth and in the seventh.

The East City outfit played snappy all-around ball, with the infield going particularly good. For the losers, the new players all showed to advantage, and Board and Taylor figures in a bunch of putouts. Abour the only difference in the two teams last night was the failure of The Examiner sluggers to connect in a pinch. The game was called at the end of the seventh on account of darkness.

The teams:

Examiner—Outram, rf; Gainey, 2b; Kingston, ss; Westbrook, 3b; Taylor, 1b; Cullen, rf; Board, lf; Haskill, c; Scates, p.

Westclox—Dorrington, 3b; Smith, 1b; Foley, c; Ellis, 2b; Merrett, lf; Delahey, ss; Kitchen, rf; Goodson, cf; Carruthers, p.

Umpires—Galbraith and Lang.

Score by innings:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Examiner | 4 | 10 | 0 |
| Westclox | 10 | 11 | 2 |

Softball Notes.

Tonight at Central School Grounds Dominion Woollens and All Saints will do battle. Both teams have been showing improvement of late and the fans should see a good battle.

On Friday night the Sugar Bowl and Examiner will tangle. This game was originally scheduled for May 25, but has been moved up to give the local teams a chance to enter the Lindsay tournament.

The Examiner will be at full strength on Friday night. Several new players have been signed by the newspaper boys, including Bud Westbrook, Cy Haskill and Ken Kingston. With these new players and Bill Collins back in the line up the fans can be assured of a great battle between the Examiner and the league leaders.

Friday night's game is called for 6.15 and will be played at Central School Grounds. A bumper crowd should witness the affair.

PAINFUL PILES

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID—to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store says HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

ATHLETICS STRETCH WINNING STREAK TO AN EVEN DOZEN

Lefty Grove Hands Detroit Second Successive Shutout, Macks Copping 3-0 Win.

New Yorkers Beat Reds 4-0.

(By Gayle Talbot Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

The New Yorks Giants had a just complaint today against the guy who compiled baseball's handy reference book. The volume in question is a compact, paper-backed affair that tells you at a glance what club is leading the race.

And what has that to do with the Giants? Just this. Up to yesterday afternoon they figured, on the face of things, to be just a half-game behind the St. Louis Cardinals. It looked that way. Then they went out and took the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 0, and the Cardinals obligingly lost to Brooklyn, 5 to 4.

That put the McGraw clan out in front and pulled the Cards from the top of the National League for the first time this season. That is, it did until the ready reckoner was consulted. It shows that the league champs, though superficially a half-game behind, actually still are leading the league by four percentage points today. Hence the Giants' chagrin.

Although they fell short of their goal, the McGrawmen gained solace in the brilliant pitching of John Berly, recruit from Rochester, who set Cincinnati down with five scattered hits and cinched himself a place as a starting pitcher. Bill Terry's homer with two on was the big noise in the Giants' attack.

The Cards went down fighting. They rallied in the seventh and ninth innings to tie the count at 4-all, only to see their efforts wasted when the Robins nicked Bill Hallahan for the winning run in the last of the ninth. Babe Herman's single scored Fresco Thompson, who had walked, with the deciding run.

Buzz Arlett husky recruit from the coast, poled his eighth and ninth home runs of the year as the Phillies came from behind in the late innings to take their second straight from Pittsburgh, 11 to 7. A four-run rally off Willoughby in the eighth decided the issue.

Four runs in the first inning off Frankhouse and McAffee gave the Chicago Cubs a lead that was never overcome as they squared their series at Boston, 7 to 5. Gabby Hartnett hit a homerun, double and two singles to lead the winners' assault.

Grove Holds Tigers

Not to be outdone by his side partner, George Earnshaw, who shut out Detroit with two hits the previous day, Lefty Grove allowed only three blows and gave the Tigers another whitewashing, 3 to 0. It ran the Athletics' winning streak to twelve. Homers by Foxx and Miller accounted for two of the winners' runs off Uhle.

The Washington Senators made only three hits off Pat Caraway, but turned them into a 2 to 0 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Spencer's home run accounted for one score. Sad Sam Jones held the Sox to six hits and was credited with his fourth victory.

Urban Pickering's two home runs did not prevent the Boston Red Sox losing an 8 to 4 decision to the St. Louis Browns. It marked the Brown's eighth win of the year and was the fourth credited to Walter Stewart.

Deloro Club Appoints Selection Committee

MARMORA, May 21. (Examiner Correspondence).—The Deloro Football Club held its first practise on Tuesday with a goodly number of players out. Following the practice, a get-together meeting was held, when the selection committee was appointed. Those to serve on this committee are C. T. Nicholson, J. R. Hart and W. Brown. The question of admission charges was also dealt with. The appointment of captain was deferred until another meeting to be held on Thursday. At this meeting a representative to act on the Board will also be elected.

Manager Brooks received notification on Wednesday morning that Deloro's first encounter will be with the Caledonians at Peterborough on Tuesday, May 26. The registration forms also being received, all preliminaries should be completed by the end of the week.

BRINTON BEATS PACKERS 4 TO 0 IN LEAGUE TILT

Jack Sweet's Header Beats Frick for Only First Half Counter.

LOSERS HAVE NIGHT OFF.

O'Halloran Does Hat Trick—Winners Two Points in League Lead.

Brinton Athletic went into top position of the local soccer league, last evening, when they trounced the Canadian Packing to the tune of four clear goals to nothing, before a good attendance. They have now scored ten goals to two against in the league and are two points ahead of the losers, R. Preston, C.P.C., their versatile forward was unable to play owing to sickness.

A. O'Halloran accomplished the hat trick in the second half.

The spin of the coin fell in favor of the Packers who were compelled to save their citadel from the aggressive attacks of the Brinton. Westwood concentrating on the long swinging passes that were intermingled with rapid fire drives on Frick's charge. Buchan relieved the pressure time and again to feed his forwards with accurate passes into the vicinity of the winners' goal. Downer, at inside left, dribbled his way along the wing to evade the half-back and within shooting distance made Curtis jump up in below the bar to divert the ball out of danger. On mid-field play, the Carpet Boys penetrated the Packers defense which brought nothing tangible. At last they did deserve to score when O'Halloran struck the upright with a first timer. Sweet put pass from the re-bound. While the Brinton boys introduced the long swinging game to cause the losing defense a lot of unnecessary running. They eventually did gain success when Adkinson carried the ball into the flag corner to outplay his opponents with a perfect centre into the goal mouth. Jack Sweet met it with precision to finally beat Frick with a beautiful header that found the far corner of the net. This set-back to the Canadian Packing enlivened the tussle.

Two smart break aways by Rickard had the Brinton rear guard in a precarious position when he rapped low grounders in the nearest corner. Just before the interval, Newt Downer tried to account for a tally but Curtis jumped over the top of the player's head to keep his goal intact for the remainder of the half. Brinton 1, Canadian Packing 1.

Second Half.

Lackadaisical exchanges opened the second moiety, until O'Halloran got busy around the Packer's territory with first time efforts that brought out the excellent qualities of Frick, who never hesitated to consolidate his charge with effective clearances to the advantage of his team-mates. At the other end, Westwood nullified a dangerous raid on his citadel as he got the better of the argument over Buchan. He dropped the sphere into the Packer's goal where O'Halloran touched it forward into the arms of Frick but he was not quick enough to prevent the former from touching the ball into the net as he stooped down to pick it up for the second counter. During this period the Packers endeavored to gain a goal and had the carpet boys hammered right into their own half for a considerable time. They threw up an extra man on the attack, drew a full back up on to the half back department and played the oneback game. This method of play proved beneficial to them, more especially Rickard on the extreme right who tested Curtis repeatedly with lightning drives. In a scrimmage inside the dreaded area Westwood gave away a spot kick in favor of the C.P.C. Newt Downer was trusted to do the needful but his parting shot hit the cross-bar, to latterly find a resting place behind the goal line. From the goal kick the Brinton halves carried the sphere into their opponent's goal to await the effectiveness of O'Halloran as an opportunist. He begt the full backs on the run as he kept the ball at his toe then he swerved toward the right and finished his praise-worthy effort with a shot that went right through the net. The losers never gave up trying as darkness crept down upon them but the play was visible up till the time of the finish. Two minutes to go, O'Halloran again caught Frick napping when he dropped the ball at his feet when he made a slow clearance, thereby permitting the Brinton centre-forward to accomplish the hat trick. Brinton Athletic, 4. Canadian Packing, 0.

Goal scorers—For Brinton, O'Halloran 3 and J. Sweet.

Canadian Packing—A. Frick, goal; H. Hotson and T. Foster, full backs; J. Nicholls, J. Buchan and A. Bromley, halves; W. Rickard, J. Fletcher, D. Evans, N. Downer and A. Roberts, forwards.

All members are asked to attend Friday night's practice at 6 p.m., when arrangements will be made for Oshawa reception.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTRY CLUB COURSE COMPARES FAVORABLY WITH OTHERS IN PROVINCE

Hole By Hole Comparison Given With Those of Royal York Course at Toronto.

LOCAL—6330 YDS.—70 PAR.

The new 18-hole course of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club Limited, compares favorably with any in the province. This was proven by a comparison of the figures, hole by hole, with those of the Royal York Hotel Golf Course, of Toronto which is considered the best in Canada. The total yardage for the Queen City course is 6645 with 72 being par, while the local course distance is 6330 yards with par being 70. It is a championship course, being up-to-date in every way, and complying with all the regulations of the provincial association. Following is a table of the length of each hole, and par, with the Royal York course:

N. A. Davis Cup Trials Open This Afternoon

MONTREAL TENNIS CLUB, Montreal, May 21 (C.P.)—The Davis Cup teams of the United States and Canada will commence their battle this afternoon for the premier position in the North American zone, the United States having already eliminated Mexico, the third contestant in the zone.

Lacrosse

All lacrosse players should be out to-night for the practise and the important meeting afterward. The club regrets a great deal the loss of Coach Creighton who has been called to North Bay to resume his duties with the Telegraph Company.

Coach Creighton wishes to thank the players for their co-operation while he was with the team, and hopes they will continue to turn out to practise as usual He will keep in touch with them, and thinks they will have a winning club this year.

Creighton's defeated Gilbert's nine last night by 5 to 3 at the Sacred Heart Grounds in a good game.

E.P.L. WILL OPEN FRIDAY, MAY 29TH

C. G. E. and Cogs to Clash in Opener—Plan Exhibition Game for Saturday.

Friday, May 29th, will see the opening of the East Peterborough Baseball League, with Cogs playing the C.G.E. at 5.45 at the Exhibition Grounds. This was decided at last night's league meeting held at Duffus'.

Bethany, Crescents, C.G.E. and Cogs compose the loop, and the schedule will be published within a few days. Two games a week will likely be played on the local diamond, with Bethany getting their own home games.

The secretary of the E.P.L. will get in touch with the seniors' executive to-day and suggest that an exhibition game between the seniors and an all-star East Peterborough team be arranged for this Saturday, in order to give both outfits a good workout and give the fans a fast ball game. Further announcement on this subject will be made known. Various other matters came in for discussion before the meeting ended.

GRIMES IS FINED

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 21 (C.P.)—Burleigh Grimes, veteran pitching star of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, to-day was fined $50 and suspended for three days by John A. Heydler, President of the National League, for disorderly action in the game with Brooklyn yesterday.

CANADIAN TURF ARISTOCRATS PREPARED FOR PLATE CLASSIC

Large Crowds at Woodbine Park Attest to Popularity of Opening Feature.

IS FREETHINKER FIT?

TORONTO, Ont., May 21 (By The Canadian Press)—Large crowds at Woodbine Park these mornings attest to the unwavering popularity of the King's Plate, oldest race run continuously on the North American continent which has its 72nd renewal on Saturday, opening day of the Ontario Jockey Club's spring meeting.

The platers, or thoroughbreds eligible to start in the opening day feature, are watched eagerly by the critical race fans, as they breeze through short conditioning trials.

Most of the heavy training is over and the aristocrats of the Canadian turf, about 15 of them, are in excellent shape for the mile and one furlong jaunt.

Can Freethinker come back is the important confronting the enthusiasts desirous of making a little wager on the outcome of the historic fixture. Two years ago he won practically every important stake he was eligible for but failed in training last year when preparing for the plate, biggest prize of all.

Pete Sanstol Wins Bantamweight Title

MONTREAL, Que., May 21 (C.P.)—Pete Sanstol of Montreal won what the Montreal Boxing Commission has ruled as the world's bantamweight title here last night, when he took the decision over Archie Bell of New York after taking the majority of the ten rounds. Recognition of the championship, it is understood, is now being considered by the important United States Boxing Commissions.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL HERE ON FRIDAY

Brintons Clash With Westclox to Pry Off Lid of Local Schedule.

The opening game here of the Girls' Softball League is called for to-morrow evening at 6:15 at the Bowl, located at the east end of Hunter Street bridge. Brintons will play Westclox to pry off the lid in the local schedule. Both teams have been practising steadily for two weeks now, and have engaged in a number of exhibition games, so should be in the best of condition for the big opener.

Mayor Denne and J. H. Vernor, of the Westclox, will participate in the opening ceremonies just before the game commences. A huge crowd of spectators will probably attend to see the girls get started again, after ladies' softball has been dormant for several years.

The grounds have been fixed up by the city, with dozens of loads of fine sand rolled and scraped and put in first class shape. A grandstand has been erected along the east side of the diamond with a large seating capacity, so everybody should be well accomodated.

KING EDWARD WINS BY CLOSE MARGIN

School Second Teams Put Up Great Battle—King George Loses 6-5.

King Edward second team squeezed out a 6-5 victory over the second team from King George yesterday evening on the former's diamond. It was a close game all the way, with the score being 3-all until the fourth when the losers got one and the others scored a couple. Each of them got one in the last inning. Gardner had a triple to his credit in the seventh, tying the score for King George but he couldn't score himself.

The visitors only collected four hits off Fife and Patterson, and struck out nine times. They had six errors in the field, but pulled off some nice fielding at times, also. The winners got seven hits, while they were guilty of four miscues. Hoy, pitching for the losers, fanned thirteen in the seven innings. He deserved better support than he got.

The teams:

King George—Anderson, c; Hoy, p; Gardner, 1b; Hunter, 2b; Legon, ss; Darwin, 3b; McLean, rf; Hopcroft, cf; Hepburn, lf.

King Edward—Patterson 1b and p; Connors, c; Fife, p and 1b; Smythe, lf; Mennies, 3b; Todd, 2b; Post, ss, G. Grose, cf; L. Grose, rf.

Umpires—Williamson and Boyler.

Score by innings:

| | | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| King George | 300 100 1 | 5 | 4 | 6 |
| King Edward | 300 200 1 | 6 | 7 | 4 |

CASUAL COMMENT

Brintons and Westclox open the Girls' Softball League over at the Bowl to-morrow night, with J. H. Vernor, Mayor Denne, and Aldermar Bob Cotton showing them how not to do it, just before hostilities begin. There'll be a man-sized—though not all men, either—crowd on hand.

• • • • • •

And the City Baseball League commences operations on Monday, the holiday. They'll play a double-header, Junior and Juvenile, over at the James Stevenson diamond. As these will be the only games played on that day, the youngsters ought to draw a real crowd.

• • • • • •

The second teams of the King George and King Edward Schools play a tighter game than the main teams. They put up a real exciting scrap down at King Edward yesterday, with the homesters finally nosing the East City boys out 6-5. It was a good game.

• • • • • • •

Just a lot of tough luck, that's what it was. We mean that 10 to 5 licking The Examiner team took from the not-so-alarming Westclox. The fatalities were terrible, a dozen or more of our valuable players dying on the bases. And there wasn't a doctor in the crowd who had a good two-base hit in his bag to help them.

• • • • • • •

But we don't think so much of Jake Beckerman's team. They're not bad, but our boys had 'em worried plenty last night. A couple of bad erors and a lot of hard luck was all that kept us from slowing up the Clockers.

• • • • • • •

Cy Haskill made a nice job of it behind the bat for The Examiner, and Scates wasn't to blame by any means for the loss. He worked hard all the time. Harry Dugan, by the way, has a good pair of lungs. And does he use them?

• • • • • • •

Percy Bond came back from Toronto yesterday with a classy silver cup which he won by having the best gross score in the Druggists' Invitation Tournament the day before. Ninety-seven teed off most of them being Toronto and Hamilton druggists.

• • • • • • •

Another meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Senior Baseball Club is called for to-morrow night at seven in the Chamber of Commerce. All the members are requested to make it on time. The matter of grounds will come in for considerable discussion at this time.

• • • • • • •

Three more manufacturers have promised to serve on the executive of the local team. They were not at the first meeting, but have been seen since, and, like those other prominent men, are strong for the club. They are C. J. Glaspel, J. H. Vernor, and George A MacDonald.

• • • • • • •

J. A. Bell and Vic Hamilton were the official representatives at the C.O.B.L. meeting in Belleville last night. Bill Kay and Max Swanston were present also. Three teams will operate this summer, Oshawa having notified the secretary that they would not be in.

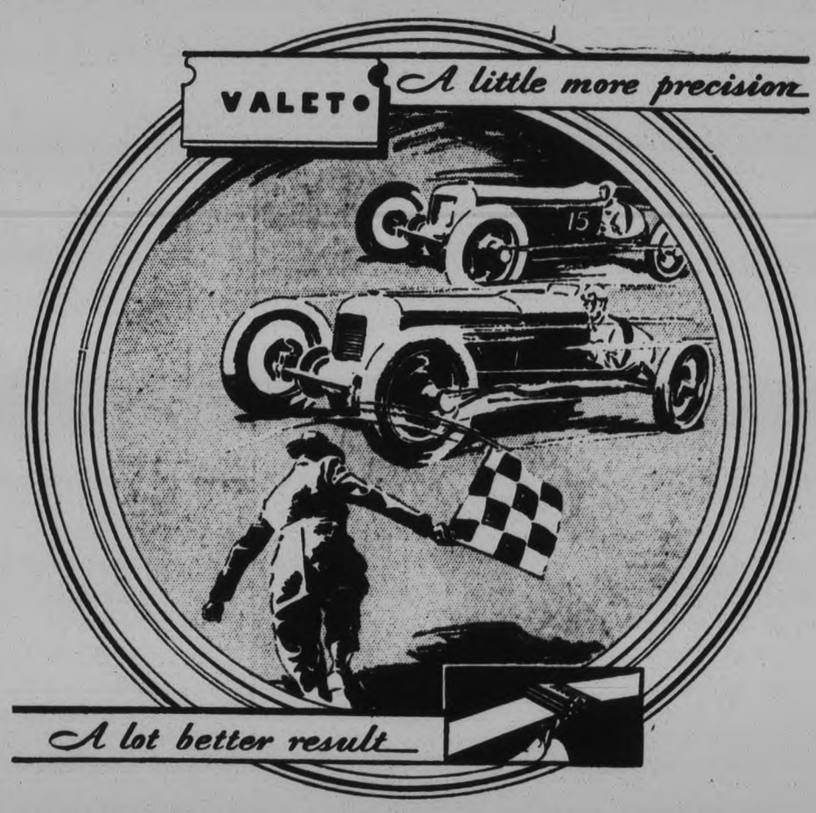
MEN WHO KNOW STEEL PREFER THE VALET —MEN WHO KNOW FACES PRESCRIBE IT



PRECISION and skill usually decide the winner on dirt track or speedway. Motors are tuned to perfection. Work in the pits is swift and accurate. In automobile racing—as in most other branches of human activity—a little more precision means a lot better result.

Made with utmost exactness in one of the world's finest precision plants—the new Valet blade has won and held the hearty endorsement of the world's most discriminating class of shavers.

Metallurgists say it is a far superior blade. Physicians prescribe it for the relief and prevention of skin disorders caused by harsh shaving.

The new Valet blade is made exclusively for the Valet AutoStrop Razor and can be cleaned and stropped without removal. Satisfy yourself that mathematical exactness in blade manufacture and inspection means far better shaving results. Buy Valet blades today—and the razor if you haven't one.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess.)

A DAINTY STRANGER

Some people can't deny their race
Because they show it in their face.
—Old Mother Nature.

Farmer Brown's Boy was beginning to love the Dry Desert. Yes, sir, he was beginning to love the Dry Dsert. At first it had seemed to him the most desolate place in all the Great World. He thought of the beautiful Green Meadows at home and wondered how anybody could see any beauty in the Dry Desert. Now the Dry Desert was beginning to get hold of him as he had been told it would. There was something about it that he couldn't describe yet could feel, and he felt it more each day.

He had been provided with a saddle horse at the ranch and early every morning he went exploring, never going so far that he couldn't be back before the heat of day. He was eager to find out all he could about the little people who lived in this dry land. At first it hadn't seemed possible to him that there could be any living creatures, but he soon found that he was great! mistaken.

"How they live without water is more than I can understand," he said to Cousin Tom.

Cousin Tom, who had been there before, smiled. "It is one of the wonders of Old Mother Nature that she has adapted these little people of hers to live without water," said he.

"Don't they drink at all?" asked Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Some of them have seldom if ever been seen to drink," replied Cousin Tom. "Of course, there is rain once in a while at certain seasons or there couldn't be any vegetation, but even that gets along with mighty little moisture. I believe that the scientists say that in some of the little people what is called a chemical change takes place in the dry food, such as seeds, after it is eaten, so that enough moisture is provided. Anyway, there are times when there will be no rain for six months or more and these little folk seem to get along nicely, so I suppose they could do so indefinitely. I have seen Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat refuse water when he was kept as a pet. Any of his cousins, like Robber the Rat back home, would soon die without water, but these little desert people just don't want it because Old Mother Nature has fixed things for them so that they don't need it."

So it was that Farmer Brown's Boy grew more and more interested in these little folk who could live in suchadry land, and was always watching for them. Several times when he had been riding early in the morning he had discovered dainty footprints in the sand. They were about the size of the footprints of Black Pussy the Cat at home, but more like those of a little dog. He had wondered who could have made them and always was on the watch for the maker.

It was just chance that early one morning he happened to notice that just back of a small bush was what at first seemed like a small heap of sand. He gave it not hought until as he glanced at it a second time he discovered a pair of bright eyes watching him. "Ha," thought he, "I was nearly fooled this time. I wonder who that can be. If I watch him too closely he will get suspicious and run. As long as he thinks I don't see him he will keep still."

So Farmer Brown's Boy pretended that he didn't see anyone, but all the time he gradually guided his horse nearer and nearer that little bush without riding straight toward it, and all the time he kept watch without appearing to do so. At first he could make nothing of this little stranger and could not guess who it might be. Then suddenly he made out a sharp face, a face that could belong to no one save a member of the Fox family. Without meaning to he turned to look more closely. Instantly that small heap developed four slim legs and a bushy tail and away across the sand sped the daintiest little stranger you could imagine. It was Fox. There was no doubt about that, but the smallest, swiftest, most graceful Fox he had ever seen. He guessed then who it was and he was right. It was Kit the Desert Fox, the maker of those dainty footprints that had so puzzled him.

FALLING IN LOVE WILL BRING DUEL

sed out with the Moors long ago but the spirit of the harem hangs on.

Men here pride themselves on being cavaliers and protectors and fair godfathers and that sort of thing. Women get a great kick out of being considered guarded treasures over which the men get the wind up. The score in pride is about two goals each and everybody seems satisfied.

Not Much Fun For Women

The women however, don't seem to have much fun. They don't go places and do things as our girls do. If they are married and have babies the distant males of the family start telling them just how the babes should be brought up, what they should wear and when they should be weaned.

Men here are expected to wear wedding rings too, to tip off to the world that they have cares and responsibilities. Not all of them do it however, which helps to explain why another identification idea fell flat. It was felt by some family man that a new word should be coined. A word that indicated whether a man was married or not. We, for instance, have Miss, Mr. and Mrs.. and a man is Mr. from 18 to 80 whether he marries or not. Same in Spain. So they thought up a new word and tried to pin it on the married men but the whole idea was thrown for a loss after about ten days experiment.

You may notice in pictures that Spanish girls look tall, graceful and picturesque. That's bunk. Many are short stocky and greasy. But the great lace draped comb sticking up three to six inches makes them seem taller and slimmer and more beautiful.

Black Predominant Color

Black is the predominant color throughout Spain. At least 90 per cent. of the women over 20 you see on the streets or in their homes wear black frocks with black shawls and black mantillas. If a girl has the slightest trace of blonde in her hair she buys every bleaching dope ever invented and pours them on herself in what is usually a vain effort to look English or Swedish or what have you. The effect is usually to give a streaky reddish fringe to the hair with a black base.

Next to his women the Spaniard guards his home but this from fear, not pride. Streets here are tiny but hand manicured. The houses which line them have great steel-studded doors of oak like Toronto has for her armouries, while every ground floor window is heavily barred with steel. Sometimes a solid steel shutter goes on the ground floor windows while light comes in from the roof. During the day these doors stand open but at night they are locked up like a fort or a castle. If you knock to be admitted you will notice that great shiny brass bands are fastened over the knob or latch. You knock anyway and a bit of a steel slit like in a speakeasy opens. If you look human the great brass hands move mysteriously and you get inside to be faced by more doors. But if you don't look right the brass hands don't move and you stay out in the cold.

This business of protecting the home and the women seems definitely limited to the so called better class—which is those drawing $20 a week or better. The rest don't care a hoot. Down at the sea front for instance, powerful and deep voiced wenches raise Cain with sailors all night long. They howl and sing on the streets, squawk and smash glasses in the pubs and generally act like a heavyweight on a spree. They are deep lunged, deep chested mamas and I don't mean maybe. Perhaps there are such women in all ports but in other places they raise their hulabaloo less publicly. Perhaps you just notice them more here.

Come Early to Market

It's similar with the farm women. Tomorrow is market day here and already the great creaking carts full of greenstuff and wines and pigs and chickens are lined up abaft the post office.

They get into town somewhere between nine and midnight. The woman of the family immediately goes to the nearest cafe and comes back with coffee-cognac for herself and her husband. They stay on the cart until about 12.

Then the man remains to sleep and guard his produce while the woman goes to the cafe and drowses away the dark hours at a table. Sea front and market place cafes are partly filled with homeless women every night of the week but before market day the place is crowded to capacity. It is part of the Spaniard's rule of hospitality that no one shall be denied admission and no one will be charged a cent.

So the regular male patrons finish their last game of dominioes about 12, hoist their third and last one cent drink of wine, pull up a couple of notches in belts and shuffle off into the night to sleep in some cheap flop house or in the park while the peasant women from the farms or the homeless vagabonds of town sprawl black heads over the marble table tops and call it a day

They have been doing this in Cadiz and San Fernando since long before Columbus left these shores to discover America.

SEWING CLUB GIRLS GET CERTIFICATES

Havelock Members Under Mrs. J. Armstrong Complete Useful Year's Work.

HAVELOCK, May 21 (Examiner Correspondence).—Members of the Girl's Garment Making Club, which was formed early in the year, under the auspices of the local Womens' Institute, were last week presented with certificates of achievement in the first year's work.

This club, which was under the capable guidance of Mrs. John Armstrong, met each evening for fourteen weeks at her home, and each girl was taught how to sew, first the simple stitches, afterwards as the lessons progressed, how to patch, darn, make a work bag, and afterwards, a garment of the kimona type.

Occasionally we find a girl grown to young womanhood, who has not the first knowledge of sewing, or who finds it both difficult and trying, simply because she has never had an opportunity to learn. If she had been taught the elementary steps when she was younger, she would probably have taken to sewing naturally. It seems that in sewing, as in music, we should cover the elementary work while we are children, if we are not to become discouraged with the tedium of it later on.

One way of meeting this problem is to form sewing classes or clubs for junior girls, and there is no better way of getting them established in rural Ontario than through the Woman's Institute. The plan of organization is to get some woman or girl with a knowledge of sewing and a gift of leadership, to act as a leader and teacher to a group of girls from te[illegible] to eighteen years of age. Girls up to twenty may be admitted for the second year's work, and the leader meets with the girls for a sewing lesson one afternoon or evening every week or every two weeks as she finds it necessary to cover the prescribed year's work. The finding of leaders is one of the great services the Institute gives to this work. It means some sacrifice, to the women who give their time, but no one can estimate what the training means to the girls.

Each of the girls who finished the course were required to make a work bag, to be made by hand; a kimona type garment, nightgown, bungalow apron, kimona, or one-piece dress, to be made by machine. A towel; darn one pair of stockings; make one overhand patch and one hemmed patch. Each member also must keep an accurate account of all materials used, their cost, and hours of labor, and write a story of her experience in the club and exhibit her work at the close of the season.

One Composition.

Following is one of the compositions which is typical of all those received in connection with the class:

Long winter months were greatly shortened for me this year. Sewing classes were very interesting and instructive, and I hope to be able to make something really fine in the future. Starting out with simple stitches helped a great deal in later work, and the making of the work bag was interesting because of the thought that I was really making something of use. Since we had the material in the house it only cost nine cents for the spool of thread, and ten cents for two yards of ribbon. Material for the night gown was twenty cents a yard and cost seventy cents. It took me a long time to complete this garment, but when it was finished I was really quite proud of it, never having made anything to wear before this. The welt pocket which followed was rather difficult at first, but the second attempt was more successful, and a great deal easier. The hemming patch was quite easy, but when it came to fitting the patch into the hole, my fingers seemed all thumbs. I found that darning stockings was not so difficult as I had imagined it would be, and the buttonhole was quite easy to make. Altogether I know I have benefitted a great deal from the sewing lessons, and out patient teacher deserves a great deal of credit and thanks.

Mrs. Armstrong, who conducted the classes at her home, expressed herself as delighted with the work with the girls, and the results achieved. She stated that she looked forward with pleasant anticipation to each meeting, and did not begrudge a single moment of the time devoted to the work. The members were all most anxious to do the work well, and persevered under all conditions. They were always jolly and bright, and much pleasure was derived from the meetings. Following are the members who completed the course, and received certificates: Una Archer, Madeline Armstrong, Irene Craighead, Beatrice Crawford, Alma Hagerman, Ruth Hagerman, Irene Hagerman, Josephine Hoffman, Edna Haig, Grace Ketchen, Berneice Parcels, Bessie Roberts. All the work will be displayed at the forthcoming meeting of the district branches, to be held at Trent River on June 19.

THE SON OF TARZAN No. 70 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Meriem knew she had a chance to escape, if only she had cartridges for this empty revolver. A swift survey of the tent revealed a hide-covered box in one corner. She rummaged hastily through it but at first found only odds and ends of the Swede's belongings. Then at the very bottom, wrapped in musty paper, she came upon a little carton containing ammunition belonging to the weapon she had taken from Malbihn.

Her search rewarded, Meriem turned to flee from the tent. Lying uppermost upon a little pile of newspaper clippings yellowed by age and handling, something arrested her attention as abruptly as though Fate itself had placed the thing before the girl's eyes. It was the photograph of a little girl. Meriem examined the string-tied packet curiously. Where had she seen that picture before? Suddenly it came to her.

This was a picture of herself as she had been years and years before. Where had it been taken? How came the Swede to have it? Why was it also reproduced in the old newspaper clipping attached to it? What was the story the faded type told? Absorbed in this puzzling reflection she was startled by a noise outside. Hastily slipping cartridges into the revolver and tucking the packet into her blouse, she crawled forth into the underbrush.

Staggering through the jungle, the once fastidious and handsome Morison Baynes doggedly made his way, followed by his native attendant. Though he did not know it, he had about reached the Swede's camp. His face and hands were badly scratched, his clothes were tattered and he almost fell from exhaustion, yet remorse for his scurvy act and an honorable desire to right the wrong done the woman he now knew he really loved, urged him on.

HIGHER ASSESSMENT IN MONAGHAN MAY AFFECT ALL FARM PROPERTY

Some Rural Ratepayers Fear Revision React to Their Disadvantage.

NOT SOLVE PROBLEM.

The probability of an increase in North Monaghan's equalized assessment upon which the county tax rate is levied, as a possible result of an upward revision of the local assessment of certain suburban properties as sought in the proposed appeal by township ratepayers to the Court of Revision is seen by some of the rural ratepayers as a possible development reacting to their disadvantage.

"The appeal which is to come before the Court of Revision next Wednesday, as I understand the present procedure" said one Monaghan farmer, "may seem to some ratepayers living nearer the city to be entirely justified. But suppose that various property assessments are raised by the Court, then of course our total township assessment is increased to that extent and the county council will be aware of this change. It is not so long since the Committee on Equalizaion of Assessment tried to raise Monaghan's equalized assessment by a very considerable amount. Now if there should be an increase in our local assessment by the Court of Revision there may be as a consequence of this action a considerable addition to our equalized assessment, and that means that farmers throughout the township would face a direct increase in taxes at a time when we are all looking for a movement downward instead of up."

The farmer expressing this opinion stated that there would be no countervailing advantage to the farmers through the township assessment and rate.

He was asked this question—"If the local assessment is increased, and the total amount to be levied remains stationary, would not the local rate be reduced?"

The answer was that, granting that effect, the farmers were more concerned about any increase that would have to be paid to the county treasury as a result of a higher equalized assessment.

With this eventually looming before him, the farmer who gives thought to the question of assessments and tax rates, is inclined to regard the present appeal with disapproval. A number of North Monaghan men who have had considerable municipal experience have expressed their comments on the fourthcoming appeal to the Court of Revision.

The Raynor Construction Company of Toronto contractors for the construction of the section of No. 7 highway between Norwood and Havelock, have begun active operations this week. This link extends from Norwood to the old road east of the crossing at Daniel's house, east of Havelock, according to The Standard.

The route of the highway from Norwood will follow in the main the present road, except where diversions are required to avoid the sharp curves, mainly at Fennell's hill and at what is known locally as "the old maid's corners." Logan's hill west of the "long crossing" will be cut down about eight feet in height and the material used for fill.

From the railway crossing the new road will practically parallel the railway tracks to the north, entering Havelock at the West End and continue straight down Ottawa street, and across Miss Gilbert's farm at the east end to join the present road near Daniel's house.

Mr. Richard Wilkinson is the superintendent in charge of the contract with Mr. Alex. Mackenzie as time keeper, and Mr. John Baskin of Norwood as foreman.

Local labor in the main, will be employed as far as possible on this construction work, which will be gratifying news to the unemployed in this section of the country.

Another contract on No. 7 highway has been let recently to the McNamara Construction Co. of Toronto. It comprises new construction from the eastern boundary of Peterborough county, straight across the fields and through the rock hill, practically following the Bell telephone line, until it joins the present road about a mile further east.

Britain Develops Fuel Oil Engine For Planes

LONDON, May 21 (By The Canadian Press).—A British aeroplane equipped with a fuel oil motor is expected to take the air during the summer. In accordance with no mal Air Ministry procedure, research work on th "heavy oil" motor is secret, but enough has been said to indicate the motor will be at least equal in efficiency to any constructed abroad, and air experts a e keeping a close watch on its progress.

For years leading British aero engine buildres have spent large sums on a study of the problems involved in building compression-ignition engines burning heavy oil instead of gasoline. The engines fitted to the ill-fated airship R-101 which crashed in France were o the fuel oil type, but excessive weigh t prevented their use in heavier-than-air flying machines

Among the advantages of the compression-ignition power plants are increased range because less weight of fuel is consumed; economy; simplification because an electrical ignition system is not required; and freedom from fire risks. The greatest difficulty is to reduce the weight of the engine, but this it is understood, has been partly overcome by British engineers.

Manchuria has a fox and racoon-fur shortage.

Clarkson Gets 5 Years In Portsmouth

PLEADS GUILTY ON FIVE COUNTS TO MAGISTRATE

Counsel Urges Leniency Claiming Brockenshire Exerted Strong Influence.

IN YORK COUNTY COURT.

Sentence Back Dated 5 Months to When Accused Was First Jailed.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.). — Harry Clarkson, of Windsor, acquitted last week on a charge of murder arising out of the shooting of a police constable here last December, and who pleaded guilty to four charges of breaking and entering and one charge of carrying concealed weapons, in County Police Court on Monday, was to-day sentenced to five years in Portsmouth Penitentiary on each of the five charges, sentences to run conurrently, by Magistrate William Keith.

John Brockenshire, also of Windsor, a companion of Clarkson, who was convicted of shooting the police officer, is at present in the local jail awaiting execution. Brockenshire is sentenced to be hanged on August 14.

Plea for Leniency.

A strong plea for leniency was advanced by H. H. Gordon, defence counsel, who contended Brockenshire had a strong influence over Clarkson.

In passing sentence, Magistrate Keith remarked that five years in the Penitentiary was the maximum sentence for carrying concealed weapons, and said that although the maximum sentence allowable on the other charges was 14 years, he thought justice would be reasonably well served if he imposed the minimum for the least offences.

The Magistrate agreed to date back the sentence five months to the time the accused was first placed in the local jail following his arrest.

DOUBLE SHOOTING ENDS QUARRELS

Col. H. Lyle, General Store Owner, Slays His Wife, Then Takes Own Life.

NOTED LACROSSE PLAYER.

BEAVER LODGE Alta., May 22—(CP)—Colonel H. Lyle, general store proprietor, shot and killed his wife at the doorway of their home here last night, went into the basement and ended his own life with the same weapon. Domestic troubles are blamed for the shootings.

Mrs. Lyle was formerly Mrs. Sloan of Owen Sound, Ont., and was married a second time two years ago at Owen Sound.

Before the Great War Colonel Lyle was a commercial traveller working out of Winnipeg. He was also a prominent lacrosse player in that city. A short time before the outbreak of war he went to Mexico but returned with the opening of hostilities, joining a Winnipeg battalion.

After the war Colonel Lyle spent a considerable portion of his time in Eastern Canada. He was 52 years of age.

Popular Society Woman.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., May 22. — (C.P.).—Mrs. (Col.) J. H. Lyle, who was shot to death by her husband at the doorway of their home in Beaver Lodge, Alberta, was formerly Mrs. J. C. Sloane, of this city, and prior to her marriage in 1929 to Colonel Lyle, was a very popular society woman of this district.

Following her marriage in 1929 to Colonel Lyle, Mrs. Sloane and her three daughters went direct to the Peace River country by motor.

Mrs. Lyle's maiden name was Gertrude Tennyson, of Drayton, Wellington County.

Colonel Lyle, also an Ontario boy, was born at Allenford, 12 miles west of here, in Bruce County, and went to Western Canada, where he received his early education. At the outbreak of the South African War, Colonel Lyle enlisted with the Strathcona Horse, and on his return went to Mexico.

Returning to Canada at the outbreak of the Great War, he enlisted as a lieutenant with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and returned to Canada as a Colonel.

Surviving is one son, Hilliard, of Winnipeg, and a sister, Minnie, also of the Manitoba capital.

Denmak Advances In Davis Cup Play

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 22 (C.P.).—Denmark to-day advanced to the fourth round of Davis Cup play in the European zone by defeating Poland in the doubles match to win the series, three matches to one.

Einar Ulrich defeated J. Hebda in the deciding singles match 6-2, 6-4, 6-3.

The first two singles matches were divided but Denmark took the doubles yesterday. One more singles match remains to be played, but it will have no bearing on the result.

GOV'T PROMISES TO INVESTIGATE FREIGHT RATES

Thomas Reid Withdraws His Amendment After Premier's Promise.

MARINE ESTIMATES.

Charges of Fraud in New Brunswick Are Made By Hon. Peter Veniot.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 22 (C.P.). — Following several days of contentious debate, the House of Commons yesterday reverted to the less spectacular but decidedly important business of voting supply. With the exception of one item, all estimates for the Marine Department were approved, then the House turned to railway estimates. Another subject, the building of the Mafeking cut-off in Northern Manitoba, gave promise of lively discussion and this was pursued further to-day as estimates were continued with.

Amendment Withdrawn

Domestic freight rates in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, which have long been a matter of concern in Western Canada, had occupied all day Wednesday, on an amendment shortly after the opening of the House yesterday afternoon when Premier R. B. Bennett promised the Government would give early consideration to the appeal of British Columbia for lower domestic freight tariffs. The basis of the complaint in the west is that it costs more to ship goods from points in Central Canada to the railway terminals than it does to ship from the same points the much greater distance to Great Britain or the Orient.

After some minor verbal encounters the House moved rapidly through appropriations for the Marine Department. An item of $681,600 to provide a loan to the Montreal Harbor Commission so they can pay deficits in connection with the Montreal Harbor bridge was allowed to stand. Oppcsition members indicat-

ONTARIO CAPITAL WARMLY GREETS EARL BESSBORO'

Official Welcome is Extended By Premier Henry and Other Dignitaries.

WAR DEAD HONORED.

Governor-General Takes Salute From 15,000 School Cadets —Decorates Monuments.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.)—His Excellency Lord Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, who arrived this morning for his first visit to Toronto, received official welcome at Parliament Buildings when he was greeted by addresses of welcome from Premier Henry and dignitaries of the various churches, educational institutions and national societies of the city. Lord Bessborough expressed his gratitude for the reception and remarked on the loyalty and optimism which he found in Canada.

At noon, the guest was received at the City Hall by Mayor Stewart and members of the Board of Control and Council.

War Dead Honored

A wreath, dedicated to the war dead by Rev. Sydney Lambert, was later placed at the foot of the cenotaph in front of the City Hall by His Excellency. A hush fell upon the scene as The Last Post was sounded and two minutes' silence were observed in memory of the glorious dead. After inspection of the guard of honor, furnished by the Toronto Scottish Regiment, the Vice-Regal party left for Government House. Viscount Duncannon is accompanying his father during the five-day visit to Toronto.

This afternoon's official program included decoration of the monuments at Queen's Park, when 2,000 flower girls from the Toronto schools assembled at Parliament Buildings and were reviewed by the Governor-General. The Vice-Regal party stood at the Victoria monument during the ceremony.

His Excellency later took the salute when 15,000 Cadets from public and high schools marched down University Avenue in the annual Empire Day parade.

No official function has been set for to-night.

ADVOCATES NATION-WIDE NURSING SERVICE

OTTAWA, Ont., May 22—A nation-wide nursing service including hourly bedside care on a pay basis, was advocated by Dr. A. Grant Fleming of McGill University, in an address here before the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Board of Governors, Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada after sessions lasting two days, the meeting concluded last night.

France's Reply to New German Cruiser Is Immediate Order for Superior Craft

PARIS, May 22 (C.P.). — France's reply to the recent launching by Germany of its new cruiser Deutschland came to-day with a recommendation to the Chamber of Deputies for a new battle cruiser of 23,300 tons to be laid down forthwith to outclass it.

Deputy Charles Danielou, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, and one of the negotiators of the London Treaty of 1930, made the proposal, which will be distributed to all members of the Chamber convening on May 25.

Danielou's statement describing the construction program notes that the battle cruiser would be the first laid down since the Great War, and also that this is the first French program in which submarines are not included.

The total tonnage to be laid down in 1931 is 39,000.

MONTREAL BOXER HELD TO BLAME IN RANSOME CASE

Jury Probing Skipper's Death Returns Involuntary Homicide Verdict.

GOES TO CRIMINAL COURTS.

Witness Testifies Victim Stopped Thomas Before Club and Tweaked His Nose.

MONTREAL, Que., May 22 (C.P.) —A charge of involuntary homicide faces Jack "Kid" Thomas, Montreal prize fighter, as the result of a street fight on the doorstep of an uptown club yesterday morning, when Captain William H. Ransome of the lake boat "Aycliffe Hall" receive fatal injuries. A coroner's jury at the inquest to-day held Thomas responsible for the death of the skipper, and sent him before the Criminal Courts.

A composite story of the brawl was presented by witnesses before Coroner Lorenzo Prince this morning. Captain Ransome, who comes from King, Ont., went ashore with two other lake boat skippers and two ship's mates for the evening. Ejected from a club, they returned about 4 o'clock yesterday morning under the influence of liquor, it was alleged.

Stopped on Club Doorstep

Jack Thomas, according to testimony, was entering the club with two male friends and three women. Captain Ransome, witnesses said today, stopped Thomas on the doorstep.

"My, what a funny nose," the skipper is reported to have said, seizing Thomas' nose with his hand and tweaking it. A general melee followed, in which several of both parties were implicated.

One witness said he distinctly saw Thomas and Captain Ransome pummelling each other, and that Ransome collapsed a moment later on the running board of a taxi-cab.

He was rushed to his ship, which was lying in the harbor waiting to discharge a grain cargo, and died on the deck of his vessel, succumbing to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Ransome, widow of the victim, and his daughter were in court today attending the inquest.

Vandals Pull Out 50 Tulips in Park

More than fifty tulips were torn from the flower beds of Victoria Park late last night and strewn about the park. The park gardener declared it was the worst case of vandalism in his experience.

Police and members of the City Council grew hot with righteous wrath when told of the manner in which the flowers had been destroyed. Police were instructed to keep a special watch on the parks, and anyone found pulling flowers will be severely dealt with.

The vandals visited the park some time between 10 and 11 o'clock. They jumped over the fencing protecting the flower bed and waded in among the tall tulips, which are just breaking nicely into flower. With an amazing spirit of destruction, they pulled up the tulips, bulbs and all. None of the flowers were carried away, but were thrown on the pathways.

TURF KING DIES IN NEWMARKET

Sol. B. Joel, Known Throughout England as Breeder of Famous Race Horses.

ALSO NOTED FINANCIER.

NEWMARKET, Eng., May 22.—(AP)—Sol. B. Joel, widely known financier and racehorse owner, died today.

From a boyhood in one of London's poorest district he climbed to a place among the world's richest men, building his fortune in the South African diamond fields. His sensational success made him one of the most romantic figures in the history of British finance.

His career on the turf was as spectacular as in business. Once he ventured into the field he spent thousands where others spent hundreds. His breeding stud at Malden Erlegh is famous across the world and in London everyone knew Lieut.-Col. Solomon Barnato Joel simply as "Solly" Joel.

He dug deep into his pocket whenever a racehorse pleased his fancy and some of those he bought turned out to be wonderful bargains.

Owner of Polymelus

Polymelus was the most lucrative of them all. Joel bought him for about $20,000 and he took the Duke of York stakes and the Cambridgeshire stakes, winning all in all something like half a million dollars in bets. Joel refused $150,000 for him when the horse was retired to stud.

The stallion's offspring won many thousands of pounds in stakes.

Joel, who was a nephew of the late Barney Barnato, "Diamond King" of South Africa, had been very ill since his return to London last month from a trip to the diamond fields.

Lieut.-Colonel Solomon Barato Joel was a son of the late Joel Joel and Nephew of the late B. J. Barnato, and in his own right one of the most prominent of the great figures created by the wealth of the South African diamond and gold mines. His interests were not limited to mines, however, and he had important holdings in financial and public utilities concerns in England and South Africa.

He was chairman of the Johannesburgh Consolidated Investment Trust a director of the City and South London railways and of the Rhodesian Anglo-American railways.

His principal interests outside of business were yachting and horse racing. He maintained establishments in London and Newmarket and a country place in Reading.

"Sol" Joel married twice. His first wife, by whom he had two sons and two daughters, dying in 1919. He married Phoebe Benjuta, widow, in that year.

DARLING IS SAFE IN LOCAL Y.M.C.A. BEEN IN OTTAWA

Supposedly Missing Airman Arrived in Peterborough at Noon To-day.

IN NO ACCIDENT.

Does Not Intend to Return to States Until Some Time in June.

Albert Kesley Darling of Philadelphia and Long Island, who was reported killed in an airplane crash in this district Thursday, arrived in Peterborough at noon to-day from Ottawa. He went to the Y.M.C.A. where he has had a room engaged since May 1st, and on learning of the anxious enquiries about him Thursday afternoon and evening, he immediately sent a wire to his family, reassuring them of his safety.

Despatches from Ottawa indicate Mr. Darling's social position by the intimation that the family is listed in the social register of Philadelphia.

Missed Connections

"I was coming to Peterborough last night from Ottawa," he told The Examiner, "but I missed the train connection at Port Hope and stayed overnight at the Queen's Hotel."

Mr. Darling is a tall young man who apparently has a good tailor. He declined to discuss his presence in Peterborough or Canada and the cause of the urgent enquiries about him.

"I know newspapermen," he remarked. "They pestered me a lot in Philadelphia."

But why they were interested in him, Mr. Darling did not disclose.

"I have not been in any accident,

LABORITE WINS IN RUTHERGLEN

David Hardie Defeats Capt. Moss, Conservative, by 16,736 to 15,853.

ONLY TWO CONTESTANTS.

RUTHERGLEN, Lanarkshire, May 22 (C.P. Cable).—Labor retained the Rutherglen seat in the House of Commons, but with a greatly reduced majority, in yesterday's by-election. The result was announced to-day as follows:

David Hardie, Labor, 16,736.
Captain Moss, Cons., 15,853.

The by-election was necessitated by the death of William Weight, Labor member of the House. He had captured the division from the Conservative party in 1922, and in the last general elections the vote was: Wright, Labor, 17,538; A. P. Duffes, Conservative, 12,249; J. D. McDougall, Liberal, 2,945; and A. B. Moffat, Communist, 342.

The by-election was fought on strict party lines.

Youthful Victims Trapped In Loft Of Burning Barn

Mrs. Daniel Gallogley Smelling Smoke Shortly Before Noon Rushes From the House to Find Shed Blazing Away Furiously.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IS IMMEDIATELY SUMMONED BUT ALL EFFORTS TO RESCUE TOTS PROVES VAIN

Third Child, Betty Gallogley, Playing on Ground Floor, Rushes to Safety—Charred Bodies of Peggy, Her Sister Aged 3, and Ruth Pender, 5, Found After Blaze is Subdued.

WHITBY, Ont., May 22 (C.P.). — Peggy Gallogley, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gallogley, and Ruth Pinder, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pinder, both of this town, were burned to death in a barn at the rear of the Gallogley home, Maitland Street, shortly before noon to-day.

According to neighbors, the children were playing in the loft of the Gallogley barn before the discovery of the outbreak was made by Mrs. Gallogley, who, on smelling smoke, ran from her home to find the shed in a blaze.

The Fire Department was immediately called, but when the fire fighters arrived, efforts to rescue the two children were impossible.

A third child, Betty Gallogley, was able to escape from the burning building as she was on the ground floor of the barn.

The badly charred remains of the two children were removed from the ruins shortly after the fire was subdued.

The origin of the blaze is unknown.

FROTHBLOWER FAVORITE IN KING'S PLATE

Twelve Horses Named To-day to Start in North American Turf Classic.

CLUDY WEATHER.

Seagram and Thorncliffe Stables Have Three Entries —Cream of Province. breds.

WOODBINE PARK, Toronto, Ont., May 22.—(By the Canadian Press.) —Twelve horses were named to-day to start in the classic King's Plate, oldest continuously run race on the continent, over the mile and an eighth distance to-morrow.

R. W. R. Cowie's Frothblower, probable post favorite, will carry 17 pounds. The Seagram stable has entered three — Freethinker, carrying top weight of 132 pounds, Coladder and Mythical Lore. The Thorncliffe stable, who won the race two years ago with Shorelint, has also three starters—Bronze, Oil Rite, and Fess, all thee-year-olds and all carrying 112 pounds.

The track was in very fast condition to-day and no rain is expected before the race, although the forecast for to-morrow is cloudy and cool.

The 12 entrants in the plate represent the cream of the crop of race-breds, three-year-olds and province-breds, three-year-olds and upward, numbering 61, who had been nominated on March 16.

PRINCESS LOUISE IS LAID TO REST

Interment Takes Place in Chapel of Marlodge—Eight Highlanders Pallbearers.

LAID BESIDE HUSBAND.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, May 22.—(C.P. Cable).—Borne by eight of the Duff Highlanders and escorted by clansmen in Highland dress, the coffin containing the body of Princess Louise, Princess Royal, was today placed in the Chapel of Mar Lodge, near Balmoral, by the side of that of her husband, the Duke of Fife. The Princess Royal, eldest sister of King George, died on January 4 last at the age of 63 years. Her husband died in 1912.

The interment took place to the strains of the Lament played by pipers, and followed a simple burial service. Prince Arthur of Connaught and his wife, first daughter of the Princess Royal; Lord Carnegie and his wife, second daughter of the Princess, were present at the interment.

AUTO HITS TRAIN NONE ARE HURT

D. Wellman Has Miraculous Escape as Brakes Fail to Hold at Havelock Crossing.

Car Carried Along Tracks.

HAVELOCK, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence). — When David Wellman of Marmora ran into 902, a fast freight train at 11.25 a.m. on Thursday, he had a miraculous escape from serious injury or perhaps death at the level crossing at the west-end of the village. He was proceeding south towards Trent River and was watching an engine that was waiting for the fast freight from the West, when he suddenly realized that he was moving slowly toward the passing east-bound train. He immediately applied the brakes, but this didn't prevent him from hitting the second box car from the engine. The car and its occupants were carried a short distance along the tracks. The fender bumper and lights were broken, and the car was taken to Wellman's Garage at Norwood by the wreckers for repairs. Fortunately no one sustained serious injury. There were two ladies in the car, besides the driver.

CADIZ CELEBRATES A HOLIDAY AT LEAST TWICE EVERY MONTH

Sinclair is Swept Into Gay Affair of "Sonnenberg Dancing."

ON TO SEVILLE

By GORDON A. SINCLAIR

CADIZ, Spain, April 16.—(Special to The Examiner, Copyright, 1931).—The clanging of a great deep tongued bell as if the whole of Spain were burning in a great holocaust wakened this rather weary traveller out of a sound sleep long after breakfast time today.

I had slept until after 11 because some time in the night rain swept in from sea and someone crept into my balcony room closing the shutters and putting the room in cave-like darkness. The chambermaid, a fat waddling woman who seemed anxious to mother me, had been worried. When sounds of a man washing his face came from the room she burst in.

She rustled up coffee and a plate of macaroons from some midnight party. I asked if it was raining "Raining senor? Of course it is not raining. It never rains in Spain. This is the land of sunshine and smiles." She must have got that one out of a book because now 12 hours later, old Jupiter Pluvius is simply sweeping this old town again.

With a skin full of macaroons and ebony black coffee I roamed out to

Chicago Strikers Ordered Back On Job

CHICAGO, Ill., May 22. (CP) — Four thousand striking city employes were ordered back to work, to-day after Mike Carrozza, union leader, had conferred with Mayor Anton J Cermak.

Street sweepers, water pipe extension laborers, street repairmen, section foremen, truck owners, drivers and teamsters walked out because Carrozza said the Mayor had discharged 500 union men and replaced them with political supporters The mayor denied that he had hired non-union workers or had discharged 500.

Another conference will be held Monday, the mayor said, to iron out further disputed points.

CRAZED FATHER SLAYS CHILDREN

Wife is So Badly Injured Hospital Authorities Hold Little Hope.

DRACUT, Mass., May 22 (C.P.).—Leroy B. Skillings, police said, beat his two children to death with a hammer early to-day and injured his wife so badly that it was feared she would die. Skillings later severed an artery in his wrist. In what she described as a dying statement, Mrs. Skillings implicated her husband and said he had been jealous of her.

Neighbors attracted to the Skillings home after a disturbance there in the early morning reported they found Skillings in the yard with his wrist slashed, apparently with an ordinary table knife. Groans from a bedroom led to the discovery of the attack on Leroy, Jr., 10; Catherine, 8 and Mrs. Nellie Skillings. They had been grievously injured, apparently by hammer blows, and the children subsequently died.

Little Hope Held.

At St. Joseph's Hospital in Lowell, to which all were taken, little hope was held for the recovery of the woman. Her statement was given to Miss Dorothy Brissette, who is an employee of the District Attorney's office, and a neighbor. Mrs. Skillings said she had left her husband several times, and that neighbors had persuaded her to return.

John T. Carville, chief of the Dracut Police, after an investigation, expressed the opinion that Skillings had been mentally deranged at intervals for some time. He said, however, that a murder charge would be brought against him.

DISCUSSION AT WHEAT PARLEY TAKES TURN TOWARD COMPROMISE

Agreement Reached on Committee For Continuous Collaboration Between All Exporters.

EXCHANGE INFORMATION.

LONDON, May 22. (By George Hambleton C. P. Staff Correspondent).—The discussion in the conference of wheat exporting nations at Canada House turned to-day towards a compromise.

As a result of the deliberations of the plans committee to-day, it was learned this afternoon, practical agreement has been reached on the creation of a committee for continuous collaboration between all the great wheat exporting countries of the world.

Remove Uncertainty

This committee would be empowered to collect all available information about crops and markets. But it would go further than collection of statistics. Its primary object would be to remove uncertainty from the world wheat market.

The idea behind the scheme is that representatives of the wheat exporting countries would meet regularly for exchange of information and by collaboration and "gentlemen's understandings" pave the way to more orderly marketing.

The establishment of such a com-

Market Closing On All Exchanges

Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., May 22. (CP)—Except for a slight rally among a few higher-priced golds near the close, prices continued to work lower during the afternoon session of the mining market to-day. To-day's period marked the ninth consecutive day of declining quotations. The sales were 203,020 shares against 261,832 yesterday and established a new low full day's turnover for the current year.

Dividend-paying golds were still under pressure McIntyre closing off three-quarters. Dome a half, Lake Shore a quarter. Teck-Hughes 15 and Hollinger and Wright-Hargreaves a few cents each. Howey moved against the trend to finish up a couple, but Kirkland Lake gold, Macassa and Siscoe were down from 2 to 4 apiece. Pennies moved within a fractional range and with easier trend.

Noranda was off 30 and Nickel 40 on end, while Lindsleys were soft. Sherritt Gordon and Sudbury Basin dropping a few cents apiece. Oils moved in an uncertain manner. Homestead falling 13 and Acme a

CLAIMS GOV'T MAY BE FORCED TO ORDER GOVERNORS ON MOTORS; 60 MILES AN HOUR UNNECESSARY

Throws Out Warning to Auto Makers, Before Allison Board of Trade.

DEPLORES LOSS OF LIFE.

Claims if Motorists Observed Law Fatalities Would Be Cut in Half.

ALLISTON, Ont., May 22. (CP)—Expressing regret at the large number of lives sacrificed to the speed of automobiles, Premier George S. Henry, addressing the Board of Trade here last night threw out a warning to automobile manufacturers that perhaps in the near future governors would be a necessary part of all motors.

Referring to the recent agitation in some parts of the province for abolition of the speed limit declared if there is to be no speed limit then 'we will have to limit the speed of cars. If motorists would respect the speed laws we would be able to reduce the annual number of automobile fatalities by half inside a year. 'Cutting in' is one of the most frequent infractions of the law."

Different in England

Continuing the speaker said proponents for the abolition of the speed law point out that England had seen fit to abolish speed limit laws. The situation in the mother country, however, was entirely different from that which applied in Ontario he said.

The roads in England have so many curves that driving at a high rate of speed is not possible, the Premier proceeded. Here in Ontario are straight stretches of road for considerable distances. "I have often asked audiences, especially when there are some automobile manufacturers among them, why cars are advertised as able to travel 80 miles an hour. I have yet to receive a satisfactory answer," the speaker said.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 22 (C.P.)—Ralph Morse rubbed the cat's fur the wrong way.

There was a flaming blast, a feline yowl, a human howl and they summoned an ambulance for Ralph, who was burned about the face.

Morse was putting the cat into the lethal gas chamber at the Humane Society barns at the time of the accident. Static electricity from the doomed animal ignited the gas. The cat escaped.

OFFICIAL BOARD OPPOSES WOMEN

Lindsay Members Instructed to Vote Against Admittance as Church Elders.

ACTIVITY IN RADIUM.

LINDSAY, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Official Board of the First United Church, Lindsay, has voted down the plan to have women admitted as elders of the church. Delegates from this church to the Bay of Quinte conference were instructed to vote accordingly. The vote on the proposition was quite close.

Announcement has been made that Rev. F. C. Howard, of Havelock, had been appointed by the Bishop of Toronto, to the parish of Beaverton, Sunderland and Cannington. Rev Mr. Howard will be assisted by Mr. A. Brown, of Sunderland, who is at present a student at Wycliffe College.

It has been announced that the Canadian Radium Mines, Limited, which recently secured the cooperation of American capitalists, will commence development operations in Haliburton County at once. The following Haliburton residents are interested in the project: Chas. Earle, C. W. Hodgson, W. H. Burkholder, F. Austin, George Earle, Edward Roberts and Reg. Dart. Development work will mean a big impetus to the northland especially around Wilberforce and Cheddar.

John Newby, of Sebright, suffered a severe loss on Wednesday night during the electrical storm, when lightning destroyed his barn, together with calves and a cow as well as grain, hay and implements. Mr. Newby was in the barn at the time and was partly stunned. He was able to rescue the horses. There was some insurance on the barn, but the loss will be heavy.

Two Havelock Men Have Narrow Escape

HAVELOCK, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—A car, going at a terrific rate of speed, jumped the road at the Cheese Factory corner at Trent River, about ten o'clock last night, followed the ditch for nearly a hundred feet, and was finally stopped, badly damaged, but with the occupants, William Stevenson and Ross Hart, both of Havelock, unhurt.

They were driving south at a fast rate of speed, and apparently lost control of the car, as it made for the wide ditch running along the roadside, and bumped and jolted along thirty yards or so, before coming to a stop. Neither Hart nor Stevenson were injured, though somewhat shaken up; but the car was quite badly damaged, one bumper being knocked off, a wheel broken and a fender bent up. Just how the machine came to jump the road has not been ascertained.

Nearly 500 auto trucks and busses will be used to carry pilgims to Mecca and Medina on the next annual pilgrimage.

SOVIET DELEGATE CHANGES POLICY

Diplomats Speculate as Litvinoff Becomes More Conciliatory in Official Remarks.

SEE BETTER RELATIONS.

GENEVA, May 22 (A.P.)—Foreign Commisar Maxim Litvinoff of Russia remained in Geneva to-day, exciting considerable speculation in diplomatic quarters in view of the adjournment of the Pan-European Commission.

Having visited French Foreign Minister Aristide Briand yesterday, Mr. Litvinoff was believed to be plannng conferences with representatives of other capitalistic countries.

He has been much more conciliatory in his official remarks this week than on his previous vist to Geneva, apparently wishing to obtain recognition for his proposed pact of economic non-aggression. It was referred to the sub-committee of the commission after M. Briand and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius of Germany had spoken kind words concerning its guiding principle.

When attending League conferences in the past, M. Litvinoff has overflowed with sharp references to the members' sincerity and method of working. This time he limited himself to poking a little fun over what he termed the Commission's sudden discovery that Russia was a part of Europe.

The sessions have been marked almost daily by friendly expression toward the Soviet delegate and the country itself by spokesmen for other European states. Observers are watching, therefore, for further signs of warmer relations between the exponents of the Communist and capitalistic states.

DOUBLE MURDER BELIEVED SOLVED BY FIRST ARREST

Former Deputy District Attorney in Los Angeles Cell After Surrendering.

MAKES NO STATEMENT.

Was Opposed in Judgeship By Editor and Politician Victims.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 22. — As the door of a jail cell clanged shut upon David H. Clark, former Deputy District Attorney, prosecuting authorities professed today to have reached a quick solution of the murder of Herbert Spencer, magazine editor, and Charles Crawford, wealthy politician.

Clark was charged with the killings, which took place Wednesday in Crawford's Hollywood real estate office, after surrendering and being quizzed for more than an hour by a squad of officers and attorneys headed by DistrictAttorney Burton Fitts.

Surrenders

Shortly after being named in a statement by Fitts as the man wanted for the slayings, Clark telephoned the District Attorney last night that he was about to surrender. Alone he drove to the prosecutor's office, ran a gauntlet of cameramen and reporters and disappeared behind the swinging doors of Fitts' chambers.

Clark refused to talk about the murder when reporters shot questions at him, and Fitts later said his former subordinate had likewise refused to make a statement under questioning. A murder charge was fyled against Clark after he had been identified by three persons as the man who ran from Crawford's office after the shooting.

Clark's recent unsuccessful candidacy for a Los Angeles municipal judgeship had been opposed by Crawford and Spencer. Fitts said he recently had requested Clark's resignation as deputy prosecutor.

38 Calibre Gun Used

The District Attorney said he had evidence that Clark purchased a .38 calibre pistol Tuesday. Police experts asserted .38 calibre bullets had killed Spencer, former police reporter and alleged "fixer" for persons accused of minor offenses, and Crawford, said to be retired political "boss".

The killing at first was attributed to gambling interests which had been attacked in the magazine, "Critic of Critics", of which Spencer was managing editor and Crawford a patron. The magazine had named Guy McAfee, wealthy former policeman and gambling dictator, as the "Al Capone of Los Angeles". McAfee, police said, established that he was not near the scene of the killing.

EDOUARD THOMAS DIES ON GALLOWS

Quebec Woodsman Convicted of Murdering Restaurant Keeper Last Fall.

VICTIM'S WIFE TRIED.

MONT LAURIER, Que., May 22.—Edouard Thomas, 25 year old Quebec woodsman, was hanged here today for the murder of Arthur Nantel, restaurant keeper of L'Annonciation, Que., last September.

Nantel was shot in the back from ambush while on his way from his home to tend his stock. Thomas was arrested and charged with the murder together with the victim's wife. The Crown contended Nantel was killed through a conspiracy between Mrs. Nantel and Thomas. The accused were tried separately, the woman being acquitted. Thomas was tried first on the question of his sanity. Found sane he was brought before the local Criminal Assizes and on January 11 was convicted and sentenced to death.

A petition was sent to the Minister of Justice asking clemency on behalf of Thomas and his aged mother was aided by the Canadian Prisoners' Welfare Association in further representations to Ottawa but the sentence was allowed to stand.

INSURANCE CASE JUDGMENT HELD

Action Arises Out of Liquidation of Business of R. H. Raynor, Belleville.

IN SUPREME COURT.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 22 (CP). — Liability of a credit company for the accuracy of reports supplied an insurance company is the point at issue in an involved case heard before the Supreme Court of Canada yesterday. The case is the Retail Credit Company against the Commercial Finance Corporation, Limited, and the Merchants' Casualty Insurance Company, and the Retail Credit Company against the Commercial Finance Corporation and the Western Assurance Company.

The action arises out of the liquidation of the business of R. H. Raynor of Belleville and Picton. The Finance Company loaned money to Raynor on automobiles and insured the cars against loss by wrongful conversion. The Retail Credit Company supplied the Finance Company with reports on the cars and its local agent was required to check up on the stock of cars in Rayner's possession from time to time.

The agent, it was alleged at the trial, failed in this duty, and Raynor, it was claimed, disposed of 64 automobiles wrongfully. The Finance Company sued the insurance companies and the insurance companies named the Retail Credit Company as a third party.

At the trial Mr. Justice Garrow gave judgment against the insurance companies and dismissed proceedings against the Retail Credit Company, but declared the insurance companies entitled to any rights the Finance Company might have against the Retail Credit Company.

On appeal to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario the liability of the Retail Credit Company was varied and from that judgment the Retail Credit Company appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. The court reserved judgment. ....

SPANISH PARTIES WILL NOT VOTE

Accuse Provisional President Francisco Macia of Undemocratic Procedure.

STATUS OF CATALONIA.

BARCELONA, Spain, May 22 (C.P.).— Accusing Provisional President Francisco Macia of undemocratic procedure, five parties have decided to abstain from Sunday's election for members of an assembly to determine the status of Catalonia within the Spanish Republic.

They are: The Right Liberal Republicans, the Regionalists, the Federal Republicans, the Socialist Federationists, and the Traditionalists. Radical leaders are considering the same move.

Party heads have stated they favor the election of a constituent Parliament by all Spain to decide the question of Catalonia's sovereignty. It is their opinion that whatever conclusion is reached by the Catalonian Assembly the problem must be settled by the more representative body.

These withdrawals are believed in political circles to mean that the assembly will lack the necessary strength to carry out the purpose for which it is designed. Col. Macia is certain to dominate its proceedings, it is believed, and this is looked on with disfavor.

Good Increase Shown Australian Populace

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 22. (CP)—During 1930 the population of Australia increased by 61,661—26,744 males and 34,917 females. Figures issued recently by the Commonwealth Statistician C. H. Wickens, show that the population at December 31, 1929, consisted of 3,277,352 males and 3,137 030 females, a total of 6,414,372. At December 31, 1930 the population was 6,476,033—3,304,096 males and 3,171,937 females. The total increase during the year by the excess of births over deaths was 73,069, but this was offset by an excess of departures over arrivals of 11,408. Since the census of 1921 the population has increased by 1,040,299—755,907 by natural increase and 284,392 by net migration. The average annual increase since the census has been slightly less than 2 per cent.

Norway fears that the plan for suspension of whaling operations this year will seriously affect the public income from taxes on whale oil.

Beauty that Appeals TO Women's Eyes

A Beautiful New Ford Body

From all over the Dominion come enthusiastic comments about the new Ford Town Sedan with the slanting windshield, introduced but a few weeks ago. Motorists everywhere have been quick to note a new degree of style and luxury in a low-priced automobile. The striking outward grace of line and contour is just one feature. Of even greater importance are the richness of interior finish, de luxe appointments, and the many provisions for your riding comfort and convenience.

Bodies are longer. Carefully tailored seats are newly designed, wider, lower, more deeply cushioned and upholstered in luxurious mohair. You will be especially pleased with the added roominess of the rear compartment.

MEN speak knowingly of ball and roller bearings, of valves and pistons, of the many points of mechanical excellence that make the Ford such a good car to drive.

But to a woman's appraising eye, trained to line and color, there are no features of greater importance than its distinctive beauty of appearance and the richness of its appointments.

The new Ford Town Sedan, illustrated above, is a striking example of this high quality. The comfortable, roomy seats are deeply cushioned and upholstered in luxurious mohair. This is an unusual combination of beauty and utility. It has the deep pile and softness that are characteristic of fine mohair, yet it will not crush easily and is long-wearing, because it is faced with genuine Angora mohair and fine wool worsted. Hardware reflects the quiet good taste and dignity that you expect in a Ford car. The adjustable front seat can be moved forward or back to meet your driving convenience. No car is so easy for a woman to drive as a Ford.

In addition to deep, rich black, you may choose from a variety of body colors. Most exposed bright metal parts are made of Rustless Steel that will maintain its gleaming luster undimmed throughout the life of the car. With all its distinguished beauty of line and alert performance, the Ford sells at a low price because of large production and unusual Ford policies and manufacturing facilities.

PLAY IN MARMORA PROVES ATTRACTION

United Church Ladies' Aid Sponsor Entertainment By Stirling St. Andrew's Choir.

MARMORA, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence).—The popular play "Climbing Roses" was presented at the Town Hall, Marmora, on Thursday evening by a Stirling cast, composed chiefly of members of St. Andrew's Choir. The play was given under auspices of Circle 2 of the Ladies' Aid of Marmora United Church, and was greeted by a well-filled house.

The acting throughout was excellent and local playgoers went away with the feeling that they had witnessed one of the best of the several amateur productions seen here this spring. The cast of characters follows: Mrs. Warren, leader in society, Olive Melklejohn; Joyce Belmont, hot-house orchid, Mae Nolan; Maggie Rose, the climbing variety, Mabel Williams; Jim Rose, hard to transplant, Will Anderson; Peggy Rose, a rosebud, Marjorie Murduff; Dryden Proonis, not a shirking violet, William Dermedy; Hazel Summers, fond of orange blossoms, Olive Whitehead; Priscilla Prentice, an unplucked blossom, May Rollins; Jack Archer, who cultivates the roses, Charlie Allan; Ferdie Wimbledon, Jack assistant, Alex Nathan; Winnie Clark, pert little miss, Cora Eggleton; Percy Southworth, a very dominant man, Don Ward.

Between the acts, pianoforte selections were gven by Mr. Callan and Miss R. O'Neill.

Granting by the Government of a radio broadcasting license to a radio company in Windsor, Ont., led to a number of questions from Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, former Minister of Marine, when a vote of $225,000 to provide for the general improvement of reception conditions to licensed broadcast listeners was under consideration. Mr. Cardin contended no such license should have been granted until the respecting jurisdiction of the provinces and the dominion on radio broadcasting had been determined in the courts.

Furthermore he claimed a prior application by a Windsor newspaper had been refused and the license granted to a "certain Conservative organization.' Hon Alfred Duranleau, present Minister of the Department, explained the people of Windsor area had for years wanted a nearby station so they could hear Canadian programs. Finally the item was passed.

A complete revision of Canada's Shipping Act was urged upon Mr. Duranleau by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member for Winnipeg, North Centre and Gen. A. E. Ross, Conservative member of Kingston. Mr. Woodsworth claimed the act was hopelessly out of date. Gen. Ross contended the recommendations of the Navigators Federation "not be allowed to die as similar recommendations have in the past." Mr. Duranleau said there was no doubt the act needed revising and a draft of a new act would shortly be made. When Gen. Ross said United States vessels frequently had to come to the rescue of Canadian vessels wrecked at the foot of the great lakes Mr. Duranleau replied that the department was considering instituting a new life-saving station in that area.

As soon as the House started into the railway estimates, Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, faced a barrage from Opposition benches on the Mafeking cut-off on the Hudson Bay Railway. The proposed cut-off would considerably shorten the haul from Southern Manitoba into Churchill and from both sides of the House was described as an exceedingly live issue in that province.

Liberal members claimed both the Premier and Dr. Manion had promised during the election campaign that the line would be built. Dr. Manion denied he had made any specific promise. Premier Bennett was not in the House during the debate.

Surveyed During Winter

During the winter, Dr. Manion said, engineers had been making a survey. If they reported favorably, the Mafeking cut-off would be constructed and, he had no doubt, as a national undertaking. The engineers' report had however not yet been delivered to him. Furthermore a question had to be settled as to whether present financial conditions would justify the heavy expenditure involved in the project.

J. L. Brown (Lib., Lisgar) said many Conservatives had been elected in Manitoba as a result of definite promises by the Premier and Dr. Manion that the line would be built. While not himself in favor of the Mafeking cut-off, it appeared there was a demand for a shorter line to Churchill. C. G. Power, Liberal member for Quebec south claimed the remier had given the positive pledge during the campaign that it "should be built now and if I am elected will do it."

While the Hudson Bay Railway vote was still under discussion, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Liberal member for Vancouver centre, introduced the question of the Peace River outlet. This he said had also been promised by Conservatives on the election platform. Dr. Manion replied the outlet was being investigated by the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Canadian Pacific Railway had already sent a report to the Railway Department, but Dr. Manion said he had no permission to table the document in the House. A meeting would probably take place within a month or so between himself and heads of the two railways at which the outlet would be considered.

The Hudson Bay Railway vote was still under examination at 11 o'clock last night.

Lively interchanges took place in the afternoon when Hon. P. J. Veniot, former Postmaster General, charged among supervisors trickery in New Brunswick in connection with expenditures of public money under the Unemployment Relief Plan. He claimed payrolls had been padded and several supervisors had admitted wrongdoing.

He contended the Labor Department should obtain the pay sheets from the New Brunswick Department of Public Works and hold a judicial investigation. Frank B. Smith (Cons., Carleton-Victoria) retorted something very like the situation described by Mr. Veniot had occurred when Mr. Veniot himself had been Minister of Public Works in New Brunswick, but there had been no judicial investigation at that time.

The matter blew over when J. F. Pouliot, with his characteristic facility in introducing a light touch into debate, said he understood "conditions in New Brunswick were so bad that former Premier Baxter had resigned in disgust."

ONE KILLED IN FIRE

TOKO, May 22. (AP)—One person was killed and about 50 badly hurt in a fire which destroyed the eight story Nisshin flour mill at Yokohama to-day.

The conflagration followed an explosion in the machine shop and spread to an adjoining building. It still was raging early to-night.

LECTURE TO BE GIVEN

Prof. Clark of Horticultural Branch, Dept. of Agriculture, to Speak at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 22.—(By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—A lecture sponsored by the Campbellford Horticultural Society will be given in the Campbellford High School Auditorium on Thursday evening, May 28, by Prof. Clark, lecturer of the horticultural branch of the Department of Agriculture. This lecture will be featured by the showing of many beautiful slides, portraying the work that can be accomplished in beautifying the town.

Although young the Campbellford society has done much to add to the beauty of the town, by the planting of bulbs and scrubs. Besides private residences the churches and schools have been greatly improved, the Public Library made a very attractive corner with the planting of many scrubs and the War Memorial made a real beauty spot.

OBITUARY

CATHERINE A. McCARTHY

Catherine Abrigail McCarthy, formerly of Keene, did at Rochester on Thursday, May 21st. Funeral announcement later.

MRS. FRANK HAMILTON

COBOURG May 22.—The funeral took place here of Mrs Frank Hamilton who died at her home, Sunday in her eighty-first year. Her husband died 18 years ago. Surviving their mother are a daughter, Mrs. Lowes of California, and two sons Dr. J. J. Hamilton of Bethany, and Hector of Hollywood, Cal. Interment was in St. John's Cemetery, Cavan.

MRS. ROSS McCRACKEN

ROSENEATH, May 22. (Examiner Correspondence). The very sad death occurred on Thursday of Mrs. Ross McCracken at her home in Alnwick Township. The deceased, formerly Lillian McGinnis, was in her 34th year, and death came to her after a month's serious illness. Surviving her are her husband and two daughters, Audrey and two-weeks-old Ila.

A service will be held from her home at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the funeral will be from St. James' Anglican Church at 2.30 p.m. Rev. F. Battersby will officiate and interment will be made in St. James' Cemetery.

JOHN HUNTER

LAKEFIELD, May 22.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon of John Hunter, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hunter, from the family residence on Prospect street. Rev. S. A. Kemp officiated. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives, the casket was borner by six boys, friends of the family. Interment was made in St. Mark's Cemetery, Warsaw.

The little boy had swallowed a prune stone a couple of weeks ago; it lodged in his lung and despite every effort, the result was fatal. The case was a particularly sad one and had aroused much local interest and sympathy. The little fellow is survived by his parents and eight brothers and sisters.

Squabble Over Bill Follows Trip To City

Mayor Finally Signs Cheque But Deputy Refuses It.

LINDSAY, May 22—There is a cheque for $18.50, duly countersigned by Mayor Alcorn, waiting for Deputy-Reeve W. J. Hussey at the town clerk's office. The deputy-reeve, however, says "it can stay there—I am not accepting charity."

When five of the town council visited Toronto to inspect sewage disposal automatic pumps, Mr. Hussey did not want to take his car, but was prevailed to do so. The delegates travelled 158 miles and Mr. Hussey was told to put in his bill for expenses. Nobody objected at the time. At the following meeting of council, however, Mayor Alcorn strenuously objected to any councillor accepting pay for anything and claimed that Mr. Hussey could not legally accept any money.

Engine Strikes Auto At Scene Of Tragedy

BELLEVILLE, May 22—Struck by a Canadian National electric engine yesterday, Arthur Breach, a milk vendor, was taken to the hospital suffering from head wounds and bruises not of a serious nature. The accident occurred at the Grier street railway crossing, the scene of a triple fatality a few months ago. Breach was driving his car and the machine was struck broadside and is a total wreck. The train was in charge of Conductor Bert White and Engineer James Kirby, both of this city. The engineer says it was impossible for him to stop the engine in time. The train was stopped two lengths from the crossing.

Miss Spereman of the Public Library Branch of the Department of Education has been supervising the installation of a new cataloging system at the local library.

Mr. A. T. Neal has opened his Marble Cliff Pavilion.

Mrs. T. J. Butler of Toronto is visiting her mother, Mrs. U. Pinner.

Universal Cooler Shown Examiner North Window

Although the weather man is still wearing his fur-lined gauntlets, the time will come, if we wait long enough, when complaints of the heat will be heard far and near.

"Refrigeration by wire" is the slogan of the Universal Cooler that has such a nice, refreshing look in the north display window of The Examiner offices. It is a large, electrically cooled icebox done in pure white enamel, picked out with black, and it has sundry eatables in its interior, calculated to show the refrigerating properties of the big box. It is sold by the Gillespie Garage and by Aldous and Metcalfe and it has a striking background of pure black and emerald green.

F. Field Sworn In As York County Judge

TORONTO, May 22—Frank M. Fields, K.C., of Cobourg, was sworn in yesterday afternoon as a junior Judge of the County of York and will start in on his duties as Judge in Chambers on Monday, June 1, while in July he will preside over one of the division courts now presided over by Judge Morson. The swearing-in ceremony was performed by H. E. Irwin, K.C., Clerk of the Crown. Judge Fields was called to the Bar in 1887. For 25 years he was Town Solicitor of Cobourg.

CAR IS DITCHED.

Toronto Driver's Machine Upsets in Ditch While Passing Another Near Havelock.

HAVELOCK, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence). — On Wednesday evening a Buick sedan belonging to and driven by L. J. Rothstein of Toronto, turned upside down in the ditch in front of the farm home of Mr. Harry Tinney, on the Marmora-Havelock Road, about two miles east of Havelock. The car, which was travelling at a good rate of speed, was approaching a car coming in the opposite direction, and failed to hold to the road, as the driver turned out to pass the other car. The driver escaped without injury, but the car was rather badly damaged. The top was crushed and the fenders bent. James Wilde, garageman of Havelock, brought the car here and repaired it before Mr. Rothstein was able to proceed on his journey east.

THE RADIO CENSUS.

One of the questions to be asked in the coming census is, "Do you own a radio?"

It may be suspected that the purpose of this is to locate persons who may not have paid their license, or to assist private radio companies to make sales by letting them know what families do not own radios.

This is wholly unfounded.

The answers to this question, as to all other census questions, are absolutely confidential—even to Government departments.

The purpose of the question is to explore and analyse just what the radio audience of Canada is—where it is located, where it is densest, and how it is made up according to the different elements in the population.

With the growing importance of radio, such information is indispensable to the formulation of satisfactory broadcasting.

Radio is a further index of the Canadian standard of living, and some interesting studies may be expected as a result of the census question.

A COMPLETE SUCCESS.

It is estimated unofficially that Canada's $250,000,000 Conversion Loan has been greeted with an avalanche of applications, totalling half a billion dollars—in other words, that the loan has been oversubscribed by 100 per cent., which in indeed a remarkable showing.

In setting an objective of a quarter of a billion dollars for this financial operation Mr. Bennett probably felt that a total of $250,000,000 was about all that could reasonably be expected at this time, but the result has shown a confidence in the financial stability of this country on the part of Canadians that makes the original estimate seem decidedly conservative.

The result indicates a huge volume of money in the Dominion, and the fact that thousands of applications for the conversion of bonds came from the holders of small lots of war and Victory Loan bonds is evidence that much of this money is in the hands of the general public.

When the people show by their willingness to accept new long-term bonds in exchange for their maturing securities that they have a half billion dollars that they do not require as cash at the present time, they offer proof of the innate prosperity of Canada.

EMPIRE DAY FACTS.

In Peterborough's schools to-day appropriate exercises and ceremonies marked the celebration of Empire Day, an occasion on which the new generation is reminded of the greatness of the Commonwealth of Nations to which their country belongs, and of the responsibilities that accompany citizenship in such an Empire.

It is well that half a day each year should be devoted to programs of this kind in Canadian schools.

While there is an obvious danger that too much emphasis may be placed on the value of material greatness, it is much better to err in that direction than to allow our children to grow up ignorant of their good fortune in being citizens of the British Empire.

This week The Examiner received a copy of a most interesting booklet, entitled "The Wonderful British Empire," containing "some facts, great and small, for Empire Day."

"A little honest boasting will do no harm," says the compiler, Rev. Alexander Sharpe, of St. Barnabas, Plymouth, Eng., "in view of the little pride so many take in the Empire."

The facts he quotes are such as to appeal to the imagination of every Britisher.

The British Empire, he points out, is the greatest political fact and the most extensive Empire the world has ever seen. In area it comprises one-fourth of the earth's land surface, and is seven times as large as the Roman Empire at the time of its greatest extent.

Here are a few more facts:

The Empire includes the ancient United Kingdom—the mighty Dominion of Canada—the giant Commonwealth of Australia—the vast Union of South Africa—the splendid Empire of India—among its states.

It is really an Empire of empires.

Its states and provinces are found on every continent and in every ocean.

Its islands, scattered over the Globe both in salt and fresh water seas, are without number.

Canada alone is nearly as large as all Europe; Canada is larger than the United States with all its possessions.

Australia is as large as Brazil, or as the United States proper.

British South Africa is larger than Argentina, or than the United States east of the Mississippi.

India is as large as all Europe, excluding Russia; it would make about 40 states of Pennsylvania.

Of the Empire's area about 8,000,000 square miles are new countries—the bulk of the world's new countries are British.

These new lands have about 20,000,000 inhabitants—they could sustain 300,000,000.

It is therefore the great future country of the world—the "Greatest United States."

The Empire is the largest landowner on the Continent of Africa.

It is the largest landowner in the Eastern Hemisphere.

It is the largest landowner in the Western Hemisphere.

It is the largest landowner in North America.

It owns more of Central America than any other non-Central American country.

It owns more of South America than any other non-South American country.

It possesses more of the coast line of the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans than any other power.

The greatest section of the Empire is in North America; the smallest in South America.

It is the most populous Empire the world has ever seen—about 450,000,000, ¼ of mankind.

The average man is like a match. If he gets lit up he loses his head.—Galt Reporter.

CHAIN STORE ASSESSMENT.

When the legal committee of the City Council recently approved of a resolution from London proposing legislation for a special assessment on chain stores, the head office of which was not in the municipality, there was little consideration given to an important point that has been raised by the Stratford Beacon-Herald.

In the carrying out of such a law there would undoubtedly be some difficulty in defining just what stores would come under the head of chain organizations.

The intent of the proposal, of course, is to secure more revenue for the cities in which chain stores are located, and it is argued that it would not mean more taxation for the chain organizations, but would merely divide up the taxation instead of confining it to the municipality in which the head office is situated.

Just what would be called a chain business under such a law?

Would the banks, the branches of which are merely parts of an organization, come in that category?

And what about insurance companies, automotive dealers, agents for agricultural machinery and others in similar fields who make their returns to a central organization and might perhaps be considered as coming in the "chain" class.

The Stratford paper stresses something else that is applicable here as well as in Stratford when it remarks:

"There is something else worth considering. Nearly every law that is made works in two or more directions. For instance: Stratford's resolution is for the express purpose of seeking to have revenue originating in this city made taxable here instead of in Toronto or some other city. It is a fact that furniture factories in Stratford sell a good deal in the city of Toronto; the annual amount may be in excess of a million dollars; the exact figure we do not know. Other industries here have very good accounts in that and other large cities. If legislative sanction were given to the Stratford resolution, would it mean that the amount of money derived from these Toronto accounts would be segregated and taxed in that city? It would all depend on the limits placed on the phrase 'chain stores.'

EDUCATIONAL VALUE OF THE FILM.

Earlier in the spring a suggestion appeared in these columns that the practicability of conveying valuable information and instruction to school children, by means of moving and other films, is well worth while further investigation. Recently we observed, with considerable satisfaction, that the National Union of Teachers, with headquarters in London, in conjunction with the Middlesex education authorities in England, had been conducting an experiment along that line with sufficiently encouraging results to justify its continued prosecution. The films exhibited to the fortunate scholars, selected for the first test, were four in number, each of them complete; the whole cycle of the life of a frog from spawn through tadpole to maturity; views of the natural scenery on the island of Cyprus and of the life of its inhabitants; a trip down and in a coal mine; a presentation of John Masefield, the Poet Laureate appointed by the Labor Government, in the process of reciting one of his admired poems.

We should imagine that a program of this varied and fascinating character would prove of intense interest to any group of normal school children and would be followed with keen attention. Apparently it achieved its object judging from the additional programs provided and from an examination of the subjects chosen for subsequent presentation to the class. As arranged they include aerial flights; submarine trips, of special interest just now because of the projected journey under the ice of the Arctic Sea to the top of the earth; a speech by King George; a day in the busy life of the Prince of Wales, never more than at present in the public eye; a travelogue of an automobile trip through Persia; the growth of roots; the life of the aphis, or "plant-lice," the bane of the careful gardener, and, in another field, the construction of the Benguela Railway in Portuguese West Africa that will link Rhodesia with the Atlantic.

The promoters of this interesting experiment will not be content with merely exhibiting the films, for careful, even elaborate tests will be conducted in order to ascertain how far the films have been assimilated by the pupils, and also the durability of the impression that remains. Special attention is also to be bestowed on backward children, the theory having been advanced that films may have that effect on their minds when all other methods fail. Educationalists, especially, will be keenly interested in these experiments, if only because they mean a real practical effort to determine whether the films possess substantial educational value. Stress has always been laid on pedagogic usefulness of the film, and this cannot but be heightened by voice reproduction. Leading authorities can now talk directly to the children and thus convey a better idea of the personality of the instructor.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Private members' days are through at Ottawa for the present session. That should pave the way for getting ahead with some worth-while business.

Times have indeed changed when Hon. Peter Veniot is heard to protest over the dismissal of a postmaster.

So far the wheat conference has accomplished little more than the confirming of the impression that there is a surplus of wheat for sale.

SECRET PLACES

BY

INSTALMENT VI.

'I wonder if you'd lunch with us on Sunday?" Greta said. 'I've got just a small party, but I would be very pleased if you would come. We must get to know each other better, and we've hardly ever met, you know."

"Thank you," Feodor bowed. "That's most kind of you but my Sunday depends a little bit on Toni's wishes. If she can come, I want to take her to meet some French relatives of mine—I must ask her first. Perhaps, I may telephone you, when I have seen Toni?"

Toni again! The pupils of Greta's eyes hardened. Rising, she went across the room and looked down into the street.

"Yes, do. I don't think the car will be able to wait much longer; it has to go on for Ronnie. I wonder when my mother's coming. Are you waiting for her?"

"Yes," Feodor said; "I'm taking her out to lunch. Toni has some engagement so I am to have the pleasure of lunching with Lady Alice."

"Where?"

"The Ritz, I believe."

"Oh, very well, then, I shall probably see you there. I'm lunching with some friends. Good-bye for the present." This being the case it was best to be quite open about the luncheon, so she held out her hand again, looked once more into his eyes and strolled away through the sunlit room.

And Feodor, as he watched her go, shivered slightly and made a little grimace of distaste. His experience of women, which was not small, told him only too well what Greta's type was. He had known women like her before; he had known their beauty and soul, and their utter hardness of heart. Heart! They didn't possess one, they possessed only their vanity, and that she should be Toni's sister! Toni, with all her warmth and fire and sincerity, but he knew too much to be in danger himself, he was forewarned against the type of woman who gives nothing and will take all, even down to a man's self-respect.

At the Ritz, Greta found D'Arblaye waiting impatiently, but the frown left his forehead as he saw her approach.

"You've come," he said. "It seemed so long, waiting for you. My God, Greta, you're the most beautiful thing I've ever seen!"

His very tone soothed Greta's wounded vanity. She smiled up at him, laid a slim hand caressingly on his arm for one second, which was not calculated to calm him, and said: "Don't be absurd, D'Arblaye. You're prejudiced. Have you got our table?"

"Yes, I've got it. But I want to speak to you just for a moment first. I——" he lowered his voice. "Greta, I've got something for you. I want you to accept it. Because I worship the ground you walk on."

"My dear D'Arblaye, how very mysterious! And how very shy you've become all of a sudden! What is this thing that you wish me to accept?"

"Let's sit down here and have a cocktail," he said, with apparent irrelevance, indicating one of the tables close by.

He waited till the cocktails had been brought, and then took out of his pocket and laid on the table a very small package.

"I bought this a year ago for my collection of jewels. And for the last two weeks I've been longing to give it to you and wondering if I dared. Greta, will you take, will you accept it, will you wear it for me?"

Looking at him, a little puzzled by his manner, Greta picked up the package, removed the white paper, found inside a small shagreen case, and, opening it, gave a gasp of astonishment.

Lying on its bed of white velvet was a square-cut emerald. She was no stranger to jewels; she had some very beautiful stones; but this was different from anything she had ever seen. On the emerald was carved a cat's head, beautifully wrought, a thing of great age. It was of amazing size, and the purity of the stone and the extraordinary carving redeemed it from any trace of vulgarity.

Looking at D'Arblaye in some amazement, she pushed it back towards him.

"I can't take this," she said abruptly; "you know I can't. My dear D'Arblaye don't be absurd—this is worth thousands.

He nodded, looking at her.

"Yes, it's worth thousands," he said. "That's one of the reasons why I'd like to give it to you. It has rather a strange history: it is supposed to have belonged to an Egyptian princess, who was a great lover. As long as she had this jewel in her possession she had success love, fame, her beauty never faded, her lovers remained faithful. The jewel was stolen from her, and immediate disaster overtook her. It was regained by a man who had always loved her, and he brought it back. The man was killed; it cost hm his life, but she recovered the jewel; and the story goes that to the end of her life she had all she wished and never failed in any of her desires. You are more beautiful than any Egyptian princess ever could be. I want you to wear it."

Faintly amused, Greta looked at him.

"Do you mean to say you really believe that, D'Arblaye?" she said. "I thought you were a man of the world."

His handsome, sullen face flushed at the faint sneer in her tone.

"Yes; I do happen to believe it," he said, rather defiantly. "Why not? Besides, what harm can there be in taking what chance there is? One can't have too much good luck in this world. You can wear that—you can wear it under your dress. No one need know where it came from. If your husband sees it—well, surely you can explain? Say you won it at bridge.

Greta sighed elaborately.

"My dear D'Arblaye, how idiotic men are! Won it at bridge, indeed! Would anybody—would my husband or any friend believe that nonsense! Why, look!"

"Put it round your neck a moment," he said quietly, and half in amusement, half in curiosity, Greta lifted the jewel by its little platinum chain, put it round her neck and looked at him.

"There!" she said.

On her white skin the emerald gleamed with startling intensity. It seemed in some way to give its tint to her eyes, touching their deep blue with its own baleful light. But there was no denying that its strange and almost barbaric carving made of her an amazing picture. There was always a hint of the past in Greta's eyes. Despite her clothes and her general air, she was not modern. It was the age-old lure of the cold woman seeking experience that lay in her eyes, the age-old evil that can linger about the exploitation of great beauty, and now, with that jewel gleaming against her ivory throat, the evil in Greta seemed suddenly to spring to her eyes. D'Arblaye's superstition, his defiance of everything in the world except his own desires, raised its head, and his eyes glinted savagely. Quite suddenly sitting here in the lounge of the most modern hotel in Paris, surrounded by all the worldliness and the wealth of the century, he felt transported to some far-off past, and knew that he must have this woman for his own; that at any cost he would have her.

A strange elation filled him. If she took that jewel she would be his; if she did not, Checking his thoughts sharply, he leaned a little across the table.

"Greta," he said, "that jewel is wonderful. Look in the mirror of your bag."

She looked, started, looked again, and then met his hot eyes.

"Yes, it is wonderful," she said in a strange voice. "It's a marvellous jewel, D'Arblaye, but—I cannot take it. It's far too valuable. Besides, I never take presents."

"This isn't a present," he said; "this is part of your life. You must take it. I've had it in my collection now for a year, but ever since I've known you I've longed to see it on your throat. Take it We'll make up a tale to account for its presence. I'll find out something more about it; I'll find out its history. Wear it to-day, and I think you will always wear it."

She said no more for the moment. How enormously wealthy he must be to buy a jewel like this! For she was under no misapprehension as to its value. It was a treasure in which only a millionaire could possibly indulge. And he had bought it merely as a whim. He was annoying; at times he angered her; he was too insistent and selfish, yet he had power, and as much she could not do without him, though she had no intention of running any risk. It must be sufficient that he had her society, her willingness to let him take her about. It pleased him to give her this; very well, she would accept it, but there must be no conditions attached, and as these thoughts flashed through her mind she was too occupied to see a tall, dark man who wore a little imperial and moustache standing at a table not far away. She would have known him for Paul Ravel, the famous artist, for he was a friend of her mother's, but she did not see him and Ravel took care she should not, for he had seen the jewel pass from D'Arblaye's hand to hers, and he knew D'Arblaye.

So Halkett's wife, well she should show better taste in her choice, but it was none of his business. In this he was strangely wrong, for that short episode was to recur to him at a moment when, little though he guessed it, it would tip the scales between life and death.

What To-day Means To You.

"GEMINI"

If May 22nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 9:10 p.m. to 11 p.m. The danger hours are from 1 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. and from 5:50 p.m. to 8:15 p.m.

May 22nd does not, according to the stars, hold out any bright prospects except to those of artistic tastes. For the conventional sort of person, the day will be unsatisfactory and rather muddled. In the evening, conditions will improve and all social activities will be crowned with success.

Children born on this May 22nd will, in early years, be handicapped by oft-recurring ailments. Once the period of adolescence is attained, they will develop along normal lines, revealing not only physical but moral and intellectual strength. They will be both successful and happy.

Born on May 22nd, you are independent in thought and in action. This, in youth, militated against your success, and caused many to shake their heads in despair. You, however, have always shown much tenacity of purpose and never faltering, you have established your right to absolute freedom, as your originality wins out, when conventionalism and general usage might only fail.

You are largely governed by intuitions and impressions, and have a gift for "sensing" things that others do not feel. You enjoy your own companionship, and are never happier than when all alone you wrestle with a problem or try to analyze a complex situation. It cannot be said that you are a curmudgeon, as, when in the society of others, you are a brilliant—and, sometimes, spectacular—conversationalist.

The signs denote that you will travel extensively. In your case, this will give you a breadth of view and a tolerance that will make you charitable and sympathetic. You are a great reader, and your memory is a retentive one. You only evince an interest in sports sufficient to give you a certain amount of physical excercise. You are a good friend, and never a bitter enemy. Marriage will round out and mellow your character.

Suspect In Killing Taken Near Welland

WELLAND, Ont., May 22.—Alleged to be wanted on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the killing of "Hobo Poet," John "Red" Riley at Waterdown late in April, Thomas Plumtre, aged 40, was arrested at midnight last night by Police Chief Daniel T. Boyd and a strong body of police at what is known as "The Jungle," at Dain City near Welland.

High County Constable James Clarke of Wentworth County, was to take Plumtre away this afternoon.

Chief Boyd was tipped off yesterday that Plumtre, one of the three men alleged to have been implicated in Riley's death, was in the vicinity. Riley spent some time at the Welland County ail during the winter months. While there, he wrote a number of poems; among them being sprightly references to Welland County Jail and its Governor.

Act Of Westminster Soon Be Before Gov't

OTTAWA, Ont., May 22. (CP)—A resolution for approval of the Act of Westminster will shortly be introduced in the House of Commons. Briefly this act, arising out of the 1930 Imperial Conference, exempts Canadian legation, with the exception of constitutional changes, from subordination to the Imperial Parliament.

The Dominion-Provincial conference on this act, held during the Easter parliamentary recess, is reported to be basis of a protest which the Orange Order in Ontario are making against any "tinkering" with the British North America Act, any interference with or abridgment of the right of appeal to the privy council or amending of the Shipping Act. This protest has not yet reached Ottawa, and members of the government to-day had no comment to make on the reported action.

BUILDING OF HOMES NOW ENCOURAGED

George Sloan and Son Builders and Contractors Who May Be Depended Upon.

Messrs. George S. and Maxwell R. Sloan, the owners of the firm of Geo. Sloan and Son, are men of practical experience and they employ only men who are experienced and skilled in their respective lines. They are thoroughly conversant with every phase of construction work. Geo. Sloan and Son are builders and contractors who may be depended upon to correctly handle any contract, whether it be a small repair job or the erection of new buildings.

You owe it to yourself and your family to provide a home that is adequate and suited to their individual needs, and it is the aim of these enterprising builders to assist you in every way possible to build for yourself. We suggest that you consult with them. Let them show you how easy it is to get started owning your own home. They will assist you in arranging for the financing, so that once the initial payment is made, the rest of the purchase price is paid in the same manner as rent. Money paid in rents is total loss, while money invested in a home is constantly growing in value. There is really no reason why men of average salaries should not build and own homes of their own. Geo. Sloan and Son will build for you any size or style home you may wish. Their figures are surprisingly moderate for the quality and standard of the homes they build. Get in touch with them. You will find it decidedly to your advantage.

This organization is composed of fair minded and progressive Peterborough men, honest and straightforward in their every business dealing, they materially aid in the progress and development of our city. Whatever your building problems may be, you will be pleased with the service that is rendered by Geo. Sloan and Son. Do you know three building contracts that were handled by them?

Girl To Face Trial For Mother's Murder

ROCKLAND, Ont., May 22.—(CR)—Lucia Goulet, comely 17-year-old domestic servant, will face trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction on a charge of murdering her mother, Mrs. Adelard Goulet here on May 1. She was committed today to stand trial by Magistrate W. T. Erskine who early this week conducted her preliminary hearing.

Mrs. Goulet, in her 56th year, was found dead in the humble Goulet home at East Rockland of multiple wounds apparently inflicted with a slender pair of embroidery scissors. It was at first believed she had committed suicide but the case was reopened on the request of Lucia's elder sisters and the 17-year-old daughter placed under arrest the day of her mother's funeral.

TORIES RETAIN SEAT IN STROUD

Perkins Defeats Liberal and Labor Candidates By Big Majorities.

MEMBER RESIGNED.

STROUD, Gloucestershire, May 22 (C.P. Cable). — The Conservatives retained the Stroud seat in the House of Commons in yesterday's by-election by a slightly increased majority. The result was announced as follows:

Robert Perkins, Conservative, 17,641
A. W. Stanton, Liberal, 10,668.
Sir John Maynard, Labor, 7,267.

The by-election was necessitated by the resignation of Sir Frank Nelson, Conservative. Sir Frank had been member for the division since 1924, and in the last general elections the vote was: Sir Frank Nelson, Conservative, 17,700; A. W. Stanton, Liberal, 11,728; F. E. White, Labor, 10,164.

BIG STANDARD COMPANIES ARE NOT MAINTAINING WAGE SCALES

ames A. Farrell, United States' Steel Corporation Head, Tells Fellow Executives.

WAGES NOT STABILIZED.

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 22 (C.P.) — James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, faced fellow-executives of the steel industry to-day and charged that "The Big Standard Companies" are not maintaining wage scales'

"I think," he said, "It's a pretty cheap sort of business." Mr. Farrell's indictment of the companies was made at a general meeting of the American Iron and Steel institute.

"You say wages have been stabilized in the steel industry." Mr. Farrell began. "They have not. We are living in a fool's paradise. Honeycombing and pinching all sorts of things have gone on. The so-called big standard companies, the companies in the headlines, are not maintaining the standard of wages' It's a shame that when some of the large companies are trying to maintain wages others are cutting them even when they are affording only three-day-a-week employment.

"I am not going to giSe the names of all the companies represented in this room that have cut wages, because I don't want to embarrass you, but I think it's a pretty cheap sort of business."

The 200 members of the institute sat in dead silence during Mr' Farrell's criticism of the industry.

225 OF MILITIA GO TO LINDSAY

Peterborough Rangers Will Take Part in 109th Battalion Re-union.

ON MONDAY, MAY 25TH.

At least two hundred and twenty-five of the Peterborough Rangers will go up from here Monday morning to take part in the big Lindsay parade being staged in connection with the 109th Battalion reunion there.

The celebration lasts from Saturday until Monday night, with hundreds of visitors, military and civilian, attending from all over the province. A huge contingent will attend from Toronto. The Victoria and Haliburton Regiment is sponsoring the reunion.

The Peterborough Rangers will go under the command of Colonel M. Park, with Major J. Dewart, heading the thirty-five machine Gunners, and Major H. K. Clifton, leading the Veteran Company. The local soldiers are going to Lindsay to co-operate with the Victoria and Haliburton Regiment, to help the celebration along.

On Saturday night, the latter regiment is giving a dinner for the officers of the 109th, and those of the Toronto and Peterborough regiments. On Sunday night, the Toronto officers are entertaining the others, and on Monday, all ranks of the 109th will be entertained at dinner. The Peterborough Rangers will have their own mess that night.

The Memorial Parade and the decorating of the cenotaph will take place on Sunday, and the big parade starts from the Lindsay armouries at ten Monday morning. Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., will take the salute at this march. A number of bands, including that of the local Rangers, will supply martial music.

Major G. Whitelaw, Kingston General Staff Officer, will attend the reunion as a guest.

The local Rangers will have their moeing picture camera along, and some interesting pictures should be added to their collection. They are going on a special train, leaving the C.P.R. station at eight in the morning, and returning after the evening's entertainment is over.

Quiet Trading To-day On Montreal Exchange

MONTREAL Que., May 22 (C.P.) — There were but few important price changes in the quiet trading on the Montreal stock exchange this morning, the leading issues holding their ground with only fractional alterations.

Brazilian sold off 1-8 to 15½. Nickel held firm for a while at yesterday's close, and then eased off 3-8 to 12 1-8 at noon.

Montreal Power lost ¼ at 50¼. Quebec Power gained 1 to 5. Bell Telephone was quiet following two days of selling pressure and did not appear in board lots.

DISCUSSION

mittee of collaboration will, it is claimed in conference circles, do these things:

(1) Restore market confidence by largely removing the psychological effect of heavy wheat stocks.

(2) Operate to prevent dumping.

(3) Stimulate purchases by dealers who are now buying largely on a "hand to mouth" basis for fear that heavy stocks might suddenly be thrown on the market.

Represents Meeting Point

The committee of collaboration represents the meeting point between two opposing ideas: One idea favored a tight scheme of international control similar to the Chadburn sugar scheme. Neither the United States, Canada nor the Argentine were ready to accept quota limitations proposed under this scheme. The other idea leaned towards a purely statistical bureau.

The plans committee is continuous its work but unless unexpected developments happen the creation of the collaboration committee, as outlined, will probably be its chief recommendation to the full conference.

Winnipeg Review

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Bawlf Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Wheat: The wheat market was decidedly heavy yesterday with prices breaking 1½ cents under the close Wednesday night and getting well into the daily bids. The chief feature appeared to be "neglect." There was practically no export business over night or yesterday morning, no outside interest developed and nobody appeared to want wheat, even the buying against the daily bids bringing in very little support. Trade was not large but support was so thin that prices declined rather easily and showed little or no signs of recovery during most of the day. Chicago wheat and corn were also decidedly weak. The weather in Western Canada has been cold and light scattered showers were received in Alberta while the forecast promised a little higher temperatures, but no further moisture is in sight'. The weather in winter wheat territory is cold and unsettled and some unfavorable reports are being received indicating that the crop is deteriorating. Frosts were again received last night in some areas but it is believed that the balance has been slight from this cause' The precipitation of the past few days has relieved the situation temporarily but good rains are still badly needed over most of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Manitoba eastern half, is in a better condition' The demand for cash wheat was inclined to be slow but holders were not pressing sales and spreads were about unchanged. Liverpool closed 3-8 to ¾ lower and Buenos Aires was 1 3-8 lower at noon. Country marketings in the west were 227,000 bushels on Wednesday, 163,000 a year ago' The market will likely be influenced largely by crop and weather developments from now on, but it will be difficult to hold bulges unless there is an improvement in export sales. Winnipeg futures closed 1 1-8 to 1¼ lower about 3-8 up from the bottom, with a little short covering due to a late rally in Chicago.

Coarse Grains.—There was very little going on in the coarse grains to-day. Prices were somewhat lower due to the weakness of wheat and corn. Oats closed ¼ to 3-8 lower, barley ½ to ⅝ lower, rye ¾ to 5-8 lower.

Flax: Flax closing prices ¼ to 1 5-8 lower. No feature to this market.

Liverpool due ¼ to 3-8 lower based on Winnipeg'

SALES INCREASE IN KELVINATOR

F. S. McNeal, General Manager, Says Production Plant is Working Overtime.

STAFF INCREASED.

F. S. McNeal, General Manager for Kelvinator of Canada, largest producers of electric refrigeration in the Dominion, in an interview to-day stated that the Canadian Company is experiencing the best business in its history and now occupies the strongest financial position since its inception.

From October 1st, the beginning of the Company's fiscal year, to the end of April Kelvinator showed a 73% increase in unit sales and for April a 48% increase in dollar sales of domestic electric refrigeration. At the present time the factory is two weeks behind with orders even with the factory staff increased by 48% and working two ten-hour shifts.

That the increase will continue is indicated by the fact that for the first fifteeen days of May sales in dollars show a 51% increase. A feature of special interest is that Kelvinator is experiencing particularly good business in Western Canada. Last year was a record year for Kelvinator in the West, but shipments up to April 30th showed a 28% increase over the same period of last year.

Kelvinator Commercial business, with grocery, butcher and chain stores, is also considerably ahead of last year. In building installations, particularly in Toronto and Montreal duplex and quadruplex homes, Kelvinator is showing a marked increase. The entire dealer organization is highly optimistic about the sales possibilities for the year, and everything points to a record season for the Kelvinator Company which is the oldest manufacturer of electric refrigeration in the world.

MARKET CLOSING ON EXCHANGES

point while Nordon oil selections and Ajax closed slightly higher on the day.

TORONTO EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.).—Turnover on Toronto Stock Exchange to-day was only about half that of yesterday and well under any previous day this week, the small volume being a result of an easing up of the pressure which had forced the average of prices down to the lowest level since the records have been kept.

With pressure lifting, stocks steadied, though there was no sign of buoyancy. Indeed, a few weak spots here and there mitigated against any real improvement in tone and resulted in the daily list of new lows being continued to-day.

Bank stocks, down from 1 to 3 points to 1931 record bottom prices, and the oil group were the principal sections where selling still was in evidence. International Nickel, C.P.R., and Ford of Canada, which had been unchanged to a small fraction higher, weakened towards the close and left off just under last night. Brazilian at 15 was down the major portion of a point.

Foods and steels held at previous levels, liquor stocks were unchanged to a small fraction higher and scattered individual stocks made small gains.

Volume was less than 15,000 shares.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., May 22 (C.P.)—Stock prices were generally soft at the close of the Montreal Stock Exchange to-day. The bank issues were heavy losers. Bank of Nova Scotia dropped twelve points, Bank of Montreal 3 to 252, and Royal Bank 4½ to a new low of 249.

International Nickel was steady at 12¼, off ¼. Smelters eased 3 to 82 and Can. Hydro Electric Preferred slid to a new low level of 58 for a loss of 2 points. McColl Frontenac, Montreal Power, National Breweries and Power Corporation sustained small losses. Dominion Textile was up ½ at 66½. C.P.R. dropped ⅝ to 27¾. The rest of the list was practically unchanged.

Easier Trend To-day On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.).—The easier trend continued in evidence in to-day's forenoon session on the mining market, oils alone showing any noticeable bouyancy.

International Nickel eased off 10 to $12'40 while Noranda was down another 30 to $19.50. Lindsleys also moved lower with Sherritt Gordon down to 61 and Ventures off a point to 42'

Lake Shore lost a quarter to $27.25, Hollinger 10 to $6.75. McIntyre 40 to $20.85 and Wright-Hargreaves, Teck-Hughes and Vipond 5 apiece. Mining Corp. moved against the trend for a gain of 4 at $2.11 and Sylvanite was up a couple to 74.

Nordon, reported to have arranged for a deep test on western Canada property, recovered 4 to 29 and Chemical Research was up 5. Other lower-priced oils were steady.

Swiss aviation lines have merged.

MANY SIGNS OF STIRRING IN ECONOMIC LIFE, SAYS BETHLEHEM STEEL HEAD

Steel Industry Operated at About 30,000,000 Tons During First Half of 1931.

CUT IN PRODUCTION.

Stock Market Securities Have Been Much "Over-Liqudated."

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 22. (CP)—Charles N. Schwab told the American Iron and Steel Institute to-day that there was reason to believe liquidation was about over. Mr. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is president of the institute, which held its semi-annual meeting here.

"There has been so much talk about the future that we have lost sight of the extent to which the deflation has gone," he said, pointing to the long decline in commodity, security, wholesale and retail prices.

"There are many signs of stirring in our economic life. The very fact that we have faced this situation and adjusted ourselves to it is a preliminary to the better times, to the favorable upward reaction.

The steel industry, which has maintained its wage scale although working hours have been shortened, is operating at the rate of about 30,000,000 tons in the first half of 1931, Mr. Schwab said. This is less than half of total capacity of 67,000,000 tons, "but a good deal more than 50 per cent of a normal operating basis."

"There may be some further slowing down during the summer, as has been the case in former years, but we have been holding up better than many have predicted.

Drastic Liquidation.

"This figure of 30,000,000 tons represents a drastic liquidation of production. There are no inventories. Any steel ordered to-day has to be rolled. The longer we continue to this 30,000,000 ton basis the sooner must we come to a catching up with the needs."

Maintenance requirements under normal conditions, Mr. Schwab pointed out, are 51,000,000 tons of steel annually in this country, and the reason for the present slump below this level is because practically all lines of business are overliquidated.

Stock market securities, in Mr. Schwab's opinion, have "by and large" been "much over-liquidated."

"I am aware that statements of this sort are often greeted the following day by a movement in the downward direction. The activities of professional traders cannot be predicted from day to day as many people in the United States now realize, but economic law has its way eventually. The security prices to-day are based in part on depleted dividends and earnings, but are further over-liquidated by an unreasoning fear of the future."

"Preservetion of the wage rate, the protection of the worker's payroll, is a primary obligation of business. All policies, of course, depend ultimately on the balance sheet. No man can guarantee the future of markets, wages, earnings or other factors affecting income. But I do say that we have every intention of maintaining this stable wage rate which has been so great an asset in our business."

DARLING IS SAFE

either automobile or airplane," he said.

"Do I look ill," he replied to the question whether he had come to Peterborough for his health.

Mr. Darling has all the appearance of physical fitness. He might even qualify for a football squad.

He was also asked about any possible feminine involvement, and to that his comment was, "That would make news, wouldn't it."

Nothing for the Press

The substance of his statement was that he had nothing to tell the press, and there was no reason for his family being alarmed about him.

"I have no plans for returning to the United States at present," he said "until June, when I expect to be in Boston for my brother's graduation at Harvard."

It is understood that Mr. Darling came to Peterborough about May 1, and while here stayed at the Y.M.C.A. He expressed a wish to study Canadian history, and made some arrangement with one of the teachers at the Collegiate Institute.

It is also reported that he was accompanied here during part of his stay by a youhg man who was presumably his brother.

Good Prospects For B.C. Pioneer Mines

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 22. (CP)—The annual general meeting of pioneer gold mines of British Columbia, Ltd., here to-day, Col. Victor Spencer, president, told shareholders that when the new 2,000-foot shaft was completed, if the vein continued as good as at the 1,000 foot level, present reserves would be trebled. Directors were re-elected for the ensuing year.

During the past year, the president said, gold reserves of $4,500,000 had been shown to exist between the 500 and 1,000-foot levels, on a 1,600-foot section only. On the two miles the property extends, the ore body, it is anticipated, will eventually be shown to be of much greater length than the present 1,600 feet.

EMPIRE DAY IS HELD IN SCHOOLS

Special Addresses Are Delivered in Many of the Public Schools.

CADETS PARADE.

The great traditions and glorious history of the British Empire were fittingly recalled to-day to the pupils of Peterborough and district schools in the annual observance of Empire Day.

The Stories of the Empire's heroes and statesmen were told and special stress was laid on the fact that the children were members of a race that has ever fought for Democracy, Justice and Freedom—an Empire that has blazed the trail of civilization and Christianity and stood in the front rank among the nations.

Program Followed

Following the program as laid down by the Ontario Department of Education, songs were sung by the children, who also gave recitations, read essays and played instrumental selections of a patriotic character.

At Queen Alexandra School Dr C. V. McLean addressed the student body, which was assembled on the school lawn. Patriotic songs formed a major portion of the program and the pupils saluted the flag which waved above them. Many parents were present to hear the program.

James Dutton, member of the Board of Education, was the speaker at Queen Mary School where the students also assembled on the school lawn. There were songs, recitations and two patriotic sketches.

Rev. A. E. Moorhouse, of St. James Church, addressed the student body of Prince of Wales School which came together in the large assembly room. The pupils added to the program with songs and sketches.

The cadets paraded at King Edward School before the students assembled on the lawn. The flag was saluted and songs and recitations given.

King George School's pupils also met outside with members of the staff assisting in the student's program.

The cool weather prevented Central School from assembling outside, but the pupils were split up into three large groups and the teachers related the story of the Empire's growth.

His Honor Judge Huycke was to have addressed the Collegiate and Vocational School students, but he was unavoidably absent from the city. Judge Huycke will address the school next week with an Empire Day message.

HEAVIER TONE NEW YORK LIST

Weakness Creeps Out in Copper and Chemical Issues During Later Trading.

UTILITIES UNCHANGED.

(By Claude A. Jagger Associated Press Financial Editor.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 22.—The stimulus given the railroad securities by the launching of a projection to increase freight rates failed to check the persistent trickle of selling in other divisions in to-day's securitity markets.

Stocks were firm during the early trading, but weakness cropped out in the copper and chemical issues, and gradually imparted a heavy tone to the entire list. Railway bonds recovered substantially, but several other descriptions continued to shrink.

U.S. Industrial Alcohol stock dropped about 5 points to the lowest price since 1915, and Allied Chemical fell back to the lowest since 1926 with a somewhat smaller decline.

Eastman Kodak lost 5 points, selling at the lowest in four years, and issues, declining a point or two included U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Kennecott-Dupont, Air Reduction and W esting house. Early gains of a point or two in the industrials and utilities were mostly more than lost by afternoon, although such advances in a broad list of rails were partially regained.

Toronto List Prices Move In Narrow Range

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.).—Another of those lethargic sessions so common of late on Toronto stock exchange prevailed to-day. Prices fluctuated within a narrow margin of the close last and volume as the general rule was well under that of the previous session. Even leaders were given little more than a passing glance.

International Nickel and Noranda were practically unchanged with oils following suit. Steels provided little in the way of a definite trend and turnover here was at a minimum.

Interlisted shares marked the highlight of morning trading with all issues either going unchanged or displaying small advances over the final prices of last night.

BAILIEBORO LEAGUE CLOSES THE SEASON

Sixty-five Members Attend Delightful Banquet Held in Sunday School Hall.

BAILIEBORO, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence) — Another successful season of the Bailieboro Young People's League was brought to a happy conclusion on Tuesday night in the form of a banquet.

Tables were set in Sunday school and about 56 members partook of a sumptuous repast. This event brings to a close the regular weekly league meetings which will begin again in September.

The program consisted of a toast to the King, proposed by Rev. E. P. Swayne and responded to by singing the National Anthem. A toast to those in charge of banquet proposed to by J. Barnard and replied to by Miss C. Seense. A toast to the society proposed by Mr. John Porter and desponded to by K. Barnard. A toast to the president proposed by L. Dawson and replied to by the president Fred Barnard. K. Barnard acted as toastmaster. Snappy sing-songs featured the program.

The visiting speaker of the evening was Rev. W. W. Jones of Millbrook, who is a general favorite among Bailieboro young people. He chose as his subject, "Ideals for a young Canadian." His address was interesting and instructive and thoroughly enjoyed. The meeting was brought to a close by singing of the National Anthem and pronouncing the league benediction.

LACEY HAS EARNED FINE REPUTATION

Slogan is "See Us and See Better"—Examination is Free.

The eyes are the most delicate organs of the human body and demand the best care from eye specialists. W. H. Lacey, optometrist, has been highly successful in correcting the troubles that effect the eyes of both adults and children, and has earned a well merited reputation for intelligent and satisfactory service. His slogan, "See Us and See Better," is quite in order. The work of his establishment in the field of optometry has brought him much commendation. Many mothers have expressed gratitude when they found their children improving and advancing in their studies following treatment by these reliable practitioners.

W. H. Lacey, optometrist, is prepared and able to fit each individual with lenses of the correct power and shape. Eyes are examined by this firm and glasses fitted or repaired. Their work is backed by professional reputation and long experience, all of which is endorsed by a large and satisfied clientele. Under no circumstances should the eyes be neglected. Many times an examination by competent experts will disclose defects and irregularities, the effect of which may have been manifested in ways so remote that the layman had not thought of connecting them with the eyes, or later severe effects may be obviated and unpleasant developments arrested during their incipiency.

Persons who are in any way indisposed or who have reason to believe their eyes are affected, will find it advantageous to visit W. H. Lacey, optometrist. At this institution they will gladly tell you after an examination whether their services will be of assistance, yet the examination costs you nothing, neither does it obligate you in any way. You may be sure that at Lacey's you will receive honest treatment and fair dealing. Do you know what price eye glasses are featured by them?

An Income of $100 a Month That You Cannot Lose

Think of it—a monthly income that you could not outlive, that would follow you everywhere, that no business depression could destroy, that no employer could cancel! Isn't this what you would like to have?

Saving money and getting the interest on it would be one way to secure such an income, of course, but very few people can save money for retirement. You know how it is—something always comes along to wipe out the savings. Money which can be easily withdrawn is easily spent. Savings must be kept safe, "even from the saver," if he is to have them later on. And suppose you became totally disabled and your earning power stopped completely before you had enough money saved to take care of you, is there any ordinary savings plans that would provide you with the income you need?

There is a plan, a genuine, workable idea for providing you with an income of $100 a month—or whatever amount you decide—for your later years or if you become totally disabled. Don't think because this Plan is being advertised to you by the Canada Life that it is only "more insurance." Its purpose is to make you independent of friends, relatives or the heartlessness of an employer when you get on in years and your earning powers fall lower and lower, as they will.

The Plan requires a little effort, of course, but is it not wiser to face the facts about your future now than to wait until it is too late? The Canada Life Plan is helping thousands of others; why not you?

If you are a thrifty, forward-looking Canadian, wishing to avoid dependence on any one for your support in your old age, we can help you.

WIDE ASSORTMENT OF GOODS CARRIED

Frank Davies' Second-hand Stores Are Most Valued Institutions.

Frank Davies Second Hand Stores are most valued institutions to Peterborough and worthy of extended mention. They feature a complete line of new and used watches, jewellery, clothing, furniture, novelties and musical instruments. One must see the wide assortment at these stores to fully comprehend their extensiveness and the unbelievably low prices that prevail. Whether you intend purchasing or not you will find it very interesting to look over the stock of this local, Peterborough concern. These stores, which were formerly Smith's Second Hand Store, are now owned and controlled by Mr. Frank Davies, whose aim it is to offer the people only good usable merchandise. In many cases you will find merchandise there in such excellent condition that it is hardly possible to tell that it has ever been used, yet the prices are approximately half the cost that are asked in stores that sell new goods only.

In the event that you intend purchasing a range, stove or household goods of any nature you will find it much to your advantage to visit these stores. You will be amazed at the values offered there.

Perhaps you have something which you would like to dispose of; if so call them and they will come out and see you about it. You will find the Davies Second Hand Stores an excellent market. They buy anything of value, and pay the highest cash prices therefor. In this manner they doubly serve our city, and you will find your dealing with them highly satisfactory, whether you be buying or selling. We wish to compliment Mr. Frank Davies upon the able management of his stores, and assure the public in general that the can make no mistake in paying a visit to the Davies Second Hand Stores. Do you know two special values that they now have to offer?

HASTINGS, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence) — The Right Rev. James R. Lucas, D.D., retired Bishop of the Diocese of Mackenzie River, visited St. George's Church on Monday evening and held a service of consecration and administered the Holy Rite of Confirmation when the candidates were presented by the incumbent the Rev. H. Francis Battersby.

The following address was presented by the church wardens:

"To the Rt. Rev. James R. Lucas, D.D. We, the incumbent, church wardens and members of St. George's Church, Hastings, do humbly pray you to consecrate the Prayer Book resting on the Holy Table, a gift from the Sunday school scholars in loving memory of the late William P. Plant, for many years the superintendent of the Sunday school.

Aso the litany desk presented by the Junior Auxiliary of St. George's in loving memory of the late William P. Plant for many years a member of this congregation and a valued worker in the extension of God's Kingdom on earth.

We also desire to pay due homage to yourself and Mrs. Lucas in recognizance of your many years of labor in the distant parts of the church's field at Fort Chipewyan and the extensive diocese of Mackenzie River and trust and pray that you may be spared for many years in your new field of labor as warden of the Church Army in Canada.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,

H. Francis Battersby, Rector,
Charles B. Plant, Rector's Warden,
T. E. Card, People's Warden."

Visited Roseneath

The Right Rev. James R. Lucas, D.D., also visited St. James' Church, Alnwick on Monday after, holding a service of dedication and administered the Holy Rite of Confirmation. The candidates were presented by the Incumbent, the Rev. H. Francis Battersby and the following address was presented to the Bishop by the church wardens:

"To the Right Reverend James R. Lucas, D.D.—We the incumbent and church wardens of St. James' Church, Alnwick, do humbly pray you to consecrate the following gifts which adorn this House of God.

The oak prayer desk in loving memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Coyle presented to the church by Miss Lizzie Coyle. The Lectern made and presented to this church by Mr. C. P. Plant, of Hastings. The hangings a gift of the members of the Women's Auxiliary of this church. The brass desk and prayer book placed on the altar as thankofferings for many blessings received by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCracken. # Why You Should Convert Your Dominion Government Bonds

1. You extend the term of your investment in Canada's premier security.

2. You receive the full rate of interest (with tax exemption, if any) on your present Bonds until the date of their maturity.

3. You are assured of safety and a dependable income irrespective of times or conditions.

4. You are relieved of re-investment problems when your present Bonds mature.

No investor ever regretted buying a Dominion of Canada Government Bond and holders of convertible Bonds should welcome this opportunity of prolonging the investment satisfaction they have enjoyed from their present holdings.

The present offer not only affords to holders of Bonds eligible for conversion the same interest and tax-free privileges as they would enjoy if they held their existing Bonds until maturity, but gives them the opportunity of extending the term of their investment at 4½% per annum for a long term of years.

The Conversion Bonds have the outstanding features that have made War and Victory issues so desirable. They are as negotiable as money. They are accepted anywhere as sound security. They are unconditional obligations of the Government of the Dominion of Canada.

Convert now for continued investment safety and satisfactory income.

Conversion applications are invited to a total of $250,000,000, but the Minister of Finance reserves the right to increase or decrease this amount. Subscription lists will be closed on or before 23rd May, 1931. Bondholders who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity for re-investment should therefore act without delay.

Bonds of the following issues are exchangeable for Bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan:

ARCTIC CURRENT WEAK THIS YEAR

Gulf Stream, Which Controls Path of Bergs, Has Unusual Extension.

WATER WARM ON BANKS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 22. (By the Canadian Press)—Inshore development of the Gulf Stream, which insures safety to the steamship lanes, and has occasionally given rise to the theory that the northern ice patrol maintained by the United States government could be discontinued for certain periods when the phenomena occurs, is very pronounced this year. Olav Mosby, senior oceanographer on the patrol ship General Green, finds three developments have taken place in northern waters this season. The Gulf Stream has an unusual extension with the temperature in some places very high acompred with other years. The southern limits of the cold Arctic water are much farther north than normal for this period. Water on the Grand Banks is in general very much warmer.

He explains that the Gulf Stream sends one large tongue of warm water in a northeast direction against the west slope of the banks, and he found that this water had a temperature this year of between 50 and 60 degrees F. In 1924, when only eleven bergs were sighted south of Newfoundland during the whole year, and only two in April, the temperature in that area was 40 degrees F. and in 1929, when 1,551 bergs were seen, 322 in April, the temperature ranged from 34 to 40, the thermometer thus year registering a reading very much higher than in either year when the difference between the amount of ice sighted was most marked.

Early investigations have shown that when the cold current is weak or the warm current abnormally voluminous, an encroachment or diversion happens such as occurred this year when the Gulf stream encroached on both the east and west slopes of the banks. In some years this phenomena is more pronounced than in others, but whenever it is well developed it definitely blocks the path of the bergs from the tail of the banks, reflects them southward and eastward.

This year for the period April 10 to 21 the temperature of the east side of the banks was 60F between parallels, which is 20 degrees higher than it was two years ago.

Mr. Mosby does not think the extraordinarily high temperature is a result of the 1929 earthquake, but rather because of weak conditions of the Arctic current. In other words the Labrador current has not been developed to its usual extent. This weakness may be due to many causes, such as atmospheric pressures wind conditions, hydrographical factors such as land drainage, at the melting of ice along the eastern continental shelves.

The General Green's oceanographer graduated from the University of Norway in 1922, and worked for six years as assistant to Dr. Fridjof Nansen.

TOWN GETS SEAL CHEAPER

After an argument the town council of Largs, Scotland, has agreed to pay the Lyon King of Arms 587 50 for the registration of the burgh seal, which was declared illegal on account of its heraldic design. The Lyon Court offered as an alternative the adoption of a new seal free from heraldic infringements, but it was discovered that it would cost the council over $500 to remove the present seal from burgh property and replace it with a new one. Another condition which had to be met was that a Burgh of Barony existed in Largs prior to 1672, and, after investigations, it was established the family of Brisbane, descendants of which still reside in the parish, created Largs into a Burgh of Barony in 1595 by virtue of acquiring extensive land in the district.

MOUSE FACTORY HAS BIG TRADE

Has Customers All Over Continent and As Far South as Mexico.

ONCE JUST A HOBBY.

By Frederick Griffin.

TORONTO, May 22.—(SNS)—Some men breed elephants, no doubt, some breed horses or thoroughbred cattle, but Elgin Cullen of Mimico, Ontario, breeds white rats and white mice.

He has a shed which is a veritable factory for the production of these little laboratory animals.

For he ships them, not in pairs or half dozens but in 100 and 500 lots to scientists all over the continent, as far south as Mexico. Research men use his finely bred rats for experiment. Bacteriologists give his mice injections to determine the presence of disease in humans.

Mr. Cullen was weaning hundreds of young mice the day of my visit. In one wooden cage he had 173 of them, three weeks old, each an inch and a half long, not counting their tails. In another cage he had 158.

Each and every little mouse had a full coat of white hair and red eyes, though, when born, they were blind and hairless. Mr. Cullen pulled out a handful of day-old mice, about a dozen of them, all mixed up with straw. They were like miniatures of baby pigs.

Some Families of Fifteen

Mothers may have a family ranging from half a dozen to as high as fifteen, Mr. Cullen said. Ten or twelve is a fair record.

"And how often do they breed?" I asked.

"Every month," said Mr. Cullen. "I may take a litter away one day and have a doe produce a fresh one the very next day. It is possible, if you don't watch, to have litters literally overlapping."

A veritable mice factory! For there are about a thousand breeders. Often the population of the cages numbers as high as 2,500.

"How many litters a year do they have? Surely not every month?"

Big Business in Lilliputians.

"The mice will breed at ten weeks old. In the next six months I take about five litters from a pair of them. Then I destroy the old ones."

"He's a funny animal, the mouse," said the man who has bred them by tens of thousands. "You may raise a bunch of males together, all friendly, but let two males with a female and the stronger will kill the weaker male."

Mr. Cullen has been breeding since he was a boy—rabbits, rats, mice and ferrets. A hobby has become big business on a miniature scale. On the Sunday previous he had shipped hundreds of mice to New York, about two months old, three parts grown.

"How do you wean the mice?" I asked.

"I just go along with a pail and more or less fill it with young. Then I count them into weaning cages, 150 or 200 in each." I feed them oats, corn, wheat, bread, water and milk. I use about 20 quarts of milk a day."

"How did you build up this business?"

"It was very slow at first but gradually I became known all over the States. Laboratories knew they could depend on the stock. Then I got the business."

Heat Causes Trouble

"Do you have epidemics wipe out your stock."

"The heat is the worst. The mice just seem to melt. I've seen them die off so fast you'd wish you'd never seen them. Last year I had very bad luck with disease and heat."

"How do you get such standard mice?"

"I only breed from the best. I may select 20 out of 100 to use as breeders."

"What are a mouse's points?"

"Sharpness; a good full eye; slick coat and a fine, clean tail."

He held a tiny mouse up to the light. "See the bones in the tail?" he said. I agreed I could; at least, I thought I could." "Well that mouse isn't healthy," he said. "I don't need to look at the light. If I get hold of the tail I can tell if a mouse is right or not."

We walked around into the rat section. Scores of white rats, big brethren of the white mice, red eyes, white hair, long bare tails, bare paws, were in the breeding cages.

"You can," said Mr. Cullen, "make more of a pet of the rats. They are cleaner to handle, too."

Doesn't Worry About Bites.

"They know me, at least. They know the smell of my hand. Yes, I'm bit, and bit, and bit. It must be in my blood, but I don't care if I'm bitten by a dog, a cat, a rat, ferret, rabbit or mouse. I'm used to it. It doesn't do me any harm. No, I never bother putting a thing on it."

Rats, it appeared, bred just as often, as quickly and as regularly as mice.

"But," said Mr. Cullen, "rats are very jealous-natured. If you put several females with a male, he'll only mate with some of the females and not others. Those that are neglected will pine away and die."

"They're polygamous, then? You can put a male with several females?"

"Sure. I've put a male with a dozen females."

"How many litters do you take from a pair of rats?"

"Only four. Their vitality won't stand any more. Then I kill them."

In addition to rats and mice, Mr. Cullen has about 50 breeding guinea pigs, English whites, a number of rabbits and a number of ferrets.

SEARCH FOR MONEY IN TWO CONTINENTS

Descendants of Edward Umfreville, Fur Trader, Seeking Missing Fortune.

MONTREAL, May 22.—(By the Canadian Press)—Claimants have opened a search on two continents with "a large estate of money," supposedly left by an eighteenth century fur trader of the North West, as the prize.

Edward Umfreville, at one time said to have been in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company, and later a fur trader in his own account, is the ancestor whose treasure is interesting people in Saskatchewan, claiming descent and anxious to trade down the fortune.

Clues have led to Quebec but without avail. E. Z. Massicotte, Court House archivist of Montreal, has been asked whether the archives here contain anything that would give a clue to the origin and detailed movements of Umfreville. According to the information given, Mr. Massicotte, Umfreville was four years in the fur trade for the Hudson's Bay Company, married the daughter of one of the company's factors, a Scot, and two children were born. Umfreville's wife died, he was taken prisoner by the French, then turned up in Quebec around 1783, leaving the children, a son and a daughter, with friends in the fur country.

From those children is alleged to have sprung issue which still has its roots on the prairies. It seems that the story of the Umfreville fortune has circulated among supposed descendants for years, for mention is made of efforts as far back as 1885 to link up details regarding the fur trader, especially with relation to his later days, with the view of trying to locate possessions he is said to have left.

England has already been tried, but apparently there is no record in Chancery of unclaimed moneys which can be identified with Umfreville. Now the family is seeking information as to his early years for the purpose of tracing his entire life.

It is the view of Mr. Massicotte that, if any information exists in Canada that would be of value in the search, the Dominion archives hold it. Ottwa is the repository of all official documents relating to the Hudson's Bay Company, outside of the company's own priceless archives.

Reference works indicate that either Normandy or Brittany was the source of a family of this or similar name. The Umfreville family was known there; one branch turned up in England, distinguished itself and was titled. It held lands along the Scottish border; but the male line became extinct.

Waits Twenty Years For Its Production

"Trial of Jeanne D'Arc," Edward Garnett's Play, Published in 1912, Being Staged.

LONDON, May 22. (By the Canadian Press)—"The trial of Jeanne d'Arc," a play published by Edward Garnett, dramatic author and literary critic, as long ago as 1912, will receive its first production in a theatre on Friday, May 29, in the Arts Theatre, London. A selection of its scenes, however, was presented at the Ethical Church, Bayswater, by William Poel, actor and stage director, when all but two of the men's parts were played by women, Miss Arlene Clark representing the Maid, and Miss Edith Evans the Bishop of Beauvais.

Mr. Garnett's play differs widely in method and in spirit from George Bernard Shaw's much later work, according to The Times. It is not generally realized that the trial for heresy lasted five months. Mr. Garnett has devoted his whole play to a study of the trial itself and of Jeanne's behaviour during it. In 12 short scenes and through the mouths of 16 people he has set forth Jeanne's solitary struggle against the crushing forces of Church and State, and the final breaking of this girl of 19 after 168 days' imprisonment.

Miss Jean Forbes-Robertson will appear in the principal part.

FAIR U. S. TOURISTS IRED

Fair American visitors to Monte Carlo, past and present, are aroused by the criticism of a European tourist in the French resort. Wisely withholding his name he had published in a newspaper the following: "You cannot imagine what an amusing sight it is here on the nights when the Casino is crowded with American tourists from the big liners. Some of the women are in clouds and trails of chiffon, and wear gold or silver shoes. Others wear walking shoes with evening dress and there are a few school marms in spectacles, large checks and Highland boots! These big ships cannot come into the harbor, so the passengers have to get out to them in a tug from the quay—a bore of bores on rainy nights."

The "Ovaltine" EGG FARM

12,500,000 eggs are used yearly.

The photograph shows a day's supply of eggs.

Why 'Ovaltine' is the complete and perfect Tonic Food Beverage

PURE fresh milk, home-grown barley malt and new laid eggs are used in the manufacture of "Ovaltine." Eggs, although expensive, are indispensable if "Ovaltine" is to possess its unique nerve and body-building properties.

12,500,000 fresh eggs are used yearly. In England 300 acres of land adjoining the "Ovaltine" factory in beautiful Hertfordshire have been purchased to establish an egg farm. When fully developed this will probably be the largest and best equipped in the world. The supplies are supplemented at present by eggs selected from specially chosen sources and guaranteed to be the best obtainable.

Although "Ovaltine" stands supreme as the food beverage which is the richest in nourishment, it is reasonably priced and most economical in use. It contains, in a concentrated and correctly balanced form, every food element essential for health. In every home delicious "Ovaltine" should be the daily beverage.

"Ovaltine" is now being made in Canada at Elmwood Park, Peterborough, under the same ideal conditions and by the same scientific process of manufacture as in the famous factory at King's Langley, Hertfordshire, England. "Ovaltine" cannot be duplicated or successfully imitated

CONGRESS MEETS TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS

Montreal Women Seeking to Better Conditions for Working Girl.

MONTREAL, May 22 (By The Canadian Press).— Side-stepping the requirements of the Women's Minimum Wage Commission, evasion of the law that requires commercial establishments to provide seats for employees behind counters and the employing of persons with contagious diseases were conditions described by women in industry, commerical establishments and offices at the congress of the Federation Nationale St. Jean Baptiste held here recently.

One resolution adopted on the motion of Mrs. H. Gerin-Lajoi, president of the federation, was addressed to the Provincial Minister of Labor, calling for more thorough inspection.

Miss Robert, one of the speakers of the evening, said, "We have good labor laws; but it is all a matter of getting them enforced."

Mrs. Pierre F. Casgrain, a vice-president of the federation, spoke of the work of the Minimum Wage Commission on which she had served as a representative of the public at large. She declared that, although women's place par excellence was the home, yet economic conditions made realization of this impossible for large numbers.

The legislation that created the Women's Minimum Wage Commission in the province of Quebec, she noted, said that the third member might be a woman. In Nova Scotia, Ontario and Saskatchewan, the law said that of the five members, two must be women. She wished the Quebec law used the word "must" in connection with having a woman member.

The Minimum Wage law only applied to industries, although representations backed by the Societe Ouvriere Catholique and the Trades and Labor Council had been made to the Provincial Government to have commercial establishments come into its scope also, said Mrs. Casgrain. The commission can establish minimum wages, but not minimum hours, she noted. Stricter punishment for those who evaded the provisions of the law were advocated.

Jurisdiction of the commission should be extended to commerce, it should be able to regulate hours and a woman should be named to co-operate with it. These reforms, declared Mrs. Casgrain, required political action by women.

Express Strikes Auto At Woodstock

THREE DIE AT WOODSTOCK CROSSING WHEN AUTO STRUCK BY EXPRESS.

When the westbound C.N.R. International Limited struck their automobile at Wilson St. crossing, Woodstock, Ont., Clifford Foster, 27-year-old farmer, and two companions were killed. The trio were returning to the farm, near Holbrook village from Woodstock, where they had spent the evening. (1) Clifford Foster, owner and driver of car, dead. (2) Lawrence Cole of Woodstock, eye-witness of the crash and first to reach the victims. (3) Frank Francis, farm help, dead. (4) Austin Simmons, aged 20, farm help, dead. (5) Wilson St. crossing, scene of crash, and (6), all that was left of the car after the accident.

A little dog may be listed as "partners" in a vaudeville act, according to a Paris court. The decision was the result of a case brought by Polaire, the actress. She had given as the title of a sketch which she had been engaged to perform in a music hall as "Polaire and Her Partners," but when only her pet canine appeared the manager of the place protested despite the fact that the audience was enthusiastic over the animal's acting. Polaire vigorously protested against the insinuation that the act was deficient and the dog loudly barked his indignation. The manager cancelled the act and Polaire sued for breach of contract, for payment of salary and for $400 damages. The Conseil des Prud'Hommes, before whom the case was tried, decided in favor of Polaire and her dog.

MONTREAL GALLERY PICTURES GENUINE

Recent Discovery of Fraud Causes Art Association to Examine Collections.

MONTREAL, May 22 (By The Canadian Press).—The hoax perpetrated recently in London on the Royal Academy by a famous artist who submitted a painted photograph as an "original work" has inspired a number of art lovers to examine their collections afresh. Inquiries at the art galleries in Montreal a short time ago, however, elicited the comforting information that modern Canadian art did not lend itself to painting photographs.

"No such hoax has ever been perpetuated here," said Miss E. M. Pinkerton the secretary of the Art Association of Montreal. "We have had doubts cast on the authenticity of various Old Masters in our collection but no one has ever submitted a painted photograph as an original work."

Of much greater urgency, however, is the discovery that two of the most valued paintings in the collection are badly blistered and peeling. A recent English visitor to the gallery who also noticed the damaged pictures said, "This would not be tolerated in any other gallery in the world. Can you imagine a peeling picture on the walls of any art gallery in Europe? Think of the ourcty that would follow the discovery. The picture would be immediately placed in the hands of an expert for proper treatment and the expenses defrayed by public subscription if necessary.

"If there are no competent picture restorers here these pictures should be sent to New York or London for treatment. I suppose it is for lack of proper financial support that these pictures are allowed to hang here in this condition," the visitor said.

Miss Pinkerton who was questioned on the subject said that art patrons had been approached on the matter "but in these days of depression . . ."

One of the damaged pictures is a portrait of Altamirano, Judge of Seville, by Goya who is sometimes described as "The Hogarth of Spain." This picture which is 31½ by 24 was bought with the Tempest Purchase Fund of 1905. It is the only specimen of this master's work in the gallery.

Another damaged painting is the picture called The Cardinal, by Marinus Van Reymerswale, a Dutch Sixteenth Century painter. It was the gift of Sir William Van Horne in 1913. The damage, it is thought may be due to faulty heating equipment, or to faulty varnishing.

Important Speakers At Creditmen's Meet

Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Sets Convention for Toronto.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (By The Canadian Press).—With delegates present from all parts of the Dominion, the annual convention of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association will be held here from June 8 to 11. Prominent speakers are to address the gathering on Canadian and world conditions as they affect business and credit, the economic outlook, and prospects for the future. Among the speakers listed are Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways; Sir Joseph Flavelle, chairman of the board of directors, Canadian Bank of Commerce, and Premiers J. B. Brownlee and L. A. Taschereau, of Alberta and Quebec, respectively. In addition, many prominent officials of United States organizations will speak.

The opening day's program calls for a round table conference between managers and executives of the association, and that they will meet members of the international committee from the United States to discuss reciprocal service and the opening of a joint international office in London, England.

Various trade sections, including automotive, hardware, ladies' specialties and ready-to-wear, electrical and radio, drug and stationary, candy and confectionery, jewellery, and men's wear will also hold sectional meetings. On June 10 the annual meetings of the Canadian Credit Institute, Educational Department sponsored by the association, will be held. The progress made during the past year and new officers for the coming year will be made known.

Many interesting social events are scheduled for the delegates, including three luncheon meetings, four dinner meetings, and a supper dance.

To Wed Bulgar Prince

In view of Bulgaria's proximity to the Soviet Union, political significance is read into the coming marriage of the Grand Duchess Kyra, to Prince Cyril of Bulgaria. Kyra, who is only 22, is daughter of the Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, pretender to the Russian throne.

SCENIC BEAUTY ALONG HIGHWAY

Pleasant Motor Trip Makes Up Journey From Havelock to Warsaw and Lakefield.

PICTURESQUE FARMS.

HAVELOCK, May 22. (Examiner Correspondence.)—A very pleasant motor trip which can be taken in about three hours, or a little longer, is the trip from Havelock to Warsaw, and Lakefield. This trip offers a great variety of scenic beauty, particularly at this time of the year. Taking the boundary line straight west from Norwood, one is struck by the peaceful beauty of this quiet country road. After passing the ninth line of Dummer, the road stretches ahead most alluringly. As one approaches the sixth and fifth lines, tall elms and stately pines stand out in marked beauty against the horizon. Beautifully kept farms stretch away on both sides, in undulating fertility. Fresh tender, green grass creeps up to the very edge of the white gravel roadway. About one mile of this road is bordered with a zig zag cedar fence, composed of the full sized log, and makes a most picturesque border for the fine farm in the background. Tall elms at varied distances apart give an air of grandeur to the scene.

Before turning off the boundary line at the fifth concession, one can obtain a very fine view of the surrounding country from the eminence in the road. An unobstructed view of many miles, to the west, north and south is to be had, and will be a sheer delight to the lover of rural scenery. Well worked farms, the deep green of the fall wheat, the tender green of spring sown grain the rich brown of the freshly cultivated land, and each field marked out with hedge, fence, or forest trees, in their varied foliage makes one exclaim "What a subject for a painter."

The fifth concession is a winding road which leads one to believe that at some time it was merely a trail, and follows for a short distance the course of a small creek of crystal clear water. This is known as Kelly's Creek, and is said to have yielded many fine specimens of the speckled beauties which are the delight of every fisherman, since the days of Isaak Walton. At many points in this road fine views are to be had. At one point in the road looking to the right one sees a beautiful pine forest each pine standing out in perfect contour against the horizon, its beauty accentuated by the occasional lacy foliage of the balsams at its edge.

White strawberry blossoms and purple vetch make a lovely pattern on the grassy edge in many places along this road. Many fine homes of quarried stone are erected along this road. Occasionally one catches the flash of a spring beside the road. There is real springtime beauty all along the way. Lakefield is a real beauty spot in the summer and as the motorist passes through he is sure to admire the lovely trees and flowers in this pretty little village. The maple trees which are now unfolding their leaves, which are almost a pale pink at this time of year are indeed very beautiful. The quiet surface of the water of the lake reflects the peace that is all around. Altogether this trip is very worth while, and again there is no heavy traffic to contend with, going or returning. One can inhale the pure clean air, uncontaminated by exhaust fumes from numerous motors.

All broadcasting stations in Switzerland are to merge.

SPLENDID ABILITY AS AN AUCTIONEER

W. J. Hancock Has Wide and Comprehensive Experience —Leader in His Profession.

In Mr. W. J. Hancock, the public have at their disposal the services of a man whose ability as an auctioneer stands second to none in this section of Ontario. Mr. Hancock attended one of the outstanding auction schools in Chicago, from which he graduated with exceeding honors. There, in addition to being trained in the art of selling, he was taught voice culture. Upon receiving his diploma he was cited as the most outstanding pupil who had ever attended the school, in points of voice control and speed. No matter what you have to sell, if you secure the services of Mr. Hancock you are assured of a profitable sale. Farm implements, household goods, live stock, in fact anything with him in charge of the sale will yield a nice profit. There is no person who better knows the financial status of every farmer and merchant in this county than does Mr. W. J. Hancock. His wide and comprehensive experience and the fact that he knows personally practically every prospective buyer, together with his inherent ability, have made him the recognized leader in this profession.

A pleasant personality and a keen insight of human nature wins sales and friends for Mr. Hancock. He knows values and deals equally fair with his employer and the public. It would be impossible for so successful an auctioneer not to know values. He has made a study of appraising merchandise and its worth and you may depend upon his judgment in any case.

Both as a man and an auctioneer, Mr. Hancock has proven himself a person of integrity, as all those for whom he has conducted sales will testify. Peterborough is fortunate in having a man of such rare ability serving in the profession of auctioneering. Do you know how many years Mr. Hancock has served Peterborough in this profession?

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 22. — Receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were: No cattle, 157 calves, no hogs, 25 sheep and lambs.

Cattle supply consisted of 100 head left over from Wednesday when the market opened. A few weighty steers sold to some export buyers at $5.75 and $6.25 a cwt., but there was no demand for other killers up to 11 o'clock. Monday, May 25, will be a holiday at the yards when the market closes for the day

Calves sold steady with medium quality vealers bringing $5.00 to $6.00 a cwt., and some good calves at $7.00. No choice vealers were offered.

There were no hogs for sale, but bids in event of arrivals later are steady at $7.50 a cwt. f.o.b., or $8.25 a cwt. w.o.c., for bacon. Bids for bacon hogs off trucks are $8.00 a cwt.

Some choice spring lambs sold steady at $15.00 a cwt. No sheep sold up to 11 o'clock.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 22. — Losses of 1⅛c to 1⅜c occurred on the wheat market yesterday. Weakness at Chicago, liberal offerings and poor export demand caused the decline

May wheat dropped under the 60-mark again, closing at 59⅝c per bushel. July finished at 60¼c to 60½c, [illegible], and October at 61⅞c to 62c.

Light trading and unchanged values prevailed in the cash wheat market. A poor demand appeared for coarse grains, which dropped fractionally in sympathy with the break in the wheat futures.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 22. — Shattering the season's bottom-price record, corn yesterday dropped to below 48c a bushel, the first time in 1931. Trades were confronted both by a let-up in corn shipping demand here and by cheap tenders of corn from Missouri River terminal. Stop-loss selling followed with bears contending that corn still was high in relation to other grains and feedstuffs.

Corn closed nervous, ½c to 1⅝c down; wheat unchanged to 1⅝c off; oats at ⅛c to ¼c decline to a shade advance, and provisions unchanged to 10c up.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, May 22.—The increased activity that has been apparent on the local butter market during the past few days was undiminished yesterday and brokers were able to clear most of receipts before the day's trading was through. Prices asked were higher in some cases, but generally the market was firm with Wednesday's top figures. Brokers were making sales at 20½c for No. 1 creamery solids and 19½c to 20c for No. 2, the latter grade being fairly scarce and in demand. There was the odd report of a transaction at ½c better than the general range on No. 1.

Cream

Though butter prices were steady to stronger, cream prices were reduced by Toronto buyers 1c per pound fat. The reason given was that a change had been due for some time, as cream prices were out of proportion with the butter market. The new levels will, it is claimed, put the creamerymen on a working basis. New prices were 20c to 21c for special 19c to 20c for No. 1, and 16c to 17c for No. 2, f.o.b., country points.

Cheese

There was a fairly good demand for cheese and prices were steady at 10c for new large, 10¼c for twins and 10½c for triplets, to shippers, and 11½c for new large, 11⅝c for twins, and 12c for triplets to retailers.

Eggs

Prices for eggs were steady with the advances made on Wednesday, and local brokers were clearing receipts at 20½c for extras 18c for firsts and 14½c to 15c for seconds, graded and in free used cases, with prairie supplies ½c higher on extras only. There was very little storing done and buyers were not inclined to follow any further advances for this purpose. There has been a gradual lessening of activites in this respect, lately, and during this week several buyers ceased storage operations.

Country shippers were quoted the steady prices of 18c for extras, 15c for first, and 13c for second, delivered, ungraded, cases returned, and retailers were offered extras, in cartons, at 24c, extras at 22c, firsts loose at 19c and seconds loose at 17c per dozen.

Poultry

New poultry lists appeared yesterday and only three changes were noted. Prices on broilers were reduced from 3c to 5c and old roosters were quoted 2c to 4c lower per pound.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., May 22 — (CP)—Hogs 2,400; strong to 10 higher on 210 lb. weights and down; heavier weights slow; steady to strong; most 140-210 lbs., 5-7.50; top, 7.70 one load; 220-260 lbs., 7.00-7.50; pigs, 7.25-7.50; packing sows, 5.25-6.00.

VICE-REGAL PATRONAGE SOUGHT CANADIAN AUTHORS' FOUNDATION

Large Deputation Waits on the Governor-General, Lord Bessborough, in Toronto.

INFLUENCE ON LIFE

TORONTO, Ont., May 22. (By the Canadian Press)—The hope that the Governor-General, Lord Bessborough would become Patron of the Canadian Authors' Foundation was expressed to-day by a deputation representative of all walks of Canadian life who waited upon His Excellency at Government House to-day and presented a memorial outlining the object of the Foundation and its future developments.

The Foundation was established at a representative meeting held in the Arts and Letters Club, Toronto, April 20, the Deed of Trust being confirmed whereby the National Trust Company, Limited, are appointed as Trustees. Professor Pelham Edgar of Victoria College is chairman of the Organizing Committee.

"A permanent capital endowment is to be raised," said the memorial, "the interest from which is to be devoted in the first instance to authors of recognized distinction, or their dependents, who may happen to be in need of temporary or permanent assistanc3. The selection of beneficiaries rests with the Board of Governors who will consult with advisory committees established for that purpose throughout Canada.

"When in the opinion of the Governors the fund is more than sufficient to provide for this primary claim they may extend its benefits to creative musicians, painters and sculptors on the same conditions as for literature. They are further authorized to give representation on the Board to these creative arts, and at their discretion to change the name of the Foundation to conform with its enlarged scope.

"It is respectfully submitted to His Excellency that this is a foundation of national importance which is destined to exercise a profound influence on the imaginative life of the country. The press throughout Canada has recognized the value of the idea.

"It is proposed to hold a public meeting in Toronto in the month of October, which will be the occasion of the definite launching of the Foundation."

Those invited to become members of the deputation who waited on His Excellency included W. D. Lighthall, K.C., of Montreal, Sir Andrew MacPhail, of Montreal, Mr. Justice Surveyer, of Montreal, Dr. Duncan Campbell Scott of Ottawa, and the following from Toronto. Victor Ross, A. H. Robson, E. Wylie Grier, Ernest McMillan Hugh S. Eayrs, Mrs. J. G. Althouse, Mrs. William Storrie, M. O. Hammond, S. J. Moore, Jr., Miss Marshall Saunders, Lady Willison, T. A. Russell, Brig.-Gen. G. S. Cartwright, Prof. J. C. McLennan, Mrs. H. D. Warren, Mrs. T. A. Dunlap, W. A. Deacon, J. E. Atkinson, Hector Charlesworth, Irving E. Robertson, J. V. McAree, E. A. Hardy, J. M. Elson, Prof. Edgar Pelham and J. F. B. Livesay.

Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, whose librzry jubilee since he published "Orion" 50 years ago was recently celebrated, is designated under the trust as the first beneficiary.

BOLT HTS WIRES.

Mr. J. Weymark, Havelock, Has Home Filled With Smoke, Bulbs Destroyed.

HAVELOCK, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence). — During the electric storm on Monday night, lightning struck the electric service wires leading to Jesse Weymark's home. A heavy explosion was felt by several of the neighbors. The house filled with smoke. Fuses, service box, and a large number of bulbs were destroyed, and three burn-outs occurred in the overhead wires. One drop wire was cut in two. Mr. Goden of Norwood replaced the destroyed boxes, located the breaks and repaired them on Wednesday.

The late Alexander Muir, has at least two monuments by which he will ever be remembered by the people of Canada. The greater of these is the famous Empire song of which he was the author—"The Maple Leaf Forever". The other is this beautiful monument in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto, erected to his memory by the Grand Orange Lodge of British America of which Association the late Mr. Muir was a member.

CECIL YORK WINNER IN SPECIAL CONTEST

Seven "Do You Know" Contests Are in The Examiner To-day.

Mr. Cecil York, 275 Lake street, was awarded the three dollar prize for submitting the best set of answers for the day in The Examiner's daily "Do You Know" contest. Taking his answers from every angle, there was little doubt in the minds of the judges as to who was most deserving.

Have you noted the stories appearing in the various pages of the paper each day? Are you acquainted with the "Do You Know" contest. In any event, it is not too late to join the fund. Start right now. It really is in no way difficult, and does not tax one's ability to any great extent to submit a winning set of answers. All that is required is to get in touch with the firms about which the stories are written, ask them the answer to the question appearing in the last sentence of the article. When you have thus obtained the answers to each of the questions in the seven articles that appear in this issue, spend a few moments in writing them down in an orderly and original manner. When completed, send your set of answers to the "Do You Know" Editor at The Examiner. Why do this? Here's the reason: A three dollar cash prize is offered by The Examiner for the neatest and most artistically constructed answers to these questions each day.

Try answering today's questions. You may be the next winner. The contest is open to everyone, including those who have previously won. Nobody is barred, except employees of The Examiner.

Association Passes As Another Is Born

Choose Representative From Each Line of Business at Port Hope.

PORT HOPE, May 22—By a resolution passed Wednesday night at a general meeting of local merchants in the town hall it was decided to let the Retail Merchants' association die a natural death. In its stead, however, it has been decided to form a branch in the board of trade to be known as the business men's section. In this department, a representative from each line of business will be chosen or elected by the board of trade.

Muskrat Knows Law

The muskrat season may be closed and maybe one particular muskrat that was captured on Walton St., Wednesday afternoon, by James Giffen, local hardware merchant, was aware of the fact. When first approached the animal showed fight, but was captured with aid of a fishing net. A short time later the muskrat was returned to the creek.

Toronto Man Fined

A penalty of $35 and costs and loss of his driving permit for 10 days was the sentence imposed by Magistrate Campbell in traffic court on Francis L. Jones, Toronto, on a charge of reckless driving.

William Moon

After an illness of several months, William Moon, a widely-known resident of this district and a former farmer of Hope township, died at his residence, No. 6 Barrett's Terrace, late on Tuesday. He was in his 66th year and was born at Rossmount, nine miles north of here. Prior to his retirement he operated a farm and threshing business at Davidson's Corners.

the FINEST ... flat wall finish!

WALPAMUR, the famous flat finish, used in decorating this room was applied on an insulating wall-board.

It can be applied on any type of wall or ceiling surface from attic to cellar.

It is washable, and therefore the ideal sanitary decoration for children's rooms.

It is easy to apply, permanent, fire-resisting, and most economical.

It gives a lovely, soft, light-diffusing effect, and is made in a wide range of modern colors.

WOMEN'S LEADERS COME TO TORONTO

Outstanding Figures Will Attend World W.C.T.U.—Convention in June.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22. (By the Canadian Press)—Many outstanding women from abroad will be among the delegates to the World Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which is being held in Toronto from June 3 to June 10.

Among the overseas delegates is Miss Mary Campbell, who returns to America after 45 years of service in India; Mrs. Edith Rivera of Porto Rico, World's W.C.T.U. organizer, who has established branches in Porto Rico, Virgin Islands, Santo Domingo, Mexico and more recently in Venezuela. Mrs. Mary Polmar, president of the South African Union, will be accompanied by Mrs. Maskew Miller, Mrs. Shennan, World's Superintendent of Moral Education, Mrs. Sumner, president of the Bulwayo, W.C.T.U., and the Rev. and Mrs. Kidwell, of Johannesburg.

Miss Flora Strout, of Brazil, Miss Ida Nunnela of Finland, and Miss Ruth Chen, of China, will bring reports from their respective countries. Other delegates who will participate in the Convention are Madam Kempel, of Latvia, Dr. Kraus, of Germany, Mrs. Loretta Hoyman, of Egypt, Miss Dagmor Prior, of Denmark, Miss Maria Sandstrom, of Sweden, and Madam K. Jomini, of Switzerland.

The British delegation includes: Mrs. E. B. Badcock, Mrs. Alderman Croft-Baker, J. P., Miss Coleman, Mrs. Craven, Miss E. L. Downton, Miss Foster-Newton, Miss Harrison, Miss Hope, Miss J. Latham, Miss A. M. Lile, J. P., Mrs. Lloyd, Miss Marsden, Miss H Marsh, Mrs. Ogley, Miss C. Pavy, Mrs. C. C. Pirie, Mrs. Roast, Miss R. Robinson, Miss S. Salisbury, Mrs. Shilston-Watkins, Miss Shepherd, Miss Agnes Slack, Miss F. E. Smith, Miss Sobey, Miss Stevens, Mrs. E. S. Stephens, Miss E. Stevens, Mrs. J. L. Taylor, Mrs. H. Tonks, Mrs. L. Town, Mrs. Tweedy and Mrs. Wallace, of England; Mrs. Tudor, Miss Barrett-Jones, and Mrs. G. Evans, of Wales; Miss Corrigan of Ireland; Miss Willa, Miss Lindsay' Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Scobie, of Scotland; and Miss M. E. Peach, Miss E. M. Peach and Miss Perkins, of England, who are at present on a world tour.

The overseas party will sail from Liverpool, May 22, arriving in Montreal, on May 31, where they will be entertained by the local organization, and then proceed to Ottawa, and thence to Toronto.

Many functions are being planned for the members of the Convention. A garden party will be given by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Ross, on June in celebration of the King's b thday, to which the delegates of the World Convention have been invited. The Toronto Unions will entertain at a reception at Willard Hall. Sir George Foster will be one of the guests at the International Banquet held on Monday, June 8, with 1500 people in attendance.

Special speakers are being secured for the Convention sessions, and many of the delegates are themselves gifted and eloquent speakers. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of New York City, president of the National Conference for the Cause and Cure of War, will address the Convention on Friday, June 5, on "Peace and International Relations." She will be followed by Miss Agnes Slack, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's organizations, who will be making a lecture tour of the eastern States before attending the Convention in Toronto. The Toronto "Y's", under Miss Rosamund Duff, will present a playlet and pageant on Saturday evening, June 6, following the Light Line Union demonstration given by the United States delegates.

At a mass meeting on Sunday afternoon, June 7, short addresses will be made on the three systems of dealing with the liquor traffic: Government Control, the Bratt System, and national prohibition. One of the speakers for the Sunday evening service will be Mrs. Mary Harris Armor of Georgia, known throughout the South as the modern "Joan of Arc."

Predicts Women On Church Synods Soon

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.)—Rev. Canon Vernon, M.A., who presided at the Social Service section of the Women's Auxiliary to the Missionary Society of the Church of England, paid high tribute to the women of the Auxiliary, saying that, in his opinion, many women will be serving on Diocesan, Provincial and General Synods, and when that time comes the life of the church will be richer, broader and more constructive.

Judge Quinton of the Juvenile Court, London, declared that at the present moment the Anglican Church was making real contribution to social service work. "The 20th century will come to be known as the prevention century," he said, "because it will be the century in which the thrill of prevention will be realized. Hitherto romance has been connected with war epidemics and those things which require sacrifice. In the 20th century we will achieve the distinction of securing results by appealing to the reason of people instead of to their emotions. The time to make sure the relief office is prop[illegible] equipped and able to serve the people it is intended for is now—not when winter comes."

Penny Postage Goes By The Board In S.A.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, May 22 (C.P.)—"So penny postage, after five years' life in the Union died yesterday," said a writer in The Cape Argus of March 31. "The Union Post Office was practically the only postal administration in the world to refrain from levying increased charges throughout the war period, but at the beginning of the financial year of 1920-21 increased working costs made it impossible to keep to the postal rates which had been in operation since the Union in 1910. Letter post then went up to a penny and a half, but the limit of weight, which had been half an ounce, was raised to one ounce. In June, 1921, the rate was increased to two pence an ounce, and there it stayed until 1926, when penny postage was again our pride."

THE FAMOUS Kellogg's

WAXTITE Bag

...IT BRINGS YOU THAT "PERFECT" KELLOGG FLAVOR!

TOMORROW morning, notice how wonderfully fresh and crisp your bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes tastes. That's because of the famous waxtite inner-seal bag that brings all Kellogg's Cereals oven-fresh to your table!

This special bag is different from other packages. Many foods are wax-paper wrapped—some inside, others outside. But only Kellogg's have a waxtite sealed inner bag. Sealed against moisture and contamination.

Constant improvements insure Kellogg's quality. And that's why it always pays to specify Kellogg's when buying corn flakes. Few other foods, indeed, offer you more in convenience and value.

Many servings from a single package costing but a few cents. Delicious with milk or cream.

No trouble to prepare. Fine for breakfast, lunch, children's suppers, late snacks. With a "wonder" flavor that has never been duplicated.

Enjoy Kellogg's Corn Flakes often these warm days. So easy to digest, they help you feel cooler. Add fruits or honey for an extra treat. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

I have come to find out that Peterborough's housewives are very busy people.

• • • • • • •

And I was just wondering if very many of our housewives let their sub-conscious mind help them in performing routine tasks.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps you think there would be something mysterious about that, but really there isn't. Every competent homemaker is so helped at times without always knowing it under this description.

• • • • • • •

Habit is the root of the matter, for habit is one of the ways in which the sub-conscious mind functions.

• • • • • • •

Think of the times you have put things away in their proper place without paying the slightest attention to what you were doing.

• • • • • • •

You know instinctively where the right place was for the article, and by habit, put it where it belonged. Your subconscious mind functioning perfectly while your thoughts were on something else entirely from the work you were doing.

• • • • • • •

It is important for a homemaker to establish permanent places for things to keep to such arrangements, if she is to have the sub-conscious mind carry on.

• • • • • • •

It will not work as an aid to order if places for things are constantly being changed about!

• • • • • • •

In moving into a new dwelling, consider well where kitchen utensils crockery, linens, silver, glass, etc., will fit in best and most conveniently

• • • • • • •

These and kindred things can be classified as tools and utensils homecraft. They should not be subject to continual change of position.

• • • • • • •

In as short a time as possible they should have well-established places. Then you can be sure the subconscious mind will lend its help in the matter of household order.

• • • • • • •

A skilled knitter, or one expert in crocheting, finds it possible, even though a pattern is complicated, to read and work at the same time. The fingers follow the directions of the subconscious mind and fashion the design mechanically.

• • • • • • •

An error is seldom made, the mind has learned through repetition of the pattern just what to do and does it to perfection.

• • • • • • •

In the technique of homemaking and housework the sub-conscious mind works as expertly.

The eyes have "IT"

BECAUSE you ALWAYS want to look your best, you're mighty particular about your complexion, aren't you? Just the right cream, the most perfect shade of rouge and powder, flattering lipstick—what about your eyes?

To make your eyes attractive you want long thick lashes and smooth brows. To have them, try this simple addition to your regular beauty program:

At bedtime, apply a tiny bit of "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly to the eyelids, close to the lashes. Leave it on. It encourages them to grow thick and long. Apply a little to the eyebrows, too, and train them in a graceful arch with a small brush. "Vaseline" Jelly is perfectly harmless to the eyes, even if it gets on the eyeball.

You can get "Vaseline" Jelly in jars or tubes everywhere. And remember when you buy that the trade-mark Vaseline on the label is your assurance that you are getting the genuine product of the Chesebrough Manufacturing Company, Consolidated, 5520 Chabot Avenue, Montreal, Canada.

British West Indies Want Representation

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, B.W.I., May 22. — (By the Canadian Press.)—"That it is desirable that the British West Indies and British Guiana should be directly represented at the Imperial Economic Conference to be held in Ottawa in August of this year" is the gist of a resolution passed recently at a meeting of the Trinidad Chamber of Commerce. To accomplish this the support of the Legislative Council is being sought. The resolution was moved by the President of the Chamber of Commerce, J. Forbes, who said: "These Colonies are the oldest possessions of the Overseas Empire, and having developed considerably in recent years it seems hardly fair that Colonies with such an old record should be lumped without qualification in the category of Crown Colonies, many of which have only come under the British flag in recent times."

In a recent wage dispute in Norway 83,000 workers were locked out.

QUESTION OF SEX MOST TALKED OF TOPIC IN SCHOOLS

Police Matron Addresses the Local Council of Women.

CHILD WELFARE.

"The most talked-of subject in the public schools to-day is the matter of sex. I know. I get the fruits of it. When these things are instilled into the mind of the small child, what sort of conduct can we expect from the adolescent? I hate to think that the next generation is going to be like, because conditions are far worse than we have any idea of."

Miss Amy Wood, Police Matron and also convenor of the Child Welfare committee of the Local Council of Women, made the above statements in the course of a talk on child welfare given by her yesterday afternoon to the members of the Local Council.

Prefacing her address with the remark that women who are not mothers are never supposed to know anything about children, Miss Wood said that anyone may speak from observation and from experience. Her own experience has extended over twelve years' work in a Salvation Army institution and two years in a Halifax school where forty children were housed.

To consider child welfare in the truest sense, we must consider the child before its birth. Women who are sad and gloomy before the birth of their baby usually have a fretful child, whereas the cheerful expectant mothers have babies that are easy to handle. That is an important point."

Miss Wood spoke in terms of great commendation of the work done by the Well Babies' Clinic and the prenatal visiting done by its nurse, Miss Foote.

The baby is like a building, in the sense that the foundation is the most important point in both. If the foundation of a baby is good, it will be able to withstand the storms of life, just as a good building will withstand any alterations or improvements later on. Or just as a tree that is well tended as a sapling will grow to be a tall and beautiful oak, so will a man or woman grow from the child, whether good or bad."

"Trust in God, But Keep Your Powder Dry"

Miss Wood referred here to a local family where the mother has gone away and left the smaller children to the care of a nine-year-old girl, and where the father, absent at work, when reprimanded as to this lack of attention, said that he would put his trust in the Almighty!

From Proverbs, the writings of the wisest man that ever lived, the speaker quoted: "Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child, but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him," also "He that spareth his rod, rateth his son, but that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes."

"Some parents declare that the child can train itself, as though it had been in the world as long as they had. But the child with no training grows up to be a poor man or woman. It is one of the truest of all sayings that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Sometimes parents think that the child is doing something that is cute and they never stop to consider what effect that action will have in later years.

"When is the best time to begin to correct the child? Opinions differ. Some say ten or twelve years. But that is the time when they are getting out of our grasp. We must start at birth. Twelve year old children in the public schools now know more than most men and women about the facts of life. The most talked-of subject is sexual knowledge. Some parents think small children should be enlightened as to these matters but their knowledge is usually put into the wrong channels."

"These children are the men and women of to-morrow. What kind of people are they going to be? I hate to think about it. We of the older generation know how we were disciplined, but some modern parents say they were disciplined too much and they won't allow their children to be brought up too strictly. There is where you get the unruly child, and the untrained, undisciplined man and woman of to-morrow.

"We have such helpful measures in our midst as the Well Babies' Clinic, the supervised playgrounds and the Home and School Associations. They all help, but that can never take the place of a social and firm foundation, and the placing of a good foundation depends on the parents.

A very sincere vote of thanks to Miss Wood was voted.

Sundry Business

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. F. H. Dearborn, in the absence of the president, Mrs. C. H. Edwards.

Reports were given by the treasurer, Mrs. E. Wand, and the secretaries, Mrs. K. Wightman and Mrs. B. Law. The thirtieth annual meeting of the National Council of Women will take place early in June at Moncton, N.B.

The affiliated society of the Women's Art Association was invited to exhibit at the National Council's booth which is held annually in connection with the Toronto Exhibition.

An appreciation was voiced of the long and faithful service rendered the Local Council by one of its departing members, Mrs. N. D. Seaton, who is at present convener of the Cinema and Printing committee and was for many years treasurer.

A hearty endorsation and expression of appreciation was also voiced by the members, of the action of The Examiner in providing vegetables for vacant lots where unemployed men may raise winter supplies during the summer months.

Mrs. J. Mills spoke of the good work being carried on at the Well Babies' Clinic, where cod liver oil supplies have greatly benefited many of the under-nourished children.

A report of the Laws committee was given by the convenor, Mrs. B. W. Harvey.

MINER'S RESCUERS TAUGHT

How to save men from being buried alive is being taught to a new kind of life guard in the coal mining district of Upper Silesia, on the German-Polish frontier. A mine, deserted many years ago, is being utilized for the experiments in life-saving. Young mountaineers, whose occupations may take them into hazardous underground passageways, are being instructed in the working of the oxygen pulmotor, in the use of gas masks, and the correct way to get a man out of the subterranean tomb in which he may be buried alive or imprisoned by a landslide or other accident.

Over Three Times as FAST

Over two-thirds of the time that used to be necessary to complete a Long Distance Call is now saved. The 7.3 minutes of six years ago has been cut to an average of two minutes flat.

Think what this means on the 70,000 daily Long Distance calls in Ontario and Quebec! . . . And think of the constant effort to speed the service that has made this improvement possible.

A good measure of the success attained is due to the cooperation of every telephone user.

And for this cooperation we tender our appreciative thanks.

For speedy service, place your Long Distance calls like this:

1. Call "Long Distance" and when the operator answers—
2. Give her the name of the town or city you are calling.
3. Then give her the number of the telephone you wish to call.
4. If it is a "Person to Person" call give her the name of the person you are calling.
5. Then give your own telephone number.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN IS MOST FAMOUS OF ENGLISH STATESMEN

Has Held Every Important Office of State Except Premier.

BRILLIANT CAREER.

(By Henry Somerville)

TORONTO, May 22.— Sir Austen Chamberlain is one of the most picturesque figures in the British House of Commons, not only because he has occupied all the greatest offices of state, except the premiership—which was once offered to him and he declined, nor even because he is the son of one of the mightiest parliamentarians that England has known, but also because of his personal appearance and his fidelity to standards of deportment which have now gone out of fashion. Sir Austen is tall in stature and his height is accentuated by the tall hat he wears, in the Victoria fashion, when he is seated in the House of Commons. His frock coat and monocle add to the old-fashioned effect in a house where the majority of members make a cult of informality.

Sir Austen has been 40 years in the House of Commons. When he made his maiden speech the congratulations of William Ewart Gladstone brought tears of joy to the paternal eyes of the redoubtable Joseph Chamberlain. Sir Austen has been looking back over 40 years and giving his views to the House of Commons Select Committee on Procedure. He thinks that has been a deterioration not only in the standard of oratory, but in good manners, and the public, he thinks, are less interested in parliament than they used to be. There is less interest in the debates among members themselves. Perhaps the chief reason for this is that the house is not now debating great political issues like Home Rule, but is more concerned with technical and complicated economic questions.

A bad habit that has gained ground is the reading of speeches for which, Sir Austen Chamberlain admits, the front benchers are to be blamed as having set the example. That is absolutely destructive of the character of debate," he said. "It is no longer a debate, it is a lecture, and is contrary to the rules of the house."

He would not approve of a time limit for speeches, believing that this would only multiply the number of speakers to whom nobody wants to listen and curtail speeches which the House would really like to hear. Sir Austen has not much use for equalization. He laments the absence of great parliamentary figures such as the public knew in the days of Mr. Gladstone, Sir William Harcourt and Mr. John Morley, on one side when they were fighting for Home Rule; and Sir Michael Hicks-Bench, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, and Lord Hartington of that period, and others of that calibre. Sir Austen thinks it is the absence of such personalities that is the cause of the lessening of public interest in parliament to-day. He puts a certain amount of blame on the press. In the old days debates were gradually worked up until some of the best speeches were those towards midnight and they were reported in the morning papers. He thinks a certain section of the press blankets parliamentary proceedings of deliberate purposes and deprives the public of the opportunity of reading speeches.

Sir Austen does not think the House shows more violence than it used to do, but it shows less patience, and interruptions are to-day merely for the sake of interruptions. There is, however, less obstruction, for in the old days the Irish party had raised obstruction to a fine art and it was facilitated by the rules of procedure which existed in those days.

RETURNS TO CITY STAY CUT SHORT

John J. Blewett Returns After Twenty-three Years' Absence.

SON IS MISSING.

To arrive back in Ontario after an absence of twenty-three years and to be greeted with a telegram telling him that his youngest son was missing from his British Columbia home and that the worst was feared, was the harrowing experience of John J. Blewett of Summerland, B.C., and formerly of Lakefield.

Mr. Blewett reached Peterborough at noon last Saturday with the intention of spending a month visiting his mother, Mrs. D. W. Blewett, 586 Harvey street, who at the age of 85 years is seriously ill.

The fateful telegram containing the information that his son, Jackie, aged 21 years, was missing at Okanagan Lake, B.C., was waiting him here.

Three hours and a half after his arrival, Mr. Blewett was on the train speeding westward again, his long-looked-forward-to sojourn at his Ontario home tragically shortened to that brief visit with his relatives.

Last evening, his mother, W. N. Blewett, Harvey street, received word that the first message was all too true and that Jackie Blewett had been drowned. No particular have been received as to how the tragic event occurred.

The boy's father will be remembered by many people in the city and district, who will be shocked to learn that after being away for twenty-three years, Mr. Blewett was called home after a few hours in the east by such a terrible message and without having a chance to see them.

CARNIVAL PRAISED BY ITS SPECTATORS

Sim's Greater Shows One of Cleanest to Visit City in Some Years.

Peterborough has been visited all this week by Sim's Greater Canadian Shows, a well conducted Summer Carnival, the principals of which are Fred W. Sims, General Manager and R. H. Gorke, treasurer.

It is composed of four rides, four shows and a number of concessions and is one of the cleanest Summer Carnivals that has visited Peterborough. The equipment is in excellent shape and presents a fine appearance. The rides and shows are good and the concessions are honestly conducted and games.

No one hears any profane or obscene language from any of the employees and the whole show is run in a clean manner.

The weather has not been altogether favourable but good crowds have been in attendance. The admission to the grounds is free and large numbers of citizens who enjoy a night at a Summer carnival and midway are expected to-night and to-morrow. The show travels by special train to Trenton on Sunday.

Mrs. Rogers Officiates At Guide Investiture

Members of 2nd Company Receive Tenderfoot Badge From Commissioner.

Mrs. Claude H. Rogers, Divisional Commissioner of Girl Guides, officiated at the investiture of the 2nd Company, held at St. Alphonsus Lyceum this week.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. Rogers gave the recruits a heart to heart talk, impressing upon them the significance of their three-fold promise and of its practical application to their daily lives, and concluding by reading a beautiful little poem in harmony with the ideal of the great sister hood of Girl Guides.

The company was placed in horse-shoe formation and the ceremonial opened with the singing of "O Canada." Mrs. L. A. Potvin, the city commissioner, presented the captain, Miss Agnes McCarthy, to the Divisional Commissioner, to be enrolled. The captain in turn presented the lieutenants, the Misses Helen Carson and Mary Keenan, also the Patrol Leaders. Each Patrol Leader then brought forward her recruits. A guide of the 1st Company was also presented by her Patrol Leader.

The investure was most impressive. After each tenderfoot was enrolled, Mrs. Rogers pinned to her dress the tenderfoot badge which is the award for completing primary training.

Last evening Mrs. Potvin, the city commissioner officiated at another investiture of guides in the 2nd company, which brings the total enrolment to twenty-six.

C.G.E. ENTRANCES HAVE NEW LIGHTS

Ornamental Light Standards Add Distinctive Note of Beauty to Grounds.

GROUND NICELY KEPT.

Ornamental light standards recently erected at both entrances of the Canadian General Electric Company's plant on Park street has added a distinct note of beauty to the factory grounds and buildings. Two tall pedestals have been set up at the north gate, and another pair have been placed at the office entrance. They not only improve the illumination of the premises and of the street, incidentally brightening the junction of Park and Rubidge streets, but they enhance the pleasing effect of the trees, lawn, shrubbery and flower beds after daylight fades.

The new lights are a public advantage extending from Park street to Wolfe street, because of the increased candle power in those long blocks, and their erection tends to emphasize the general beautification of the grounds all along Park street. The lawn is close cropped and level as a park. A motor-powered lawn mower was grooming it this morning, and the basswood trees in the wide square within the east fence are in full leap. The tulip beds are splashes of color and the rose bed probably counts many buds that will open in lovely bloom when June advances.

All this attention to the C.G.E. premises has achieved a harmony of color and neatness that provides a real beauty spot in the midst of the south-end factories.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them inserted.

LOOK OUT, BOTH SIDES.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir:

The Beauharnois charges have been referred to a committee of the House of Commons the majority of which represents the party in the House with a majority. As we e pect them to hold up "the party" at all hazards, what chance has the truth of coming out?

Both parties have the same "party spirit."

Again I ask what ghost of a show has the truth ,and where will the immense extra flow of water and its power go? Will it go to the country? Will it? But just keep right on. A people with a country like this which is half starving had better see where the money goes or imitate the heroes of Britain who propose to go on a pilgrimage to get the Lord to feed them.

J. H. Burnham.

BRICKS AND CONCRETE FASHION HER CAREER

Esther Protes Is Probably the Only Woman Builder in Canada

TORONTO has had its careerful women for years past — doctors, decorators, reporters, lawyers and insurance agents among them. But one of their sisters sprang a new one on them all last spring when the city became possessed of its only woman master builder. To-day, as far as can be ascertained, she is one of the very few of her kind in the whole Dominion of Canada, and what's more, she's a decided success at her trade.

Esther Protes

When Miss Esther Protes set up as a builder of superior duplexes, the universal prophecy among her masculine competitors was that she was going to break speed records in the matter of going broke. Yet to-day she owns a tidy block of duplexes of her own creation, finished and occupied and paying tidal rentals. How it all came about would be a long story, Miss Protas admits. She didn't play with building blocks as a child. In fact, the one ambition of her school days was to study law, and it was from a law office that she graduated into building.

She started to learn about mortgages in the law office, and soon knew a lot about them. Then the mortgage broker who had been associated with her employer left, and an architect took his place. Helping him, she discovered a fascination in plans and specifications and trims and bricks and mortar. So she decided to take a shot at it herself.

Trouble started as soon as the job did, when the first cellar excavations struck soft clay, and multiplied estimates neatly by three. And office knowledge hadn't anticipated the thousand and one details that arose. Bossing workmen wasn't the easiest thing, either.

"But I managed them," she said. "I remember one day I was mad about something, and I lined up about a dozen of them and did a little talking. It used to be quite funny after a while. After I'd taken them by surprise a few mornings, they got to look out for me as I walked up from the bus. I'd see the signal passed down from the roof, and then there'd be such a hammering as you never heard in your life."

Then it came to her knowledge that reports were going the rounds of the trade that her duplexes were the world's best flop — the walls were wavy, the foundations spavined and the roofs leaky. The reports, it developed, emanated from certain Sunday morning gatherings when a group of disgruntled gentry in the trade would assemble at the unguarded building location and make a sort of grand tour of the apartments, knocking everything in sight before going away to croak the glad news abroad.

"So the next Sunday I was there before they were," Miss Protes said. "After a while I saw them coming — about three automobile loads of them. But just as they stopped they saw me, and it was funny to see them stare and then start their cars again without bothering to get out."

But if she did a man's job, she didn't miss out on the feminine touches, and when the buildings were finished Miss Protes found that such details as contrasting color schemes in bathrooms, and a nice judgment in neutral tints for wall decorations weren't wasted when it came to letting.

A Page about PEOPLE

She Wasn't Worth A Beloved Steed

IN the course of his archaeological pursuits in Palestine the oriental scholar and author, Dr. Ishetak Spector, of the Vancouver chapter of the League of Western Writers, had several exciting experiences. On one occasion he was in charge of a party of three ladies on their way to examine a site near Jericho when they became separated from the main group.

They were suddenly brought to a halt by the appearance of a fierce-looking sheik from a rocky stronghold, armed with the usual impressive equipment of weapons. The doctor's knowledge of Arabic was brought into requisition to pacify the chief, who was aggressively demanding compensation for trespass. The sheik's attention during his excited harangue became fixed upon one of the ladies, a buxom German woman of some distinction.

With a grand gesture the sheik abruptly waived compensation, but demanded that the woman should be sold to him. He had a wife already, and calling her to come forth a ferocious creature appeared. Pounding her with his fists all over to show that she was physically sound he offered her as part of the bargain.

"Oh, sheik," said the doctor desperately, "I am satisfied with 'my wife,' and although I admire yours I swear by Allah that I could not think of depriving you of her."

The sheik laughed that off magnanimously. He sharply gave instructions to his henchmen and in a few minutes the ground was littered with a strange assortment, including the wife that he wished to trade in, a goat, a dozen eggs, several fowls, a rug and a few other odds and ends.

Then the doctor had a brilliant thought. "Oh, sheik, you do me great honor to desire one of my wives in exchange for yours, together with these tokens of your generosity. I will gladly make the exchange if you will add your horse—"

The sheik jumped as if shot.

"What! My horse!" Like an angry hornet he strode around the lady, looked her up and down with truculent appraisal, pinched her in several places and snorted.

"No! No! Go your way! She is not worth a horse."

When the situation was explained later to the intended victim she was furious and wanted the German counsel to find some means to punish the sheik. "What!" she exclaimed over and over again, much to the amusement of her companions. "I'm not worth a horse. The beast!"

A DYNAMIC TEACHER AND A KINDLY ONE

WHEN the campus life of the University of Toronto shakes off its summer indolence, and rushes into another academic year, in spite of its myriad activities and interests, a sense of incompleteness will be brooding over this little city within a city. A famous niche will be empty. One of the most familiar figures of the faculty, Professor de Champ, sailed this week for Europe on a year's leave of absence.

On no professor in the university have the students bestowed a more affectionate nickname than the "Musher" by which Professor de Champ is known everywhere. His lectures rank among the most popular in the university, not only because he is one of the most accomplished teachers of French on the continent, but because they are steeped in his kindly and dynamic personality. Their influence extends long after student days are ended.

The scope of this influence was demonstrated recently when he was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. No sooner had the announcement been made than a tidal wave of telegrams, letters and postcards inundated his mail. Congratulations from every part of Canada, from former students in every walk of life, poured in. And what is equally amazing, almost every one of his well-wishers he remembered personally. From his desk piled high with messages of congratulations he would pick a card at random. Quickly scanning it, he could pause at the name at the bottom. "Mrs. John Brown?" A moment while he stared abstractedly at the card. Then a gleam of recollection in his eyes and a pleased smile parting his beard. "Ah, oui! La petite Margaret!" Thus he would go through the substantial pile of congratulations, and only in solitary instances did he hesitate for more than a moment before he recalled the sender, although most of them he had not seen since their student days.

But the messages of congratulations were not confined to his former students. His friends range from wealthy and cultured hostesses to the proprietor of a little foreign restaurant in downtown Toronto, with whom he exchanges civilities in spirited Italian.

It was in this humble restaurant that he could be often found during last winter, seated before a heaped plate of spaghetti and mushrooms, a proof that his tastes are characterized by the Frenchman's zest for all the finer things of life, from music to a superb sauce.

The mention of food will remind those who have been former students of his of M. de Champ's inimitable gift for pantomime. Sometime during the year's lectures he is almost certain to hold forth to his classes at least once on the subject of French cookery. And in this, as in all things he touches upon, an overflowing enthusiasm turns the dross to gold. He is almost carried away with his enthusiasm when, in his little discourse, he treats of the proper way to make an omelette. Here his pantomine is allowed full scope, and so perfect is it that the onlooker seems to see before him on a desk that is actually covered with books, papers and pencils, the necessary eggs, bowl, fork and frying pan. M. de Champ begins his demonstration of the artistry that is really demanded in the making of an omelette. He picks up one of the imaginary eggs, cracks it sharply on the edge of the bowl, empties the contents with the gesture of a practised cook, fits one half of the shell into the other, lays it aside, gazes with an approving air into the bowl, and so on throughout the whole process.

No article about Professor de Champ is quite complete without mention of his celebrated spade beard. It has been hailed as the finest spade beard in all Canada, and its fame has spread with amazing rapidity. But the kindly teacher has grown a trifle uncomfortable about its notoriety. Public interest in it has brought moments when he has felt a trifle too much like the curator of a museum, and these moments bring decisions to have it shaved off. Some of these have almost matured into the deed, but they have been drastically discouraged by his barber, who has tended it for almost three decades, and stands firm in his refusal to remove it.

But now the beard and its wearer are on the Atlantic, bound for a well-earned holiday. Professor de Champ has taught at the university for 29 years, and this, his first real holiday, is richly deserved. He returns first of all to his beloved Paris, and during his first few days there he will re-enact a little scene on its streets which, he says, he does every time he returns. Although French to his fingertips, the surprise of hearing the language he has taught so many of his pupils spoken casually startles him so for the first few days that each time he hears it spoken on street corners he stops short, and gazes back for a moment in astonishment, before he knows what he is doing.

MEN & WOMEN in the public eye

A New Experience For Helen Keller

HELEN KELLER took her first air journey recently—from New York to Washington—and the deaf and sightless woman who has accomplished so much with so little disembarked in the United States capital in a breathless state of excitement over her adventure.

Her reactions to the experience were vividly characteristic of the keen sense of artistry which is part of her phenomenal achievement. For her the flight possessed far more of lyric beauty than for those who surrounded her in the cabin.

"It is marvellous," she said, and she quivered with suppressed emotion. "It is heavenly to be soaring like a bird under the soft azure sky, with the green fields and the budding trees below me." And these were the words of a woman who has never seen or heard things as we do; a woman who speaks only because of a tremendous will and spiritual power.

As Pilot Sereno Jacobs throttled down his two-motored ship and floated into a glide towards Camden airport at Philadelphia, Miss Keller turned to her secretary, Miss Polly Thompson, and described accurately the manoeuvres of the machine. With closed eyes a normal passenger could not have detected the motion, but the highly sensitive nervous system which is both sight and hearing to Miss Keller was alert to every movement.

"It is quite a relief, this pause from the terrific roar and vibrations of the motor," Miss Keller commented while she waited for the resumption of the flight. The motor had calmed down to a rhythmic throb and this, too, appealed to the imagination of the blind woman. She said: "There is a life, an eagerness to be off, in the steady beat of the machine. Isn't it wonderful?"

Since she was a small child, even before she came under the tuition of Mrs. John Macey of the Perkins Institute for the Blind, Miss Keller has been the same restless, discerning emotional person.

Sightless, speechless and without hearing almost from birth, she has conquered her physical handicaps and surpassed, in performance, many of her more richly endowed sisters.

In February of 1913 she made her first public speech. She had learned to speak without hearing her words. She is author of several books, one of them an autobiography, and all of them on the subject of teaching the blind and deaf.

---

"WOULD you like a lock of my hair?" asked the gallant old bachelor of the spinster who had been a belle a few decades past.

"Why don't you offer me the whole wig?" the maiden lady gibed, with a titter.

The bachelor retorted with icy disdain:

"You are very biting, madam, considering that your teeth are porcelain."

HER PRAIRIE STORIES REFLECT HER COURAGE

Kathleen Strange Has Been Taught in the School of Hard Work

KATHLEEN STRANGE, whose name is frequently seen above stories of prairie life, came to the Canadian prairie via London, Paris, New York, San Francisco. Ten years on the prairie hadn't changed her much, except that she had gained poise—that which comes to a man or a woman who has learned to meet life unafraid.

Kathleen Strange

She is the young wife of a "wheat king"—Major H. G. L. Strange — whose world-championship in wheat has brought added glory to western Canada.

Most of her little western tales are published in English papers and periodicals, but many appear in Canada, too.

The story of the wheat king and his small spouse is an amazing tale, even in western Canada. Neither of them ever saw a farm until 1920. Three years later, their grain won the world championship at the Chicago agricultural fair.

Before the war Major Strange was manager of a gas company in Honolulu. In 1914 he went home to England and joined the Imperial forces. He served with distinction, and in 1917, having been seriously wounded, was given light military duty in London. There he met the daughter of a civil servant who was also a free-lance journalist.

A year later she married him and, after the Armistice, they set out for Honolulu. Major Strange arranged to stop for some months on the way in New York and San Francisco, as representative of some English interests. They spent seven months in the U.S.A., Mrs. Strange doing her bit for the family by doing secretarial work on Wall Street for the months when they were in New York. Major Strange found the work and responsibility which he had undertaken quite a strain; he was still far from strong, so, before sailing for Honolulu, he dropped in to see a doctor in San Francisco.

The doctor's verdict was a shock: "No tropical country for you, major! Outdoor life in a bracing climate — and — now!"

They came to Canada; took up farm land in Alberta; on the farm there was a one-room shack. They got out the pen, ink, and paper; wrote a mail order house for enough beaver board to line the shack, and some chintz for curtains. Then they wrote long and inquisitive letters to ministers of agriculture and their deputies; to agricultural college professors whose names they didn't know; to managers of experimental farms; to agricultural agents

In these busy hours she found time to write. From time to time editors received simply written, yet poignant, little sketches in plain English which, by virtue of their very simplicity, possessed a certain vivid quality. They carried conviction — those stores of "hailing out," of prairie fire, of life in a one-room shack under pioneering conditions. Gradually her fame spread, until it received wide recognition.

Sir Malcolm Campbell's Devotion To Speed Dates From Childhood

Sir Malcolm Campbell

SIR MALCOLM CAMPBELL, the reigning speed king of the automobile world, the man who has travelled faster in a motor car than any other human, although still under fifty years old, finds a life stretching behind him as replete with adventures and thrills as probably that of any three mortals.

From his earliest youth he has heard the call of speed. His first pocket money was carefully hoarded, and finally splurged on a second-hand racing bicycle. It was the first of a long series of racing bikes, on one of which he gained his first public recognition as a speed artist, but not in a way he had anticipated.

The public recognition was somewhat narrow, but it was more than enough for young Campbell. Briefly, he was hailed into police court for having rode a bicycle down hill with his hands nonchalantly in his pockets at a speed of 27 miles an hour. It had been a feat of which he was inordinately proud, and the fine of 30 shillings was a decided shock.

Soon after this episode he was sent to Germany to study, and later to France. While over there he entered a cycling race, came first, and rushed home on a week-end to tell the family of his feat. But the news was given a reception far from that he had anticipated. His father, in well-chosen words, pointed out that he had been sent abroad to better his mind, and not his ability to cover ground. The result of the episode was that young Campbell was not allowed to return to his studies, but sent instead to the famous Lloyds, where he was set to work at learning underwriting.

At twenty-one, he had worked up a nice little business for himself as an underwriter, but almost every penny he could lay his hands on went toward the purchase of his greatest ambition at that time — an automobile.

While he was saving assiduously for the car, he was trying his hand at motorcycle racing. His hunger for speed brought some distinction to him here, for he won the first gold medal he owned in a motorcycle race from London to Edinburgh. In the following year, 1907, he was the proud winner of another, and in the next year he walked off with still another.

Finally the money for the motor car was realised, and Sir Malcolm doubts if he can ever recapture the rapture of the day that he laid down the money for his first car, a battered second-hand juggernaught, and rode proudly away. Since that day he has never been without at least one car, and to-day his garage usually holds a floating population of about six or seven of them.

As one who has followed auto racing for more than two decades, mishaps and narrow escapes are almost second nature, but it was in this first car of his that one occurred which he can still recall every detail.

He was out on a lonely country road trying, as usual, to see how fast he could get it to go when, approaching a corner he saw a horse and cart in the middle of the road. He blew the horn, but it had no effect on the cart, and he tried to pass, but the margin between the cart and the side of the road was less than he had judged. He wrenched his wheel around, missing the farmer by a matter of inches, and zig-zagged violently down the road, passing trees by inches. He pulled the car up and walked back to see if everything was well with the driver.

A trifle shaken up, his opening sentences were hardly an inquiry as to the farmer's health. But the driver showed no change of expression, but continued to sit on the seat staring blankly. Campbell began to feel his indignation getting the better of him, and explained to the man just exactly what he thought about him. Suddenly the farmer leaned forward from his seat, and with his hand to his ear remarked blandly, "What are you hollering about, mister. I can't hear, come a bit closer." He was stone deaf.

THE "PINEFLOWER" RESCUE

MENTION "Little Pineflower" to Col. William C. Michell, supervising principal of Toronto collegiates, and you are likely to draw a laugh from him. There's a story behind that laugh, and here's the story.

In the fall of 1917 — that was some time after Michell had reverted from his majority to get to the front line, but before he had his company and had won his M.C. — two Bruce county Indians, members of the same battalion, turned up in Piccadilly one day with full pack, rifle and everything, but, to the utter amazement of the M.P.'s, whose path they happened to cross, without leave warrants or any sort of official paper authorization for the channel crossing they had just negotiated. In the course of a few days, as was to be expected, they were returned to France, in custody, to stand court-martial.

"Who'll defend these chaps?" asked the C.O., their unit, when apprised of the redmen's return. "They haven't a chance of getting off, of course, but they are at least entitled to counsel."

"I'll do it," Michell spoke up.

"You?" gasped the C.O. "Why, you're no lawyer."

'Perhaps not," smiled Michell, "but I know my Indians."

The court was called. The Indians stood very straight and very tall and very grave before the seat of judgment, while Michell delivered his impassioned appeal on their behalf. After fifteen minutes of deliberation, a verdict for acquittal was handed down by the presiding English officer.

"Never in all my experience have I had a more astonishing story — a more touching appeal presented to me," this officer is reported to have said afterwards. "Just think of it! There were those two Indians in the front line. The moon comes out. THE BLOOD MOON! (I think that was what Capt. Michell called it). Speaking to those Indians, telling them of their brother's arrival in England, urging them to drop everything — even their duty — and come at once.

"It seems that once their blood moon calls they must answer. They must go. Nothing can deter them. A custom that dates back, we were told, from the days of Pineflower, an Indian princess familiar to all Canadians."

The commanding officer of Michell's battalion listened to the story with evident interest, then he looked up at his subordinate. "Well," said he, "who is this Pineflower? I have never heard of her."

"Nor I," smiled Michell. "But, colonel, these Indians were my two best runners. And good runners are invaluable to any company, as you well know. Why" — and he laughed one of those deep chuckles for which he long has been noted — "I just couldn't afford to lose them. I was even prepared to drag Hiawatha herself into the play if my little Pineflower hadn't gone over."

Viscount D'Abernon Is Famous Both as Financier and Diplomat

ALTHOUGH Edgar Vincent, Viscount D'Abernon, is getting on in years, he is still active, and very much in the public eye. Born in 1857 and educated at Eton, he was gazetted to the Coldstream Guards in 1877, but the army offered no attractions to one of his temperament, and he resigned his commission after five years' service. He had made up his mind to become either a financier or a diplomatist, and he had not to wait very long before he was both. And he has been both, and many other things, since 1882.

In that year Edgar Vincent was given the important post of British, Belgian and Dutch representative on the council of the Ottoman public debt, and so well did he advise and administer for eleven years that he came to be looked upon as a financial and administrative authority. This success led to his being sent to Egypt as financial adviser to the government of that troubled country, and here he worked hard for seven years.

After all these years away from his own country Sir Edgar Vincent, as he then was, began to think of a rest and of home.

He came back to England and took things quietly for several years, and then changed over from diplomacy and finance to politics. He was elected to the House of Commons as Conservative member for Exeter and quickly settled down to the humdrum life of a party politician. But the tariff reform movement was then beginning to cause dissension in the party, and Sir Edgar Vincent declared himself a staunch free-trader. This attitude cost him his seat in 1906, and he never returned to the House of Commons.

In 1914 King George raised Sir Edgar Vincent to the peerage, and soon after the war started the government called upon him to fill a post for which very few men were fitted. They made him chairman of the board that controlled the liquor traffic, a job calling for all the tact, diplomacy and yet firmness that he possessed. He revolutionized public house life in England and Scotland by restricting the hours of opening and the unlimited sale of spirits. He made "treating" illegal and no man could buy a drink for his friend. In all the bars throughout Britain the notice went up, "No Treating Allowed!" "I hope this won't come to mean 'No Treating Aloud!'" Lord D'Abernon said when he had decided to put the regulation into force.

The liquor control board was so successful that Lord D'Abernon remained at its head until 1920, and then the government was looking for a superman to send to to Berlin as British ambassador. Lord D'Abernon was chosen, and he remained in the German capital through six long and trying years, sticking to his job with hardly a home leave.

The recent British Empire trade fair at Buenos Aires was really the outcome of Lord D'Abernon's efforts to secure a greater share of business in the Argentine for empire countries. The D'Abernon economic mission went out to South America in 1929 and concluded a trade agreement which arranged for two years' credits, and under the terms of which the republic pledged itself to buy from Britain $40,000,000 worth of railway material and other heavy goods, against the purchase by Britain of Argentine produce to a similar amount. The trade fair at Buenos Aires would probably never have been thought of had it not been for the efforts of the D'Abernon mission two years ago.

In his "spare" moments Lord D'Abernon is a scholar and a sportsman. He is the author of a modern Greek grammar which was adopted some years ago as a standard work by the University of Athens. He seldom misses a big race meeting, and his official connection with the turf is that he is chairman of the Thoroughbred Horse-breeders' Association and a member of the Racecourse Betting Control Board.

Canada Splits Davis Cup Sets With United States

RAINVILLE'S VICTORY EVENS FIRST DAY'S PLAY

Montreal Star Captures Five Set Match 3-2 From Sydney B. Wood.

WRIGHT LOSES THREE.

MONTREAL, Que., May 22.—Canada's Davis Cup team, playing the best of the United States lawn tennis stars, yesterday afternoon broke even in the first two events of the tie which decides national supremacy in the North American zone.

Canada has been taking part in this international contest, which the United States organized in 1900, ever since 1913. Until yesterday no Canadian has ever achieved the distinction of taking a match with a member of a United States Davis Cup team.

To Marcel Rainville of Montreal fell that honor yesterday, and in spite of the fact that in places the tennis was of a listless variety, he nevertheless deserved his victory, in that he was quite distinctly superior in tactics on the afternoon play. Rainville defeated Sydney B. Wood, 19-year-old New York boy, who is fourth ranking player of the United States, three sets to two.

In the first match, Frank X. Shields, the "W T Tilden" of the next few years, defeated Dr. Jack Wright of Montreal, in straight sets, 8—6, 6—2, 6—2. This game was by no means a walk-over, and as Shields is ranked second in the United States, the Canadian veteran's performance was entirely commendable.

CAMPBELLFORD TO ENTER LOOP

Re-organization Meeting of Maroon Lacrosse Club Held Last Evening.

FOUR TEAM SCHEDULE.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 22 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Campbellford will be seen in the lacrosse field this year and will enter a team in the O.A.L.A. Intermediate series. This decision was reached last evening at a meeting of the club held at Campbellford and featured by the election of a slate of officers for 1931. It is not known definitely which group the Maroons will play with, but it is expected that they will be linked with Peterborough, Havelock, and Millbrook in a four-team schedule. It is thought that Oshawa, owing to the distance, will not play in this section. Campbellford went a long way last year in the lacrosse world. Starting up the old sport after many years in the discard, the boys headed the league, only losing out to Brampton in the inter-district semi-final play-offs. However, it was a good start and one that will form the basis for a fine season of sport this year.

A shuffle is noticed in the officers of the Campbellford Lacrosse Club his year, these being as follows: Hon. presidents, Mayor J. M. Bygott, Harvey Donald, Dr. A. Haig, and Dr. H. B. Longmore; immediate past president, C. H. Nadoo; president, A. D. Bennett; 1st vice-president, E. C. McKeel; 2nd vice-president, C. H. Davidson; secretary, Harold Dunk; treasurer, C. P. Shepherd; manager, C. Holmes; business manager, Chas. Lynch; coach, J. Sutherland; trainer, J. Poulton; mascot, Jack Free; executive committee, Vincent Farrell, Rollie Jarvis, and W. J. Abernethy.

All games in Campbellford will be played on the High School Grounds.

ROYALS TAKE BISONS OPENER

Buffalo Collects Eight Runs Off Fussell in First Frames.

MONTREAL, May 22.—The Royals took the opener of a six game series here yesterday, beating the Buffalo Bisons, 11 to 7, in a badly played game that took 2 hours and 40 minutes to complete. Fussell was wild to start the game, and before the next Bison pitcher could get the side out in the second the Royals had an eight-run lead. It took three Montreal hurlers to hold this margin, however, and Johnny Pomorski got credit for his sixth victory of the season because he was the best of the trio. Brown allowed no hits, but was wild as a hawk, and had to be taken out. Ollie Tucker hit a home run over the scoreboard in right field in the fifth.

"OUT FOR FIFTH VICTORY"

There are few abbreviated marathon runs in this country, but the Fort William Annual Daily Times Journal ten-mile road race outshines any there are. Few such marathons can boast such an outstanding performer as Tommy McAuliffe of Port Arthur. This boy is the phenomenal distance star of Northern Ontario and is believed to have clocked himself to more victories at five and ten miles than any other runner in the Dominion. He runs to a diet as well as to a clock. Not much bigger than a minute, he possesses a style that is the envy of every other runner that rubs shoulders with him. In the four years he has contested the Fort William Times road race, to be held again this year, he has claimed victory each time. Modesty has claimed him the past two seasons and he has been a spectator. This year he races again with one idea and that is to lower the present record set by Joe Keeper of Winnipeg, in 1910 at 45 minutes and 50 seconds. Up to the present time Tommy's best time is 55 minutes and 54 1-5 seconds. As a result Tommy goes to the mark on Monday with two ideas in view, first to chalk up his fifth victory and to bring the time record to Port Arthur.

BAILIEBORO WINS FROM PLAINVILLE

Highway Outfit Opens Softball Season by Taking 15-8 Victory.

BAILIEBORO, May 22 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Bailieboro boys' softball team started the season with a bang when they journeyed to Plainville on Wednesday evening and won a 15-8 victory over the boys there. The game although one sided was interesting. Bailieboro, after the first three innings, had a great night at the bat while Plainville failed to connect with what the local twirlers had to offer.

Bowman's fielding was a feature of the game.

The line-ups—

PLAINVILLE — F. Bowman, c; Lander, p; C. Buttars, 1b; G. Cole, 2b; E. Buttars, 3b; Allen, ss; Stuart, lf; F. Turk, rf; Gerald cf.

BAILIEBORO — Howson, c; K. Barnard, p, of; L. Dawson, p, of; C. Dean, 1b; E. Earnshaw, 2b; F. Barnard, 3d; A. Bateman, ss; S. Johnston, lf; B. Gainer, rf.

| Score by innings | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | R |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Plainville | 0 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 4 | 1 | 8 |
| Bailieboro | 0 | 0 | 1 | 4 | 6 | 2 | 0 | 2 | 15 |

Umpires—A. Dawson at plate, H. Dean on bases.

A return game will be played in Bailieboro on Tuesday evening.

Bailieboro are considering entering a softball league with teams from Durham. A meeting is to be held in the near future to make final plans. The game is becoming quite popular in the vicinity and interest is likely to increase.

KEENE EASILY BEATS CHOATES

Erratic Fielding is Responsible for Defeat of East City Outfit.

FINAL SCORE 23-7.

Keene's colorful softball entry in the local Ladies' City League handed the Choate Hardware team the small end of a 23-7 decision last night on the lakeside village diamond in a hard-hitting and loose fielding fixture which was the opening game of the season for both of the teams. This victory gives the country teams a perfect sheet so far, as the Sixth Line won the opening league game against the C.G.E. on Wednesday night by almost as lopsided a score.

Erratic fielding was mainly responsible for the defeat of the East City outfit, who had their share of the hitting but passed balls, wild throws and fumbles gave the winners plenty of opportunities to tally, few of which were wasted. Alberta Would pitched the whole game for the losers and, with better support, would have proved a formidable antagonist. She exhibited both speed and control, issuing only one base on balls The losers scored their first runs in the second, when G. Brand lifted a long fly to centre field for two bases with two runners on. Y. Rose and D. Payne both connected for three baggers in the sixth frame for the same team.

D. Gaynor, who hurled for the Keene girls, uncorked a low, fast ball which baffled the visitors and caused most of the hits to pop to the pitcher or close in the infield, while her team-mates backed her up in superb style, handling most of the plays cleanly and accurately. M. Brown, for the winners, had a perfect night at bat, securing two triples and three singles in five trips to the plate, the triples being stretched into homers on wild throws. I. Short, with a double and a triple was next in line, and Jean Nelson also hammered out a three bagger. The teams:

Keene—M. Gillespie, 2b; J. Nelson, ss; M. Brown, 3b; D. Gaynor, p; K. Nelson, lf; H. Nelson, 1b; V. Dickson, cf; I. Short, rf; R. Gaynor, c.

Choate Hardware—B. Blace, 2b; A. Darling, ss; A. O'Leary, cf; G. McMahon, 3b; D. Tucker, c; Y. Rose, lf; D. Payne, 1b; G. Brand, rf; M. Blade, rf; A. Would, p.

Umpires—Ted LeBarr at the plate; Arnold Nelson on the bases.

ATHLETICS BEAT TIGERS 12-5 FOR CLEAN SWEEP OF THE SERIES

World Champions Complete American League Western Invasion Without a Defeat.

RUTH GETS FIFTH HOMER.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

"The triumph of the east" is the only possible title for the story of the first round of intersectional play in the two major baseball leagues. Only one eastern club failed to reach at least a .500 average in its games against the west in the round which wound up yesterday with three more eastern victories out of four American League games and a complete washout for the National League.

The Philadelphia Athletics must come first in recounting the tale of eastern triumphs. The A's made a clean sweep of their eleven games in the west, climbing to the top of the American League. Altogether they have won 11 successive games, pounding the Detroit Tigers for a final triumph yesterday, 12 to 5. Four Detroit pitchers yielded 18 hits, including Al Simmons' eighth homer of the year. Mickey Cochrane's sixth and one for Eric McNair.

Washington also did some important climbing in its western tour, downing the Chicago White Sox 4-2 yesterday to make it nine victories in eleven games. Heinie Manush drove in all four Senator runs. The New York Yankees, holding second place just ahead of Washington, won seven and lost two. They completed the rout of Cleveland yesterday taking a 7-6 decision after Babe Ruth's fifth homer of the season had given them a good start. Cleveland failed to win one of its eleven games against eastern clubs and yesterday's defeat was the twelfth straight.

Rip Collins of St. Louis cost the Boston Red Sox a chance to gain an even break in their 12 games in the west. Collins held the Sox to four hits to take a 2 to 1 decision. Boston finished ahead of all the western clubs with five games won and seven lost. Detroit, which split with the Yankees and took a series from Boston, led the westerners with eight defeats. St. Louis won three games and six while Chicago scored three victories to seven defeats. Each of them took a series from Boston, the easterners winning all other series.

Also Win in National

In the National League, the count for 2 intersectional games was 20-12 in favor of the east with the New York Giants in the lead. The Giants lost a single game to Pittsburgh but won every other series to finish with six victories and two defeats. Boston and Philadelphia each won five games from their western visitors and lost three, while Brooklyn, despite some wobbly playing, broke even in its eight games.

Pittsburgh, at a disadvantage playing away from home, equalled the Robins record. The St. Louis Cardinals managed to hold the league lead by a few percentage points as they won two games and lost four. Cincinnati's last place Reds did better than expected, turning in four victories against six defeats. The Chicago Cubs went into an unaccountable slump, winning only two games out of eight.

Tony Manero Is Only American Left in Play

LEEDS, Eng., May 22. —(AP)—Quarter final play today in the Leeds Thousand Guineas Professional Golf Tournament saw increased hope that the title would be won by a British player.

Of the invaders from North and South America only one remained. He was Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., who was paired in today's play with Percy Allis, British pro at a Berlin club who was given a good chance to win the match.

Other pairings were: Charles Whitcombe, British Ryder cup captain vs. Tom Barber, A. J. Lacey vs. George Gado, and Ernest R. Whitcombe vs. W. H. Davies.

LaBarba Is Favored To Beat Battalino

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 22.— (C. P.)—Christopher (Bat) Battalino of Hartford, Conn., defends his world's featherweight championship against Fidel Labarba in a 15 round bout in Madison Square Garden to-night. The betting fraternity quotes 8 to 5 that he loses.

For some time after he won the 126-pound title from Andre Rountis, of France, Battalino was labelled a 'cheese champion" by most fistic observers. He dropped one non-title fight after another, some of them to second raters.

But last December he surprised the boys by handing Kid Chocolate, then hailed as the uncrowned featherweight king, a decisive beating in a titular battle.

Even this showing, however, has not sufficed to make him as much as an even choice against the cagey Labarba who some years ago resigned a world's flyweight crown in favor of some intensive studying at Stanford.

LEAFS DEFEAT ROCHESTER 5-3

Hogsett Effective in Pinches While Team Mates Launch Attacks on Grabowski.

HARRIS AGAIN LEADS.

TORONTO, May 22.—Although he was touched for eleven hits—one more than the Leafs got—Big Chief Elon Hogsett, the Indian southpaw, had enough mastery over the Rochester Red Wings to enable the Leafs to chalk up a 5-to-3 win in the first game of the series at the Stadium yesterday afternoon.

The O'Neillmen marshalled all their runs off Al Grabowski once of the St. Louis Cardinals, in the four innings he worked. Mr. Grabowski retired from the scene of action in the fifth with nobody out, one run in and two on bases, three solid singles having been pried from his flining assortment in that frame. Following, as it did, a similar batting attack by the Leafs in the fourth inning, it was plain to see that Grabowski's retention in the game was not helping the Rochester cause.

Ira Smith toiled over the remaining stretch for the Wings and held the Leafs runless from then on, although they bunched three singles in the seventh without putting a runner across the plate.

The Wings, with several new faces in their line-up, did not look as good nor play as well as the champions of last season. Their defense was shaky in spots, the Leafs getting four of their ten blows on infield chances. Grabowski was inclined to be wild and walked four batters, two of them in the fourth, when the locals launched their first damaging attack on him. Up to that time the visitors had been in front by reason of one run scored in the opening canto after two were out. But when the Leafs really went to work on Grabowski this lead was extinguished and the champions were always behind after that.

Harris and Strong Lead Hitters

Joe Harris and Ken Strong accounted for six of the Toronto team's hits, dividing that number equally between them. There were no extra-base drives in the Leafs' collection. The visitors, however, inserted two doubles and a triple into their eleven safeties, but one of them, a wicked drive against the left-field fence by the aforementioned M. Grabowski, which just fell a foot or two short of clearing the wall, was entirely wasted as far as runs were concerned.

QUALITY AUTO TIRES SOLD AT JOHNSTON'S

Atwater Kent Radios Are Also Sold at Johnston's Tire, Battery and Radio Service.

The present day demands for automobile tires and tubes have made every manufacturer and dealer awake to the fact that a tire must make good to sell. ## SIX-RUN RALLY GIVES WOOLMEN 14-13 VICTORY

City Softball Teams Put Up Best Game of League so Far This Season.

SAINTS LEAD HITS

A six-run rally in the ninth inning gave Dominion Woollens a 14 to 13 win over All Saints in by far the best Men's Softball League game played at Central this year. A large crowd of fans grew more and more excited as the Woollens outfit began to overhaul a seven-run lead in the last two frames, reaching a noisy climax in the ninth when the Clothmakers went into the lead for the first time and held it to win out.

It looked like All Saints' night right up till the eighth. They were hitting and fielding in fine style, and receiving good pitching from Dyer. He struck out two, allowed one base on balls and kept their nine hits scattered. However, he was knocked out of the box in the last go, and Hope went in for the rest of the frame. The All Saints' pitchers allowed fourteen hits between them, while the D.W. pitchers were touched for twelve.

T. Cavanaugh started for the winners, but was retired in favor of Mix in the fourth, who fanned six, and walked four of the eight garnered by the others. He kept the batters grounding or popping out for the most part, and was seldom in trouble.

Good and Bad Ball

Both teams played good and bad ball. At times, the losers retired the side one-two-three through snappy fielding, and the D.W. boys did the same. But nine errors were chalked up against each outfit, and some of them were costly bungles, too.

The visitors were blanked in the first, but got four in the second. They were held scoreless from then until the eighth when they collected four more. And in the ninth, they crossed the plate six times before being retired. The Saints got four in the first, none in the second and three in the third. In the fourth, they got a horse collar, but came back for another pair in the fifth. They scored one run in each of the next four frames. The last half of the ninth was particularly exciting when the tying runner was left on second.

Palmer for the Saints, and Lasure for the Woollens, knocked three-baggers that accounted for 3 runs each. Palmer also made a nice catch of a hard foul fly in the fifth. Jones and Anderson figured in a neat double play in the seventh, and Hope pulled off a shoestring catch in the eighth. A number of doubles were knocked by both sides.

The teams:

Domin'on Woollens—T. Cavanaugh p; Thirnbeck 3b; McCarrol, 2b; P. Hillier, lf; Legros, 1b; Wedlock, cf; Lazure, c; B. Cavanaugh, rf; Anthony, ss; Mix, p.

All Saints—Olaveson, c; Anderson, 2b; Wilson, 1b; Jones, lf; Dyer, p and cf; Worsencroft, rf; Palmer, 3b; Frost, ss; Hope, cf and p.

Umpires—Galbraith and Lang.

FRENCH-CANADIAN SCREEN STAR SAYS LUCK BROUGHT CONTRACT

Fifi Dorsay, of Montreal, Attributes Success to Her Accent and Will Rogers.

"IS NOT "HIGH HAT"

By FRANK CHAMBERLAIN

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 22—Fifi Dorsay had just finished lunching with Will Rogers in the Munchers Snack Room at Fox Studio and suddenly burst like a young dynamo into the room where the writer was sitting.

"Dynamo" scarcely expresses this young French-Canadian girl from Montreal who in less than two years has made eight pictures and is confidently assured that her latest just finished "As Young as You Feel," with Will Rogers, is her best picture yet.

She was tastefully dressed, but was quick to assure the reporter that she pays very little for her clothes and Constance Bennett and one or two others she named, from $100,000 to $200,000 a year on wardrobe.

"It is a terrible waste of money—a terrible waste," she said. And when Fifi talks every part of her is in constant animation. "If a person uses good taste she does not need to spend a lot of money on her clothes."

The little film actress was very much perturbed that people continue to insist that she is from Paris, and not Montreal. It was all very annoying. She loved Canada, and particularly her home town.

Yes, she knew Toronto. She had played there in Greenwich Village Follies seven years ago, but lost her job because she wanted to go to Montreal from Toronto to visit her parents. They are both dead now. A younger brother has come to Hollywood to live with her and she is very happy.

"I like Hollywood in the day-time, but I prefer New York at night," she said. "Hollywood is so dead at nights. There is nothing to do. New York ....oh, there is so much to see. The lights.... and everything. I love it."

She blamed "luck" for her success in the movies. When Will Rogers wanted a smart young thing with a French accent for "They Had to See Paris," he hunted, everywhere, until he found Fifi in Pittsburg, in vaudeville. An accent didn't keep Fifi out of the movies. It gave her a job....a 5 year contract. She has three years yet to run, and is in the middle of an argument with Fox over money matters.

"No, I do not like all the hokum that is written about me sometime. I suppose they must write it, but I am very human. I am just like any other girl. I am not high-hat at all. Yesterday my brother and his girl and myself went down-town to see a movie, just like anybody else would do. My brother was so proud. He bought an ice-cream soda for me."

Fifi likes Will Rogers more than anyone else in the movies. Will has been like a father to her, she said, and whenever she wants some good advice, she goes to him. Fifi never wrote magazine stories before, but last week she tried to describe Will Rogers, and her story has been accepted by one of the movie magazines.

Lou Cody is another of her close friends in "the industry." She thinks Lou is very charming. He, too, is a French-Canadian.

Fifi Dorsay starts on a three months' personal tour at once, and hopes to include Toronto in her itinerary. She said she would very much to see the George O'Neil family again. She has known Mr. O'Neil for some time.

JOHN DE FOREST BEATEN ONE UP

University Student Takes Advantage of Opponent's Play in First.

TIE COUNT AT LAST.

WESTWARD HO., Devon, Eng., May 22 (C.P.) — Eric Smith, little known golfer from Cambridge University, to-day won the British amateur golf championship, defeating John De Forest in the final 36-hole match one up.

Starting the afternoon round two down, De Forest still was off his game, losing the twentieth and twenty second holes to go four down. He got all but one of them back, however, taking advantage of Smith's bunkered drive at the twenty-fifth, holing a five-yarder at the twenty-seventh and doing the twenty-ninth in a birdie three.

His golf was not good enough to overcome the margin he had tossed a2way to Smith, largely on his own loose play, but he carried the fight to the last hole.

Smith, 22 years old, the son of a London banker, had never played in a national championship before, his play heretofore having been restricted to college and club affairs.

De Forest was bunkered at the thirtieth and could get only a half, but he won the thirty-first when Smith missed a chip shot to even the match.

Smith went one up again at the thirty-second, when De Forest missed an eight-footer downhill. The next hole was halved, but De Forest again squared the match on the thirty-fourth with a par three. At the long thirty-fifth De Forest got into trouble and Smith won the hole to become dormie one and the match.

12 MAY START IN KING'S PLATE

J. D. Mooney, Kentucky Derby Winner, Will Mount Seagram's Freethinker.

WEATHER NOT PROMISING.

TORONTO, May 22.—From present indications it looks as if at least an even dozen will parade to the post to-morrow in the 72nd renewal of the King's late. Those who are considered probable starters are the Thorncliffe Stable's Bronze, Oilrite and Fess; Seagram Stable's Freethinker and Golader or Mythical Lore; R. W. R. Cowie's Forth Blower; W. H. Wright's Kirkland Post, and possibly Jean O'Doon; J. C. Fletcher's Pampered Pet or Gimme Girl; R. H. New's Par Excellence and the Upland Farm's Vestip.

The Thorncliffe Stable will have the biggest representation with three. T. Aimers, Lee Canfield and R. Simpson will be the jockeys, but just how they will be placed only Trainer Fred Schelke knows.

Mooney on Freethinker

J. D. Mooney, who rode Black Gold to victory in the Kentucky Derby, will have the mount on Seagram's Freethinker, while Paul McGinnis, stable jockey, will be on the other entry.

Frankie Mann, who has been exercising Froth Blower all Spring, will be aboard the Cowie entry. Madeley will be on the Fletcher entry, and H. Louman will ride Par Excellence.

Weather conditions do not appear any too promising. By this we mean that there may be a muddy or slow track. If such is the case, it will work against the chances of Froth Blower, which showed last year that he did not fancy mud. On the other hand Freethinker is a good mudder.

Lacrosse

The lacrosse team will practise at the Exhibition Grounds to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock, and all players are asked to be out as arrangements will be made at this time for the game in Campbellford at three o'clock Monday afternoon. The boys have elected W. Boon to take over Jack Creighton's job as coach for the team, as Jack has been called out of town for some time.

Baseball Gossip.

The Cogs are practising to-night at six on the Exhibition Grounds diamond, and all players should be on time.

The Foster Juniors will work out to-morrow afternoon at the James Stevenson Park at 2.30, and a full turnout is requested. A pitcher is wanted on this team, and there are positions open for smart players in the line-up, too. Any player under twenty is welcome to try out.

The Kiwanis Juniors are practising this evening at six, down at King Edward School grounds. The team for Monday's game will be picked at this time. And Kiwanis Bantams will work out Saturday afternoon at two on the same diamond. Any player under sixteen is invited to come out.

The meeting of the Senior Baseball Club is being held to-night at seven in the Chamber of Commercer. All the executive members are urged to be on hand for this session.

They're working out again tomorrow afternoon at 1.30, this time over at the James Stevenson Park. The diamond over there is in good sharpe, and the players ought to hit their stride.

CASUAL COMMENT

After an absence of four or five years, girls' softball is back on the local sports map again. They're opening the schedule here this evening at 6.15 with Britons meeting the Westclox over at the Bowl. Opening ceremonies will be pulled off by Mayor Denne, Alderman Bob Cotton and J. H. Vernor.

• • • • • • •

The fast-coming Examiner men's team are due to meet the league-leading Sugar Bowl outfit this evening, also at 6.15, up at the Central school grounds. It ought to be a swell battle, since the Pressmen strengthened their line up.

• • • • • • •

Last night's game was a wow, with Dominion Woollens staging a ninth-inning rally to squeeze out a 14-13 victory. It was easily the best exhibition of softball seen here this year. The fans certainly got all the thrills they wanted, and they sounded like it, too.

• • • • • • •

And another thing notable about the game was that it was the first contest that went the full nine innings. They got away to a good start and played snappy ball most of the way. But it was getting pretty dark at the end.

• • • • • • •

The lacrosse players will miss Jack Creighton, coach of the reorganized Peterborough team. He left last night for North Bay, where he will be employed for some time. It will be tough trying to get another coach who will take the same interest and do as much work as Jack.

• • • • • • •

The team will likely play in Campbellford the 25th, as they were invited to yesterday, and Oshawa will be unable to come here that day. Campbellford is lacrosse-hungry and will turn out en masse for the game. A return fixture in a week or so will probably be arranged.

• • • • • • •

Four boxers from here will take part in the Lindsay show tomorrow night. Art Hamilton, Henry Noakes, Roy Hunter and George Mintz have all promised to participate. They'll likely be paired off against Toronto scrapper. Reg Lesurf may also go.

Wrestling Last Night.

BOSTON—Henri De Glane, Montreal, won from Stanley Stasiak, Cambridge, Mass., straight falls, 2.15 and 9.00. Nicke Lutze, California, threw Lou Loew, France, 18.05; Len Macaluso threw Henry Stevens, New York, 9.12; Bibber McCoy and Al Morelli drew, 30 minutes.

TOPEKA, Kas.—Ed. "Strangler" 205, Los Angeles, threw Count Ermark Harkovosky, 220, Hollywood, Cal., 2.27; John Plummer, 210, Coggon, Iowa, drew with Albion Britt, 210, Luray, Kas., 30 minutes.

VANCOUVER, B.C.—Leo L'Heureux, Saskatoon, Sask., heavyweight, drew with Joe Malcewitz, Utica, N.Y., (two falls in eight rounds); Kafa Pasa, Seattle, threw Stanley Burch, Omaha, Neb. (one fall).

LACROSSE UNREST BELIEVED SETTLED

Brampton, Dominion Champions, to Enter Team in Senior O.A.L.A. Series.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22 (C.P.)—Ontario lacrosse circles, seething with unrest a few days ago, are all quiet to-day.

Rumors that several star amateur gutted-stick experts would be refused a playing card as their change of residence did not suit the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association executive's idea of the matter, and the Brampton Club's refusal to at first consider the suggestion of an all-star team to represent Canada in the International series with United States at Baltimore next month, created a feeling which bore no good for the National sport.

However, all these matters have now been adjusted. Brampton, Dominion champions, have promised to put a team in the O.A.L.A. Senior series, and with Oshawa, Hamilton, Toronto Native Sons, Toronto St. Simon's and Mimico, will constitute a well-balanced six-team league.

Softball Notes.

The Choates Girls Softball Team will hold a workout at the Bowl next Wednesday night, at 6.30, and any players wishing a tryout should be on hand. The management needs a good catcher and several fielders.

QUEEN ALEX. BLANKED 11-0

King Edward Collects Five Runs in Each of First Two Innings.

FIELD GOOD ON MOUND.

Queen Alex were shut out 11-0 by the King Edward nine in their Public School League game at the south-end diamond yesterday evening. They only played five innings, but the losers never got started.

The homesters stepped out and hammered in five runs in the first innings, and collected another five in the second, on hits and errors. They were blanked in the third, and scored once more in the fourth. The visitors were blanked in every frame.

Field, twirling for the King Edward outfit, was never in trouble; he struck out seven and only allowed two hits, while his teammates played errorless ball behind him. His fast ball was too much for most of the visiting batters, and they fanned or grounded out, regularly.

Clark and Ash both pitched for a while for the Q.A. team, and they had five strikeouts to their credit. However, ten hits were made by the southenders, including a long home run by F. Todd. The losers played a fair defensive game, but kicked in with five boots which figured in the score.

The teams:

Queen Alex—Clark, p and 1b; Ash, 1b and p; Morrow 2b; Heard, c; Dainton, lf; Bradley, 3b; Dorrington, ss; Sharpe, cf.

King Edward—Heal, rf; R. Todd, rf; Hall, lf; Boyler, ss; Close, ss; Dunkley, 3b; Jobe, cf; F. Todd, 1b; Field, p; Watson, 2b; Connors, c.

CALEYS ONE C. G. E. ONE

Craig Scores From a Penalty Kick and Ben McMaser Gets Equalizer.

BENEFIT GAME.

A draw of one goal each was a perfect criterion of the run of play in the benefit game between the Caledonians and the Canadian General last evening on King Edward Park. The response given the collectors was gratifying and will be handed over to the Jack Cross benefit fund.

First Half.

The Canadian General took up the attack in the opening stages to be held in check by the Caleys' defence when in the act of going towards the citadel. Both full back divisions showed a weakness in frustrating the forwards' methods of attack. Craig, at centre-half for the Scots, was in a more profitable position to his team because he covered Ben McMaster to spoil his usefulness around the goal. Then the respective citadels went under a bombardment through the wing men swinging the ball into the centre of the goal mouth. On one of these occasions, Daynes, C.G.E. goalie, conceded a free kick against himself by carrying the ball too far. From the resultant kick, Robb failed to penetrate the sea of legs that covered every available spot in between the goal posts. Give and take play continued for a while until Lewington conceded a spot kick that Craig converted from the spot. A few minutes before the interval, Best missed an open goal from a perfect cross by Clark on the right. Scots 1, C.G.E. 0.

Second Half.

Each time abided with the allotment of positions of the players. Darling, on the left wing for the C.G.E. was the most dangerous exponent of the code when he would travel along the wing and send an accurate shot into Griffin's charge. Many scrimmages ensued in the proximity of the Scots' goal but the halves held the attack outside the goal area. For a long while the half back departments held the upper hand and confined the tactics to midfield until a break away by Ben McMaster altered the swing of the tusale. He waited for the opportunity to come and when it did arrive he made sure with a terrific drive that found the inside of the net to equalize the count. Nothing interesting thereafter transpired and the score remained the same at the final whistle — C.G.E. 1, Caledonians 1.

C.G.E.—J. Daynes, goal; D Grant and J. Lewington, backs; R. Murphy, W. Bruce, and B. Bolam, halves; J. Quinn, J. McMaster, B. McMaster, S. Clark, and H. Darling, forwards.

Caledonians — C. Griffin, goal; J. Pottie and J. W. Campbell, backs; W. Robb, T. Craig, and W. Rankin halves; G. Clark, I. McPhate, A. McPhate, D. Best, and W. Grant, forwards.

Referee—Jack Hodson.

Benefit Soccer Game Saturday Afternoon

On Brinton Grounds Between C.P.C. and the Brinton—Kick-off at Three.

The soccer bill scheduled for Saturday afternoon is a benefit game between the Brinton Athletic and C.P.C. on the Brinton Ground. Kick off at three o'clock prompt. Referee Alex McKinley.

All the proceeds from this encounter will be turned over to the fund of the late John Cross who was a playing member of the Brinton eleven.

Players associated with the respective team are requested to be at the pavilion not later than 2.30 so as to get away on proper time.

De Forest-Smith In British Finals

WESTWARD HO, Devon., England, May 22 (A.P.)—Two British youngsters, rank outsiders both, were matched in the 36-hole final round of the British Amateur Golf Championship to-day.

While such internationally famous figures as Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered of Great Britain and George Voigt of the United States, were falling by the wayside, 25-year-old John De Forest and 22-year-old Eric Smith played steady golf to reach the final round and battle away for one of the four major crowns relinquished by Bobby Jones.

De Forest, son of one of England's wealthiest Barons, has shown excellent form in this championship. Smith, a Cambridge undergraduate, came to the final round even more of a dark horse.

Lott and Van Ryan Beat French Stars

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, May 22 (A.P.) — Thawed by their first sight of sun in 6 days, George Lott and John Van Ryn, United States contenders, easily won their matches against two Frenchmen in the first round of the French hard courts singles championships.

Lott beat Andre Piel 6—1, 6—2, 9—7 while Van Ryn defeated Rene Vieillard 1—6, 6—3, 6—3. Luis Torralva Chich lost to Jiro Satoh, 6—0, 6—0, 6—3.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, London, and Cilli Aussem, of Germany, advanced to the finals of the Womens' Doubles Championship, defeating Mme. Jung Henrotin and Josanne Sigar 6—4, 7—5.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess.)

THE HOME OF REDDY'S SMALL COUSIN

A true home may be anywhere
So long as you find love is there.
—Old Mother Nature.

Kit the Desert Fox and Mrs. Kit had slept through the heat of the day. So had the four little Foxes of whom Kit and Mrs. Kit were so proud. They had not minded the heat, although it had been very great, so great that sand around their home was actually hot.

You see, they were in a comfortable room far enough down in the ground to be cool. Not once had one of them so much as poked a nose outside. It wasn't until jolly, bright, hot Mr. Sun had gone to bed over the edge of the Great World that any of them stirred. Then the little Foxes began to get uneasy. They were hungry and they wanted to play and they didn't see why father and mother kept them down there where there was nothing to do but sleep.

Presently Kit yawned. "I guess," said he, "it is time to go hunting. I'll look out and see that all is well."

"Do," said Mrs. Kit. "We have four hungry mouths to feed besides our own, and the night will be none too long a best."

So Kit went up the long hall and poked his sharp little face outside. His sharp little ears were pricked forward to catch every sound and his keen little nose was turned this way and that way to catch any stray scent the Wandering Little Night Breezes might bring. Satisfied that all was well he stepped outside and a moment later was joined by Mrs. Kit. She, too, tested the air and then turned and called softly. Then out tumbled four little woolly babies and began to roll and tumble over each other about the doorstep.

The sand was still warm but the air was cool and overhead the sky was crowded with stars that twinkled and somehow seemed very near and bright. Of course, they were not near. It was merely because the air was so clear that they seemed near. They flooded the Dry Desert with a soft light and made beautiful what in the glare of the sun had seemed a dreary waste.

For a few minutes Kit and Mrs. Kit fondly watched the babies play. Then Kit trotted away. Mrs. Kit spoke rather sharply to the tumbling little balls of wool, and instantly they stopped playing and turned their sharp little faces toward her. "Listen," said she, "and don't forget what I say. Your father and I are going hunting to get you your dinner. As long as you stay right here by the doorway you will be safe if you don't forget to watch for moving shadows. The shadows of those big cactus plants are always still. There is nothing to fear from them. But is you see anything moving, even though it seems to be only a shadow, go into the house instantly. Don't stop to find out what it is. Go into the house and stay there until we return. Thus only will you be safe."

The four little Foxes promised to obey and Mrs. Kit trotted off in the apposite direction from the one taken by Kit. The four babies resumed their play, but always one or another was watching with bright eyes for a moving shadow, and all four were ready to dash into that underground home at the first hint of danger.

There were four doorways to that home. These were a short distance apart, for Kit and Mrs. Kit had planned that home carefully with safety always in mind. The doorway around which the babies were at play was the main entrance. It was the only one in daily use. The others were for use if anything should happen to make the main one unsafe. Thus if an enemy should surprise them and get between one of them and the main doorway there was always another through which to dash for safety. In the same way if an enemy should enter by the main doorway while they were inside there were three other ways by which to escape. It was very carefully planned, was that desert home and Kit and Mrs. Kit were very proud of it.

To you it would have been just a hole in the ground. To them is was a perfect home, for it gave them protection, and love made it the most beautiful place in all the Great World. All true homes are like that, no matter how humble they may be. Reddy Fox of the Green Meadows would have scorned that home out in that sandy waste with nothing to hide it, but to his small desert cousin it was perfect. It was all that a home should be.

CADIZ CELEBRATES TWICE A MONTH

the market place to see why the big bell. High piping music like Arabs play in Morocco screamed and squealed around a corner. When I got around it looked like an invasion by the Ku Klux Klan.

Great Long Candles.

People were milling about in great face-covering uniforms of black, white, green and brown. They carried candles two feet long and wore hats shaped like an ice cream cone which must have stood three or more feet high. The hats came straight down over their faces with just two tiny slits for eyes while the flowing gowns swept the ground and it was impossible to tell if the bogey man beneath was male or female.

It turned out, however, that they were girls and had just finished a big parade of some kind or other. The Spaniard would rather parade than eat and here was another of those fetes. I couldn't find out the idea of this thing but it had some religious significance. They stage a holiday here at least twice a month.

Now, however, the parade was over and a dance was set. The band of young caballeros made up in pep for what they lacked in musical talent and went at the job of wheedling a mean guitar as if their very life depended on it. The dancers whirled and paraded in a sort of half barn dance and half Ring-Around-A-Rosy with a couple of slides to third base thrown in and a stray game of tag. Certainly everyone was expected to dance and since it was catch as catch can I was seized by a couple of spooks in tall hats and waltzed around the cobble stones.

Girls can do this seizing business and get away with it if their faces are covered up so you don't know who they are. Certainly Thurston himself couldn't have told who these were beneath their goofy looking mantles.

Start Wrestling Bout

Now and again someone would be dancing in this spring halt time and get the idea they were Stasiak or Gus Sonenberg. They'd start wrestling on the spot and a good time was had by all. The girls who wheeled around with me as dead weight didn't know by sight that I was a foreigner but the first couple of words told them all that. They carried on game sports to the last and didn't even seem disappointed. This moved my waning sex appeal up one point and a quarter. It's now 22 bid.

Wine boys with big stone jars perched on their shoulders had rallied in anticipation of this shindig and did a brisk trade. The idea for the purchaser was to rent the jug, perch it in the air and locate his mouth at the strategic spot beneath the spout. As for me it proved a shower bath and an excuse to put a clean shirt on but not a drink. The girls lifted their hats long enough at this point to prove they were good shots.

The great booming bell was clanging away most of the morning but by pre-arrangement other bells throughout the city took up the uproar at about two o'clock and the show was formally over. Carts all decked up in feathers and flowers with billowing tops like a covered wagan hove into view. The girls in their elaborate cover-alls climbed into the carts and away they went to some unknown destination. I still hadn't found out what it is all about, whether I was a gate crasher or one who belonged but it didn't matter much because no one came after me with a stiletto or sword. Swell fun while it lasted.

I roamed back to the hotel seeking some laundry and some pictures. Both had been faithfully promised for the day before but I ran beginning to learn things about Spain so I never even went near the place that day.

I made a bet that neither the pictures nor the laundry would be ready and I won. Now what does a chap do when he beats himself on a bet? Anyway I'm in Cadiz until my laundry comes and probably long after that because I'm expecting to miss at least one train for Seville.

I went to see about this train today. The ticket man said that it left at 1.30—"but there is another at six o'clock." I asked for a ticket but that couldn't be arranged. I'd have to get it on the day of departure. "But can't you date the ticket tomorrow?" I asked. "No Senor the dating machine is set for today." "But can't you set it on and then set it back again?" "No senor. But everying will be all right. It will be quite all right. You will come for your ticket tomorrow and you will get it and you will go to Seville and everying will be all right."

But I offer six to one everything will not be all right. Just a few days of Spain was enough to teach me that. But who cares?

PUBLIC GETS "PUY DE DOME"

"Puy de Dome," the famous beauty spot in France, has been saved from commercialization and will be the property of the public. The victory ended a long battle between public and private interests. The volcanic cone, one of many in the vicinity, was owned by a large number of small proprietors, and recently a movement to buy them out and erect a hotel and amusement places at the summit was started. The "Puy de Dome" was put up at auction and the Department's offer was overbid, but because of public opinion a second sale was held and the purchaser stood down to allow the Department to acquire the place for $5,680.

Jack Cuff Selected Conference Delegate

Much interest was shown in the District Council meeting of the Anglican Young People's Association held in St. Thomas' Church, Millbrook, last night. Jack Cuff, president of the district, was elected to represent the Association at the Dominion Conference to be held in Regina in October of this year. The Council is considering sponsoring a Cobourg-to-Rochester excursion this summer, and more details were promised for the next meeting.

Next Thursday, May 28, is the date set for the first section of the dramatic contest when one-act plays from St. Luke's, Peterborough, and Christ Church, Omemee, will be presented at Lindsay in Marsh Memorial Hall. St. John's and All Saints', Peterborough, and St. Paul's, Lindsay, will contest at Omemee on June 3 and the two winners will play off for the trophy on June 5th. The members of the A.Y.P.A. in Millbrook had charge of a musical program and served refreshments to the visiting branches.

A.Y.P.A. ELECTS OFFICERS

Miss Florence Hutchinson was elected as president of the A.Y.P.A. of St. oJhn's Church, at the annual meeting held this week. Other officers for the coming year will be Jack Marshall, vice president; Miss Marion Wigg, secretary; Miss Rose Puddick, treasurer.

Convenors will be as follows: Miss Dorothy Ecobichon, entertainment committee; Jack Marshall, music; Arthur Bacon, drama; Miss Aloha Horn, lookout and visiting; Bert Hayter, devotional and educational; Miss Audrey Heap, publicity.

THE SON OF TARZAN No. 71 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Cautiously Meriem crawled to a big tree and from its upper branches paused to plan her next move. She thought Malbihn dead, so terrific a blow had she dealt him, but scarcely had she hid herself than she saw the Swede emerge from his tent, wiping the blood from his face and hurling a volley of abuse and questions at his terrified followers. Shortly afterward, the whole camp set forth in search of her. Meriem waited until they were beyond hearing.

Stealthily she made her way to the river. She dared not swim its crocodile-infested waters. In an open space she saw the beached canoes that had brought the party across the night before. But the landing place was in full view of the guard left behind and the craft was an unwieldy thing for a lone girl to handle. Yet there was no other means to safety and she must cross the river. Quickly she ran from her hiding place.

No sooner had she launched the canoe and shot out into the stream when a shout from behind the camp told her she was discovered. A moment later she Malbihn and his men rush to the landing and push a great canoe from shore. But Meriem's hopes ran high; they could not overtake her now—five minutes start of them was all she wanted. Malbihn urged his men on with curses and blows, realizing the girl was again slipping from his clutches.

The canoe, in the bow of which she stood, was only a hundred yards behind the fleeing Meriem when she ran the point of her craft beneath the overhanging trees on the shore of safety. Malbihn screamed at her to halt. He seemed to have gone mad with rage at the realization he could not overtake her. Then he threw his rifle to his shoulder, aimed carefully at the slim figure scrambling into the trees—and fired! Malbihn was an excellent shot!

GRANITE BLOCK WEIGHS 10 TONS

Coughlin Monumental Works Receives Carload of Rough Granite Blocks.

CALLED IN C.G.E. DERRICK

The Coughlin Monumental Works recently received a car of rough granite blocks, the heaviest of which weighed ten tons. This huge stone was too heavy to be handled without the use of a heavy derrick. An appeal was made to the Canadian General Electric for assistance which was readily granted. Notwithstanding the fact that the C. G. E. travelling derrick was busy loading cars, time was taken to handle the big stone for Mr. Coughlin, which, was actually accomplished in about ten minutes, the block being loaded on Beatty Bros. 12 ton truck and transported to the monumental works without a hitch.

This accommodation by Peterborough's largest industry was very greatly appreciated by Mr. Coughlin, who added that he has a 20 horsepower General Electric motor, which has been in daily use for over 10 years and still carrying a capacity load.

ONE FIRE ALARM

A call came into the Fire Hall at 10:52 this morning from 30 Park Street, North for an "upstairs on fire." Accordingly the ladders and combination chemical and hose rushed to the scene. Arrived there, the firemen discovered the fire to be limited to some aged stovepipes. The fire was easily extinguished without much damage being done.

He was a happy kid who danced away from Blind Jack's newsstand yesterday, holding a chocolate bar in one hand and a half dollar in the other. Blind Jack sells candy as well as papers in his little place down on Charlotte Street, and among other candies, he sells special bars. There is one prize bar in every box, with prizes running from a nickel to fifty cents; and yesterday a little fellow with a nickel in his hand walked in, bought a bar, and on opening it, found a shiny new half-dollar. And was he happy!

TO WORK ON HOLIDAY.

The work of pouring cement on the Armour Hill road paving job will not stop on May 25. It was decided that the men would be given the opportunity of working on the holiday so that they would have the extra day's pay and also to hurry the job to completion.

PEACE WAS MADE.

With police court action threatened, a hasty peace was made last night between the two Chinese who recently staged a fight above a local laundry over a $4 debt. The debtor was charging his former creditor with assault because of the alleged havoc done to his clothes when the creditor forcibly lifted the money from his person. The charge was withdrawn today the creditor having promised to pay for all repairs to the torn clothing.

WIND SUBSIDES IN TIME TO SAVE SEVERAL STORES

Call to Haliburton Asking Aid is Cancelled Before Brigade Starts.

CAUSE A MYSTERY.

Orange Hall, Set Ablaze By Sparks, Saved by Quick Work.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Ont., May 23.—Fire which broke out at 2:30 a.m. completely destroyed the barns, adjoining sheds and the hotel at Gooderham, Haliburton County. A vacant store, occupied by Mr. George Bowman as an apartment, was also destroyed and at one time it was feared that the post office and store of Gordon Lake, immediately across the street, would be destroyed.

The hotel and property is owned and was occupied by Mr. Andrew Young and family. Fire started in the barn. Cause unknown. At 3 a.m. word was sent to Haliburton, a distance of 16 miles and help was asked for. The fire fighters were ready to go when they received word that the wind had subsided and the fire was under control.

Orange Hall Saved

Sparks also flew to the Orange Hall, nearby, but the fire was extinguished. Mr. Young lost practically all his furniture and Mr. Bowman suffered heavy loss. A vacant cottage near the hotel was also destroyed.

The Gooderham Hotel is one of the land marks in the county and has been in use for half a century or more. It is situated at the head of Pine Lake.

HIGHWAY BOOTH BLOWN TO PIECES

Owners at Jordan Valley Hear Blast But Think it Peal of Thunder.

Believe Dynamite Planted.

HAMILTON, Ont., May 23 C.P.).—Hurled into the air by the force of an explosion, a refreshment stand run by Bolus Brothers at Jordan Valley, Hamilton-Niagara Highway, was destroyed early to-day. The explosive had evidently been planted inside the building, for everything inside the four walls was blown upward and converted into a mass of twisted wreckage.

William Bolus, part-owner of the stand, and his wife, living nearby, were awakened by the noise, but thought it was a peal of thunder. George Bolus, the other partner in the business, also heard the sound but did not investigate at the time.

Provincial Constables Embleton and Wood were summoned to investigate the affair, and later stated that they believed sticks of dynamite had been planted beneath the floor.

The brothers have been operating the stand for the past five years and are at a loss to account for the outrage, declaring that they had no enemies who would have done such a deed.

Two years ago, a stand operated by Bolus Brothers at Vineland was held up and robbed. Recently, a booth belonging to John Bolus near Oakville, on the Lake Shore Highway, was held up by two armed robbers, one of whom fired a shot at the proprietor.

Boxer is Charged Ransome's Death

MONTREAL, Que., May 23 (C.P.)—Charged with "causing the death of Captain William Ransome," lake boat skipper of King, Ont., in a brawl Thursday morning, Jack "Kid" Thomas, former professional fighter, was arraigned in police court here today before Judge Amedee Monet, and was given his freedom on two bail bonds of $950 each. Enquete was set for May 29.

Thomas is accused of striking the lake-boat mariner in a street fight outside an uptown club in the early morning. A cerebral hemorrhage resulting from a blackened eye brought death to Captain Ransome, and Thomas later gave himself up to the police.

Normandy Capital Honors Joan d'Arc

ROUEN, France, May 23 (C.P.).—This capital of Normandy, the scene of Joan of Arc's trial, suffering in prison, and death by fire 500 years ago, to-day began its nine-day program of celebrations in honor of the warrior-maid, one of the outstanding figures of the middle ages.

The principal streets of the thriving commercial city resumed the gala aspect of fete days in the medieval epoch, towering masts covered with silver foil were planted all along them, crowned with gilded laurel wreaths, symbolic of Joan's military triumphs over the enemy. Ancient tapestries, religious and patriotic emblems, and the coats of arms of the old provinces of France were suspended.

ALIEN SMUGGLING PLOT UNCOVERED IN DETROIT CITY

G. K. Lukas Arrested on Charge of Conspiracy to Violate Immigration Laws.

HELD ON $25,000 BOND.

Claim Bogus Birth Certificates Were Obtained in Small Western Towns.

DETROIT, Mich., May 23 (C.P.).—Federal authorities to-day said they had uncovered a widespread conspiracy to bring aliens into the United States on bogus birth certificates obtained in small mid-western cities. Many of the certificates, they said, were obtained in small Ohio cities.

Several hundred aliens admitted within the last two years, they said, are involved.

Announcement of the conspiracy followed the arrest early this week of George K. Lukas on a charge of conspiring to violate the immigration laws. Lukas pleaded not guilty when arraigned Thursday and is held in bond of $25,000.

His frequent presence in the Federal Building when immigration matters came up aroused the suspicion of the District Attorney's office. John A. Biesiot, law officer of the Immigration Department, and Julian G. McIntosh, assistant District Attorney, said they believe relatives already here had paid sums ranging from $500 to $1,200 for false birth certificates.

The certificates, Biesiot said, were obtained on the basis of false affidavits, in small towns where the birth records were either missing or incomplete.

COMMONS SEEKS FINANCIAL CURB ON C.N.R. OUTLAY

Agrees Money Voted Be Spent as Directed, Not for Other Purposes.

ESTIMATES PASSED.

Further Negotiations Necessary Before Work on Waterway Can be Started.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 23 (C.P.)—Buckling down to a steady grind, the House of Commons yesterday grappled with the estimates of the Department of Railways and Canals, passing all but one item. The exception, which stood over at the suggestion of Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal, dealt with surveys for the St. Lawrence Deep Waterways scheme.

Complete unanimity seemed to reign on the advisability of compelling the Canadian National Railway to adhere to the Parliamentary appropriations. Both Mr. King and Hon. R. J. Manion, the Minister, agreed money passed by Parliament for specific projects should be expended by the railway as directed, and not for some other purpose. This privilege, the Liberal Leader pointed out, was enjoyed by no other Government department.

Dr. Manion agreed with another observation coming from the Opposition ranks. Hon. Charles Stewart, former Minister of the Interior, said no appeals to the Cabinet should be permitted from orders of the Board of Railway Commissioners. Either the Board or the Supreme Court of Canada should be the final court. With this view, the Minister of Railways agreed.

Important Announcements

During the day several important announcements were made. A conference between Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways; E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific, and Dr. Manion, on the question of building the Peace River railway outlet, will be held shortly, the Minister announced. It might be held some day next month in Ottawa.

Marine freight rates on the Hudson's Bay route figured in another incident. The best way to give the port of Churchill a fair test was to have a private company carry trial grain shipments next fall, Dr. Manion suggested. He had received freight quotations from several shippers, all of which were higher than the Montreal route. It would not be a fair trial for the route to use the Canadian National steamships, the minister contended.

The official opening of the Bay route will not take place until 1932, Dr. Manion announced. Trial ship-

All Forms of Socialism and Communism Are Condemned in Encyclical.

RAPS MUSSOLINI'S STATE.

Document of 20,000 Words is in Celebration of 40th Anniversary of Pope Leo's Letter.

VATICAN CITY, May 23.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI in his encylical on labor made public today, characterizes the modern economic world as a "dictatorship" describes the modern business life as "hard and cruel in ghastly measure," and calls for a return to the justice of God in laying down the rules of conduct for capital and labor in their mutual relations.

God and His goodness, he wrote, too often are lost sight of in the struggle for wealth, and riches often become a great evil. The encyclical condemns all forms of Socialism and Communism.

Premier Mussolini's corporative state, with which the Pope has clashed more than once, although it is not mentioned in the encyclical by name, is described as possibly risking "the serving of particular political aims rather than contributing to the initiation of a better social order."

Many fear, said the Pope, "that the new syndical and corporative institution possesses excessive bureaucratic and political character, and that "the state is substituting itself in the place of private initiative."

20,000 Word Document

The 20,000-word document entitled "quadragesimo anno" is in celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the encyclical issued by Pope Leo XIII.

Since Pope Leo wrote, the Pontiff said, the entire economic scene has chaned tremendously, "immense power and despotic economic domination' are concentrated in the hands of a few who frequently are not owners but merely trustees and directors of invested funds.

The encyclical upholds the rights of private property, but asserts that these rights depend upon the obligations of ownership which it is a function of the State to define.

The Pontiff, in suggesting a solution for unemployment, said "investment of superfluous income in providing favorable opportunities for employment, assuming that the labor employed produces results which are really useful, is to be considered an act of real liberality particularly appropriate to the needs of our time."

Economic dictatorship, the encyclical asserts, has led to the degradation of the majesty of the state

Concentration of power, the Pontiff said, leads to a fierce battle for control of the state, "so that its resources and authority may be abused in economic struggles."

The remedy for the present eco-

William Harridge is Mooted as New American Ball League Head

CHICAGO, Ill., May 23.—(CP)—American League club owners today decided to meet at Cleveland, O., next Wednesday noon to elect a new president, succeeding the late Ernest S. Barnard.

More than a score of names have been advanced as nominations to succeed Barnard, who died unexpectedly March 27. William Harridge of Chicago, secretary of the league under Barnard's administration, was regarded as an almost certain choice.

Wednesday's meet was called unexpectedly as it was generally understood that the club owners would not select a new leader until next fall.

PLANS ARE MADE TO FIGHT APPEAL IN ASSESSMENTS

Suburban Residents of North Monaghan Hold Meeting in Confederation School.

H. B. RYE CHAIRMAN.

A score of North Monaghan suburbanites whose property assessments have been appealed by other residents of the township held a tactical conference in Confederation School last night.

Harold B. Rye was appointed chairman, and the meeting proceeded as a general conversation of the course the suburban property owners should follow before the Court of Revision next Wednesday afternoon. It was pointed out that two members of the Council, Mr. Byers and Mr. Patton, will be ineligible to hear the present appeals because their property is included in the assessment enquiry. In that event, the Court would be reduced to three members. It was also alleged that the notice of the appeals has been defective, but part from these details it was suggested that if the suburban properties are to be assessed at their full value an appeal may be taken before Judge Huycke asking that all property in the township be assessed on the same basis. Some farms, it was stated, are at present assessed for amounts that wouldn't even represent the value of their barns.

Suburban opinion last night seemed to be that the rural section of the township was not strongly behind the appeal to the Court of Revision, and that this action may lead to consequences which none of the ratepayers desire.

Serville Express Tears Along at Reckless Speed of Seven M.P.H.

By GORDON A. SINCLAIR.

SEVILLE, Spain, April 16.—(Special to The Examiner. Copyright, 1931).—Strategy has to be practised in Spain if the casual wanderer wants a seat in what they call railway trains over here even if he pays the highest price and climbs aboard a half hour before she's even due to pull out.

That's how it worked out for me today but since two conductors have assured me nine times each that this was just a regrettable accident it seems to have been nothing more or less than a regrettable accident.

The Cadiz-Seville "expresso"—which means seven miles an hour—was due to leave at 1.30. I rolled down to the station in a regal looking cab at 12.50 bought a ticket which bore no less than six different numbers and climbed into a first class seat. The third class was long since filled up with chickens, goats, stray parrots, soldiers, canaries, loaves of bread, fish and people. There were two other passengers in the compartment I chose, a man and his wife. They also had a parrot.

COWIE'S FROTHBLOWER IS FIRST, BRONZE SECOND, SKYGAZER THIRD, 20,000 PEOPLE SEE KING'S PLATE

Seventy-Second Renewal Of King's Plate Is Run At Woodbine.

12 HORSES RAN.

Bronze a Thorncliffe Entry Was Three Lengths Behind The Winner.

WOODBINE PARK, Ont., May 23 (C.P.). — R. W. R. Cowie's three-year-old brown colt Frothblower, by Cudgel out of Chrysoberil, won the 72nd renewal of the King's Plate here this afternoon.

The Thorncliffe stable's three-year-old Bronze by Oil Man out of Push Pin raced to second position, three lengths back of Frothblower.

R. S. McLaughlin's Skygazer, three-year-old by Skyrocket out of Madam Marjoria, finished third.

12 Horses Ran.

Twelve horses ran, the plate distance being one mile and an eighth.

Frothblower's time was one minute 59 and one-fifth seconds, the slowest in many years. But the race was over a muddy track that had been soaked in a 12-hour rain. The skies were overcast and a cold wind blew from the north as the initial program of the spring meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club was run off.

The race was for the fifty guineas donated by His Majesty, with $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club. The race was first run in 1860. It is restricted to three-year-olds and upward, bred in Ontario, who have not won a race except as two-year-olds.

Frothblower returned $5.25 for a two-dollar straight ticket, $3.70 for place, and $3.35 for show.

Bronze, coupled with Fess and Oil Rite in the betting as the Thorncliffe entry, returned $3.45 for place and $3.10 for show.

Skygazer paid $56.15 for show.

The winner was ridden by Frankie Maan and carried 117 pounds. Lee Canfield had the mount on Bronze who carried 112 pounds, the same impost as Skygazer, who was ridden by Phillips.

A large crowd, undeterred by the gloomy weather conditions, packed themselves into Woodbine Park today for the brilliant opening of the spring meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club.

The first feature on the program was the Fraser Memorial Steeplechase at two miles, with $3,000 added. The Fox Chapel Stud's six-year-old bay gelding, Sardaneza, imported from France, won by a length and a half from the Brier Farm stable's Fathallah, with John Sobieski, Fathallah's stablemate, finishing third.

Eight horses ran, the winner starting at about 2½ to one. Sardaneza finished very lame. Thunderlark, Early Peacemaker, fell after the circuit. Fathallah held the lead at the half-way mark but was soon overtaken by Sardaneza. Huon Joy and Billycock challenged Sardaneza near the finish, but the winner had too much speed and fencing ability left. He was capably ridden by Sims.

NEW YORK, May 23 (C.P.). — E. R. Bradley's six-year-old jumper Beelzebub showed the way to 14 classy steeplechase horses over the two-mile course to win the Charles L. Appleton Memorial Cup Steeple chase and $6,200 at Belmont Park to-day.

A length and a half back of the Bradley jumper finished Thomas Titchcock's Chenango with the Rolling Plains stable's Argonaut third. Beelzebub was the 4 to 1 favorite.

WHEAT PARLEY DRAWS TO CLOSE IN CANADA HOUSE

Agree to Name Continuing Committee for Collaboration Between Exporting Nations.

FERGUSON GIVES REVIEW.

Further Conference in Near Future Foreseen—Draft Agenda Proposed.

LONDON, May 23 (By George Hambleton, C.P. Staff Correspondent).—The conference of wheat exporting nations of the world closed its labors at Canada House this afternoon with unanimous agreements to appoint a continuing committee for collaboration between representatives of the exporting nations.

Subsequently Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Jugo-Slavia issued a joint statement that they regretted the conference had been unable to go further in the matter of international organizaion for wheat marketing.

Ferguson's Review

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commission to Great Britain and Chairman of the Conference, interviewed afterwards, summed up its work as follows:

(1) It has established the principle of international co-operation amongst the wheat-growing and food-producing nations of the world.

(2) Recommendation will be made to the various Governments that a central organization somewhat in the nature of a clearing house for information and advice should be established, that all the exporting countries should be partners in it and parties to it. This will enable those interested in wheat trading to secure accurate information that is open to all the exporting countries, and will enable an exchange of views and thus do a great deal towards stabilizing the position and towards preventing undue market oscillation and uncertainty.

The official communique said that information regarding supply and demand and the movement of wheat should be brought together in such a

CAPTURED BANDIT HAD BIG DEAL ON

Companion Posed to Farmer as Prominent Business Man's Pilot.

HAD LOTS OF MONEY.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 23. — Adam Morgan, one of the two Pontiac, Michigan, bank bandits whose plane came to grief at Fletcher, 40 miles east of here on the Michigan Central, posed as a big business man with an important deal in Toronto, while Louis Kish, the other bandit and the man who piloted the plane, acted the part of a hired pilot, according to Romeo Dauphinias, the Fletcher farmer who drove them to Chatham, where they caught a train for Toronto after stopping at the William Pitt Hotel for a while.

Dauphinias said he suspected nothing wrong, as they played their parts perfectly. They seemed to have lots of money and did a great deal of talking without saying very much.

Herbert Skipper, the man whom they hired to guard the plane, said he suspected nothing wrong until he found two heavy pistols in the plane. However, Skipper did nothing about it, remaining on guard until this morning, throughout a night that was cold and rainy. The plane was damaged as to the landing gear, and one tire had burst. Skipper claims that the marks on the field showed that the tire burst before the plane landed.

LEAGUE DEFEATS GERMANY'S PLAN

Armaments Questionaire Will Not Include List of Reserves and War Materials.

GENEVA, May 23. —(AP)— Germany was defeated today at the reopening of the League of Nations council meeting in an effort to procure a complete statement of the armaments of all countries preliminary to the 1932 disarment conference.

The council rejected Foreign Minister Julius Curtius' proposal that the armaments questionnaire include information on trained reserves and war materials in stock. It adopted the British form which conforms to the draft of the disarmament convention.

Herr Curtius protested that the nations thus failed to observe the provisions of article 8 of the convenant of the League which engages them to exchange fully and frankly information regarding the state of their armaments.

The Irish Free State delegate while supporting the British form said he did not consider the German proposal too idealistic and that this action would not prevent the conference from considering the possibility of limiting trained reserves and stocked materials.

The council of the League of Nations today declined to give approval to Poland's report of the reparations she has made for acts of violence against the German minority in last Autumn's election campaigns in Poland.

DARING COUPLE GET TO TORONTO BEFORE CAPTURE

Robbed Bank in Pontiac, Michigan, Steal Plane, Fly to Canada.

FUEL GIVES OUT.

Detectives Make Arrest As Youths Lug Suitcase Off Train at Union Station.

TORONTO, May 23.—Bank robbery in Michigan, a plane flight to Canada — where the machine failed near Chatham—a bus ride, a train trip to Toronto, had a dramatic sequel when the two alleged hold-up men, walking into Toronto Union Station, also walked into six Toronto detectives, who placed them under arrest.

First Times Plane Used

For the first time in Canada a plane was used by fleeing bank robbers yesterday in a thrilling dash over the Windsor border after a hold-up in Pontiac, Mich. The robbers became lost in the fog over Lake St. Clair, exhausted their fuel supply, and were forced to land on a farm five miles west of Chatham. When they abandoned their plane, the thieves were forced to fall back on the old reliable train service to continue their flight.

The robbers arranged to go to Montreal. Speedy co-operation between Canadian and Michigan police forces, however, worked to perfection, and as the train from Chatham slowed down in the Union Station at 9 o'clock last night six detectives from headquarters arrested the two alleged robbers as they stepped from the train.

They were: Louis Kish, aged 20, student air-pilot of 13433 Riopelle Street, Detroit, and Adam Morgan, aged 20, motor mechanic, of 172 South Boulevard, Pontiac, Mich. Both men were armed with 38-calibre revolvers fully loaded. They were tugging a brand new suitcase containing the $12,863.12 cash loot of the hold-up yesterday morning of the Pontiac Commercial Savings Bank and Trust Company, Lawrence Street and South Saginaw, Pontiac, Michigan.

Detective's Ruse

The railroad train was slowing down at the station platform when Kish first was noticed by detectives standing on the step of the second day coach. As he stepped off the train he reached to help Morgan pull the brown money-bag from the steps. Detective-Sergeant George Tuft, who worked a cunning ruse on the robbers, grabbed Kish by the throat, and, as he did so, flashed his revolver directly in front of Morgan. Detective - Sergeant John Hicks caught Morgan's arm from behind, and, gripping him, tore a loaded revolver from the man's pocket.

Detective-Sergeants Whitelaw and Winters assisted in disarming and handcuffing both men, while Detective-Sergeants Norman Tinsley and Archie McCathie took possession of the brown bag containing the money.

100,000 TREES BEING PLANTED NEAR BURLEIGH

Thirty-five Men Are Engaged in Reforestration in Burleigh Township.

SPECIALLY ADAPTED.

Thirty-five men are engaged in planting 100,000 pine trees in Burleigh Township about five miles south of Apsley.

They are engaged by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests under a policy of reforestation that has extended to this county.

The young trees are about nine to twelve inches long, and the site on which they are being set out is in the vicinity of the old Burleigh Ranch, on both sides of the road between Burleigh Falls and Apsley. The men engaged in this work have been recruited from that district, and it is understood that this temporary employment will continue probably for several weeks.

Reforestation of parts of Peterborough County that have been regarded as specially adapted for this enterprise has been urged for years, and the present activity will be welcomed by its advocates although the fruits of the present planting may not be realized in their time.

Farmers Are Asked To Write To Examiner

In order that farmers of this district who are interested in the Right-of-Way Association which was recently organized in an effort to obtain better terms for the use of their property from the Hydro-Electric Commission might find it helpful to their cause of they made use of the columns of The Examiner. Letters might be written conveying news of settlements or proferred agreements which other property owners along the Hydro tower paths would like to read for their own information. Such letters would have to be signed, but the names of the writers would not be published if they so desired.

The Examiner could be used as a means of the Right-of-Way members keeping in touch with the progress of their affairs in different parts of this district. The columns of The Examiner are open to them if they wish to use them for this purpose. Any letters of this kind will be treated with the usual editorial confidence.

MUST MAINTAIN CHEESE QUALITY TO HOLD SALE

Campbellford Cheesemakers' Association Holds First of Summer Series.

SEVERAL SPEAKERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—The first of the series of meetings scheduled by the Campbellford Cheesemakers' Association was held last evening in the Campbellford Grading Station with a good attendance registered; the president, W. V. Drewry of Warkworth in the chair.

Opening the meeting Mr. Drewry expressed his pleasure at seeing so many of the old makers present, saying that it showed a real interest on their part in the branch of the industry. Speaking of the schedule of meetings arranged for this summer, some of which would be held at the factories, he stressed the fact that he wanted these to be attended by the patrons and their wives.

John A. Murray, local instructor, during the course of his address to the makers, stated that although the year had not started as brilliant as was hoped in regard to the number of cheese, yet the industry was in good shape in the matter of fine quality. He thought the feeding of calves this time of the year was one of the big problems that had to be faced, but stated that now the shipment of this young stock had commenced on a large scale, he thought this condition would be rectified. He was of the opinion that in the near future things generally would right themselves.

Flavor was still a big problem with the makers, he stated, yet even that in comparison was good. He was glad that this trouble was placed on the patrons, for the markers were only discredited with poor workmanship and along this line they had not fallen down.

Small Make So Far

One of the things that had been felt this season was the poor results given by the starter, that had been sent out this year. This was of a loose texture and seemed to have a wrong small and flavor, but he believed that now this trouble was rectified. Reporting generally the make in the Campbellford section was small this year so far.

J. A. Irwin, Dominion cheese grader, struck an optimistic note in regard to the future of the industry, although acknowledging the fact that the prospect at present was not too bright. One of the bright spots he thought was the fact that the larger firms were looking for cheese at the present time. Of the quality of cheese he said it was better this year than last, although the output was less, especially in the Central Ontario district.

He saw an upward trend for the cheese industry, pointing out that at the present time milk was worth more in cheese than in butter. One of the weak spots of the industry, the speaker thought, was the fact that there was no official representative in the district who could get in touch

BODY RECOVERED AFTER NINE DAYS

Body of Eight Year Old Donald Dougall Comes to Top of Crowe River.

INQUEST NOT NECESSARY.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, May 23. — Lacking just ten minutes of nine days since the drowning tragedy in which eight-year-old Donald Dougall, of Marmora, lost his life, the body was recovered yesterday evening. He was drowned a week ago Wednesday at 5:45 p.m. and yesterday at 5:35 the floating body was brought to shore by Gordon Scott and Earl Blakely.

The boy's uncle, Fred Reynolds and his cousin, Loretto Reynolds, were out in a boat on Crowe River about ten minutes when they saw the body on top of the water, just opposite the ruins of the old Marmora Soap Factory. Scott and Blakely brought it to shore and carried it to the boathouse owned by T. E. Potts. Afterward it was removed to the undertaker's, F. N. Marett, and Coroner Doctor F. Alger was notified. After viewing the remains he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Fred Reynolds had been making daily trips up and down the river since the drowning. There had been others searching also. The spot where the body was seen was some two hundred yards south of the spot where the boy had fallen over the embankment, and it had been dragged several times.

While there were a few bruises on the body, it was thought that these were caused by the action of the water. A huge crowd, mostly women were on hand shortly after the news had spread that little Donald's body had been found.

HORSE STUMBLES IL DUCE FALLS

Premier Has Face Scratched in Soft Earth on Bridle Path.

GOES TO OFFICE.

ROME, May 23 (C.P.). — Premier Mussolini was thrown from his horse to-day while taking his usual morning constitutional on the grounds of his home, the Villa Torlonia, but suffered only very slight injury, principally scratches on his face.

After brief treatment the Duce went to his office and afterward to the Palace, but cancelled a review of several hundred Bulgarian gymnasts visiting Rome, which he had scheduled for to-day. He did receive the Bulgarian Minister, however, as well as his own assistant.

The injury he suffered was said to be quite superficial and confined to his face. It was reported that his horse stumbled, throwing the Premier to the soft earth of the bridlepath.

WORLD DEPICTED

nomic evils, the Pontiff wrote, is a return to the principles of "right, reason and christian social philosophy" regarding mutual cooperation of capital and labor.

"Relations between capital and labor," he wrote, "must be determined according to the laws of strictest justice, supported by christian charity."

Free Competition.

The encyclical demands that free competition and economic domination be kept within just and definite limits and be brought under the effective control of public authority.

Those who work, the Pontiff said, "should have an ample sufficiency" in the form of wages which will enable the worker's family to live decently and to accumulate a "certain moderate ownership."

Wage contracts, said the Pope are not essentially unjust, but under present conditions, he advocated some form of partnership such as already has been tried. Wages, he said, must be based on the kind of labor, the general prosperity of the world, and the condition of business. He adds a "word of praise' for wage systems which increase the worker's pay as his family burdens increase.

Unemployment, he said, is a "dreadful scourge," and referring to the present depression, "it causes misery and temptation to the laborer, ruins the prosperity of the nations, and endangers public order, peace, and tranquillity the world over."

Distribution of wealth, he said, must be such that "the common good of all, of which Pope Leo XIII. spoke, will be promoted. In other words, the good of whole communities must be safeguarded. By these principles of social justice, one class is forbidden to exclude another from a share in the profits.

"This sacred law is violated by the irresponsible wealth of class which, in the excess of its good fortune, deems it a just state of things that it should receive everything and the laborer nothing. It is violated also by the unpropertied wage earning class which demands for itself all the fruits of production as being the work of its hands."

CAMPBELLFORD MAGISTRATE WINS APPEAL AGAINST ASSESSMENT

Fought Court of Revision Decision Regarding Payment on Cost of Sewer.

ALLOWED COSTS IF ASKED.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — The appeal of Magistrate G. A. Payne of Campbellford from a decision of the Campbellford Court of Revision validating an assessment made under the Local Improvement Act of Ontario calling upon him to pay part of the cost of a sewer put in the street opposite his property was allowed with costs if asked, by His Honor Judge E. C. Huycke of Peterborough who presided at the County Court sitting at Campbellford on Monday last for that purpose. Chas A. Payne K.C., of Belleville, handled the case for Magistrate Payne and D. J. Lynch acted for the town of Campbellford.

The appeal of the appellant against the assessment was based on the argument that although the work was done under the Local Improvement Act, none of the preliminary necessary steps were taken by the Municipality prior to the commencement of the work.

Among other things it was pointed out that the necessary notice was not given, either to Mr. Payne or through the medium of the press but that the municipality simply went ahead and did the work and some time after held a Court of Revision under the Act which gave directions confirming Mr. Payne's assessment.

Mr. Lynch for the town in his defence stated that the work had gone ahead in good faith for the relief of the unemployed upon the assurance given it by the then Acting Premier, Hon. G. S. Henry and secretary of Unemployment Relief Committee, J. A. Ellis.

His Honor Judge Huycke, in handing down his decision stated that although an act had recently been passed in regard to the relief work, it does not say at all or even suggest that the machinery of the Local Improvement Act could be varied, much less dispensed with. "If the Municipal Local Improvement Statute, he stated, had been strictly complied with, the charge or assessment against Mr. Payne and his property would be binding, but as none of these pre-requisities required were complied with the whole thing is invalid and the assessment made against Mr. Payne must be set aside and declared of no effect. The appeal is therefore allowed and with costs if asked."

He was given seven months determinate in the Ontario reformatory and two years less one day indeterminate on each of the two charges of forgery, the sentences to run concurrently. The youth admitted in court that he had forged a cheque on his foster father in Goderich some time ago was put on two years suspended sentence.

NURSES GUESTS OF KIWANIS CLUB ON LADIES' NIGHT

Rev. A. G. Emmett of Port Hope Was Special Speaker of the Evening.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

"The one thing worth living for is a vocation. Florence Nightingale believed that she was moved by the holy spirit of the living God Himself and that she had to carry on to the last breath in a burning desire to be a blessing and a help to others.

"What was it that changed the profession of nursing from the immoral, brutal thing it was seventy years ago to the high calling which it is to-day? It was because one weak, frail woman spent her life and all of her strength in doing her utmost to raise its standards, and how well she succeeded is evidenced by the fact that it stands second to none to-day in the list of noble professions for women."

The Rev. A. G. Emmett, pastor of St. John's Anglican Church at Port Hope, spoke to the Kiwanis Club and their guests last night at the Empress Hotel, at a Ladies' Night when members of the graduating classes of the two city hospitals were guests of the club, according to a custom originated by the Rev. J. D. Paterson four years ago.

It was vice-president's night with vice-president H. J. Boyle in the chair, and the program was a merry and hilarious one, with several new features introduced into the entertainment of dancing which followed the banquet. During the supper hour, jolly music was supplied by Herb. McCannan and his harmonica band, with Wilbert Freel at the piano, while a feature of the solo music was the violin playing of a precocious small miss, eight-year old Dorothy Cunningham, who stood on a table to play her splendid little numbers. They were "Blue Bells of Scotland" and its encore, "Hearts and Flowers" and the tiny girl, who is a pupil of Roy Rome got a big hand for her expert playing and pretty little fair curls and apple green frock. She was accompanied by Miss Marguerite Rome who also played for her brother Roy, in two beautiful violin solos that were extraordinarily well played. The fascination of the South was in the first brief bit, "In the Canebrake" and its encore. "The Land of Sky Blue Water" was equally lovely. Mr. Rome's music was received with loud applause.

Florence Nightingale

The program after dinner opened with brief speeches by the three boosters of the evening: Dr. F. C. Neal Dr. Ray Scott and John J. Turner, all of whom congratulated the nurses on the completion of their arduous course of training and wished them well for the future.

Then the Rev. J. D. Paterson introduced the speaker the Rev. Mr. Emmett, who made an appropriate choice of a subject in Florence Nightingale, whose natal month this is and who might be termed the guiding star of the nursing profession.

In an eloquent discourse that touched on the high lights in the career of Florence Nightingale, the reverend gentleman emphasized the ruling ambition and desire of her life, from the age of five, when she made a practice of repairing old and torn dolls, to her death at ninety-one years of age, as a passion for assisting those who stood in need of help.

Prior to her espousal of the cause of nursing, after the Crimean War, the profession was a desecration and a curse in England, and only on the Continent, when the Roman Catholic sisterhood practised it, was it known as a blessing. The Rev. Mr. Emmet read a description of a nurse of the Gamp type, common to England of that time, as a "coarse old woman, always ignorant, usually dirty and often brutal, tippling constantly at the brandy bottle and often very immoral."

Aristocratic Lineage

The daughter of a proud family, Florence Nightingale, received no encouragement from her people in her desire to espouse the profession of nursing. After her work in the Crimea, she came home, a physical wreck, compelled to have a physician always in attendance in her home and expecting death every day. But still, for fifty years, she pursued unceasingly the calling to which she had pledged herself and never faltered in arduous work which tried her strength to the utmost.

Going out to the Crimea possessed of several advantages in a fair amount of personal means, the sum of £7,000 raised by private means, and possessed also of the ear of the Queen, she encountered a terrible situation; a hospital where four miles of corridors were filled with sick and dying and dead men, suffering from awful wounds and from gangrene. There were cesspools pouring their filth into the wards, there were rotten floors that could not be cleaned, rats and vermin were there in abundance, and there was nothing in the way of supplies, no linen, furniture, cooking utensils or even bandages. It was chaos supreme and red tape ruled with an iron hand.

Out of that chaos Florence Nightingale brought a condition that resulted in the lowering of the mortality rate, which was 44% on her arrival, to 22 per 1,000, within the space of four months and she did it because of her allegiance to an ideal and because of her indomitable will. But she nearly killed herself in the task.

On her return to England, she became the center of a coterie of distinguished people. Viceroys and princes and commanders in chief never went to their charges without consulting Florence Nightingale, and her home was the mecca for all who wished to have a short interview with that frail woman.

In speaking of the lesson which might be learned from such a life and from such a devotion to an ideal, the speaker concluded his interesting address with a timely bit of verse: "Don't worry if your job is small and your rewards are few; remember that the mighty oak was once a nut like you."

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by C. S. Browne and tendered by Mr. Boyle.

Games and dancing and bridge games concluded the program of the evening. Prizes appear in another column.

PIPE TESTED by a RANCHER

"Some months ago I visited my ranch on the Prairie. I travelled home as usual in the smoker. Delightfully relaxed after my outing in the wind and sun, I was enjoying my pipe immensely. The man who shared my seat suddenly placed his hand on my arm and said, 'What kind of tobacco is that you are using? . . . I presume from the aroma that it is one of those imported brands.' 'Oh, no,' I replied, 'I used to be a smoker of imported tobaccos but this seems to suit me better . . . its name is Turret pipe tobacco and the price is moderate too. I have been a constant user of it (Turret pipe tobacco) for months.'"

LIFE itself is a great adventure! You never can tell what a day, or a night, will bring forth! God graciously veils the future from our eyes and compells us to be satisfied with a step at a time. It is this unknown quantity in life that makes it a real adventure for all who have a little bit of imagination.

In the course of my visits to the Workshop of John Plane I have been able to pick up some valuable "Chips and Shavings." The other day I got something from my good friend which is far too good to keep to ourselves. In passing it on we shall probably enter into fellowship with the woman who broke an alabaster box of precious ointment, the fragrance of which filled the house and enriched the lives of all present—herself included!

From a distant city, John Plane had received a story which he passed on to me—a story I now pass on to the readers of this page.

A TRAVELLER'S TALE.

"I am not a strong believer in dreams, but I can tell you a little circumstance that happened a few years ago, which has remained a mystery to me to this day."

The teller of this tale was what is commonly called "a drummer." As he drew his chair closer to the stove this is the story he told:

"I have been travelling for a large wholesale drug company in St. Louis for a number of years, and I have met all sorts of customers, and have had a varied experience with many of my patrons. On one of my runs in the southwest I had one very particular old friend whom I will call Brother Benton, because everybody in that section calls him by that name. He nearly always had an order for me; but whether he did or not, I always felt better after making my call, on account of his cheerful ways and pleasant words. I could see my customers only twice a year, at best, and I looked forward to my visit with this old customer as one of my best days.

THE MAN HE WAS.

"On one visit, I sold him a much larger bill than he had ever made before, but I did not hesitate to recommend the house to fill the order. I had learned that he was universally loved and respected in his town as a sincere Christian. He would not keep ardent spirits, nor would he hear for one moment of giving space in his house to tobacco in any shape. 'My Bible,' said he, 'condemns both whiskey and tobacco, and I will have nothing to do with them.' No amount of persuading or liberal discounts could induce him to deviate from his rule.

"About six months after, I had sold him the large bill, I was notified by the house that the bill was unpaid, and that I should call as soon as possible and collect it. I hastened over my territory and called in person to look after the matter. I found a new face behind the counter, and I learned that a short time after I sold that bill, my old friend had taken the smallpox and he and his family had been under quarantine for a long time. His sickness had lasted for several months and he was still confined to his home. I did not see him, but he sent me word that the matter would come out all right in the end.

WORSE THAN HE THOUGHT.

"He had suffered more losses than he thought, and six months went by and the bill was still unpaid. I wrote the house and told them the condition of things, and they were holding up all proceedings against him. Six months went by again, and I was ordered to go at once and collect the bill or enter suit. I had but one thing to do, though I confess I had some rebellious thoughts. The night before I arrived at his town I spent several weary hours rolling and tossing on my bed trying to contrive some plan to avoid closing out my old friend.

"He lived eight miles from the railroad, and I must see him on the morrow. I knew that if I brought suit, in all probability others would do the same, and a good man would go to the wall for no fault of his own.

"While tossing on my bed, I must have fallen asleep. I thought I had called on my old friend, and we were sitting in his family room, with all his family around him. He turned to me and said:

"'We are just about to have our morning prayers, and we shall be glad to have you join with us.'

"I replied: 'With pleasure.'

"He said: 'We will read the Twenty-Third Psalm.'

A NEW VERSION.

He began to read, but I was astonished at the words I heard. I had learned that psalm in Sunday school when a boy, and while I had not read my Bible as much as I should have done, still I will never forget that 'The Lord is my shepherd.'

"The words were read in a clear voice, and my heart rejoiced, though I had never heard it that way before. He said:

"'The Lord is my banker; I shall not fail.

"'He maketh me to lie down in gold mines; He giveth me the combination of His tills.

"'He restoreth my credit.

"'He aboweth me how to avoid lawsuits for His name's sake.

"'Yea, though I walk in the very shadow of debt, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me;

"'Thy silver and Thy gold they rescue me.

"'Thou preparest a way for me in the presence of the collector; Thou fillest my barrels with oil; my measure runneth over.

"'Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will do business in the name of the Lord.'

* * *

"Having read this Scripture, he knelt down and prayed. I thought I had never heard such a prayer in all my life. He fairly took my breath from me when he asked his Heavenly Father to bless me, his friend.

"With his 'amen!' I awoke with a start. I concluded that I would call on my old friend only in the morning at his own home. I arose in time to procure a team, and was knocking at his door just as the sun was coming above the eastern horizon.

A STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

"He met me at the door with a hearty handshake and said: 'Come in, come right in; we are just going to have morning prayers, and we will be glad to have you join with us. He took me into the room and introduced me to his wife and children. He took up his Bible and said, 'We will read the Twenty-third Psalm.' He read it in a clear voice, but read it as it is written in the Book. I cannot tell you my feelings and thoughts as he read.

"We then knelt in prayer, and he humbly made known his wishes, but it did not sound like the one I had heard in my dream, though he appeared to go over the same thoughts. He told the Lord he owed some money, and that it was past due, and he asked Him that a way might open to pay it that same day.

"He then prayed for me; and while on my knees I resolved that for one time in my life I would disobey orders.

GOD STILL WORKS.

"After prayers we both went directly to the drug store, and just as we entered the door, a young man met us, saying, 'Brother Benton, father sent me over here this morning to tell you that he would take the house and lot you spoke to him about some days ago. He told me to hand you this money, and that he would pay the balance on the delivery of the deed.

"The old man took the roll of bills, and tears began to roll down his cheeks as he turned away. He wrote the young man a receipt for the money and gave it to him. He then turned to his ledger and began to figure. He then turned to me and said, 'Will you kindly receipt this bill?' I saw that he had added all the interest on the bill. I told him I was ordered by the house to remit the interest. He declined to receive it, and said he desired to pay all his just debts. I took the money and sent it in.

"The house wrote him a very complimentary letter, thanking him for the remittance. In a great measure my dream had come true.

"At the time I was tossing on my bed, my old friend was on his knees in his closet, pleading with his banker for a loan. I am very much gratified to know that he got it, and ever since, in all my discouragements, I apply the Twenty-third Psalm as the remedy."

THINK OF THIS.

What a comfort it is to remember that He who in His wondrous loving kindness designed that we should be the objects upon which He should lavish His love, also designed prayer as the means by which He could continually have us in the attitude and the place for the reception of that love; shath He not said, "The prayer of the upright is His delight"?

How blessed it is to feel that each time we come to Him, whether in the sanctuary or in the street, that we are giving joy to our Father which is in Heaven, and are treading in the path of Him who "suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow His steps."

George Muller, of Bristol, England, once said to one who asked him the secret of his service:—

"There was a day when I died, utterly died, died to George Muller, his opinions, preferences, tastes and will, died to the world, its approval or censure—died to the approval or blame even of my brethren and friends — and since then I have studied only to show myself approved unto God."

Prayer is to the spiritual life what air is to the physical. We should make it a rule never to see the face of man until we have seen the face of God. Each day is a new life—let us, therefore, make sure of a good beginning.

Thomas Cook once said that the devil might be so thoroughly beaten in the morning that his assault will be feeble all the rest of the day.

The spirit of prayer should be cultivated by us until we form the habit of prayer with all we do. Let us be men and women of prayer. None are eminent for piety and usefulness who neglect the place and practice of prayer. All who would win great victories for God in public must first prevail in the solitude of their own chambers.

Yours in happy service,

Allan Fairbairn.

The Hour Of Prayer

O Thou Son of Man who didst come seeking those who sought not Thee, and whom no seeker ever missed; we bless Thee more for the will to reach than for the power to grasp, bless Thee that no miracle annuls the need to think, to struggle, to pray. Thou hast bidden us follow after Thee — only this; and after Thee would we follow, on and on, towards the mark of that high calling, till our passion shall grip the nations and the earth be filled with seekers after God. Amen.

GOD'S word is sometimes to us like a magic writing which has faded out and become invisible, and then, at other times, the lines reappear, and it flashes for us with a divine meaning.

Selfish Leisure

SOME men say, to retire to a little blissful nook, with a few congenial ones to love, and to hear the distant roaring of life as those in forests hear the ocean—the music, and not the storm—would be all the happiness they would ask on earth. Now, where society is but a grand machine of despotism, where all civil affairs are in the hands of the official priest, so that it is treason to be active in politics, and sacrilege to be freely active in religion, then retirement and leisure may be as virtuous as they are safe. But in our land, where society is an unbounded field for individual exertion of every kind, and man's usefulness is limited only by his own original power, one needs a special edict of Providence to justify him in retiring from life. When leisure is a selfish luxury, its very activity, when it stirs, is apt to be only a kind of indolence taking exercise, that it may the better digest its selfishness.

Mastering The Mind

A man might as well fill a tree full of nightingales, and, standing on the ground, attempt to control their notes and to hold them enchoired together, as to attempt to control by his volitions the multiplied thoughts and feelings of his own soul. Some persons hearing this will say, "A man can regulate his mind as easily as his house." Certainly, if he has nothing more in his mind than is in his house; but faculties ought not to be furniture. We can appoint the bounds and the directions of our thoughts and feelings, but within those bounds we can no more control their individual spring, than a man can control all the motions of the drops of water in a stream, because he has the power to fix its shores.

Future Joy

IT is not so much by the symmetry of what we attain in this life that we are to be made happy, as by the enlivening hope of what we shall reach in the world to come. While a man is stringing a harp, he tries the strings, not for music, but for construction. When it is finished it shall be played for melodies. God is fashioning the human heart for future joy. He only sounds a string here and there to see how far His work has progressed.

The Doom Of The Useless

LET us train ourselves to obey every call of God, lest in our hesitancy, distrust or disobedience we fail of the mission for which we were made, and meet the doom of the useless.

---

A university should be a place of life, liberty and learning.

Criticism Of Women

THE criticism of women proceeds not generally so much from a large survey and a cool judgment as from a delicate sensibility. Their finer feeling finds an offence in many things which are passed over unnoticed by the broader survey of the man.

* * *

It is a misfortune to have a more keen sensibility to faults than a ready appreciation of excellences in a person or object; for this tendency, however free from vice, not only perverts judgment but prevents enjoyment. This is the misfortune of women and of not a few men also of the most highly cultivated taste.

—John Stuart Blackie.

Such A Life!

A life marked by daily answer to prayer is the proof of our spiritual maturity; that we have indeed attained to the true abiding in Christ; it is in practical obedience, that the abiding must be maintained.

Meet The Conditions!

GOD can only reveal His will in perplexities and special difficulties, to a heart that has learned to obey Him loyally in little things, and in daily life.

A Word Picture

GOD designed men to grow as trees grow in open pastures, full-boughed all around; but men in society grow like trees in forests, tall and spindling, the lower ones overshadowed by the higher, with only a little branching, and that at the top. They borrow of each other the power to stand; and if the forest be cleared, and one be left alone, the first wind which comes uproots it.

MAKE IT A SANE HOLIDAY.

With the first summer holiday, Victoria Day, just a matter of hours away, it may do no harm to make the annual plea for a safe and sane observance of the occasion.

The outdoors is calling; thousands of people are planning to spend the Victoria Day week-end on motor trips, the first visit of the year to the summer cottage and other similar seasonal recreations.

Under such conditions unusual care will pay.

There will be heavy traffic on the highways, necessitating careful and courteous driving; the wise motorist will recognize this fact and will have proper regard to his own safety and that of others.

Those who visit river and lake points should likewise be careful, remembering there are always hazards for the unwary.

The citizen who decides to spend the holiday at home and includes a display of fireworks in his program will also do well to be on his guard, particularly if children are to be entrusted with the responsibility.

Victoria Day is naturally one of the most enjoyable holidays of the whole year; it should be everybody's task to see that it is not marred by the tragedies that are too often associated with such occasions. "A safe and sane holiday" should be the general motto in regards to Victoria Day.

ONE WAY TO SLOW THEM UP.

Premier Henry's statement that the time may come when automobiles will be geared down so that high speeds will be impossible, may not be so far off the mark as it seems.

As the Premier points out, there is a strange paradox in the fact that while the legal speed limit is 35 miles an hour, automobile manufacturers continue to advertise that their cars are capable of 75 or 80 miles an hour.

Why should this speed possibility be stressed when the law says that cars should not be driven at anything like the advertised rate?

Nobody seems to know the answer, unless it is to be found in the fact that most people ignore the legal speed limit, and manufacturers trade on that condition in claiming unusual fleetness on the part of the machines they produce.

That leads up to the Premier's prediction.

It may well be that if drivers continue to try to get every last mile of speed out of their cars, regardless of the toll of lives taken in highway accidents, it will be necessary to deal with them in a more effective manner, and the means suggested by Mr. Henry would seem to be the most certain way of doing the trick.

Fix the cars so that they cannot be driven at an excessive speed and the highway Campbells and Oldfields will perforce have to slow up.

There does not seem any other means of making them do so.

VANDALISM AT ITS WORST.

It is impossible to find suitable language to properly condemn the vandalism displayed in Victoria Park on Thursday night when more than fifty tulips were ruthlessly torn up and scattered over the park.

There have been cases in the past where tulips have been stolen from these beds, but this wanton destruction of beautiful flowers is even more despicable than theft.

The mentality of the person guilty of such a flagrant display of holliganism is something to be wondered at, and decent citizens will hope that he may be caught and given punishment worthy of the offence.

The parks are the property of the people; they are cared for and kept beautiful for the benefit of the whole community, and it is disquieting to think that Peterborough's citizenship includes an individual low enough to deliberately ruin the beauty of a floral display cultivated for the pleasure of all.

It is possible to understand a person yielding to temptation and stealing a few blooms, but the conduct of this particular vandal is beyond explanation and beneath contempt.

Apparently he destroyed for the mere pleasure of destroying; there are only two places suitable for a man of that type—jail or mental hospital.

THE BEAUHARNOIS CHARGES.

Until the Beauharnois charges have been investigated, comment on what has been alleged in the House by the Progressive members and on the even more serious indictment made by T. L. Church, ex-M.P., is perhaps not justified.

It is one thing, of course, to lay charges and another and quite different thing to prove them before a competent board of inquiry.

There is little doubt, of course, that an investigation should be held; these allegations have been in the air for some time, and in the public interest they must be sifted.

The only disquieting feature is that the task of conducting such an inquiry is to be turned over to a parliamentary committee; the public would have preferred to have had a judicial investigation.

Mr. Church's sweeping indictment includes both the old parties at Ottawa and the Governments of Ontario and Quebec.

Under these circumstances the wisdom of entrusting a probe to a committee of politicians is open to question, particularly as the personnel of the special committee is to contain only one Progressive, as against two Liberals and four Conservatives.

While that representation may be in proportion to the numerical strength of the parties in the House, the fact that the investigation has been brought on by the Progressives and that the latter have not in any way been implicated in the charges would justify more members of the third party being placed on the committee.

INTRODUCE BUCKSAW TO ALL TRAMPS.

Tramps of all kinds have cost Havelock a lot of money and bother for months past, and in the case of the tramp who created trouble on our streets recently, citizens were astounded to learn that that day at least a number of tramps had been given the free run of the town hall to come and go as they pleased, with the consequent danger of setting it on fire or doing any damage they wished.

In fact, tramps in Havelock have been treated better than some of our own taxpayers, as far as free lodging and free food is concerned, and in many cases, after being fed and lodged, these gentry would proceed to go from house to house begging money and more food, much to the annoyance and apprehension of our housewives.

The Standard, in common with a lot of good citizens, thinks that it is high time to put a stop to this utter nonsense, and if the village authorities feel that they are obliged to take care of every tramp that happens along, that they invest in a few cords of wood and an old-fashioned bucksaw, and when they apply for relief that the caretaker of the hall be instructed to steer them towards the woodpile and let them know that the words, "By the sweat of thy brow," is as applicable in this "sucoor" belt as it was at the time of the lockout from the Garden of Eden.

The sight of the saw and the woodpile will act as a deterrent on this tramp nuisance, and as word is passed around the hobo fraternity, Havelock will shortly be given a wide berth by the "knights of the road," as word has undoubtedly been passed around that Havelock is now an "easy mark."—Havelock Standard.

YEARS AGO IN VICTORIA.

As a comparison with modern times, up-to-date methods of transportation and the different life led by the people of to-day, a letter from an old resident of Victoria County telling of incidents that happened 50 years ago in this district is of peculiar interest.

Describing a trip made to Peterborough and Ashburnham 51 years ago, in May, 1880, S. T. Calvert, 63 Ridout street, Lindsay, said that he and his father got up at two o'clock in the morning to drive from Reaboro to Peterborough to take 18 bags of potatoes and 20 pounds of butter to the market there. The reason for the trip was that butter that sold for 12 cents a pound in Lindsay brought 25 cents a pound in Peterborough, and potatoes that sold for 50 cents a bag in Lindsay brought $1.25 a bag in Peterborough—and in those days, to use the words of the advertisement, what a whale of a difference a few cents made. After their early start they reached Peterborough at nine o'clock.

Mr. Calvert said he remembered an old Irish woman who came to the market and bought three bags of potatoes from him and his father. She said that she had lived all winter on potatoes, buttermilk, salt and two loaves of bread. But she had the money for her potatoes. They had 20 pounds of butter and could have sold 50 pounds easily, if they had had it.

Coming home over that big hill north of the city, there was five feet of snow in the ditch on both sides. To the right, in a cedar swamp, there was six feet of snow. There had been 15 feet of snow in the cut in the hill in the winter. Farther on they stopped at Dobe's Hill to see the big steam shovel, but it was broken and they could not see it work.

They arrived home at nine o'clock at night, the end of a long day for a boy eight years of age, Mr. Calvert concludes.

Fifty years is not such a long time, but this little story illustrates the great changes that have taken place in the past half century. They left Peterborough at four o'clock in the afternoon and arrived home five hours later, and as there was snow on the ground it is easy to imagine that they would be bitterly cold, although they would snuggle beneath large fur robes in their sleigh. Now it is no great feat to drive to Peterborough in three-quarters of an hour, and if you wish to strike a 70-mile-per-hour pace, as one young driver recently did, you could make it in a little over 20 minutes.

We also imagine that in those days it would be quite a decision to make, deciding whether to sell the potatoes or butter in Lindsay or whether to take off a whole day and take them to Peterborough where they would be worth twice as much. Men would not take the trip for the fun of the thing, so the moral of the whole tale probably lies in the struggle the pioneers of this country must have gone through before they could overcome the early conditions and leave their children an inheritance of good farm land and the beginning of a road system that is able to arouse the jealousy of many more thickly populated counties.—Lindsay Post.

SECRET PLACES

BY

Feodor Staire, after luncheon, chose to walk back to the Embassy, and as he strode along the rue St. Honore saw D'Arblaye's big limousine draw up a little ahead of him. A second later he saw D'Arblaye alight and hand out no other person than Greta. She did not look round, and Feodor turned sharply into the doorway of a shop. He knew where they were going—a private gambling club run by a ci-devant Russian aristocrat. So Greta was gambling, and in D'Arblaye's company. Worried and disturbed for his friend, Feodor turned down a side street, and walked rapidly on.

The evening was sultry as if a storm were gathering, and Greta, who was very susceptible to atmospheric conditions, felt nervous and headachy; and, in addition, she had this time a very real anxiety to account for her mood.

Ronald was by no means a rich man, but he had sufficient to give his wife quite a charming little flat off the Place des Tarnes, with two excellent maids, one of whom waited upon Greta, and this evening as Greta came in, her maid, Ernestine, came out of the bedroom to meet her.

"Oh, Madame," she said excitedly; "there are such lovely flowers come for you. They are sent from Monsieur Staire—oh, so lovely—for you to wear to-night and roses for the drawing-room orchids for you to-night, Madame—orchids for Madame's shoulder—oh, so perfect!" And for a moment Greta's languor left her.

"They are beautiful," she said. "They are my flowers, aren't they, Ernestine, mysterious, queer and beautiful?"

Ernestine nodded. She had a Frenchwoman's admiration for beauty coupled with brains, which Madame certainly had. She admired the way she ran her life, although she cordially detested her character. Still, Madame's character and Madame's little affaires were nothing to do with Ernestine.

After one more look at the flowers, Greta went on into her bedroom locked the door, and without even removing her frock, dropped full length on the bed, staring at the opposite wall.

Why in the world had she been such a fool? What had possessed her to behave as she had done that afternoon? It was seldom she blamed herself for anything, but just now there was no possibility of blaming anyone else. D'Arblaye's invitation to the gambling club had been most casual!—she need not have accepted; but partly out of curiosity, partly out of boredom, partly out of a wild hope that she might make money, she had gone with him and spent an afternoon playing chemin de fer . . . . . of all the stupid fools Greta hit her fist on the bed, cursing herself for being an idiot. Chemin de fer! And she had lost eighty thousand francs in three hours. Eighty thousand! Well, she could pay it. She could raise it, but it would cripple her hopelessly for the rest of the half-year. Lady Alice had helped her too often to be applied to once more, and to ask Ronald for any further allowance was impossible. He simply didn't have it. He would certainly have given it to her if he had, Greta knew that, and a certain rare feeling of shame overcame her for a moment, then passed. After all, what right had Ronald to keep her so short? Why could he not give her all the luxuries to which she had been accustomed.

It wasn't fair, when Toni would have everything. Toni was marrying a rich man with a big position. Toni's husband could take her everywhere, do everything for her; and Toni was not half so beautiful, not half so irresistible to men as she, Greta, was. What a fool she had been to marry Ronnie. She could have married anyone if she had waited. D'Arblaye was mad about her. He had even spoken of her divorcing Ronnie and marrying him, until she had laughed him out of this absurd idea. Divorce Ronnie! Ridiculous! Why she had not one shadow of love for D'Arblaye, although his fascination for her at times was undeniable. Besides, D'Arblaye was not to be trusted. If she should ever contemplate facing the divorce courts it would be far for bigger game. Oh, but this was all nonsense. What she was thinking about was that wretched debt.

Eighty thousand francs! What in the world would she do until the end of the half-year? It would take all her balance at the bank to pay that, and she must pay it. She couldn't owe D'ArbM laye any money. That was an impossible thing. Perhaps that had better be done before Ronnie came back. It wouldn't do for Ronnie to find out.

Yawning and Weary, she pulled herself up and went across to her little escritoire, took her check-book out of the centre drawer and wrote a check payable to herself, for ten thousand francs, endorsed it, and addressed the letter to Henri D'Arblaye. Then she rang the bell, and when Ernestine appeared, handed her the letter.

"Run out and post that yourself, Ernestine," she said.

Relieved that the check paying a small part of her debt had gone off, Greta sank back on the bed again. She couldn't go on like this. It was revolting. Her jealousy of Toni was mounting hourly. To-night she would see her. Toni would be the centre of attraction. Why hadn't she waited? She could have married Feodor. She could have married anybody, if only she hadn't been such a fool as to throw herself away on Ronnie. Of course, he was a dear, but he was poor. He never would make a great deal of money. He wasn't that type.

Ronnie was a gentleman and a very charming one. Ronnie loved her. She wished he did not. Men are tiresome when they were in love. They wanted so much. She wanted admiration, luxury, amusement, rather than the deep, passionate things of life; they did not appeal, they demanded too much in return.

About ten minutes to seven she heard Ronnie come in, heard him speaking to Ernestine in the hall, thought how noisy the flat was, how utterly unlike Lady Alice's beautiful apartment, or the home that Toni would have, and then, still hot and tired, and with a suspicion of a headache, got up and went into the bathroom.

It was more than an hour later that she came out, ready to go to her mother's dinner, and met Ronnie in the hall. It seemed that he was going to accompany her after all.

"Greta darling, I'm so sorry. Ernestine tells me you have a headache. Is it bad? My dear, how lovely you look. And those orchids! They're exquisite!"

Greta looked at him languidly, and smiled.

"Yes, aren't they? Feodor sent them this afternoon. And all those roses in the drawing-room. Very charming of him, wasn't it?"

"Feodor?" Ronnie echoed, and laughed. "Dear old chap, that's so like him. They're certainly your flowers, Greta. You're sure you don't feel too tired to go? I'm so sorry about your head."

Greta made a little impatient movement.

"Oh! I'm not tired at all, Ronnie, and my head will be better. Of course, I want to go; you don't suppose I want to stay here alone, do you? It's deadly enough in this flat all day."

His smile faded.

"Yes, I suppose it is," he said quietly "I'm sorry, Greta. Anyhow, you'll be going to Le Touquet next week with Lady Alice, and then on, I suppose, to Vernet?"

Greta drew her cloak around her shoulders.

"O, I suppose so," she said; "existing on far too few clothes, and not looking half so smart as the other women. That's the sort of thing one expects to do. Oh, well, it can't be helped. Don't look like that, Ronnie, it doesn't matter."

When they arrived at Lady Alice's Greta dropped her languor with her cloak in the hall, and went into her mother's room looking radiant.

The dinner was a great success. Toni, in a new frock of white and silver, was seated between Feodor and old Duc d'Arzes, her godfather, who was, like herself, in great spirits. She was amusing, rather daring, full of life, and Greta, every now and then, watched her enviously. Lucky little devil, Toni. What a life she would have, and what an attractive man she was marrying.

Something Toni said made everybody laugh and Greta looked sharply at Feodor. What did he think about his bride-to-be's smart remark, she wondered? But Feodor was watching her with a look in his eyes that she, with all her experience of men, had never yet seen in any man's eyes for herself. An expression at once of intense passion and intense tenderness—a look that suddenly made Greta not only envious of all Toni's wealth and youth and good luck, but envious of something very different, something infinitely more beautiful, more to be desired—for she knew that not even in Ronald's heart did she hold the place that Toni would hold in Feodor's.

Later there was talk of the move to Le Touquet. Mrs. Coleman, a very pretty English woman, who was staying in Paris and had taken a villa there for a fortnight, startled Toni by mentioning D'Arblaye's name to her hostess.

"I am going to have a very amusing party," she was saying. She mentioned half a dozen well-known names, all people amusing or celebrated, ending up with: "and Henri D'Arblaye. You all know him, don't you? Greta, I hear he is a special friend of yours."

Toni shot a look at her sister, and was relieved to see Greta's face remain quite calm.

"Oh, I know him very well," she said. "I dance with him a good deal. He's a beautiful dancer. Rather a bore, I think, though, otherwise."

"Do you?" Mrs. Coleman, raising her arched brows. "Why, my dear, I thought he was a most engaging vaccalier. I've constantly seen him with you. Aren't you jealous, Ronald?"

Ronald looked at his wife and laughed.

"Greta knows better than to make me jealous," he said, with marked serenity. "I should be a most terrible husband then. No, I'm not jealous. I don't dance, you see—at least very badly. Greta says I can't; and anyhow, I'm glad for her to have somebody to dance with, it would be so damned dull if she hadn't."

Lucy Coleman looked at Greta in mock envy.

"What a nice, kind, accommodating husband! I wish Jack were like that. You're very lucky, Greta. I hope you appreciate it."

Greta smiled, her long dark lashes almost hiding her eyes. "Oh, yes," she said; "I appreciate it. Ronnie is very charming; but I'm sure you will be bored with D'Arblaye if he's staying with you at Le Touquet."

"I'm never bored by anybody at Le Touquet," Mrs. Coleman retorted. "After all, one can dance and one can swim, and one can always gamble; and of course I'm a born gambler myself. Are you?"

THE MILK SITUATION

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir:

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, of Silverwood's Ltd., Peterborough, says in last evening's Examiner that there is not a spread of seven cents a quart between the price of milk to the producer and the price to the consumer.

As a producer, let me state actual figures from the milk cheque. Our April milk cheque pays us $1.23 per hundred pounds. Figuring that a gallon of milk weighs roughly, ten pounds, we get 3 and 3-40 cents per quart at the farm. But milk factories say a gallon weighs but 9 and ¾ pounds, thus the price we received at the farm was 2.9 cents per quart.

Mr. Gillespie credits us with only a 3.1 test. Now our herd is under the R.O.P. and is therefore tested regularly by a government tester and on his last visit not one cow in the herd tested lower than 3.3 and the majority of the herd and the heaviest milkers tested from 3.6 to 4.2.

What is wrong with the testing at Silverwood's or are the figures manipulated?

Standard milk has a test of 3.4 and according to our understanding of the law, factories are to pay 4 cents difference for each point above or below the standard. Readers can figure the prices paid from the above and can judge for themselves whether or not the milk from our herd will be selling as standard milk in the city.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space in The Examiner, I am,

yours truly,

Milk producer.

ADAM AND ATHEISM

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir:

We are about to enter one of the greatest contests the world has ever known, though very few realize that fact. While we are asleep at the switch the enemy has been marshalling his forces. It is well known that Russia has banned the Bible and every book of a genuine spiritual nature.

Reports come from Berlin that Germany is being throttled by atheism. From reports, American universities are seething with atheism or agnosticism. Britain is not exempt from this poison, which saps the life of every nation through which it flows. Atheism is also being taught in Canadian universities and we are doing nothing to prevent it, though within our power by protests to our goverments. At the D.A.R. a fine organization, secy. Hyde scored atheism and Mrs. Hobart listed "gains made by atheists to de-Christianize Christmas and Easter."

In my recent visit to Toronto, a Canadian friend went up in the air because I criticized an atheistic lawyer, who puts a premium on crime; who had addressed his club, likely for pay. About the same time an American atheist was lecturing in Tonotno, likely for a remuneration, ridiculing everything good and holy. Author of a History of Philosophy which left out the names of Christ and Paul in his list of ten and also of the 20 greatest minds of history, was soon to lecture at Massey Hall, likely for a princely sum. One thing is even more certain than death—that God will make his presence felt, even if he has to crush us to do so. He uses the forces of nature to accomplish his will. Already earthquakes are occuring in places that never experienced them before. Racketeers and gangsters are running certain cities and human blood-hounds are giving full vent to their passions, where human life is no safer than that of a dog. If nothing is done to stem this tide of corruption and violence, I would not wish to be living 100 years hence. Predictions as given in Revelation, I believe, will be fulfilled.

According to evolution, life on this planet has always been on the upgrade, from the amoeba or protozoon to "perfect man." Serpents were here before quadrupeds, as Nature provided them with means of locomotion for their new surroundings. But Gen. 3:14 just reverses the order, as before the Fall the serpent has legs; for "upon thy belly shalt thou go" was pronounced upon him as a curse.

We know little about our first father and that little is found in the Bible. I believe Adam was one of the brainiest men who ever lived. He had no Webster's or other unabridged dictionary to help him over his difficulties. He surely had to invent his own language or be taught it by God or the angels. I have met a few of the most brilliant men now living, but I do not think one of them could accomplish more than did Adam with his limited opportunites. "And Adam gave names to all cattle and to the fowl of the air, and to the beast of the field; and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof." Has any reader ever met any man with such ability? How many entomologists could tell, without looking in a book, the name of every insect in the world? Yet Adam must have given all these insects their names, as well as everything that flies and all animals. According to evolution, a few thousand years is far too short for any decided change to take place in any form of animal life; therefore, except for hybrids, there must have been as many forms of life then as now. Up to date, all archaeological discoveries have borne out the truth of all statements in Genesis, so we must presume all statements about Adam to be true. But three men exceeded his 930 years; Noah, 950 Jared, 962 and Methusaleh, 969. The years then were just as long as now, for astronomy is one of the most exact sciences.

It is known there was no eclipse thousands of years ago. In Roman Forum I saw evidence of an elevator shaft during Rome's grandeur; so Adam may have accomplished things that would surprise us. Beautiful flowers must have bloomed in Eden, to which he no doubt gave names. Wonderful trees would greet his view, asking him to name them. He had to make tools "to till the ground."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,

G. T. Bailey,

(Author "Poems of Life")

Woodman Bill Passes Senate Committee

OTTAWA, May 23.—The Canadian Woodmen of the World, Petition for a Private Bill was dealt with by the Committee of the Senate on Private Bills. The Bill provided for the adjustment of certain benefit funds and the funds for carrying on the business of the organization.

The Honorable Senator George Gordon introduced the bill, and the Honorable G. N. Gordon, K.C., of Peterborough, acted as solicitor for the Woodmen of the World in presenting the bill to the committee; Mr. Clair Jarvis, Head Consul Commander of the Woodmen of the World, at London, also appeared on behalf of the Woodmen's Association.

As a result of Mr. G. D. Finlayson, Superintendent of Insurance, appearing on behalf of the Dominion Government, observed that he was satisfied with the form of the amended bill and recommended that the Committee pass the bill unanimously.

Noranda Drops to New Low for Current Movement Below $10.

BASE METALS UNCHANGED.

TORONTO, Ont., May 23 (C.P.) — With total sales of 110,858 shares establishing a low turnover for the year, prices were just steady or moved lower on the mining market in the pre-holiday session to-day.

Noranda was also ft spot, dropping to a new low for the current movement below $10 and closing off nearly ¾ from last night. International Nickel was quiet and other base metals unchanged.

Mining Corp. displayed some strength in the gold section, selling above $2.20 for a time, but easing off on end to close at $2.16, up 6 on the day. McIntyre, in odd-lot trading, gained a half, but Lake Shore was down a quarter and Wright-Hargreaves off a couple. Barry Hollinger was under evident selling pressure and eased a cent or so to 11.

Oils were left almost entirely alone and showed little change at the close.

BELL TELEPHONE GAINS 2 POINTS

C.P.R., Loblaw "A" and Ford of Canada Were Fractionally Stronger.

OILS VARY SLIGHTLY.

TORONTO, Ont. May 23.—(C.P.)—Toronto Stock Exchange market idled through a listless session this morning. Trading was the slowest in a long time and the nature of the market was such that little importance could be attached to price changes. The exchange will now remain closed until Tuesday morning.

Bell Telephone made a recovery of two points selling up to 132. C. P.R. was fractionally stronger and Loblaw "A," Ford of Canada at 16¾, Steel of Canada at 29, were up less than a point.

On the other hand, International Nickel sold down ½ point to 12, Brazilian lost 1¼ points to 14¾, and Noranda eased nearly a point.

Oils varied only ⅛ or ¼ of a point and ended the session practically unchanged.

EGG PRICES RANGE 15 TO 25 CTS. DOZ.

Little Produce Offered on Outside Market—Flowers and Roots Plentiful.

Eggs were 15 to 25 cents a dozen on the farmers' market this morning and butter was 23 to 25 cents a pound. Hatching eggs of Barred Rock origin were 25 cents a dozen. Hens sold at 25 cents a pound and broilers at 40 cents, with little pound-and-a-half specimens at 75 cents each.

A lone turkey was offered at 30 cents a pound.

Asparagus sold at 3 bunches for 25 cents.

Downstairs on the open market there was no produce to speak of, the rain driving patrons and vendors away.

Flowers and roots were plentiful upstairs. Tulips might be purchased as 50 cents a dozen, and there were bleeding hearts and little perfumed posies of lily of the valley, as well as lovely nosegays of wild forget-me-nots.

Gladioli bulbs, were priced at 25 cents a dozen and roots of poppies, Canterbury bells, perennial sweet pea, lily of the valley, delphinium, tiger lily, blue rocket, columbine and pyretheum, or Persian daisy, might be bought at 10 and 15 cents each. Dahlia roots in the cacti and honeycomb varieties might be bought at 15 cents, also.

One of the lady vendors suggested that buyers should be encouraged through the press to come earlier to market, instead of keeping the supplies lingering to a late hour. Perhaps the public has a well-defined idea that the quotations for produce seem to experience a slight sinking at a late hour.

TENNIS MATCH HELD UP.

MONTREAL, Que., May 23.—(C.P.)—A steady drizzle of rain delayed proceedings at three o'clock this afternoon, the hour announced as the starting ttime of the first of the two singles matches of the Davies Cup tie to be played here to-day. Officials watched overcast skies anxiously and just before four o'clock announced the matches would start within a short time if the rain held off.

INTER-LISTED ISSUE WEAKENS DEPRESSES BALANCE OF LIST

Active Liquidation and Short Selling Reflects Feeling of Pessimism Over Market.

DULL TRADE NEWS.

TORONTO, Ont., May 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—Active liquidation and short selling reflected the feeling of pessimism which prevailed on Canadian stock exchanges this week.

The gloom that overshadowed the speculative market was due to a combination of events, rather than to any single development of an unfavorable character. Above all the market proved highly sensitive to the persistent decline of New York stocks, but weakness in the interlisted issues had a most depressing affect on other classes of shares. Bank stocks, oils, steels, base metal shares, utilities and industrials reacted to selling that originated in liquidation of weakened margin accounts, a nervous desire to get out of a market that had seemingly lost its recuperative powers, and to active short selling both in New York and Canadian centres.

Steel reports from the United States were distinctly unfavorable, copper metal quotations plumbed new depths, and if further evidence were required to indicate the uncertain economic outlook it was easily found in the threat of continued dumping of Russian grain on the world market.

There was some encouragement in reports of a seasonal improvement in mercantile trade at leading Canadian cities, and the sharp rise in Candian automobile production during April. Building was also expected to record expansion when the May statistics were compiled, and it was also realized that the worst news concerning dividend cuts and unfavorable corporation earnings statement is probably made known. Even more cheerful were reports indicating that commodities are showing greater resistance to the prolonged decline in prices for staple goods.

Response Disappointing.

The actual response of the stock market to these hopeful developments were disappointing however. International Nickel moved erratically during the week, but at 12 1-8 is only ¼ below last week's price. The shares were quiet on Friday but unlike other interlisted issues they appeared to be little affected by the New York decline. Brazilian Traction was another striking feature of firmness during the first half of the week.

Elsewhere the market presented a very different picture. Such leaders as Ford of Canada "A", down from 19 last week to its present price of 16-3-8, Bell Telephone, which has dropped from 140½ to 130, and Noranda at $19.50 compared with $22.75 last week, all indicate the extent of selling pressure. Massey Harris was dull but at 4½ is slightly below last week's figure, and Walkers shares at 5 1-8 compares with 5 3-8 week ago.

Steels were highly irregular and successive new low prices appeared in several issues.

Bank issues were sensitive to reports that earnings of the leading Canadian banking institutions will probably reflect business conditions of recent months. Bank of Commerce at 204 against 212 last week, Imperial Bank at 205 against 215 last week, Bank of Nova Scotia at 300 against 315, and Royal Bank at 248½ against 258½ last week, all are selling at new low prices for the year or longer.

Oils at New Lows.

Oils as a group were responsible for several new record low prices. British American shares sold down to 9¼ and closed at 9⅜ against 10¾ last week. Imperial Oil at 11 compares with 12 1-8 last week, and International Petroleum has declined from 11 3-8 to 10½. Prospects of gasoline price wars in the United States and the ever present problem of production curtailment were among the reasons why the oils encountered selling.

Mining issues were irregular although golds displayed some degree of resistance and again drew attention to the relative stability of these issues in relation to the base metal shares. In this connection a comparison of the prices of leading gold shares with their levels of May, 1929, reveals that Hollinger at $6.80, Lake Shore at $27.25, McIntyre Porcupine at $20.50, and Dome at $10.20 are well above the levels prevailing exactly two years ago.

FINISH CORN SEEDING SOON

Traders Look Forward to Almost Three Million Bushel Yield This Year.

TEXAS WHEAT NEWS.

(By John P. Boughan, Associated Press Market Editor.)

CHICAGO, Ill., May 23.—Planting of the 1931 corn crop in the United States is expected to be complete this coming week, and traders look forward to almost a three billion bushels yield. This reckoning is based on apparent likelihood that predictions of five per cent increase of acreage over 1st season will be fulfilled and that production will equal a ten-year average of 28.2 bushels an acre.

Prospects that movement of the new winter wheat crop will be under way in Texas before another fortnight is having a bearish influence on wheat. An exception is that settlement of new-style May wheat contracts has been laggard, and that shorts in such contracts appear nervous. Oat prices reflect increased acreage and the fact that oats have generally had ample moisture except in the northwest.

SOFTNESS IN NEW YORK LIST

Several Prominent Issues Drop 3 Points as Liquidation Continues.

CHEMICAL SHARES SOFT.

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 23. — Stocks crept lower in one of the quietest sessions of the exchange this year today.

A paralysis of speculative apathy settled upon the market in the short week-end session, but the trickle of liquidation that has been almost constantly present of late was sufficient to depress several prominent issues one of three points. The turnover has only about a half a million shares. A firmer tendency developed for a time in the first hour, under leadership of the rails but soon vanished.

Chemical shares were again a soft spot. Allied Chemical and Air Reduction lost about 2 points each. In the rails, early gains of about a point in New York Central, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific were cancelled, and Central finished 2 points lower. Union Pacific dropped 3 in a small turnover.

Steels were under some further pressure. Crucible dropped more than 3 points to a new low, then regained half its loss. U. S. Steel lost more than a point and Bethlehem sagged moderately.

In the Utilities, American lost about 2 points, and United Corp. sagged 1. In the industrial specialties Eastman was again heavy losing 2 points.

way as to assist the wheat exporting countries towards orderly marketing of their surplus."

Committee's Aims

The conference therefore decided to establish a committee of the conference, consisting of one representative of each state participating in the conference, to:—

(a) Submit to the governments of the countries participating in the conference a definite proposal for the establishment under the supervision of the committee of the conference a clearing house of information to serve the wheat exporting countries. For this purpose the committee shall be empowered to secure from the states represented on committee full information as to loadings and stocks of wheat and crop prospects, and thereby assist in orderly distribution of wheat in the world's markets.

This information should be provided so far as possible in the form prescribed and at the time fixed by the committee.

(b) Explore carefully all possible avenues for the greater utilization of this important cereal.

"The conference is convinced," the communique stated, "that the existence of its standing committee will develop contacts already established between all the exporting countries, and proposes that the committee should prepare and recommend a draft agenda for a further meeting of the conference, at which the countries represented here may enter upon consideration of such subjects as may then be deemed proper."

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Bawlf Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Wheat: The wheat market moved within a narrow range throughout the morning but was inclined to be erratic. small fractional gains were scored at the opening, then followed a dip in prices. For a time, prices were steady at about previous closing levels but therefrom improvement occurred and covering movement started which kept all futures at a fractional advance. Buying by continental and seaboard houses was responsible for the early upturn, but this did not amount to much. Export business overnight and yesterday morning was on a very light scale. A fair business was done at the close Thursday but subsequently interest petered out. The long week-end holiday at Liverpool in part accounted for this. Western weather was generally clear but the market showed more response to frost reports from the U. S. Southwest. This constituted the main bullish factor for the day. The strength originated in Chicago and was reflected here to a greater extent as the market went along. Outside interest was not conspicuous. Chicago houses did some selling here against purchases at Chicago which appeared to be further unwinding of spreads. Apart from this, trade was very largely a local affair. Liverpool cables were on the easy side, they might have firmed up on the small Australian shipments, but Argentine came through with clearances of 3,360,000 bushels for the week, which offset the Australian figures. Pit trade had many dull periods but towards the close an all round covering movement apparently in anticipation of possible developments in winter wheat areas sent futures higher. The market closed with net gains ranging 5-8 to 7-8 cents. The cash wheat demand was very quiet apart from a moderate interest displayed in the tough grades spreads on which were ¼ better. The flour trade showed no improvement in either domestic or export field.

Coarse Grains.—Trade in all coarse grains was light and with the exception of small amounts of oats and barley worked for export, very little business was done. There was no feature in the flax trade, light speculative support sending prices ¼ to ½ higher for the day.

ARTICLES USED IN 1830 ON EXHIBIT

Collection Loaned by Citizens of Montreal Makes Interesting Display.

MONTREAL, May 22 (By The Canadian Press).—Tufts of hair taken from all members of the family were skillfully woven together and attached to a central stem just like leaves on a branch and such an ornament was considered most valuable in the year 1830. This curious antique is on view among many hundreds of exhibits of a hundred years ago now on display at the McCord National Museum of McGill University. A widely varied and unusually absorbing collection of articles used in or about the year 1830 has been lent by the citizens of Montreal and has been arranged in attractive fashion by the museum staff.

Beautiful old clothes worn by the great grandfathers and great grandmothers of the present generation at the university seem to be in as fine condition now as they were then, and there are dresses in both silk and satin that date from the year 1827' A large collection of fans, very important in those days, is included, along with curious old broaches, rings, jewellery and ornaments n which great grandmothers used to deck themselves out.

The hair ornaments were very much in vogue and were used as necklaces, wristlets, and decorative wreaths, which were daintily placed in the hair. When the lady of 1830 went out driving she often wore what was called an "ugly," a sort of frame that was used in front of the hat' Perchance as well she would don a "tibbet," which was a light scarf; and she would probably also wear some dainty silk mittens, many pairs of which can be seen in the exhibit. Paisley shawls and Paisley pins to hold them on are also to be found, as well as old parasols which were used in those far off days'

LACK OF RECRUITS FOR SOCIAL SERVICE

Dr. C. A. Dawson Agrees With Miss Whitton's Remarks About University Training Schools.

MONTREAL, May 22 (By The Canadian Press).—Lack of trained, experienced social workers is partly due to the fact that there are few students inclined to this avocation who are able to pay their way through the two-year course at the university, in the opinion of Dr. C. A. Dawson, head of the school for Social Workers at McGill University. Commenting on the report made by Miss Charlotte Whitton, executive director of the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare in Ottawa recently this McGill professor felt that her remarks about university training schools were about correct.

Miss Whitton was reported, in part, as saying: "Admission and training requirements have not yet been standardized in any degree commensurate with those of the other professions; the number of graduates has been small and the emergence from this group of competent executives smaller still. Even when a community or government is convinced of the need and value of trained experienced social workers it has become an almost impossible task to obtain them."

At McGill the major difficulty has been in getting the right kind of students in large enough numbers to take up this work. Dr. Dawson felt that the facilities at the school were sufficient to train many more than are now enrolled, and when a larger number of students took the courses, that competent social workers would be turned out. It could in no way be said that the avocation was overcrowded at the present time.

The McGill school has tried, as much as possible, to keep pace with new methods and ideas in their training courses, and at the present time certain important additions to the curriculum are under consideration to bring the work more up to date.

NEW LOWS SET AT NEW YORK

Stocks Decline for Three Successive Days Under Bear Traders' Attacks.

HEAVY LIQUIDATION.

(By John L. Cooley, Associated Press Financial Writer.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 23.—Stocks reflected the pessimism of investors and professional traders this week declining to new lows for the bear market on three successive days.

On the bond side of the trading floor and in the over-the-counter dealings, United States government securities soared to new highs, while other prime investment issues reduced their yields, but it was still difficult to stir up much enthusiasm for second grades.

The decline by many stocks was violent in general, the drop was sufficiently large to have an unfavor-able psychological effect. United States Steel and American Can both broke below $100 a share on Monday. American Telephone was heavily liquidated, losing nearly 9 points in one session. Yields on the best grade stocks increased substantially the spread between their percentages and on the return to the highest rated bonds, but investment buying was of a cautious nature and most of the market's support came from covering. Shorts who wanted to withdraw could do so without much effect on the price level.

Rail stocks which have long been the leaders of the decline, rallied Thursday when the eastern executives came to their agreement on a proposal for higher freight rates, and pulled up other groups, so that the market had its first net gain in a fortnight.

Weakness of commodity prices is adding to the perplexities and problems of the current depression phase.

Automobile output seems to be making its seasonal peak this month the steel reviews said demand from this source was already tapering off.

VIOLIN'S CROON IS HEARD ABOVE RAGE OF STORM

Schooner Governor Parr is Believed to be Still Afloat.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 23. (By the Canadian Press)—Stories of ghost ships belong to the elder days of sail, when clippers were clippers and Davy Jones had a closer nodding acquantance with sailormen than he has to-day. But at least one such tale has become current within the last decade. The ship concerned is the Governor Parr, built at Parrsboro, N.S., around 1920, abandoned at sea by all but Captain Angus Richards some years later, and still presumably driving up and down the ocean lanes like Kipling's derelict—

"Man made me, and my will
Is to my maker still,
Whom now the currents con, the rollers steer—
Lifting forlorn to spy
Trailed smoke along the sky,
Falling afraid lest any keel come near!

The story was told to New York reporters by Arthur Knowlton, made of the fourmaster Whitebelle, also a Parrsboro-built vessel, as he and Captain T. B. Flowers sat on the Whitebelle's deck cargo of laths at the Fifty-Second Street pier.

"Ten years ago there were dozens of fourmasters like this," said Captain Flowers—ten years can work many changes at sea—"but now there's only one other Canadian four-master besides the Whitebelle. That's the Avon Queen." They were wrecked, abandoned one or two burned, he added.

"There were really three left; what about the Governor Parr?" queried Knowlton. Captain Flowers looked startled, frowned, and said nothing.

"The Governor Parr was built in Nova Scotia, same time, same place as this one," continued the mate. "Like a sister ship. She was coming from England a couple of years ago. Ran into a gale 200 miles off the coast of Nova Scotia. Her captain was AngusRichards. The crew took to the boats. Richards was not with them. Some said he was washed overboard—others said no, he had gone below and was playing his fiddle at the last.

"The Governor Parr was loaded with lumber. She couldn't sink. In the next few days three steamers sighted her, tried to tow her in, had to give up weather too bad. Since then the Governor Parr has been sighted nearly 100 times. She drifted across the Atlantic, down the West African coast then back across South America. She was awash, but she wouldn't sink.

"Always she would show up in some awful storm. And they say someone would be playing a violin over the sound of the wind. I know it sounds funny, but I heard it myself. Down in the Caribbean. I was on another schooner, a year ago, bringing up salt from Turks Island. Never was so scared in my life."

The mate said he thought the Governor Parr was still afloat, but that worms eating the wood, ought to cut her to pieces soon.

The Whitebelle is something of a "ghost ship" herself, having been given up as lost by insurance and shipping men two years ago, while she lay on her side on the inner ledges of Beaver Harbor, only to be salvaged, rebuilt and reconditioned by Captain Flowers, and placed back in active service.

BANK MANAGER GETS TWO YEARS

H. C. Bowman Pleads Guilty to Stealing $12,900 of Institution's Funds.

SURRENDERED TO POLICE.

ARCOLA, Sask., May 23 (C.P.).—Swift justice was meted out here yesterday when Henry C. Bowman, former manager of the Antler branch of the Bank of Montreal, was sentenced to two years and two months in Prince Albert Penitentiary for the theft of $12,900 from the bank funds. Bowman appeared for preliminary hearing, elected speedy trial, and appeared to plead guilty and be sentenced during the afternoon.

Evidence showed that Bowman had obtained two months' leave of absence. He went to the United States and during his absence the shortage was discovered. Bowman returned voluntarily and was arrested. The district Judge imposed a light sentence because of a previous good character, a good war record, and ill-health.

HINTS FOR FANS IN BIG CONTEST

READ INSTRUCTION BOOK

If you are not having uniformly good luck in taking snapshots, perhaps the following suggestion which is made especially to those who plan to enter The Examiner Photo Contest, will be of value.

The correct setting for a folding camera, when taking pictures in ordinary sunlight, is 1K25th of a second with the lens out a f. 11.

Set the dial above the lens at one or 25, set the dial below the lens at 11. Using this as a guide, it is comparatively simple to judge when to open the diaphram wider for poorer light or to close it more in brilliant light such as beach scenes and distant views in glaring sunlight.

Read carefully the instruction book that came with your camera, for it contains much valuable information for the one who would take good snapshots.

LET PICTURES TELL A STORY

A Few Pointers to Those Who Would Enter Snapshot Contests.

WORDS OF CAUTION

Now that the amateur photographer is again abroad in the land will the gentleman or lady of the camera permit a follower of the art to add a few words of caution'?

Let your pictures tell a story. If they fail in this respect your work will not appeal to the lovers of this delightful side issue to a summer-time in the open. Still life of itself held nothing. A basket of fish, a fishing rod, will tell the story if the boy in the tow-string trousers, torn chip hat, bare feet and the regulation grin is present. The story that the picture tells is the highlight and should not be overlooked. Without the story, the work, no matter how successful viewed from the artistic point, will fall flat as a dud and fizzle out.

Be Sure to Tell a Story

A gnarled, ancient oak of itself might or might not tell a story. But a kiddie in the crotch of the venerable tree, another at the foot of the tree and looking up at the crotched kiddie and you have succeeded in telling a story. A laddie dressed in his new baseball uniform and leaning upon a bat might look like business—but it isn't. Pose him as you have many times seen how Babe Ruth stands up to the plate with the familiar look of determination on his face and—there you have a story of action that will go far towards winning a prize.

A land-locked lake looks pretty surrounded with its curving shores of little bays and inlets. So does a chromo of the same. Put a boat, no matter what kind of a boat, on the shore, half out and half in, and two or three people trying to get the craft afloat and—there you have a story that tells itself without words of description.

A tent without a bunch of fellows cooking their dinner is nothing to brag about. Put the tent on the shore of the lake, if one is handy, with the flap open to show the cots and—well, you have got something worth while. You can picture tent life in the open in your back yard and win a prize. But make it tell its own story. The story is the thing to catch the fancy—of not the King, but the judge who knows the real ins and outs of amateur photograghy, from A to Z. Go to it. Go tell a story.

HOLIDAY TRIP IS AIDED BY KODAK

Considered as Important as Fishing Rod or a Swimming Suit.

ALLY OF ALL SPORTS

Nowadays no one would think of going on any real outing without a camera. The Kodak is considered as important as the fishing rod or the swimming suit or the football ticket on any late summer or early autumn trip. We have learned, from experience, that the camera adds much to the pleasure of an outing, not only at the time, during the fun of making pictures, but also when we get the prints, and later on—months yes years, afterwards.

Along with swimming, canoeing, fishing, hiking and kindred sports, photography has its acknowledged place. Picture making is not only a pastime in itself, but is the natural ally of all sports, and it alone can instantly record the others in lasting mementos.

Great is the satisfaction in telling about the size of the fish that was caught before breakfast and then exhibiting a photograph that proves the statement. No one seems to believe a fish story without graphic illustration.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE HAVE ANNUAL MEET

Apsley Branch Elect Officers For Year—Auditors Report Given.

APSLEY, May 23. (Examiner Correspondence.)—The monthly meeting of the Apsley Branch of the W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. J. Downingon Wednesday, May 6, at 2 o'clock.

The meeting which was fairly well attended was opened in the usual way.

The secretary treasurer was instructed to order fencing for the cemetery. The kind of fencing having been decided on at a public meeting held some time ago.

The secretary read a letter from Mrs. H. Bertram, of Stoney Creek, who will be our summer speaker here on Monday, June 1st at 2 o'clock, in the OrangeHall.

The subject chosen for the talk by Mrs. Bertram was "Conducting a meeting and how to utilize the talent of the members."

Mrs. Dean very kindly offered to entertain the speaker during her stay in Apsley.

This finished the monthly meeting after which the annual meeting was held.

The auditor's report was read by Mrs. R. Tucker, who reported everything in good order and a balance of $23.35 on hand. Mrs. R. Tucker and Mrs. N. E. James were auditors.

The secretary then gave a report of the work done during the year, which was very satisfactory.

The president, Mrs. Stan. Windsor, gave a short address on the work accomplished and in closing thanked the members for their co-operation during her term of office.

Officers elected are as follows:

President, Mrs. Stanley Windsor; 1st Vice president, Mrs. Charles Smith; 2nd Vice president, Mrs. Will Johnson; Secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Wellington Lean; District Director, Mrs. Roland Tucker; Branch Directors, Mrs. Owen James; Mrs. John Tucker, Mrs. Allen Coones, Miss Knaggs; Representatives to District Annual meeting, Mrs. Stanley Windsor, Mrs. Wellington Lean, Mrs. Roland Tucker; Organist, Mrs. James Downing& Program Committee, Mrss Knaggs, Mrs. Roy Brown, Miss O'Brian, Mrs. Tol. Tucker.

This committee was asked to draft program for year and present it at the June meeting. This concluded the business and Mrs. Downing and Mrs. Dean served lunch which had been provided by Mrs. Dean.

$100,000 IN KODAK CONTEST PRIZES WITH EXAMINER ADDING SPECIAL AWARDS FOR BEST SNAPS SUBMITTE

Contest Opened May 1st and Runs Until End of August.

OPEN TO AMATEURS

Six Subject Classes Invite Your Camera and Your Ability.

Monday's holiday brings a timely reminder to every camera owner that the international Kodak Contest with its aggregate awards of $100,000 is already under way. To stimulate interest in this competition and also to excite local photographic art to new and higher standards, The Examiner is again conducting an incidental "Snapshot contest" for amateurs in the five counties of Peterborough, Hastings, Northumberland, Durham and Victoria.

Both competitions embrace the same period, from the first of May until the end of August. Every season is a Kodak but the summer exerts a special appeal through the long, pleasant days in the great outdoors with their infinite variety of subjects for photographs, for the amateur with a camera never knows when he may come across a scene that might win for him the grand prize in the international competition.

Six subject classes invite your camera and your ability to take pictures. They include child life, sport scenes, still life, animals, portraits. It might be a scene in a city street or a country lane, some beauty of woods or field, some domestic scene, and of these subjects afford endless opportunities, depending only on the discerning eye behind the camera and the average skill that is necessary to operate the lens and shutter.

The main facts are that these competitions are open to amateurs only and the period continues until August 31.

The Examiner's district competition comprising the five counties offers the following prizes for the best snapshots for the same subjects as in the international competition:—

|---|---|
| 1st prize | $10.00 |
| 2nd prize | 7.50 |
| 3rd prize | 5.00 |

In both these competitions you may submit as many snapshots as you wish. Why not decide to enter this contest at once. The longer the season and the more extensive your experience this summer in looking for attractive subjects and actually photographing them, the more you increase your chances of winning a prize.

And in the international contest highest award means fame for the winner.

SCHOOL BOARD HAS BUSY MEET

Plans for New Lavatory System Are Explained to Havelock Members by Architect.

Question Teacher's Action.

HAVELOCK, Ont. May 23. (Examiner Correspondence).—The regularg meeting of the school board was held in the school room Thursday evening with a full membership present. Principal G. F. Coates asked permission to purchase the necessary supplies for the June examination. His request was granted on motion of trustees Crawford and Post. A A letter from Hornsby & Allan, Peterborough architects was ordered filed. This was in connection with the plans for the new system. It was decided that trustee Leeson will give his report as delegate to the Educational Convention at the next meeting when it is expected here will be more time.

The following accounts were passed: A. Leeson, expenses attending convention, $15.50; Hydro Commission, $9.45; Hornsby & Allan, for drawing plans and specifications for the new system, $75. A bill of $b from Fred McAdam for drawing away twenty-one loads of ashes from the school grounds was left over until the next meeting.

Plans Explained

Mr. Hornsby, architect of Peterborough, was present with the plans and specifications for the proposed new lavatory system and took a great deal of time to explain these plans to the members of the board and the press. The system described is the last word in modern lavatory systems and will be installed at an extremely low cost. The basement will be used to house the system and the sewage disposal bed, and seepage well are to be on Oak street on the property south of the town hall. The water to operate the system will be pumped from the town drain on Oak street, by a rotary electric pump installed in the basement of the town hall. Here there will be a 1300 gallon tank, and an additional reservoir of 1000 gallon capacity in the school. This will insure an adequate supply of water under all conditions, but a smaller pump of the piston type will be used for the drinking water and so arranged that it can be switched over if anything should occur to prevent the use of the larger pump. To provide the necessary separate entrances for the boys and girls, the east wall of the hall downstairs will be moved out a few feet and the appearance of the main entrance greatly improved in general.

Up to Council

The plans have been approved by the Department of Education and it only remains for the council to pass the necessary money and the work will start as soon as school is over. This is the third time within two years that the board has made requisition to the village council. The plans called for an expenditure of $7,000. This included a spacious two-storey structure on the north side of the school to house the system, with two rooms above for the teachers and a science room. The installing of the system in the basement does away with this additional building and it is thought will cost in the neighbourhood of $4,000, plus he amounts of special grants, amounting in all to $6,000. Mr. Leeson was in favour of asking the council for $8,500, but the board decided to make the amount $4,000 and play safe.

"That this board make requisition to the village council for the sum of $4,000, for the purpose of installing a flush water toilet system in the school, and the board as a whole attended the meeting in support of the request" was motion by Ketchen and Crawford that carried.

A bill for $75 from Hornsby & Allan, architects was then presented. This is the cost of the plans and specifications for the new lavatory system. It was paid on motion of trustees Smith and Post. It was decided to have the new plans left in the office of the chairman until they are needed and to call a special meeting after the board meets the council.

Trustee Fred Post said he could not understand why Mr. Coates was allowed to push some of the brighter pupils into higher classes and make some of the more unfortunate ones drop certain subjects after carrying them for a greater part of the year. By doing this M. Post claimed they are keeping some in the school much longer than is necessary.

Mr. Coates had left the meeting just previous to this and the matter was left over until the next meeting, when he will be called upon to explain his reason for doing this.

EARL JELLICO ISSUES MESSAGE

Urges People of Empire to Face Problems With True Sympathy, Comradeship.

BE WORTHY OF DESTINY.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 22.—The Admiral of the Fleet, Earl Jellicoe, as President of the Empire Day movement, has issued the following Empire Day message:

"The great honor of succeeding the late Earl of Meath as president of the Empire Day movement has fallen to my lot and, following his example, I send you greetings on the occasion of Empire Day.

"The spirit in which the celebration of May 24th was founded was never more necessary than to-day, when the British Empire is confronted with most difficult and weighty problems, and it is my earnest hope that the people of the Empire will face those problems with true sympathy and comradeship.

"We have a vast responsibility, the greatest Empire the world has ever known has been handed down to us by our forefathers. It is an Empire which stands for all that is good in the modern world. Let us be worthy of our destiny."

SAFETY CAMPAIGN BEING STAGED BY CEMENT PLANT AT LAKEFIELD

New "No Accident" Flag Will Be Unfurled Over Building on June 1.

SPIRITS HIGH.

LAKEFIELD, May 23 (Examiner Correspondence). — The Lakefield Plant (No. 7) of the Canada Cement Co. has again enrolled in the June "No-Accident Campaign," sponsored by the Portland Cement Association, and the following statement has been given out by the Safety Engineer.

No accidents is the aim of local cement plant workers. Again we join the annual campaign in an effort to operate without a lost time accident during the month of June.

No accidents during June is the slogan of the workers here. As in previous years, the local plant of the Canada Cement Company has enrolled in the June No-Accident Campaign sponsored by the Portland Cement Association. This is the sixth annual campaign put on by the association and is an international affair, inasmuch as it comprises plants from Canada, U.S.A., Mexico and Cuba. The P.C.A., of which the local plant is a member, directs this international campaign with the cooperation of national and state labor departments.

In previous years the local plant has done exceptionally well, the employees being quite enthusiastic, but this year their enthusiasm surpasses all others. A safety committee of fourteen members has been appointed and these men will direct all departmental activities. A new safety flag, donated by the P.C.A. will fly over the plant on June 1st. This flag will be flying until such time as an accident occurs, when it will be hauled down. "We are in hopes it will fly till it falls apart," Mr. E. W. Bailey, superintendent of the local plant said. The spirit of the men is high and everyone of them giving his wholehearted co-operation. Everything humanly possible is being done to prevent accidents, not only for June but throughout the year. If all the mills entered in this No-Accident Campaign have the same co-operation from the employees as this one has, then the 1931 effort will far surpass any previous achievement.

Mr. Bailey further states that under the leadership of the P.C.A., cement companies throughout the nation have reduced accidents so far during the past few years that this is justly recognised to be the safest of the major industries. We are continually carrying on a campaign which is annually decreasing both lost time and fatal accidents. Last year there was a reduction of all kinds of accidents to the extent of 37 per cent. in member companies of the P.C.A., and since 1923 there has been a reduction of 83 per cent. Of the past June campaigns, on one occasion only have we been compelled to haul down our flag. The Lakefield plant is considered one of the most up-to-date and as far as it is possible to make it, a safe place for men to work.

Mrs. L. M. Montgomery Macdonald, Celebrated authoress.

286 Cash Prizes for Canadian District* Alone . . .

Read these simple rules

1 This contest is strictly for the amateur. Any resident of Canada, Newfoundland or Saint-Pierre and Miquelon is eligible, excepting individuals and families of individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, commercial finishing or professional use of photographic goods.

2 Contest starts May 1, closes August 31, 1931. (Also see No. 14.)

3 An entrant may submit as many pictures as he pleases and at as many different times as he pleases; provided that the pictures have been made on or after May 1, 1931, that they are mailed under postmark dated not later than August 31, 1931, and that they reach the Prize Contest Office not later than September 7, 1931.

4 Any Kodak, Brownie, Hawk-Eye or other camera and any brand of film, chemicals and paper may be used in making pictures for this contest. A contestant need not own the camera. The finishing, of course, may be done by his dealer. Pictures may be made from roll film, cut film or film pack negatives. But pictures made from plate negatives are not eligible.

5 Regular-sized contact prints and also enlargements are eligible. No picture is to measure more than 8 inches the long way. Prints shall be made from unretouched negatives only. No colouring or artwork of any kind shall have been done on either negative or print. Prints shall be neither mounted nor framed. Do not write even your name on either front or back of pictures submitted.

6 Enclose an entry blank with each lot of pictures. Mail entries to Prize Contest Office, Canadian Kodak Co., Limited, Toronto 9, Ontario. Use the entry blank in last column, obtain others from your dealer, copy the form, or write to the Prize Contest Office for a supply.

7 No entries can be returned. All mailings are at owner's risk. Do not send negatives with entries, but be sure they are in your possession and hold them ready to send on request.

8 All pictures will be judged solely on general appeal—the interest they arouse. Photographic excellence or technique will not be the deciding factor in determining the prize winners.

9 The decision of the judges shall be final. In the event of a tie, the advertised award shall be paid to each of the tying contestants.

10 Each prize-winning picture, together with the negative, and the first and sole rights to the use thereof for advertising, publication, or exhibition in any manner, becomes the property of the Kodak Company.

11 Winner of first prize in each class, including winner of the District Grand Prize, will automatically enter the International Competition.

12 Although no entrant may win prizes on more than one picture, he may win several prizes with the one picture. Naturally, the more pictures sent in, the greater the chance that one of them will win a prize—or prizes.

Conditions 13 and 14 which follow, apply to the offer of special provincial prizes for the best child pictures made and entered in May and June, 1931. (See prizes above).

14 Special Child Picture Contest closes on June 30, 1931. Entries must be mailed under postmark not later than that day and must reach Prize Contest Office not later than July 7, 1931.

All entries in Child Picture Contest, including winners, and all child pictures made and entered in May, June, July and August are eligible for prizes in Class A at the end of the general contest.

Important! The entrant need not specify the classes into which his pictures should go. The Prize Contest Office will place each picture in the class in which it is most likely to win. No explanatory letter is necessary.

Winners will be notified as soon as possible after the judging takes place. In order that judges shall not know the name of the maker of any picture, entries will be filed numerically.

Each entry will be acknowledged by a postal card bearing the number given thereto. However, please do not interpret this as an invitation to write about entries as the Prize Contest Office cannot undertake correspondence.

The Kodak Company may offer to purchase pictures that do not win prizes.

Clip this entry blank

Enclose this blank with your entries and mail to Prize Contest Office, Dept. 231, Canadian Kodak Co., Limited, Toronto 9, Ontario.

Do not place your name on either the front or the back of any picture.

CHAPLIN MAKES OWN MUSTACHE

New One Every Day He Worked on Studio Set.

BEGAN IN 1918

The name of the greying gentleman with the cockney accent in the office of United Artists was Alfred Reeves and he had been associated with Charlie Chaplin as an "uncle-sort-of-thing" since 1910, when they were together in London vaudeville.

"You know," Mr. Reeves explained, "Chaplin's costume, originally was a satire-sort-of-thing on the English gentleman. The English actor, especially. All the actor needed to be dressed up was a clean collar, a shave and a cane. He could be without a bob, but he'd still consider himself all togged out with some place to go."

Charlie had two comedy parts during his connection with the Reeves troupe. One presented him as this village busybody and the other as the inebriated swell. His famous tramp character which he was later to develop at the Keystone studios had its beginnings here. The costume was never seen in its entirety until he reached the screen, but in his part of the "broken-down swell," Mr. Reeves pointed out, lay the beginnings of the idea. The big shoes, cane and baggy pants were used in his caricature of shabby English gentility.

Charlie started making his Keystone comedies in Los Angeles in 1918 and he never deviated from the tramp character which he introduced in his first film. He made "A Dog's Life" and many other films, then "The Kid."

"Somebody told me once," went on Mr. Reeves, "that I was as English as 'ell a crown. Maybe that's why Charlie likes to have me around. I'm his Dutch uncle, sort of. When Charlie's working he likes a friendly atmosphere on the spot. I see that he isn't worried with business until he's finished.

"They say Charlie is temperamental, but he isn't, really, alongside of some stars I could mention. The thing is, he doesn't like to be bothered with certain matters while he's working."

There was a sentimental story in a paper, the Uncle-Sort-of-Thing went on, about Charlie's mustache. It said that Charlie had used the same mustache since the beginning.

"There's no sense in it at all, at all Charlie puts on a fresh mustache every single day he's working. He twiddles a little hair with his finger and a comb, a crepe hair or gyp, as we say in show business, and there is his famous mustache. At the end of the day he takes it off and flecks it into the air with his finger."

Charlie may like to travel, Mr. Reeves confided, but his heart is in Hollywood.

SCREEN AND STAGE NOTES

Just before he left Hollywood for New York, his latest picture, "Alexander Hamilton," having just been completed, George Arliss signed a new contract calling for his appearance in Warner pictures exclusively for the next three years. Mr. Arliss will sail for England May 29. In England he will spend his holiday at his cottage on St. Margaret's Bay, coast of Kent.

After a long absence from the screen, Sessue Hayakawa is to appear with Anna May Wong and Warner Oland in Paramount's version of "Daughter of the Dragon," a Sax Rohmer mystery. Hayakawa has been touring the world in his own dramatic and vaudeville productions since his retirement from the screen.

At the age of 72 a man named Samuel Marx announced suddenly that he felt sort of stage-struck and wanted to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious sons, the Four Marx Brothers. So he was permitted to take his debut last week, assisting the boys in a comedy bit for "Monkey Business," which the comedians are now making at the Paramount studios in Hollywood. The elder Mr. Marx expressed satisfaction that, unlike many actors, he has begun a promising film career with the full approval of his family. He was a business man before his sons became famous. The boys received their stage training from their mother, Winnie Palmer, actress and vaudeville producer, who wrote and staged the brothers' first act, for which they received a gross income of $50 a week.

Word comes from Hal Roach that Marshall Neilan will direct the eight Zasu Pitts-Thelma Todd comedies listed for next year's release. After a pause of six weeks, work has been started on the new schedule, which calls for forty short comedies. Included in the group are eight Laurel and Hardy items, eight Our Gang comedies, eight Charley Chase pictures and eight subjects in the new Boy Friends series.

Cecil B. De Mille has just completed his fifty-seventh motion picture. The picture is "The Squawman," which, incidentally, was one of the earliest silent pictures made in California. The producer plans an extended European vacation.

Disney's Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse characters are widely admired in Czechoslovakia, a correspondent in Prague writes. In Gablonz, the glass-manufacturing district of North Bohemia, the Disney creations have stirred up a lively controversy. It seems Gablonz manufacturers have produced Mickey and Minnie figures in glass form. Mr. Disney lately informed the industrialists that he has awarded the license to reproduce his drawings to one Gablonz concern. A committee of Gablonz manufacturers and explorters has been selected to enter into negotiations with Disney in the matter. Meanwhile history waits for the verdict.

The rather permanent combination of Wheeler, Woolsey and Dorothy Lee is now rehearsing for the new Radio comedy, "Full of Notions."

SMOOTH FLOORS A FILM HAZARD

Most Accidents Caused by Actors Slipping in Ballroom Scenes.

AIR STUNTS SAFER

Statistics of studio casualties indicate a greater proportion of production accidents through actors slipping on polished ballroom floors than through such daredevil exploits as airplane tail-spins. Injuries to cast and personnel are less frequent in airplane pictures than in society films; Westerns top the fatality list. When the bad man breaks away from the sheriff's pursuing posse in approved Western fashion youngsters cheer wildly, but public liability underwriters frown.

Despite the apparent recklessness of the feats involved, air stunts are safer than walking across Times Square, New York. There's no special technique involved. Charles Delaney, former army birdman, who has flown stunt planes in more than 200 pictures without even a forced landing, has a featured role in Sono Art-World Wide's latest Thrill o' Drama, "Air Police," and explains this unusual state of affairs as follows: "There are fewer accidents in the air during the production of a stunt plane picture for the simple reason that the producers insist on the best possible flying equipment piloted by the best free-lance aviators in the business. Even the parachutes used in the current film were scrapped immediately after they were returned to the warehouse."

Canadian Makes Record Run

DRIVER MAKES TRIP TO CALIFORNIA IN 72 HOURS

James Ross (inset), chauffeur for James Ryrie, has four times made the round trip from Oakville, Ont., to Pasadena, California, a distance of 3,155 miles, his running time for the trip there has been as low as 72 hours. The trail, according to Mr. Ross, is shorn of its old time hazards and the motorist no longer need carry tins of oil and gas to see him through. The map shows the transcontinental route taken by Mr. Ross.

Cleveland Plane Forced Down

THREE UNHURT WHEN AEROPLANE CRASHES

When a Cleveland aeroplane, piloted by C. W. Myers, well known pilot, was forced down by trouble in the fuel pump the three passengers, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Hubbell and Carl Brookins, and the pilot, escaped with no injury more serious than slight scratches. The pilot glided two miles to alight in a field near Vinemount.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION IS HELD IN BETHEL UNITED CHURCH

Rev. Mrs. McIntosh From O.R.E.C. is Principal Speaker at Gathering.

SPLENDID ADDRESS.

WARSAW, May 23. (Examiner Correspondence.)—A fair number attended the Sunday School convention for Dummer on Wednesday afternoon and evening at Bethel Church.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson opened the afternoon session and then handed it to the president, E. N. McDonald.

Besides those interested in Sunday School work, Ninth Line school was represented by seven, Warsaw Presbyterian by four, Bethel United by twelve, Carmel by two, Zion by five, Cottersloe by eight, Warsaw United by six, at the roll call in the afternoon.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh was the speaker from the O.R.E.C. He defined an expert as an ordinary person away from home.

He stressed the good of these conferences in bringing people together as part of a great organization. Approved of reports, as they give encouragement to weaker schools and five others a good opportunity to see where they might do better.

A review of the Township was made to see if a Sunday school were needed at any other point. Since the Ninth Line school has been re-organized, there is a school within reasonable distance for all.

A question was asked about organized classes. The speaker approved of them, though if rightly carried out they strengthened themselves and the Sunday school to which they belonged. He recognized the danger that they might be independent of the or any Sunday school, and thus lose the benefit of being part of a Sunday school and of helping others. It should unite for opening exercises with the main Sunday school should aid the projects with funds and take its part in all school work. They thus influence the little ones. The main purpose of Sunday school is to bring the little ones to Jesus, but the early teen age, is the time for actual decision. From the first the children should be taught the knowledge of Christ, the stories of the Bible and the knowledge of it, so that when they reach the age of discernment, they may readily accept Christ because they know Him. The Sunday school should train to produce mature Christians in action in the church. Even when becoming church members they are not mature Christians. To be that, they must study the Bible, be more and more enlightened, be trained for duties in the community and in the church. Living as Christians in the community they need to recognize they stand for something in the community and must understand community needs and get light in the issues of the franchise. A good man may never have realized all the implications of a mature Christian."

Between sessions Bethel ladies served a splendid supper. A social time, rest and games were enjoyed until 7:30 p.m. when there was community singing of hymns. After the opening exercises led by Mr. McDonald, the secretary read the report of nominating committee which was upheld.

Officers for following year are, president, E. N. McDonald, vice president, Dr. Munro, secretary treasurer, Ivan Drain; Superintendent of girl's work, Miss Emily Drain; Home Department, Mrs. Chester Hamilton; Young people's work, Mrs. T. H. Crowe; children's department, Mrs. David Miller; missionary work, Mrs. George Taylor; teacher Training, Rev. J. W. Wilkinson.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh gave a short address to the new officers. Mrs. Charter Hamilton and Miss Doris Payne gave a duet.

In Rev. Mr. MacIntosh's address to the convention, he urged special study of leadership, advised the use of graded lessons as they were so prepared to meet the needs of the child at the age indicated. Teachers should know pupils and also their families.

In teaching lessons illustrated from things that have happened during the week, and from things children know about, the familiar with the common things of life, then one can teach. Jesus knew the book of nature; tHe constantly referred to nature, Jesus knew the book of human nature, and consequently, understood people and said appropriate things to the various people. Jesus knew the Bible, the Old Testament, which he could and did quote where needed, and Jesus knew the book of his Father's will communed often with him and obeyed his will.

No one but a Christian should be suggested to teach Christ. Character is not needed to teach mathematics, but it is needed to teach character. Consecration, fellowship with Jesus, knowledge of the Father's will, not only leaning on the cross, but bearing it, are needed for the successful teacher.

Mr. Wilkinson said a few words of appreciation of the helpful and inspiring talks given by Rev. Mr. McIntosh.

NUTHALL WINS TO-DAY

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, May 23 (A.P.)—Betty Nuthall and Eileen Bennett Whittingstall to-day won the Women's Doubles championships of the French hard court tennis tournament, defeating Elizabeth Ryan, London, and the German star, Cilli Aussm, in the finals 9—7, 6—2. Miss Ryan and Helen Wills Moody won the title last year.

POLICE MATRON TAKEN TO TASK FOR STATEMENT

Public School Inspector Mowat Replies to Statement of Miss Wood.

PRINCIPALS ALSO WRITE.

The following letters from A. Mowat, Inspector of the Public Schools of Peterborough, and the Public School principals, is a reply to the statement made by Adjutant Amy Wood, Police Matron, at a meeting of the Women's Council on Thursday. Miss Wood said: "The most talked of subject in the public schools to-day is the subject of sex." The Editor of The Examiner.

"Sir,—Your readers must have been shocked and alarmed upon reading the attack upon the Public School children of the city in last evening's issue of The Examiner.

"To state that "the matter of sex is the most talked-of subject in the Public Schools to-day" and "these things are instilled into the mind of the small child" is a direct charge against the teachers and a denial of the existence of a good moral tone in our schools.

"I go in and out of the classrooms every school day and I find that the teachers both by precept and example are doing a fine work in fostering a high moral tone in our schools. I believe, too, that the vast majority of the parents are co-operating in this, the most important work of the schools. Some few parents are too indifferent to co-operate with the teachers, and in these cases satisfactory results cannot be expected, but to condemn the whole body of students on account of a few is preposterous and unjust.

"It is true that the rod does not play an important part in our schools to-day. Its too frequent use always does harm and is a sign of weakness on the part of the user.

"I can assure the parents that our teachers are doing their duty in developing the moral as well as the mental powers of the pupils under their charge.

"I believe, too, that our Public School boys and girls are a fine body of pupils and they, as well as all who really know them, must resent the unjust criticism levelled at them.

A. Mowat,
Inspector of Public Schools."

PRINCIPALS' LETTER

The Editor,
Peterborough Examiner.

"Sir.—In Friday's Examiner, the Police Matron, Miss Wood, is quoted as having made the following statements: 'The most talked-of subject in the public schools to-day is the matter of sex. When these things are instilled into the mind of the small child, what sort of conduct can we expect from the adolescent? I hate to think what the next generation is going to be like, because conditions are far worse than we have any idea of.'

"It is possible that these statements removed from their context do not correctly represent the views of the speaker. As published, however, they make a direct and sweeping indictment of the children of this city for moral unwholesomeness, and couple with it the schools which we direct. Against that indictment, we most emphatically protest.

"There are, in this generation of children as in those preceding it, some, who are corrupted by unfortunate environment and congenital lack of balance. If Miss Wood wishes to state that depravity often—perhaps always—has its beginning in school age, we are quite in agreement. Such cases are, and always have been, one of our gravest problems. But they constitute at the most a very small fraction of our school population. The great majority are normal children, preoccupied only with the natural interests of childhood.

"Granted, however, that these problem cases exist, what possible ground can there be for inferring that their abnormal interests 'are instilled into the mind' in the public schools? Why lament the lack of parental control if the damage is done in the one place where the parent is justified in handing over his responsibility to another authority? We, too, would welcome in many cases a greater exercise of watchfulness on the part of the parents, but we can assure them that, if their children are guarded from undesirable contacts and associations as carefully in the hours spent out of school as they are while under our care, they will have little to fear.

"If, as Miss Wood, is reported as saying, years of experience give one the right to speak with authority, we surely have even a better right to say 'We know.' We are not blind optimists who believe that modern conditions are the best possible for the proper development of childhood. We are finding every day that they are very much the contrary, and that our task has never been so difficult as it is to-day. But we have the advantage of knowing the normal children as well as the perverted ones.—and, knowing them, we have not by any means lost faith in the coming generation. Such statements as those quoted at the beginning of this letter do them a cruel injustice which will be as keenly resented by their parents as it is by us who are in charge of their school training.

AUXILIARY REPORTS READ AT MEETING

Mrs. E. Tucker Has Charge of St. George's Church W. A. Meeting.

The regular meeting of St. George's W.A. was held on Wednesday afternoon in the church basement. Mrs. E. Tucker, president, occupied the chair, for the opening prayers. The main business was the reading of reports by the delegates to the annual meeting held in Toronto last week. Mrs. Tucker reported on the social service, Prayer Partner's Conference and president's address; Mrs. W. Stephenson on the Little Helpers; Mrs. Hughes on the Literature, Living Message and Juniors; and Mrs. W. H. Andrews on Dr. Fife's address on armaments. Reports of Strachan Houses, and the W.A. House were also given.

The closing meeting for the season will be the June meeting, which will be held in the evening instead of afternoon.

Junior W. A

The closing meeting of St. George's Junior W.A. held in the basement last evening, took the form of a social evening, and sale of home-made cooking and candy, to which parents and friends were invited. The rector acted as chairman for the opening proceedings, but had to leave early for another engagement. Five girls who went to Toronto on Saturday last to attend the service for juniors in St. Paul's Church, gave their reports as delegates, many interesting features of the trip being described. Certificates, pins, and pictures were presented to the 18 girls and boys who had successfully passed the examinations in Missionary Study, Mrs. Hughes giving an idea of what was expected of the children in this work. A short program consisted of a missionary play by 5 girls a dialogue on our pledges by 7 girls and boys; recitations by Mae Pickles and Ruth Farr; and a pianoforte duet by Doris and Betty Ferguson. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. F. Dorrell, assisted by the girls.

TWINS MARRY, TAKE TWIN NAME

The remarkable sequence of identical thoughts and actions by the twin sisters, Hilda and Elsie Harrop, of Rotherham, England, has reached a climax in both choosing husbands named Thompson. Hilda is already married to James Thompson, of Chesterfield, and Elsie will shortly marry Dr. James Thompson, of Glasgow. The girls are so similar in looks that even their father and brother often mixed their names. The twins say that ever since they can remember they thought the same thoughts, had the same nightmares, and did the same things. Although they did not know it until later, their engagement rings were practically the same. Even when they lived in different cities their clothes were alike. Last summer, although many miles apart, both decided to go to the same resort, stop at the same hotel and do the same things.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 23.—Heavy frosts over Kansas gave wheat prices a lift yesterday, especially in the final dealings. Wheat was also assisted upward by a late announcement that the first export sales of United States 1931 crop wheat had been made yesterday for July shipment, and that New Orleans had cleared some domestic wheat. Corn established a new low price record for the season, but rallied on account of Iowa reports that corn in some sections had been hit by frost.

Wheat closed irregular, ⅛ cent off to ⅜ up; corn at ⅝ decline to ⅛ advance; oats unchanged to ⅝ higher, and provisions 7 to 17 cents down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 23. — Wheat values made fractional gains on a dull session of the grain exchange yesterday. Advances of ⅝ to ⅞ cent over Thursday's figures were recorded at the close. May wheat finished at 60 cents per bushel; July, 61 to 61⅛ cents; and October, 62⅝ to ⅞ cent split.

Prices were unchanged in cash wheat and coarse grains which also were dull and inactive. Export business overnight and yesterday was poor and mainly responsible for the

with the producers, and put before them the requirements of the trade. Quality must be maintained, he stated, and pointed out that Canadian cheese was wanted in Great Britain and that the makers should work for that market.

There were a few under-grade cheese in different districts, Mr. Irwin stated, but these were not general.

Conditions Traced.

Of rancid flavors, he said that it had been definitely traced by experts to dirty milk pails and cans, this being a condition that should be cleared up.

In conclusion, the speaker urged that all makers and patrons should be proud of their factories and give them a boost, for he stated that there was no branch of the industry that did more for the farmers in this part of the country than the cheese branch.

J. P. Williams was also present and addressed the meeting in regard to group insurance for the makers, but this matter was held over for a later meeting.

One resolution was passed, this granting the admittance of all apprentices to the association on payment of a nominal fee. The next meeting will be held on June 4 at the Warkworth Cheese Factory.

HOME RESTAURANT SUITS YOUR TASTE

Surroundings Are Attractive and Comfortable and Food is Delicious.

There is something about the Home Restaurant that sets it apart from other eating places and makes it highly satisfactory. The extreme care and thought that goes into everything; the cooking, serving and arrangement creates a dining room to be visited regularly. The surroundings are attractive and comfortable, the food is delicious. It is temptingly served and is prepared in the most careful manner in a spotless and sanitary kitchen. Proper food, well chosen and well cooked is essential to health. There one finds fresh vegetables prepared to retain all their natural flavor, choice meats, rolls and muffins and real home-made pies. One must learn for oneself what a pleasure it is to eat at the Home Restaurant.

You will find at the Home Restaurant all foods in season and many fruits and vegetables that are out of season. They cater to your taste and the other fellow's, so that it makes no difference whether you are on a diet or present a vigorous appetite, there is food that will suit your particular palate. The manger, Mr. Willie Hum, has been in the restaurant for many years and is thoroughly conversant with its every phase. He sees that quality is always high, and that every customer receives personal service of the very best.

The Home Restaurant is not only popular among the people of Peterborough and surrounding territory, but among the motoring public as well. Many autoists who make trips through this section make it a point to reach the Home Restaurant for their dinner or supper, as the case may be. There they are assured of a highly appetizing meal, yet at most moderate prices. We are pleased to direct special attention to this metropolitan restaurant service. Do you know the prices on two different orders and on regular meals at the Home Restaurant?

COMMONS SEEKS

ments out of Churchill would be all that could be expected this year. The large grain elevator now under construction would not be completed until September which would preclude commercial use of the port this season. No applications had been received from private companies desirous of building competing grain elevators at the Bay port, Dr. Manion informed John Vallance (Lib., South Battleford), before any permission were granted, Parliament should be asked to express its opinion, suggested the Saskatchewan Liberal, adding there was an opinion throughout the west that no private elevators should be permitted.

In addition to the $3,000,000 voted yesterday, it will necessitate a further vote of $4,000,000 next year to complete the Welland canal, Dr. Manion told the House. This would bring the total cost to approximately $119,000,000. Consideration will be given, the Minister said in this connection, to a suggestion emanating from Hon. Peter Heenan, former Minister of Labor that all contracts on the canal work be revised so as to compel an eight-hour working day. This certainly would apply to all new contracts made by a general revision of all exitsing contracts and might be very expensive, Dr. Manion believed.

Seeks Government Policy.

Mackenzie King attempted to draw from Dr. Manion an expression of the Government's policy regarding the building of the Trans-Canada Highway. It would be constructed by the Provinces with contributions from the Federal treasury, replied the Minister, but added this was his personal opinion and should not be taken as the Government policy. Premier Bennett, declared the Liberal Leader, during the election campaign, had promised to build the highway as a Federal undertaking.

Further questioning, in which Hon. Peter Heenan joined, resulted in Deputy-Speaker Lavergne ruling the embryonic debate out of order. When Mr. King asked when a definite expression could be secured from the Government, Dr. Manion suggested an amendment to the Government motion to go into supply.

Further negotiations with the State of New York and with the Canadian Provinces would be necessary before any actual work on the St. Lawrence Waterways scheme could be commenced, Dr. Manion told Mr. King in another incident. Communications had passed between Washington and Ottawa, but many details still remained unsettled. The scheme was "too important and too vast to decide in a few months."

Protests from Mr. King, Liberal Leader, that a series of questions on the order paper relating to Senator Rodolphe Lemieux would constitute "libellous statements' 'if not protected by parliamentary privileges, featured the early part of the day. The questions, which were asked by Dr. F. J. Lafleche (Cons., Richmond-Wolfe) asked if Senator Lemieux, when Speaker of the House of Commons, had transported to his summer home, certain furniture which was the property of the State.

Senator Lemieux had denied the import of the questions, Mr. King declared, and because an innuendo was implied, he suggested they be deleted from the records of the House.

Bennett Speaks

This led Premier R. B. Bennett to observe Senator Lemieux continued to administer the Speaker's office after long being appointed to the Senate. "I desire to state very emphatically," he declared, "there is no uncertain view among many people in this country, and I am one of them, as to how the direction of the expenditure of monies of this House by the Speaker of this chamber and its administration by him could be carried on by one who has ceased to be a Speaker and who had become a Senator and who participated in the election compaign immediately afterward and made a speech, the offensiveness of which will never be forgotten by many people."

Hon. Ernest Lapointe declared declared Senator Lemieux continued to administer the Speaker's office on the advice of the Deputy Minister of Justice and the Law Clerk of the Commons. The questions thmeselves, Mr. Speaker Black said, could not be deleted from the Order Paper, but might be dropped when called in the House in the regular way. This closed the incident.

Largely because of opposition from members representing ridings in the eastern end of Montreal Island, third reading of an act to authorize the Canadian Pacific Railway to build several branch lines, was held up during private members' hour last night. It would authorize construction of a line from Place Viger terminal in Montreal, to L'Epiphanie on the Montreal-Quebec route. Authorization of certain branch lines in Western Canada was contained in the bill.

Third reading was given a bill to

WOMN'S INSTITUTEE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass
No envy sour the mind.
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

With a view to rendering better service to the Women's Institutes of the Province, the Minister of Agriculture, Colonel, the Hon. T. L. Kennedy, has appointed six specialists to take charge of different branches of Institute work. These specialists will devote their time to making the feature of work to which they have been assigned of greater value to the Institutes in general as well as to the girls in the Junior Institutes and others who may take advantage of the services available.

Miss M. V. Powell has been appointed general assistant to the superintendent and will assist in connection with the various activities administered from the main office, such as the summer series of meetings, the district annual meetings, the twelve conventions held in various parts of the province, exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition and Royal Winter Fair, the preparation of material for publication, co-operation of the Women's Institutes with the fall fairs.

Miss F. P. Eadie will have charge of household science instructors, who will conduct classes in every district and county during the spring, summer and fall months, followed by county competitions in judging as well as competitions at fairs in Ottawa, Peterborough, London and Toronto. Provision is being made to bring five girls from each county and district to the Royal Winter Fair in the fall and Miss Eadie will take direct charge of this group.

Miss Hopkins, the field assistant in junior work, will supervise the Junior Institutes, and give assistance to the girls in the Women's Institutes. News bulletins will be prepared from time to time for the girls throughout the province, and will co-operate with Miss Eadie in planning girls' conferences in Guelph and Kemptville as well as county conferences.

Miss Gray, the field assistant in nutrition, will furnish up-to-date information on this important branch to the instructors, in the field and the Institutes, throughout the province from time to time. She will also have charge of food exhibits and will prepare lesson leaflets on various food problems for the girls and women and will give demonstration-lecture courses as time permits.

The field assistant in clothing, Miss Collins, will place this feature of work on a more definite basis, stressing the importance of remodelling clothes. She will also encourage the organization of garment making clubs and will conduct demonstration-lecture courses in sewing as time permits. Up to date literature on clothing will be prepared from time to time for the guidance of both the girls and women.

Miss Slicter, the field assistant in housing, will devote her time to house planning, remodelling, furnishing and decorating. She will also devote some time to handicrafts, such as renovating furniture, making of rugs, and various ornamental and useful articles in the home.

MILLBROOK

"Helps Here and There" was a topic taken up at a Western Institute gathering, the homemakers present each contributing some hint from practical experience in the matter of cooking, taking care of the sick, or meals for invalids. Notebooks were in every person's hand, and much information gained that would help in 'the business of homemaking' in the days ahead.

One member, a white-haired grandmother, who had indeed brought up seven stalwart sons, and now was having a bit to do with the upbringing of their boys and girls, gave a recipe for poultices in lung or bronchial trouble that is worth passing on: "Take six to ten onions chopped fined, put in a pan, and add the same quantity of rye meal, enough vinegar to make a thick paste, stir well and let simmer gently for five or ten minutes. Put in a bag of cheesecloth, or strong muslin and apply at hot as can be borne. In about ten minutes apply a new poultice, taking care to have the compress cover the lungs, or other part needing this remedy. In a few hours the patient will be out of danger. To heat over the poultice, put in a steamer over boiling water."

A mother of a lively small boy contributed a suggestion for making solid the castors in her son's crib "which had a most provoking habit of coming out every time I moved it. I read somewhere to fill the corners with melted wax and put in the castors before the wax hardened. When I set forth to try this I was dismayed to find the corner posts were hollow, but overcame the difficulty by pushing in paper, leaving just enough room for a good layer of wax. It is over a year since I 'set' the castors in the way I have indicated and I have had no trouble since with them coming out."

The president commented on the helpfulness of such a practical program as had been planned for the meeting, and her personal gratitude to the members for responding so willingly to the request for 'helps by the way,' and another member was ready with her 'hint'—a 'celery cure for neuritis, or rheumatism.'

"Boil one ounce of celery seed in a pint of water until it is reduced one-half; strain, bottle, and cork. Take one teaspoonful twice a day in a little water, continue for two weeks; stop, and then continue again later if necesary. This has been used in our family and found very good."

In reply to a request for a 'varnish' for stovepipes that will not smoke,' an experienced and elderly member had this help: "I would advise using paint oil mixed with stove polish. Apply with a soft brush, and results are excellent. Be careful to put on very little fire until the pipes are perfectly dry. The odor of paint oil is disagreeable for a few days, but personally I prefer it to that of varnish."

Another suggestion was regarding worms at the roots of house plants, and the suggestion for a remedy was to let them (the plants) go quite dry, then mix in proportion of one teaspoon mustard to one pint of water, and set the pot in the mixture. The plants may also be watered with the mixture. Repetition may be necessary. The member who gave this hint added that she had saved several large begonias by this treatment.

What To-day Means To You.

"GEMINI"

If May 23rd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from noon to 3 p.m., and from 5:40 p.m. to 8 p.m. The danger periods are from 9 a.m. to 11:10 a.m. and from 9 p.m. to 11:10 p.m.

The astrological signs of May 23rd indicate intellectual progress and some happening that will safeguard the interests of the plan or undertaking which you have most at heart. In the home, there may be misunderstanding, which will yield to the beneficient influences of the evening.

A child born on this May 23rd will be long-lived and blessed with material success and felicitous relationships. It will be far-sighted, well balanced, endowed with a keen sense of justice and have a great and an abiding love for its home and kith and kin.

Born on May 23rd, you are active, both mentally and physically and have a great capacity for work. No matter what field of endeavor you enter—always provided it is one of your own choice and selection—success will, undoubtedly, be yours, as you will bring to bear on your efforts clear mindedness, singlesness of purpose and an unconquerable determination. Nothing in this world will come to you by chance. Everything you earn will be the result of hard, indefatigable labor.

In spite of a practical mind, your artistic tastes are highly developed, and, as a hobby, you may find great pleasure in gratifying these inclinations. Both men and women born on May 23rd possess the rare faculty of keeping a secret—a rare virtue in either sex—and they are not inquisitively curious, a weakness common to men and women alike.

You, at times, suffer from moods, but are usually careful not to inflict them on others. Usually quiet and retiring, you are self-assertive when any attempt is made to filch from you honors or rewards to which you consider yourself entitled. You have a very loving nature, and will make an ideal mate and companion for one who wants a constant, loyal and true life-partner.

If May 24th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are fron 10 a.m. to noon, from 4:10 p.m. to 6 p.m. and from 9 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. The danger period is from 12:30 p.m. to 2:45 p.m.

The planetary aspects of May 24th are negative in character, and there are no positive features until in the late afternoon when conditions indicate repose and calm. After sunset, the emotions will be stimulated and activity will replace lethargy.

A child born on this May 24th will cause much trouble in its early years, as a result of its waywardness and indifference. This condition, so hard to remedy, will continue more or less until it is caught in Love's toils. Its character will then undergo a complete metamorphosis.

Born on May 24th, you are, if a man, somewhat effeminate, and show few of those traits which usually characterize members of your sex. You are finicky in your ways, childish in your tantrums, and addicted altogether too much to appearances. You are vain, without cause; conceited, without reason. You can do a lot of little things well, but are "up against it" when confronted with a real difficulty, and are destined to live out your life without having placed to your credit any one outstanding achievement. As a husband, you are a "nagger." As a parent, you either foolishly indulge your children, or just as foolishly inhibit them doing those things which normal children like to do.

If a woman, you, without sacrificeing feminity, are determined and courageous. You take little or no interest in fashions, although taking a pride in your personal appearance. You know, without guidance, what to wear and how to wear it. You are very sincere and loyal—even to members of your own sex. You never gossip, and breathe no scandal. You are as much a woman's woman as you are a man's woman. A business woman or wife, you are singled out for success.

FIGHTING BULLS CHARGE TRAINS

partment before leaving time. But scheduled leaving time didn't mean a thing. There were three empty seats. Around about two o'clock a musical gent away up front sang out, "gentlemen travellers will please get on the train—on the train—on the train." He went into this third "on the train" as if he were Caruso. Compared to our curt "all aboard" this little song and dance was a delight. There was still lots of room. Then a horn blew. Still lots of room. Then a whistle blew. Two of the remaining seats were taken. A second whistle blew and in waltzed two bewhiskered gents who viewed with consternation. They looked around for seats. One of them had to stand. He said nasty things. He rang bells and pulled cords. He walked up and down in search of the conductor. The train moved off and we ambled away through the Andalusian countryside.

The conductor came around in tow of the bewhiskered standee. He demanded to see all our tickets. He got all the tickets from the other primero passengers and solemnly pointed out that there were only 100 seats but some dog of an agent had sold 101 tickets.

Sinclair the Goat.

He pawed through his cardboards. So far as I could see mine was numbere 2350 but that happened to be the price. Then there was a number 66 and then deeply cut into the back was 101. I was the goat. With profuse apologies the conductor said I would have to give up my seat. I stood. But this would not do. I'd have to go up in the third. I left my luggage where it was and went up among the goats and parrots and chickens. Some boys there were playing marbles on the floor, women were weaving rugs, men were nonchalantly skinning fishes. There was hardly standing room.

Along came the third class conductor—the boy with the horn. He looked at tickets. Mine was yellow, the others blue. I'd have to go back to first class at once. He came with me to show the way. I went back and stood in the corridor. The first class man hove into view pointing very politely that I had already been told to leave first class, would I mind vanishing. I went up among the goats again. The third class fellow, still holding his temper admirably again showed me the way back.

I took him by the arm, walked him up to the first class conductor and formally introduced them. They went in a pow wow on the spot and called some missing gent a lot of names. They apologized to me. They would at once get a seat for me. They would make me comfortable. They would even make coffee for me, and they did.

Seat And Bed As Well.

I was taken to the conductor's private quarters. A sort of combined look out tower and caboose. There I was given not only a seat but a bed as well and for anyone travelling more than 40 miles in Spain a bed seems necessary.

We rolled up through pastures simply swarming with black fighting bulls, through orange groves loaded with fruit and in blossom at the same time, through olive orchards centred around great packing plants. The signs on the olive places were every one in English. Not a word of Spanish was written on any of them. We stopped at every wayside village while the crew chatted with the villagers as if they had not seen them in centuries. Then the musical "gentlemen travellers will please get on the train" would ring out and away we'd go with all the speed of an ox cart.

Boys rallied around to sell oranges at two cents a dosen. Not the bitter Seville (Seveelya) oranges of marmalade fame but sweet juicy ones. Men brought around fried fishes and canned sardines.

The conductor came back into his own sanctum after awhile to tell me there was a seat now back in first class. I went back to find a whole compartment vacant. The conductor sat down to show me the most famous herd of bulls in all Andalusia. There seemed to be hundreds and hundreds of them in all ages.

They were herded in behind a rather flimsy looking wire fence with a second protection in the form of a six foot hedge of cactus. A bull would get badly torn dashing through such a hedge but the conductor assured me it was not unusual for one to get enraged at sight of the train, to smash through both barriers and charge down on the engine with all the terrible force of his great head. You can imagine what happened the bull even if the train only goes seven miles an hour.

Occasionally we passed great flocks of storks. Gawky white storks with black tips to their wings and black heads. The level crossings were all guarded by tawny men in loose clothes.

With the train still a mile or so down the track they'd gather up their brood of babies and stretch a logging chain across the road and then wave cheerily. Par for these women was one babe in each arm with at least two others hanging on to the inevitable black skirt. I began to figure that the presence of all these storks might mean something after all.

LAKEFIELD W. I. ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. J. W. Ridpath is Chosen President — Splendid Secretary's Report.

ACTIVE YEAR SPENT.

LAKEFIELD, May 23 (Examiner Correspondence).—The following officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Woman's Institute, held on Wednesday evening in the Town Hall.

Honorary President—Mrs. W. M. Graham. President—Mrs. J. W. Ridpath. 1st Vice-President—Mrs. N. S. Higgins; 2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Blakeley. Secretary—Miss M. Sanderson; Treasurer — Mrs. Howard Bullock. Strangers' Secretary—Mrs. S. Bearson. Secretary Flower Fund—Miss Edna Blewett. Directors—Mrs. John Northey, Miss E. Elliott, Mrs. J. H. Moore, Mrs. S. Pearson, Mrs. G. H. Spence. District Director—Miss Mary Adams. Pianist—Mrs. W. Bell. Auditors—Mrs. W. G. Morrison and Mrs. C. O. Northey. Convenors—Relief Committee, Mrs. O. E. Kingdon; Agricultural, Mrs. J. Roseborough; Legislation, Mrs. W. W. Yale; Home Economics, Mrs. Charles Frankish; Community Activities, Miss Graham; Heal, Mrs. A. E. Higgins; Education, Mrs. A. Davis.

Votes of thanks were given to the retiring officers who had rendered such excellent service, and hopes are bright for a future of continued achievement.

Miss Edna Blewett gave the secretary's report. Eleven regular meetings were held with a total attendance of 430. There were 70 members in the past year; two were called by death (Mrs. Mahood and Mrs. Barker), and one (Mrs. Vanstone) removed from the village.

In June a grandmothers' party was held; in July, Miss Emma Elliott entertained the branch at a picnic at her home in Smith; in August a pie social was held; in October, a tag day for the Canadian Institute for the Blind brought in $46.65.

Miss Blewett gave the report of the Flower Fund, for Mrs. J. H. Payne, who was not present: receipts, $22.93; expenditure, $17.30.

Mrs. J. W. Ridpath gave the report of the Relief committee; in the past winter, Lakefield was more fortunate than many places. Three quilts were made and an extra blanket added to the store; a treat of fruit was given the old people at the House of Refuge at Christmas, and in December a bale was sent to a local girl teaching in Northern Ontario, where there was great destitution. In March a box of clothing and household necessaries was sent to a family near Peterborough who had been burned out.

Mrs. Albert Darling took the chair for the election of officers and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for her kindness and her capable handling of the situation.

A group of ladies were present from the Young's Point branch, who were warmly welcomed. An invitation was extended from that branch to any of the ladies of Lakefield to attend their meeting on June 2 when the summer speaker, Mrs. Bertram, will be present.

HOME TOWNERS

TIDBITS INTERESTING AND HUMOROUS FROM CAMPBELLFORD

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Benelle and daughter Helen of Cobourg and Mrs. Vivian of Midland were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Craighead on Thursday.

Mrs. Ed. Bennett was the guest recently of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Panning at Wellman's Corners.

After spending the past few months in Virginia, Miss Edith Archer has returned to her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvile McComb were the guests this week of Mr. Sam McComb of Springbrook.

Miss Mary Youmans graduated on Thursday from the General Hospital, Belleville and received her diploma as a qualified nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Sweet of Trenton were visitors to town on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. David F. Robertson of Montreal were visitors to town on Friday.

Mr. J. G. G. Kerry was in town on Friday.

MRS. G. PAKENHAM IS TO-DAY'S WINNER

Four "Do You Know" Articles Are Appearing in This Issue of The Examiner.

The manner in which Mrs. G. Pakenham, 737 Water street, arranged her answers to the questions in the "Do You Know" articles was truly original. Then, too, she is no mean cartoonist. There is, indeed, much of the artist shown in her offering, and we are very happy to announce her as a winner.

Every day a $3.00 prize is given by The Examiner to its reader who submits the best set of answers to the "Do You Know" stories, which are distributed through various pages of each issue of the paper. Four of the articles appear in this issue, and everyone is invited to get in the game.

It's easy to compete. Here's all that is necessary: Look through the paper and find the stories, call the firms about whom the articles are written, have them to tell you the answer to the question that forms the last sentence in the story, then write your answers and send them to the "Do You Know" editor at The Examiner. The best arranged answers each day is named winner and awarded the prize.

Watch every issue of The Examiner for more of the contest articles, and the announcements of prize winners—but—join the contest right now. It only takes several moments to make yourself a prospective winner.

Sixty-four persons were killed in 46 accidents of the British Royal Air Force last year.

CHICKEN DINNER OFFERED SUNDAY

Hotel at Burleigh Falls is Already Opened for the Season.

AN HOUR'S DRIVE

First of the summer hotels to announce its readiness for the season Park Hotel at Burleigh Falls, under the expert management of its charming proprietress, Mrs. Doughty, awaits the Sunday motorists. A full course chicken dinner is only one of the attractions of this scenic resort. No finer views are to be found anywhere in the Kawartha Lakes district than are seen at Burleigh Falls. Picturesque, tumbling waters, finally absorbed by the placid lake, in which lie lovely wooded islands, present a picture that attract visitors from far distant points.

The easy access of this beauty spot, to Peterborough, makes one wonder why it is not crowded with sightsers on every reasonable opportunity. An hour's delightful drive, brings the holiday party to this lakeside picnic ground, where the air, at an elevation of 250 feet above Peterborough, has a different tang to it, and induces a good hearty appetite for one of Mrs. Doughty's special full course dinners.

TRENT RIVER.

"Whitehall Gardens" pavilion opened Saturday with music supplied by the "Rythm Aces."

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lloyd, son Donald, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Lloyd of Toronto, arrived Friday to spend over the holiday at "Isle of View."

Mrs. J. Mitchell, Miss Jessie, Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell and Miss Marion Williamson of Toronto are at "Raeden" for over the holiday.

No Appetite and Unable To Sleep

Manitoba Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

"Having used Dodd's Kidney Pills for five years I can highly recommend them," writes Mrs. C. G. Stanley, Oak Lake, Man. "A friend recommended them to me as I could not sleep and also had lost my appetite. The first box of Dodd's Kidney Pills worked wonders. I would never be without them in our home as we have tried others but none suited my family. My husband and young children have also been helped by Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from dealers everywhere, or, The Dodds Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto 2, Ont. 200

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT!

FIVE million modern mothers will tell you that children DO cry for Fletcher's Castoria. For mothers always give a few drops of this pure vegetable preparation when a child has any of the symptoms that tell of sluggish bowels, colic, or other upsets. When tiny tongues are coated and breath is bad. When a child is restless; irritable. Always soothing and comforting to an infant—yet it is effective for children in their teens. You never have to coax children to take Castoria; they love its taste.

Be ready for the next case of sour stomach, constipation, or other need for Castoria!

When buying look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on wrapper.

Petrie proposed a vote of thanks to all those who took part in the program.

FASHION SERVICE

When you study this lovely afternoon dress, you'll see it's really very simple to fashion. It's slenderizing too.

The original carried out the fashionable black and white theme in crepe silk print.

The bodice is given a softened line through the becoming cowl drape. And to give the figure height—the wrap-over tunic sees to that.

There are numberless other fabrics equally suited to this model. For instance, a printed chiffon would be adorable for more dressy occasions.

Wool crepe, plain crepe silk and many rayon novelties are smart.

Style No. 3084 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 44 and 46 inches bust.

Size 36 reqtires 4 3-8 yards 39-inch with ½ yard 39-inch contrasting.

Heirs To $75,000,000 Fortune

George F. Baker, noted financier, divided the bulk of his $75,000,000 estate, which was much smaller than generally anticipated, among his son, George F. Baker, Jr., (lover left), who received approximately $60,000,000; his daughter, Mrs. William G. Lewis (right), who was willed $5,000,000, and FlorenceJ. Loew (upper left), a granddaughter, received the famous Baker estate. Although the famous banker's fortune had been estimated as high as $500,000,000 the shrinkage is explained by the fact that he transferred millions away to his son and philanthropies previous to his death.

Every person can become a collector of antiques or of things that are of peculiar interest to him or her.

• • • • • • •

This is not always appreciated by those who have average means, but it is true, nevertheless.

• • • • • • •

As an example of this, let me tell you of a table in the home of a woman who was much travelled. She bought an inlaid Sheraton card table for fifty cents!

• • • • • • •

It was in the drawing room with her rare collection of articles from many parts of the world. The table was terribly stained and marked when she found it in the kitchen of an old house where the furniture was for sale.

• • • • • • •

She knew the furniture and gladly paid the sum asked. The cost of doing the table over was but a small fraction of the cost of such a table in good repair, as it was.

• • • • • • •

Not everyone can be so fortunate as this, it is true, but every collector will tell with glee of how, for a trifling sum, he or she acquired certain rugs, glass, furniture, pewter, pitchers, etc.—whatever is being collected.

• • • • • • •

There are opportunities for everyone when once the person is gripped by the charm of some special kind of ware, or article insignificant or magnificent.

• • • • • • •

The urge to know more about any subject is a spur to knowledge and when once this is felt, study begins which opens the eyes to the recognition of choice pieces whatever the price.

• • • • • • •

And the price may be low, as just instanced by the Sheraton table.

• • • • • • •

One hindrance to would-be collectors is hesitancy to price articles, fearing they may be way above a sum possible for them to pay. After one has been collecting for a little while, this fear is lost.

• • • • • • •

It costs nothing to ask how much a wanted article is, and pleasant surprises in low sum are sure to come at times.

• • • • • • •

There are minor things to collect, the nucleus for which may be in the house now, such as stamps, pitchers, baskets, boxes, etc., and even such apparently insignificant things as buttons.

• • • • • • •

These little convenient contrivances tell fascinating tales which an awakened interest will discover, such as, when they were first made—what they were used for and what they were made of.

• • • • • • •

Official rank is denoted in some countries by a button worn in the hat—which shows there are buttons of distinction, too, as well as of utility.

CLIMATE AND DIABETES

Some one asks why diabetes is found so much more frequently in a cool, bracing, changeable climate, than where the weather is warm, less bracing, and less changeable.

Some one has answered this by stating that it is because more sugar is eaten in the cooler and more changeable climate.

Now, as a matter of fact, more diabetes is found where more sugar is used, but it is unfair to say that sugar is the cause of diabetes.

Why?

Because in certain climates that are changeable and stimulating and little sugar used, the number of cases of diabetes is just as large.

This shows, then, that sugar is not the cause of diabetes.

The real cause for so many cases of diabetes and also of the use of large amounts of sugar is that the bracing and changeable climate leads to the desire for sugar. Sugar gives heat and energy in less time than other foods, hence the great demand for it.

Dr. C. A. Mills, Cincinnati, tells us, that the increase in diabetes is much more marked when the prosperity of the people permits them to indulge the desire for sugar and other starches without stint.

However, another real important point, is that prosperity makes things so much easier for everybody physically—motor cars, elevators, more time for leisure—that with the appetite and desire for sugar and starches increased by the stimulating climate, and not used up or worked off by exercise, the amount of sugar and starches used is so much more than the body requires, that diabetes occurs.

The lesson is certainly evident to all of us.

People who have lived in these warm and even climates, with little change from day to day, and very little difference in temperature in winter and in summer, tell us that we should be very grateful, indeed, for the cooler and more stimulating and more changeable climate.

As you know the haemoglobin—the food—in the body-building red cells of the blood is much richer in amount in the cooler, more stimulating atmosphere than when it is warm and changeless.

Instead of simply making us want more sugar and starches it should make us more desirous of taking regular outdoor exercise.

This would mean a lessening in the number of cases of diabetes.

Spring Flowers Will Be On Display Wednesday

The Peterborough Horticultural Society will hold a display of cut bloom in the window of the Canadian Department Store, corner of Simcoe and George streets, on Wednesday, May 27th. Prizes will be offered for the following classes:

1 For the best 12 blooms of Tulips alike or different.
2 For the best 6 blooms of Tulips alike or different.
3 For the best 3 blooms of Tulips alike or different.
4 For the best vase of Narcissus or Daffodils.
5 For the best vase of any other spring flower.

The first prize in each of the above classes will be one three year old clump of Delphiniums. Second prize two clumps of phlox (fall delivery).

The show committee will be on hand between six and eight o'clock on Tuesday evening to receive the flowers. Competition open to members of the society only. Containers will be supplied.

FASHION HINT

"How to make my old short skirts conform to the new length was a problem to me until I hit on this plain. I dropped the hems; and as the part that had been turned under was darker than the rest, I redyed the entire dress, after having bleached the goods, following directions in the Diamond Dyes package.

"I used Diamond Dyes for the redyeing, of course. I have dyed many things with these wonderful colors. They have saved me many dollars and have never failed to give perfect results—smooth, even colors—fast to wear and washing. Friends think my things are new when I redye or tint them with Diamond Dyes. They do give the most gorgeous colors!"

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE

A Column in the Interests of the Young People of Peterboro and issued under the auspices of the KIWANIS CLUB

THE INDUSTRIAL TRAFFIC MANAGER.

The industrial Traffic Manager has a post the duties and scope of which are herewith very sparsely defined, as much could be written on the various phases of Traffic Management. Relatively very little has been written on the subject in Canada, due possibly to the somewhat limited number of industries in this country employing their own traffic departments as compared to the UnitedStates with a population in the neighborhood of 120,000,000 people, with numerous railways and steamship companies. The volume of business in the United States therefore demands more traffic experts.

Independent of the Traffic Manager in industries there are, of course, Traffic Bureaus who for a certain set figure or percentage basis handle the traffic problems of a number of firms. This, of course, does away with the requiring of a Traffic Department.

The Traffic Department is invaluable to any large concern and if properly functioning saves to that particular industry many thousands of dollars annually. The chief objective is to co-operate one hundred per cent with the accounting, operating, purchasing and sales departments, as there is an important angle to this work that cannot be overstated. Improper traffic dealings can deprive a concern of its proper share of business. Traffic and railway questions with rates are often controlling factors in distribution and a sales department must be kept informed of the most correct information on ocean and rail rates and various regulations from the factory to the proposed destination. Reliable information is therefore absolutely necessary to the sales department so that sales may not be lost or unfavorable contracts entered into.

The duties of the Traffic Manager vary considerably in different organizations. Someone has summarized the functions of this vocation by stating that the principal duties of the Traffic organizations were expeditiously, cheaply and, above all, satisfactorily to cause their company's good to reach consignee and, of course, inbound shipments to reach their firm in the same manner. This definition, though incomplete, may serve as a starting point for a discussion of the functions of a Traffic Department. Where transportation is expeditious it is very likely in the end to be cheap and where it is both expeditious and cheap it is most likely to be satisfactory. Therefore it is not possible to treat separately the components of the foregoing definitions of the duties.

What are some of the factors that make for cheap transportation or let us say economical transportation of a company's products? The Traffic Department has the choice of the kind of transportation to be purchased in a given case, whether it shall be via rail, steamship, truck or express. It may be at once stated that although much of this article pertains to rail traffic this is due to the fact that Traffic Management governing all rail shipments is a well defined art. It is not intended to slight in any way the present and future importance of truck transportation, ocean going vessel or possibly aeroplane, nor to minimize the possibility of the management of traffic for these facilities.

As a purchaser of transportation the Traffic Manager has a choice as to which of several routes is the most favorable and in this must be fully conversant with practically world wide geography most particularly this country of Canada and United States.

Freight rates are, of course, much higher on less carlots than on carload business. Therefore the Traffic Department must determine to what extent less carlot shipments may be consolidated into carloads for more economical redistribution and what redistribution may be made to the best advantage.

Considerable may be saved for one's company by the proper handling of shipments as to claims and the correct manner of arranging the collection of reimbursements from the carriers on such damaged shipments or shortages.

The Traffic Department kept up-to-date has its own complete tariff filing system, consisting of railway, steamship and express tariffs, also Railway Commission rulings and Interstate Commerce instructions. These issues are subscribed for through the several bueaus issuing same. Such information should be kept right up to the minute as to changes, cancellations and additions, as rearrangements occur quite frequently and are taken care of by the issuance of supplements or reissues by the several issuers. Through this method the proper checking of the firm's business can be most successfully carried on with the assurance of the payment of only the correct charges. The Traffic Manager is entitled to his own interpretation of such tariffs and rulings, which might not at all times be in accord with the carriers' views. It is therefore in this way that the department in question works for the result of saving of unnecessary expenditure of the company's money.

The Traffic Manager is usually a graduate of one of the larger transportation companies where all phases of traffic work are available to the party inclined to consider taking up this interesting vocation. It is with these companies that a thorough practical training is received and where also is gained knowledge of Interstate Commerce Law and Commission rulings, which is most important and essential in the settlement of rate differences. The duties are at all times very interesting and are from day to day so varied that one does not confront much monotony in the carrying out of the daily routine.

Traffic Management is also taught by some of the best correspondence schools having been recently included on their lists of courses. This course of study is available, particularly, to the student who has in mind the idea of securing a position with the railway or steamship companies, where the more practical ideas of transportation are available, and is a developer for the branching out in the Industrial, Traffic field.

FATHER AND SON ARE DROWNED IN OLD SHALE HOLE

Father Vainly Tries To Save His Child From Drowning.

BODIES RECOVERED.

TORONTO, May 23.—"Old Shale Hole", an abandoned, water-filled quarry at Mimico, took toll of two lives last night when a frantic father, dashing from his home, plunged into its dirty depths in a vain effort to rescue his infant son.

Both perished.

The victims of this double drowning are Alfred H. Woolfe, aged 45, of 100 Portland street, Mimico, and his son, Lawrence aged 2½ years. The Woolfe home was struck as by a bolt with the tragedy, which leaves seven other children fatherless and the mother widowed.

The body of the child was recovered shortly after the fatality. But it was only after hours of dragging that the body of he father was found at 11.30 last night.

The tragedy started in the laughter and carefreeness of play. After supper last night, Lawrence, his 5-year-old sister, Phyllis, and another little girl, Alice Digsbie, were playing on the margin of the deep waterhole. Lawrence, according to the account told by his playmates, trying to obtain a floating tin can, plunged into the water, which is of a sheer depth from its rubbish-strewn shore of between 20 and 35 feet. The Town of Mimico is filling in the old hole with debris, and it was said that soot floating on the surface probably deceived the lad into thinking he was still on firm ground.

Girl Gives Alarm

The next that was heard of the accident was when Phyllis, wide-eyed and terror-stricken, rushed into her home, where her wather, sitting beside the stove fire, was changing into his slippers for the night. As soon as she told him what had happened he dashed out of the house and down the street toward the Old Shale Hole. James Watt, next-door neighbor of the Woolfes, hearing the alarm, followed Mr. Woolfe. But he was outstripped, and arrived there just in time to see Mr. Woolfe throw off his coat and plunge into the water after his boy.

Mr. Watts stated that Woolfe was unable to swim. Woolfe failed to reach the infant, and sank and rose to the surface twice before sinking for the third time, Watts called to neighbors for a rope. But it was too late.

SKEETERS COP 3RD STRAIGHT IN JERSEY CITY

Johnny Allen on Mound for Pests Allows Bears But Six Hits.

BIRDS DIVIDE DOUBLE.

Bisons Even Six Game Montreal Series by Downing Royals 10-5.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., May 23.—The Jersey City Skeeters annexed their third consecutive victory here yesterday by walloping Newark Bears, 6 to 2, in the opening game of a four-game series.

Johnny Allen, on the mound for the Pests, went the entire distance, allowing but six hits.

It was Allen's home run in the sixth inning that sent the Skeeters off on a rampage, the result of which was six runs. Before the round was over the Bears had to call upon two pitchers to stem the barrage of base hits.

Bud Clancy was the hitting star of the day, with two singles and a double.

KEYS SHARE WITH BIRDS

BALTIMORE, Md., May 23—Some fancy hitting on the part of the Reading Keys gave them the first game of yesterday's double-header with the Orioles, 9 to 7, but the Birds annexed the nightcap, 2 to 1, in a clash that developed into a tight mound duel between Ken Holloway and George Bell.

Heffner, Poole and Krueger registered home runs in the opening game, while Gill and Adair chalked up four-baggers in the second tilt.

Richmond held the Keys to three hits in six frames in the opener, but was chased in the seventh.

Holloway limited them to six hits in the nightcap, while Bell held the Flock to five hits, two of which were of the scratch variety.

BISONS EVEN SERIES

MONTREAL, May 23.—The Buffalo Bisons evened their six-game series with the Royals here yesterday when they captured the second contest, 10 to 5. The Royals made 17 hits and the Herd 16, but the visitors bunched their blows to better advantage. Mueller and Wrightstone hit homers with none on base, Wrightstone getting four hits in as many trips to the plate. Each bench used three pitchers, Grampp getting credit for the win and Buckalew being charged with the defeat. It was Buckalew's first start of the season, but he was finally shelled out in the sixth. Urbanski got four hits, two of them doubles, in five times up to lead the Montreal attack.

Campbellford Will Play Peterborough Monday

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23.— The Campbellford Maroons will make their first appearance on the lacrosse field on Monday, May 25, when they will stage an exhibition game with the Peterborough Intermediates, at 3:30 in the afternoon on the Campbellford High School grounds.

The Peterborough squad have been putting in some stiff practicing if reports are true and should be in fine trim to give the Campbellford aggregation a good tussle.

U. S. LEADS IN DAVIS CUP COMPETITION

BROOKLYN ROBINS SCORE DOUBLE WIN OVER PHILS

Advance From Seventh to Fifth Place by Defeating Philadelphia Twice.

GAMES CALLED OFF.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

If the Brooklyn Robins do nothing else all season, they at least will have the distinction of providing one of the National League's leading puzzles. Picked as one of the leaders before the season started, the Robins have failed to come through so far, and the answer to every question as to why, has been "left-handed pitching."

Brooklyn fans were about ready to ask what else is wrong, when the Robins came through yesterday with a convincing demonstration that answered "nothing at all."

The Phillies had no left-handers ready to send against Brooklyn yesterday, but so far as collecting hits was concerned the Robins fared little better than they had against the southpaws who had been flung at them so frequently and with such painful results. The difference was that they settled down to the business of winning ball games, played the way they really can, and came out with two victories and a hold on fifth place in the standing.

Hits That Count

Brooklyn collected only 17 hits in the two games off Ray Benge, Frank Watt and Fidgety Phil Collins, but they made them good for eight runs, winning 3 to 2 and 5 to 3. In the first clash they bunched three of their blows for two runs in the sixth inning to decide the tight game. In the second, Babe Herman clouted a homer with two aboard in the third inning and Johnny Frederick clouted another with empty bases to put the game on ice. Fine pitching by Dazzy Vance and Joe Shaute, who beat the Phils for the fourth time this year, did the rest. The Dazzler had a bad moment in the ninth inning of the first game, which became worse when Pinky Whitney's drive hit his cheek and forced him out. But Jack Quinn did a neat bit of relief work and Shaute never was in danger.

The double victory enabled Brooklyn to exchange places with the Phils, jumping from seventh place to fifth, while the idle Pittsburg Pirates remained in sixth.

This twin bill was the only scheduled action in the National League, as the clubs moved back to their home sectors after the end of the season's first inter-sectional series. Two games were carded in the American League, Detroit at St. Louis, and Chicago at Cleveland, but rain halted both.

Engineer Killed; Train is Derailed

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 22 (C.P.). — The locomotive of a Pittsburgh - Buffalo passenger train of the Pennsylvania Railroad was derailed and the engineer killed at Edgecliff, about 25 miles north of here to-day. None of the passengers were injured.

L. H. Hilgrove of Pittsburgh, the engineer, was pinned under his locomotive and was dead when found. The fireman, L. A. Knarr, of Oil City, leaped when the engine toppled over, and was not hurt. The front trucks of the baggage car also were derailed.

Yesterday's Stars.

Dazzy Vance, Robins— Stopped Phillies with seven hits and beat them 3-2, in first game of double bill.

Babe Herman, Robins—Clouted homer with two on, and two singles to aid in defeat of Phils in second game.

BATTALINO WINS HOLLOW VICTORY

Fans Boo Featherweight Champion and Challenger in Title Affair.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, N.Y., May 23.—Christopher "Bat" Battalino, featherweight champion, turned back the title bid of Fidel LaBarba last night, but he failed to gain anything but the heartiest boos of one of the most discouraged gatherings that ever surrounded the big battle pit.

For fifteen long and lack-luster rounds, the champion and challenger hauled and cuffed like a pair of dispirited preliminary boys, while 9,1000 of the faithful jeered and whistled and searched for new methods of displaying their disapproval. In the final rounds they found it, and a dozen pennies, probably all that could be spared in these times, bounced down on the heads of sports writers who were suffering just as much as the luckless patrons farther back.

The opinion was general that no two warriors in recent history, boxing for a world championship, have turned in such an uninteresting exhibition. For most of the 15 rounds, LaBarba did little but run and hold and Battalino continually floundering after him, apparently did not know what to do once he caught up with the curley-headed challenger from Los Angeles.

MILL DEFEATED BY HYDRO 23-13

Electric Crew Counters Thirteen Runs in Sixth Frame to Win Game.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—The Mill met defeat at the hands of the Hydro yesterday evening in the second game of the season played in the Campbellford Town Softball League when a score of 23—13 was registered in a hot tussle staged on the High School grounds and witnessed by a good number of fans.

The Mill opened the count in the first innings by making a five tally, the first home run of the game being made in this session of play by Don. Flint for that team. From then on until the seventh innings only one run was made when a seven score in that period was counted.

The Hydro, however, plugged along with small counts until the sixth innings when they knocked up thirteen runs, completely swamping the Mill aggregation; Ballintyne made a home run in the second innings.

The teams:—

Mill—E. Wilks, c; D. Flint, p; D. Holmes, 1b; V. Cochrane, 2b; D. Montgomery, 3b; F. Blake, ss; B. Poulton, rf; W. Reid, cf; M. Brennan, lf; M. Booth substituted for Brennan, and W. Reynolds for Blake in the sixth innings.

Hydro—C. Johnson, p; B. Whitton, c; F. Ingram, 1b; G. Brown, 2b; P. Sanders, 3b; E. G. Tinney, ss; K. Ballantyne, rf; S. Flint, cf; H. Beattie, lf.

Umpires—Plate, Vince Farrell; bases, W. Sarginson.

Score by innings:—

LILLICO PRESIDENT OF WELFARE CLUB

Child Welfare Club is Organization Within the Kiwanis Club.

The Kiwanis Child Welfare Club, is an inner organization, a wheel within a wheel, of the Kiwanis club. It's purpose is to give a closer atten tion o certain details of underprivileged child work and also to look after certain matters in connection with the Children's summer camp at Jackson Park.

The officers of the club are the following:

President, Ivan T. Lillico; Vice-president, Charles F. Cumming; Secretary and treasurer, Al. Sharpe.

The Boards of Direstors consists of:

H. C. Huffman, Carl S. Browne, L. Pettit, Dr. J. J. Craig, James Skinner, A. Moffat, Isaac P. McNabb and A. B. Gates.

These men are all whole heartedly behind the project, giving their time and energy, realizing the necessity of the work and cheerfully shouldering the responsibility. It was their idea that two cars, one a delux Dodge Sedan with six wire wheels and the Standard Ford Coupe, should be offered as prizes, giving the holder of each ticket a double chance of winning a car. The entire net proceeds taken in will be devoted to Child Welfare wosk.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, the Petes is all set and ready to go, and Mon. the lads will spend Victoria Day tangling with Mister Walter Gerow's Nationals down in the Belleville fair grounds, with the lid being pried off the local season at J. Stevenson Park next Sat. with Belleville as the opposition. The Petes' organization was completed this week, and a goodly bunch of well-known citizens is sitting in back of the boys, and that's going to help a lot. Now, if the fans do the same, why senior baseball ought to be back to stay, which is what a berg this size oughta have. While the Petes ain't being able so far to snag all the material they would like to use in the big show, they got a smart bunch of boys lined up, and Belleville and Kingston will know they've been to the races before the season's out. They oughta be a real old-time crowd out at Stevenson Park next Sat. when the local season will officially get under way.

Our lacrosse lads goes to Campbellford for a friendly bout Mon., Mac, and the exhibition canter will give a chance to see how the gang shapes up in actual combat. The boys have been practising faithful, and old-timers is tickled with what has been shown.

Up in the big show my 2 selections ain't doing bad. In the American loop the A's had win themselves 12 ball games in a row when this was wrote, and the last 2 battles they grabbed was pitching classics. Tuesday Mister Geo. Earnshaw went out there again Detroit and only 2 of Mister Bucky Harris' boys touched 1st base, the Tigers getting only 2 singles. Not a walk and the Athaletics didn't make a boot. Next day Mister Lefty Grove shut out the Detroiters 3 to 0, giving them only 3 hits, while once more no complimentaries was handed out and the Philadelphia defence was perfect. Two games in succession with only 5 men getting to 1st base in 18 innings is a mark for all and sundry to shoot at. New York has been hanging on, and Washington ain't far behind, but the way the A's been going it's going to be tough sledding for the opposition, unless the string of doubleheaders the Mackmen will have to ring in later on will wear down their Big Three pitching staff. They're getting plenty work, especially Mister Grove, who pitched a full game last Saturday, finished games on Sun. and Mon. and came back with another regulation length pitching affair Wed.

The National League is a real race, Mac. St. Louis was holding onto 1st place by a scant margin when these lines was inscribed, but the Giants is threatening plenty.

Well, old-timer, be careful letting off your firecrackers Mon. I'll be seeing ya'.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

COLORFUL OPENIN G PLANNED FOR LOCA L SENIOR SEASON

SevePal Business Matters Cleared Up at Last Night's Executive Meeting.

SEASON TICKETS.

Everything is set for the opening C.O.B.L. game with the Petes playing in Belleville on Monday. The executive of the Peterborough Senior Ball Club met in the Chamber of Commerce last night and cleared up a great deal of business and made final arrangements for the local entry to get away to a good start. It was a well-attended and enthusiastic gathering, with the president and the secretary of the East Peterborough League there on invitation.

President Hugh Campbell, occupying the chair, asked the secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting. They were read and passed. Then the committee which attended the C.O.B.L. meeting in Belleville Wednesday night, reported on what took place there.

The first matter brought up was that of the grounds. The president said that as Walter Stocker, chairman of the parks committee, was out of town, he had seen Mayor Denne concerning the James Stevenson Park. The Mayor assured him there would be little difficulty in having the Park fixed up and the fences repaired. Mr. Campbell will arrange matters with Walter Stocker on his return.

Season Tickets

J. R. Marshall made the suggestion that money might be raised by reserving a section of the main grandstand, and selling season tickets, of ten dollars each, which would permit the holder, or any member of his family, and one other person to attend all the home games of the Peterborough team this year. This was voted on and carried. A committee composed of C. P. Borland, Charles Westbrook and George MacDonald, will have the tickets made and distributed to members of the executive to sell.

Mr. Marshall moved that the price of admission here would be thirty-five cents to the grounds, and fifteen cents, ladies free, to the main grandstand. This was carried.

Hugh Campbell, Max Swanston, Al Heckman and Vic Hamilton, will attend to the selection and purchasing of the new uniforms. These will have the word "Peterborough" across the breast, and they should be ready for the players for their first game here. They will use Raybestos uniforms in their game in Belleville Monday.

Martin Hewitt and Jim Coursey will figure out a group insurance plan to cover the players while on the diamond. This was thought to be a good idea in case of injury while playing.

Colorful Opening

For the opening game here next Saturday, G. MacDonald, Charles Westbrook and M. L. Sweetman, will arrange for the usual opening ceremonies, with Bob Elliott of Deloro attending, the Rangers Band, etc.

A letter was read from G. A. MacDonald, who is in Chicago on business, regretting that he could not be present, and assuring them that he would help in any way he could.

Scorecards free at all games, the matter of a booth for refreshments, various questions dealing with expenses and other things, came in for some discussion. The players who will go to Belleville on Monday will meet at Lebarr's at ten in the morning, and will motor down in six cars offered by members of the executive.

President Davis and Secretary Curtis of the E. P. L. were asked for opinions on how the senior team and the intermediate league could work together to the satisfaction of all. They made some good suggestions and both assured the executive that the E.P.L. would co-operate in every way they could with the new club. President Campbell, in turn, said that the seniors would do all they could to assist the intermediate league.

It was decided that a requisition from the secretary for all purchases had to be obtained by players before buying baseball material. The club will not be responsible for any orders not signed by Secretary Hamilton.

After some further discussion, and the decision to hold a final meeting before the first game here next Saturday, at 7:15 in the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday night, the meeting was adjourned.

WOOD-SHIELDS BEAT CANADIANS

Rainville and Wright Beaten in Straight Sets—Two Events to One.

PLAY SINGLES TO-DAY.

MONTREAL, May 23.—The United States Davis Cup team wound up the second day's matches of their series with Canada to determine the ascendancy in the American zone with a lead of 2 events to 1 and 2 to go.

Yesterday afternoon Frank X. Shields of New York, whose play has gained him admirers every minute of his stay here, teamed with Sidney B. Wood, also of New York, to defeat the Canadian doubles team of Dr. Jack A. Wright and Marcel Rainville of Montreal, 8—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Yesterday Shields beat Wright in the first singles match, while Rainville scored for Canada over Wood and so evened matters. This afternoon's win put the United States 2—1 in the lead.

This afternoon Sidney B. Wood of New York plays Dr. Jack Wright. Judging from the showing to date, the Canadian veteran would seem to have at least an even chance. If Dr. Wright wins, that would even the series at 2-all. The final match of the afternoon will find Frank Shields, rangy six-footer, playing against Marcel Rainville, who is almost a foot shorter.

In yesterday's doubles Dr. Wright and Rainville played Sidney Wood relentlessly.

WINNERS HIT BIG BENS HARD

Mayor Denne, Alderman Bob Cotton and Jack Sullivan Open Girls' League Here.

COSTLY FIELDING ERRORS.

Leo Martyn's hard-hitting Brinton Girls fought their way to a decisive 21-11 victory over the Westclox ladies last night in the local opening of the Ladies' City Softball League at the new Bowl in East City before a large crowd of eager fans who were treated to a clever display of competition.

Mayor Denne swung the bat in the inaugural ceremony to drive a high fly into centre field while Alderman Bob Cotton pitched and Jack Sullivan did the receiving, thus starting the season for a league which already looms as the most popular circuit in the city.

The winners hit hard and often countered in every inning securing fifteen safe hits from the two Westclox twirlers. Freda Pavey, backstop for the Brintons was the mainstay of the team and besides playing a bang-up game behind the plate secured four hits and a walk in five times at bat one of the hits being a triple with one runner on. B. Curtis and I. Sturgeon also secured triples for the same team, while A. Pilling hammered out a double.

Both teams made costly fielding errors but showed spurts of snappy playing in the infield which indicates that in a very short time they will both develop into smooth working outfits.

Rally in Sixth

The Westclox team started a threatening rally in the sixth innings when G. Mortimer, A. Crary and D. Merrett clouted out two triples and a double respectively which chalked up four counters but timely infielding smothered this rush and the next three batters went out in order. M. Ferguson at second base for the Big Bens was the outstanding fielder and N. Kingdon catching was a real asset to the team.

H. Joyes started on the mound for the Clockmakers, exhibiting plenty of speed and control but was hit rather freely and retired in favour of Mildred Mortimer in the sixth innings. The latter pitcher was no mystery to the Carpet Girls who nicked her for four more counters.

M. Self twirled five and a half innings for the winners, fanning five and issued only one walk. She withdrew in favour of H. Payne who struck out one and played a good fielding game. Dot Millar at second and B. Curtis in left field for the Brintons were the most effective players on that team.

The teams:

Brintons—I. Sturgeon, 1b; H. Payne ss; A. Pilling, cf; D. Millar, 2b; B. Curtis, lf; M. Self, p; L. Heffernan, 3b; F. Pavey, c; M. MacFarlane, rf.

Westclox—L. Chartren, lf; D. Webb 3b; N. Kingdon, c; M. Mortimer, 1b; H. Joyes, p; G. Mortimer, ss; D. Merrett, rf; A Crary, cf; M. Ferguson 2b; Weese, 2b.

Brintons—Wild pitches, 3; past balls, 6; errors, 6; stolen base, 7; left on bases, 8.

Westclox—Wild pitches, 2; past balls, 10; errors, 7; stolen bases, 3; left on bases 11.

BOWL MEN COP EASY WIN 19-9

Winners Take 13 Run Lead From Examiner in First Three Frames.

FIELDING IS POOR.

Grabbing a big lead in the early innings, George Dormer's smart Sugar Bowl nine defeated the fast-improving Examiner team 19 to 9 at Central School grounds last night. After the first three innings the Pressmen outscored the Bowl clan and gave an all-round good exhibition.

Reg. Doubt started on the rubber for The Examiner. He was touched rather soundly. This, combined with some bad boots, which were crowded into the third frame, gave the Bowl a total of 13 runs at the end of the third.

Fred Scates then took the twirling burden. Showing a nice fast one and better control, and aided by a tightening-up in the fielding work of his team-mates, he shut the opposition out in the remaining innings.

Dundas Also Hit

Doing mound duty for the Bowl nine, Ira Dundas was hit soundly throughout, but was tendered smart support.

The Examiner staged their big drive for runs in the final five innings, scoring a total of seven. At times with runners on the pathways they threatened to go on a scoring rampage, but the Bowl fielding defences always proved equal to the test.

The teams:—

Sugar Bowl.—H. Dormer, 1b; Dundas, p; Dallin, lf; Playford, rf; Gillespie, cf; Weese, 2b; Bradshaw, 3b; G. Dormer, ss; Mahood, c.

Examiner—Westbrook, 3b; Kingston, ss; Board, lf; Collins, cf; Taylor, 1b; Gainey, 2b; Outram, rf; Dugan, c; Doubt, p; Scates, p.

Score by innings:—

Sugar Bowl .. .. .. .. ..436003201—19

Bowling Club Rules.

When members of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club meet at the club house Monday afternoon and evening for the first bowling tournament of the season, they will find that the Games committee have adopted a number of the Dominion Lawn Bowling rules that are to apply to this year's games and which will be observed on Monday.

"The jack is to be placed, not thrown down the green, a practice left optional by some clubs.

"The mat is to be placed not less than three feet from the ditch.

"After the first end, the skip losing the end, will remove the mat from the green as each end is played.

"The lead playing first will place the mat.

"When not in the act of playing or directing, players must stand behind the jack or behind the mat.

"Each player, when delivering his bowl, must have one foot entirely on the mat.

"A player, after delivering his bowl, shall not follow it up the green in such a manner as to interfere with its course, nor shall he approach within one yard of his bowl during its course.

"All bowlers are required to wear soft soled shoes or full rubbers, to avoid damage to the green."

Owing to the new grass this spring, the rule in reference to soft soled shoes or full rubbers will have to be enforced strictly on Monday. So new players, and old players as well, are advised to come properly equipped.

This year, Wednesdays will be open days. It is intended to stage a number of friendly game tournaments on these days in order that citizens, not in touch with the club, may be given an opportunity to play and thus experience for themselves the pleasures of the game.

Baseball Gossip.

CASUAL COMMENT

The main sports attraction locally on the holiday will be the City League doubleheader over at the Stevenson diamond. They will be the first scheduled games and they ought to be good.

• • • • • • •

Fosters and Kiwanis, junior teams, start it off at two o'clock, and the juvenile outfits, Rotary and Maple Leafs tangle at four. These teams have been working out several times weekly for the past month, and fast ball is assured on the holiday bill.

• • • • • • •

The Foster brothers are running the team bearing their name, and Jack Deannard is managing the Kiwanis entry. The Rotary Juveniles are handled by Ches. Mowry, and Pat Calladine is again running the Maple Leafs. If the weather is right, ye baseball fans will be out in force.

• • • • • • •

So far, we have heard of no softball team from her that is taking part in the Lindsay Softball Tournament on May 25th. The scheduled game here was called off on that day to permit any team wanting to enter to do so.

• • • • • • •

That 19 to 9 slap The Examiner took from Sugar Bowl at Central last night wasn't so good. Sloppy fielding accounted for most of the winners' runs. They collected no less than 14 in the first three frames, mostly on miscues.

• • • • • • •

What a crowd attended the girl softballers' opener at the Bowl last night! They were spread along the three sides, in the stand, and on the sidewalks and the bridge. It was a fine background for the smartly-attired teams down there on the diamond.

• • • • • • •

Alderman Bob Cotton went on the mound in the opening ceremonies, with Jack Sullivan behind the bat, and Hizzoner, the Mayor at the plate. He finally got hold of one but lifted it right into a fielder's hands. But it started things off, anyway.

• • • • • • •

The executive of the Girls' Softball League is meeting tonight at Duffus' at eight bells to decide whether or not to admit another entry. Every member is requested to be on hand.

• • • • • • •

The weather today sort of knocks things on the head as far as practises are concerned. The seniors were to work out this afternoon at the Stevenson Park. But they'll likely go fishing instead.

• • • • • • •

Those manufacturers on the executive of the Senior Ball Club are an interested bunch of sports. And they don't fool when they meet for some purpose. Business is pushed through in short order and in a big way, before they begin talking of their golf scores, etc.

• • • • • • •

Practically every manufacturing plant in the city has one or more representatives on the team executive, and that's the way it should be. When others fail to get things going in the various sports, the "old guard" always comes to the rescue.

• • • • • • •

Judging by the amount of business cleaned up at last night's session, the toughest part of the re-organization is over. From now on, there should be smooth sailing. It's up to the players now. We have a team, let's hope it's a winning one.

South End Loop Results.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

"BEAU IDEAL"

This talkie takes up the thread of the narrative just where the fade-out of "Beau Geste" left it. It is a sequel to the story of the three Geste brothers who joined the French Foreign Legion in Africa when a stain on the family name drove them from their English home. In "Beau Gese" two are killed in an Arab attack on a desert outpost. In "Beau Ideal" (pronounced "bow eedeeal") John Geste is court-martialled for striking his brutal superior officer during that attack, and is sent to the penal battalion of the Legion.

The story opens ominously with the sound of terror-stricken cries from the depths of a subterranean grain pit in the desert, where insubordinates of the penal battalion are chained. An attacked on the fort to which they were attached kills their guards and leaves them without food for six days. Only John Geste and Otis Madison (known as Smith and Brown in the Legion) are left alive. And thereby hangs a tale which causes a switchback of the story to explain why Madison, the American, has left his home and fortune to follow the footsteps of Geste to the penal battalion. As usual, a woman forms the motive.

It is a dramatic and very interesting story with a quality of artificiality that places it in the realm of picture spectacles, rather than picture stories. Every character acts up to the limit. The direction probaly accounts for this. They are not men and women living the action, but rather highly-trained actors going through their pieces. The little bit with the Arab-French woman who does the Ouled-Nail dance adds to this peculiar veneer. Possible this type of acting is just right for the somewhat fantastic notion of friendship and honor that colored "Beau Geste" and colors its sequel. However, it is very entertaining.

—Jeanette.

Lott And Van Ryan In The Semi-Finals

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, May 23 (A.P.)—George Lott, Jr., and John Van Ryn, the Philadelphia doubles team and Davis Cup hopefuls, to-day moved into the semi-final round of men's doubles in the French hard court championships by defeating the British pair of John S. Oliff and Ian G. Collins. The scores were 6—0, 6—4, 6—2.

Mrs. Van Ryn was eliminated in the first round of women's singles, losing to Mlle. Jacqueline Goldschmidt in a three set match 1—6, 6—3, 6—0.

Jack Hobbs, famous English cricketer, who, last year, was considered to be at the end of his career, has confounded the critics by adding to his century record this week. Playing against Sussex, Hobbs scored his 177th century with Sandham as a partner.

HE ROWED CIRCLES AROUND HIS OPPONENT

THE MAN WHO ACTUALLY ROWED CIRCLES AROUND HIS OPPONENT

Possibly no sportsman ever lived who, in his day, was more widely known or whose career was more closely followed than that of Ned Hanlan. The greatest sculler of all time, for 11 years, was the most spectacular figure in the sporting world in a manner that had never been done before and will probably never be done again. Ned Hanlan outclassed the sculling champions of four great countries—England, United States, Australia and Canada. His forebears being waterman and fisherman he took to the water naturally. He quickly established his supremacy on Toronto bay, and one night, with little fuss, this youth of 21 set out on his world-conquering career for the Philadelphia Centerrial. Few knew that he was going. His victory over the best in America at the shorter distance straightaway made his name one to conjure with and from that moment Ned Hanlan was a world-figure, as a result of this achievement. The Hanlan Club was formed with funds to back him anywhere and everywhere and against anyone. Eleven thousand dollars was a tremendous amount of money in those days, but victory after victory paid the investors for their aid. (In those days it must be kept in mind that sculling carried with it big prowhen Ned Hanlan met Trickett, Nov. when Ned Hanlan met Tricket, Nov. 18, 1880, that he performed an act in rowing that will probably never be done again. On their first meeting, "The Boy in Blue," as he was known, beat Trickett with ease. The latter challenged again and on May the 1st, 1882, the match was rowed on the Thames, Hanlan winning by a minute and a half. It was in this race that Hanlan, after turning the buoy, went back and rowed around Trickett, and, after bathing his brow, rowed away from him with ridiculous ease. It broke Trickett's heart and he never again rowed in a first-class match.

Season's Winners At K. of C. Alleys

The Wednesday Night League at the Knights of Columbus Bowling Alleys began January 14, and ended on April 15. There were eight teams entered, each one bowling 42 games, making a possible 112 points. Prisneau's team finished first with 90 points, and Shaughnessy's crew coming second with 70 points. High single went to J. Shaughnessy, having 342, and high three went to H. Rudkins with 784.

The Monday Night League at the K. of C. started January 12 and finished April 13. Eight teams were bowling, making a possible 112 points. Kelbrick's came first with 87 points, and Letellier's second with 70 points. S. Shaughnessy had high single, 380, while the high three went to Leo Martyn with his 871. Vince O'Connel, with 252, had the highest average.

KIT HAS AN ADVENTURE.

'Tis well of strangers to beware
And in their presence have a care.
—Kit the Desert Fox.

Kit the Desert Fox, smaller, daintier and much lighter in color than Reddy Fox, trotted swiftly across the desert. He was bound for a certain place where he knew that Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat and his family and friends were living and were likely to be out on the same errand that he himself was on, a hunt for food.

"If I can catch a couple of those Rats they will make a good dinner for those youngsters at home," thought Kit. "Perhaps Mice would be better for them, considering how young they are. I suppose Mrs. Kit would say so. Well, if they can't eat a Rat I can, and where the Rats are, Mice are likely to be also."

He headed straight for the big mound

where Longfoot's home was, and as he approached it he moved very quietly and carefully. Near that mound was a big cactus. Kit kept this between himself and that mound. He crouched close to the earth and looked as if crawling on his stomach. His eyes glowed. He could see two or three little forms jumping about. If he could reach that cactus without being seen and waited patiently one of them might come within jumping distance. Inch by inch he crept forward stopping and remaining motionless a foot or so.

At last he reached the big cactus and very cautiously peeped around it. He was just in time to see Longfoot and two of his family dart to their home in the big mound and disappear in one of their several doorways. It was clear that they were frightened.

"I didn't scare them," thought he. "No, sir, I didn't scare them. They didn't once look this way. They must have seen someone else. I wonder who it can be."

Just then he saw who it was. It was a dog such as he never before had seen. He knew all the dogs that lived at the nearest ranch, and this was not one of these. It was a much smaller dog, and with only a stub of a tail. He didn't look big enough to be really dangerous, yet he might be. You never can tell about dogs. At least, that is the way Kit felt.

"He hasn't seen me," thought Kit, "and if I keep still perhaps he won't. He has spoiled my hunting here, but perhaps he will go away and I can wait. Those Rats will come out again as soon as he leaves. He has no business here. If he was hunting those Rats he isn't much of a hunter, for he didn't know enough to keep out of sight. I do believe he is coming this way."

It was true. Flip the Terrier, for that is who it was, had suddenly changed his direction and was headed straight for that big cactus. He had slipped away from the ranch that evening to visit the home of Longfoot again. He hadn't been able to forget those Rats he had vainly tried to dig out a few nights previous.

Kit waited as long as he dared, then darted out and away. Flip saw him at once and with a yelp started after him. As you know, Flip can run fast for a short distance and he made the sand fly as he chased Kit. For a minute or two Kit was badly frightened. He is naturally timid and he didn't know anything about this stranger or how fast he could run. So Kit settled down to show Flip what real running is. He seemed to fairly skim over the ground, and though Flip was doing this best he was soon far behind.

Seeing this, Kit slowed down. "Pooh! That fellow can't run," said he to himself. "If that is the best he can do I guess I needn't fear him."

He stopped and sat down to watch Flip. He was full of curiosity. He wanted to know something more of this lively little dog. He wanted to lead him so far away that there would be no danger that he would find that precious home where the four babies were playing around the doorstep. Flip saw him stop and did his best to run faster, all the time barking excitedly.

"What a noisy fellow," thought Kit. "How does he expect to catch anybody when he tells everybody within hearing that he is coming?"

Flip was uncomfortably near by this time, so Kit once more took to his slim legs, but this time without exerting himself. He changed his direction and started straight out into the Dry Desert. He felt sure that he could lose Flip whenever he wanted to, but it would be wise to lead him as far away as possible before doing this. So he kept just far enough ahead of Flip to tantalize him by making him think he would catch him, and so led him farther and farther away from that precious home.

House-Breaker is Given Eight Years

HAMILTON, Ont., May 23 (C. P.). — Lawrence Somers, Ridgeway, convicted last week of attacking Mrs. Edith Simpson when he entered her house in the guise of a light inspecter, was to-day sentenced to eight years in Portsmouth Penitentiary.

The magistrate remarked that he would have added lashes, but for the fact that the prisoner had been lashed on a previous occasion, but the sentence had done him no good. His Lordship remarked that as it was a tenth conviction, the prisoner must be suffering from a mental "kink."

IF I COULD ONLY SLEEP

2 A.M. and No Sleep

IT must be the nerves. Excited nerves cannot rest or sleep, and yet only in sleep can the nerve force, expended in the day's work and care and worry, be replaced.

Sleep above all else is absolutely necessary. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helps you back to healthful, natural sleep. Gradually and certainly it forms new, rich blood and builds up the exhausted nervous system.

With new vitalizing nerve force tingling through the body the vital organs resume their natural functions and you are soon feeling fine.

Feelings of fatigue and depression disappear and you regain the mastery which enables you to get the best out of life.

MISS EILEEN DOIG RECEIVES HONOR

Good Attendance at Open Meeting of St. James' Mission Band.

There was a splendid attendance of the boys and girls of St. James' Mission Band, with the guests, at their open meeting on Friday evening, held in the Sunday School Hall. The President, Hazel Reesor, occupied the chair, supported by the Band Leader, the Secretary and the Treasurer.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a Life Membership certificate to Eileen Doig, the joint gift of the band and her mother, Mrs. H. F. Doig. The president of the W. M. S., Mrs. A. E. Moorhouse, in a brief address, spoke of the privilege and value of life membership and of the great influence of Band work in the years of childhood.

Mrs. Moorhouse congratulated Eileen upon having attained this honour and the certificate and pin were presented by the Leader.

Certificates were also presented for the sale of calendars to Hazel Reesor and Vera Dunk, while Norma May received the prize of a new hymnary for having sold the greatest number of Christmas cards.

"Why Do You Smile?" a missionary playlet was presented by seven girls of the band including Hazel Palmer, Marion McAdams, Vera Dunk, Norma May, Alma Carter, Jean Whitney and Freda McMahon. This little play was well enacted and told how the gospel story had brought joy to these heathen children.

Little Marilyn Plunkett in dainty Japanese costume and fan gave an appropriate recitation, and Alma Carter, also in costume, recited "The Doll's Festival".

Very pleasing piano solos were contributed by a number of the members including Freda McMahan, Norma May, Hazel Palmer, and a duett by Margaret Smart and Betty Ferguson.

Reports Read

The secretary's report was given by Kenneth Gillespie. Bessie Reesor gave an account of the band's finances and Lorne Casey reported for subscriptions to World Friends, the Band magazine.

A unique method of raising funds was demonstrated by the use of a missionary church drawn on board. Windows, shingles and bricks are sold at various prices and are coloured in as sold, being a great incentive to the children to watch their church grow into a complete building which would meet their financial allocation.

Cost Of Divorce Is From $300 to $1,300

Merely as a statement of fact and news, and not as a possible encouragement or deterrent, it was learned from the lawyers engaged that the cost of obtaining a divorce, as shown by the three cases at Cobourg this week, may reach any sum from $300 to $1,300.

Two of the petitioners had to dig up three to four hundred dollars each for their liberty, and in the third action the plaintiff faced a bill which The Examiner was informed would exceed $1,200. In his bill would be one item of $350 as a retainer to T. N. Phelan, K.C., of Toronto, whose work in court did not exceed thirty minutes.

A Cobourg lawyer remarked to The Examiner that divorce court procedure is new to the Ontario bar and those lawyers who are handling their first cases are just "getting their feet wet."

Apparently a minimum cost of obtaining a divorce is likely to reach an amount between three and four hundred dollars, but if "high-feed" lawyers are engaged then the costs may mount into four figures.

THE SON OF TARZAN No 72 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Meriem owed her life to an accident. At the very instant Malbihn fired at her, his canoe ran upon a submerged tree trunk, giving the craft a slight jolt. But it was enough to throw his rifle out of aim. The bullet whizzed harmlessly by the girl's head as she disappeared into the foliage. Meriem threw back a mocking laugh at the baffled Swede. Soon she had swung far into the forest and Malbihn returned to his camp furious with defeat.

Fighting his way through the tangled jungle a mile to the east, a man in torn khaki—haggard and bruised—came to a sudden stop at the report of Malbihn's rifle resounded through the forest. A dozen times he tripped and fell as he forged ahead but at last he and his black companion came to the fringe of jungle upon the river's brim. Through the screening foliage Baynes saw Malbihn's canoe making rapidly for the opposite shore.

Morison Baynes could scarcely repress a shout of exultation as he also beheld the canoe Meriem had abandoned. Quickly the two slid down the branches into the boat. As it shot out upon the bosom of the river, Malbihn spied it. He fingered his rifle and waited. Now the canoe was within hailing distance. Malbihn, on the shore, with a start of surprise saw the white man was Baynes. He knew that Baynes had come for vengeance.

Malbihn shrugged his shoulders. Others had sought him for vengeance during his checkered career, yet he still lived. Aiming his rifle he yelled, "What do you want?" Baynes leaped to his feet. "You!" he shouted, whipping out his revolver and firing almost simultaneously with the Swede. As the reports rang out Malbihn staggered, then fell, and Baynes crumpled backward into the canoe. The two white men, far from civilization, had shot each other.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

The Trinity doctrine came into vogue at the beginning of the fourth century. It is not understood and cannot be explained. If Jehovah is one, and the Lord Jesus is one, and the Holy Ghost is one, how could we add the three together and still make one? The term "Holy Ghost" is improperly translated Holy Spirit is the proper use of the term. The doctrine of the Holy Trinity is entirely unscriptural. If Jesus when on earth was God Himself, then it was God who died to redeem mankind, which is absurd.. There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all. I. Tim. 2, 5, 6. A divine person could not be a ransom for a human being. A ransom means an exact corresponding price, nothing more, nothing less. —A. Butcher

WHALING REMAINS GREAT ADVENTURE

Norwegian Tanker Tells How Modern Whalers Use Latest Equipment.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., May 23. (By Robert Herbin)—Giving birth to babies 30 feet long, unable to swallow anything larger than a man's fist, and powerful enough to pull a 150-foot tug at 12 knots an hour with the engine half-speed astern, huge mammals of the deep-blue whales—provide excitement day and night for those hardy Norwegian sailors noted the world over for their whaling proficiency.

Something of the great adventure, and of the whales themselves, learned from eight years' experience in Antarctic waters, was related by Captain Adolf Christiansen, of the oil tanker Norfold, which docked here recently.

Captain Christianson's home is Larvik, Norway about six miles from Sandefjord the town of registry of the Norfold. He has been at sea 20 years, first on a sailing ship when 14 years old. He was foreman of a whaling station two years, during which period he accompanied whalers for adventure, and he was mate on a factory ship one season. The remainder of his eight years in the Antarctic were spent transporting crude oil. The Norfold during the winter was used in this work.

The land base of the expedition with which Captain Christiansen was connected was at Stromness Harbor, South Georgia, a small island 360 miles east of Cape Horn.

In the former days the only places where carcases were boiled down into oil were so-called "factories" on shore. Now, however, factory ships are used. Some of these are of 20,000 to 25,000 tons, and are able to carry 120,000 barrels of oil, as compared with the small quantity of from 600 to 700 barrels that former whaling vessels held. One of the largest catches made, in Captain Christiansen's knowledge, netted 200,000 barrels of oil.

The largest factory ships have seven whale-catchers, smaller tug-like boats about 150 feet long, with 1,200 to 1,800 horse power engines making for a speed of from 12 to 16 knots, all equipped with wireless telephones so they can keep in touch with the parent ship.

Tankers, such as the Norfold, are used to transport oil from factory ships to various centres for refining, most of which is done in the United States, Holland and Germany, but considerable also in England and Norway.

LABOR UPHOLDS BARS AGAINST SOVIET LUMBER

Resolution Protesting Against Ban on Importation Rejected by A. F. of L.

AT RHODE ISLAND.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., May 22.—Organized labor of Rhode Island, as represented by the delegates at the convention of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, rejected a resolution presented by the Newport Central Labor Union, which was in intent, a protest against barring the importation of Russian lumber and a demand that the Soviet republic be recognized by the United States.

The resolution in its preamble, said the lumber interests of the United States and foreign countries are preventing the unloading of lumber from the Soviet Union in Providence harbor and that the makers of the resolution doubt that working conditions in the Soviet lumber industry are any worse than those in some of the lumber camps of America. It also declared that the reactionary tactics of the lumber interests are causing loss of employment to workers here and also causing the Soviet Union to give huge orders to more friendly nations for machinery.

The resolution's text was as follows: 'Resolved—That this convention protests the injurious tactics of the lumber interests of this nation toward their competitors and urge upon President Hoover the necessity of according fair and equal treatment to all nations in our international trade relations."

John H. Powers, chairman of the committee on resolutions, recommended non-concurrence. Powers said that until now the only agitation for allowing Russian lumber to be landed had been from 'big money" interests. Turning to the Newport machinists' delegation he said: "Don't you fool yourselves about big orders for machinery. Germany can always undersell this country on machinery. The only reason Russia wants to buy our machinery is because the Soviets want to flood this country with the things they can make with it. Selling machinery to foreign nations has been a curse to American labor. Selling textile machinery to foreign countries has surely not been of any benefit to our textile worker."

"The resolution that really should be here," he declared, "is one to demand the Amtorg Corporation in New York (Russian trade agency) shall be forbidden to do business in this country."

The committee's recommendation of non-concurrence was adopted and the resolution rejected by a voice vote.

DESPONDENT CAMROSE RESIDENT SHOOTS WIFE AND 2 DAUGHTERS THEN ENDS LIFE IN NEARBY LAKE

Small Son Aged Four, Spared By Father, is Found in Auto.

.45 PISTOL USED.

Slayer Distinguished War Veteran Recently Lost Job as Lumber Firm Manager.

CAMROSE, Alta., May 23 (C.P.). — Three persons — a mother and her two small daughters—were shot dead, and the husband, their alleged slayer, ended his life by drowning, as the spectre of violent deaths that for the past few weeks has stalked through Alberta swooped down on the Camrose district on Friday and took its toll.

Mowed down by the hail of lead from a .45 automatic, Mrs. C. Vooght and her two children, May, 8, and Norma, 6, met death on a lonely farm, 14 miles southeast of Camrose. The husband and father, R. C. Vooght, M.C., veteran of the Great War and allegedly their killer, then went to a lake nearby and drowned himself.

Son is Spared

Still another member of the family had the narrowest sort of escape: Vooght's small son Jack, 4, was held in the arms of his father. Four men came across the car in and near which, the bodies of the mother and two daughters lay. The lad was laid carefully in the front seat of the automobile as Vooght started to run across the fields to drowning and death.

Despondency over a lost job is ascribed as cause of the tragedy. Dismissed from the managership of a lumber firm, Vooght apparently became so harassed by worry as to decide to "end it all." His family shared in his fate.

The Vooght slayings and suicide sent still higher the rapidly mounting list of Alberta's violent deaths.

Only Thursday, a preceding tragedy occurred when Colonial Hilliard Lyle of Beaver Lodge, who, like Vooght, was an ex-service man with a distinguished record, shot his wife and brought death to himself.

Saturday morning, the final chapter was written in a quadruple series of fatalities at Edwand.

HOW SEALING INDUSTRY IS PROSECUTED

Fishery Divided Into Two Branches, Fur Seal and Hair Seal.

SEVERAL SPECIES.

Latter is Hunted Off Newfoundland and Labrador Coasts.

ST. JOHN'S, NFLD., May 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—For 168 years the hunting of seals off the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador has been carried on as an industry. Outside of this "oldest Colony" and other sealing districts, little is generally known concerning the fishery. Inland newspaper readers who scanned accounts of the Viking disaster last March were probably puzzled by references to "harps," White coats," and "hoods." Writing in the St. John's Evening Telegram George W. Barrett a native of Newfoundland and now residing in Sydney, N.S., explains these technicalities of the industry and gives other interesting information concerning its prosecution.

The seal fisheries are divided into two classes, the fur seal fishery and the hair seal fishery. The latter is the one conducted off the northeast coast of Newfoundland and in Cabot Strait.

Most numerous of the several species of hair seal are the "harp" or saddle-back" and the "hood" or "bladder nose." The "harp" is so named from a broad lunate series of dark spots on its back, resembling an ancient Irish harp. Its length when full grown is about five feet and weight from 250 to 400 pounds. The male "hood" seal has a sack formation in the head that may be extended at will to cover the face and afford protection in battle. A mature "hood" weighs from 400 to 700 pounds.

Increase Each Year.

Approximately half a million white baby seals are born in mid-Atlantic every year. During the first six weeks of life they accumulate a coat from two to three inches thick, a weight of 75 pounds or more, and are known as "whitecoats."

The annual itinerary of North Atlantic seals finds them feeding on the eastern edge of Gseen Bank and southern St. Pierre bank during the month of January. About February 20 the breeding seals start moving northwest for the whelping ice, leaving behind the one and two year old seals, termed "bedlamers," which wait until the first part of April before joining the breeders which then have left their young. All proceed north to the summer quarters and feeding grounds, mounting the ice usually east of Battle Harbor and 100 to 150 miles from land.

Once on the ice, the seals are at the mercy of winds and currents. If easterly winds prevail late in February, they will be found in the vicinity of Quirpon, or in White Bay. Frequently the main body of seals is split, a portion going through the Strait of Belle Isle into the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Whelping time is generally March first. Two weeks later, the seals are usually from 30 to 75 miles northeast of the Funk Islands, located 35 miles east of Cape Fogo. By the end of March they may be seen from 100 to 150 miles southeast of Cape Bonavista. During April they continue south join the "bedlamers" and continue northwest. Reaching Cape Charles on southern Labrador by the first of May they abandon the ice floe and proceed into Baffin Bay. Durin June July and August, they are in the vicinity of Cumberland Sound, leaving about the middle of September when driven out to the southeast by ice forming in Baffin Bay. Passing Capels Waingham in October they invariably precede the ice flowing down the Labrador coast. About the end of October they are in the vicinity of Cape Mugford, northern Labrador. The mammals come south in November and sometimes stay off Battle Harbor until the middle of December. During December they pass Belle Isle Strait and Cape Freels Nfld. en route to the feeding grounds on Green bank.

An interesting feature of the seal fishery is the system of profit-sharing in the proceeds of the voyage. The owner of a steamer takes two-thirds and the crew one-third of the value of the catch. A good season means from $50.00 to $150.00 for each man.

Seal hunters find the industry a change from the monotony of home life. An old saying in Newfoundland is that "a man will go for seals where gold won't draw him," and the hardy fisher-folk look upon the annual seal hunt as a holiday.

The earliest records of the Newfoundland seal fishery date from 1763. During the year 1805 a fleet of 30 sailing vessels secured a catch of 82,000 and in 1810 the catch was 118,100 and four years later it jumped to 156,000.

The industry reached its maximum development from 1825 to 1860. In this period the sealing fleet numbered up to 400 sailing vessels employing nearly 14,000 men. In 1845 the catch was 295,400 and in 1850 it increased to 558,500. Just 100 years ago the largest catch in the history of the fishery was secured by a fleet of 375 vessels that brought in 685,900 seals. The last time for the catch to exceed the half million mark was in 1858, the figure for that season being 507,024. The lowest catch on record, 37,000, was obtained in 1817.
